Satellite 'ruler' may measure earth, quakes

By RONALD KOTULAK
Knight News Service

A unique ruler that will enable scientists to measure the world and perhaps forecast earthquakes is expected to be launched into orbit this week.

The ruler comes in the form of a satellite that looks like a giant golf ball. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to place it in a 3,600-mile-high orbit that will take it over the poles.

The mirror-studded satellite is expected to be in such precise orbit that it will circle the earth for eight million years.

Scientists will be able to bounce laser beams off the mirrors. By measuring the time it takes for the laser beam to make the round trip back to earth, scientists will be able to detect surface movements as small as eight inches anywhere on our planet.

The satellite is called the Laser Geodynamic Satellite (Lageos) and it is scheduled for launch aboard a Delta rocket Tuesday from the Western Test Range in California.

With the satellite, scientists hope to measure earth's crustal movements, polar motion, solid earth tides and precise locations of various spots on earth.

A similar device was placed on the moon by the Apollo II astronauts in 1969. By bouncing laser beams off the mirrors, astronomers at the Lick Observatory in San Jose were able to measure the distance from the earth to the moon with great accuracy. The distance was 226,970.9 miles, give or take 150 feet, the astronomers said.

The Lageos satellite is covered with 427 prisms called cube-corner retroreflectors, giving it the dimpled effect of a big golf ball. The retroreflectors are three-dimensional prisms that reflect light back to its source regardless of the angle at which it is received.

The Geological Survey will use the 903-pound satellite for possible earthquake prediction. By measuring small land movements along critical faults, such as the San Andreas fault, they hope to tell when an earthquake will occur.

The satellite also will be used to study continental drift. Most geologists believe that the continents and ocean floors are made up of huge slabs of crust called tectonic plates, which move.

A small plaque designed by Dr. Carl Sagan of Cornell University will be on the satellite. The plaque contains three drawings depicting the position of the continents 200 million years ago, the way they are now and what they are expected to look like 10 million years from now.

At that time, according to theory, California will be off the coast of Washington and Oregon, Australia will be linked to Southeast Asia and New Guinea, the Indian Ocean will contain several large islands and the Italian boot will disappear.

The satellite is expected to have a useful life of 50 years.

One of the reasons for including the maps on the plaque is that when the satellite returns to earth in about eight million years, anyone who finds it will be able to figure out how drastically the continents have drifted over the eons.

Scientists estimate that the continents move at the rate of about two inches a year, a movement that is impossible to detect by anyone standing on earth.

"Whoever is inhabiting earth in that distant epoch may appreciate a little greeting card from the remote past," said Sagan.

Lageos is the first step in the solid-earth dynamics portion of a NASA program to use the vantage point of space to get a better understanding of the earth and oceans.

$405,000 plan given to aid QM

Special activities suggested as lure

By JAMES LEAVY
Staff Writer

A $405,000 entertainment and promotion plan for the Queen Mary featuring production of the Merv Griffin Show, starlight dancing on weekends and other events has been proposed to city officials by a Los Angeles public-relations firm.

InterComm Public Relations Associates (ICPR) presented its ideas at an "informal" meeting in City Manager John Mansell's office recently. Also present were Mayor Thomas Clark, Councilmen Ernie Kell and Don Phillips and city staffers.

Morton Segal of ICPR said the ideas were submitted on speculation. The corporation specializes in clients with leisure and entertainment activities.

IT LISTS AMONG its clients Wolff-Sesnon Development Co., according to Segal. Louis Wolff of that firm was hired by the city last Nov. 25 as a consultant and interim manager for the Queen Mary. He is being paid $48,000 under the terms of a contract due to expire June 30.

Segal said his firm sent a team of four to visit the ship four or five times. The result was a calendar of events outlining entertainment ideas from May to September.

They include a Little Miss Queen Mary Contest; a Battle of the Bands Week; appearances by Merv Griffin, Anson Williams, Peter Marshall and Bo Donaldson, a School's Out celebration in June; a square-dance festival in August, and starlight dancing on weekends.

WOLFF SAID the ideas offered by ICPR were among many solicited by him. He said they did not represent a formal proposal and pointed out that "no contact has been made with Merv Griffin" about producing his show aboard ship.

ICPR suggested the allocation of $171,500 for entertainment. This does not include the cost of building a stage and providing lighting and sound systems for television productions aboard ship.

It was also recommended that $233,500 be spent for advertising.

Crude Hughes 'novel' revealed in will inquiry

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Efforts to judge the authenticity of a purported Howard Hughes will have brought to light a crudely written manuscript, possibly a draft of a novel by the late billionaire.

The manuscript, scrawled on 100 or so pages of unlined white paper, is part of the contents of a wrinkled paper bag in the custody of Clark County court officials.

The bag also contained numerous small scraps of paper and gambling cards on which random thoughts are written.

"WE KNOW THE writing on these papers belongs to Howard Hughes, and we think the white pages are part of a manuscript he was writing," said County Clerk Loretta Bowman.

She said the papers were taken from a Las Vegas hotel by local authorities, but she would not say where or when. There was no indication when the manuscript may have been written.

Hughes lived on the top floor of the Desert Inn here from about 1967 to 1970.

After studying the handwriting on the manuscript and the will and on papers known to be in Hughes's hand, graphoanalyst Henry Silver said Friday he was "positive beyond doubt" that the will was genuine.

Silver, who has served as a handwriting analyst in three court matters relating to Hughes, examined the documents with the approval of a judge, but his study was not an official court evaluation. Officials said the burden of proving the will is authentic will be up to former Hughes aide Noah Dietrich, designated executor in the will.

Dietrich prepared to file petitions of administration on Monday. If his petition is accepted, he will be charged by the court with dividing up the Hughes fortune, estimated at between $1.5 billion and $2.5 billion.

Dietrich and others originally doubted the authenticity of the will, partly because its poor spelling seemed uncharacteristic of Hughes. The will was discovered Tuesday on a desk at the headquarters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) in Salt Lake City.

SILVER DECLARED "there is no question" the will and manuscript were "written by the same man, Howard Robard Hughes."

$2,000 offered in alley stabbing death

About 7:30 p.m. April 12, Kermit Euland King, 56, of 11102 Ash St., Westminster, was stabbed to death and robbed in a Long Beach alley by a man who then drove off but abandoned the car a short distance away.

King was found with several stab wounds in the chest, and with his pockets turned inside out.

Witnesses said King was a passenger in a car driven by his assailant that stopped in the alley behind the 1400 block of Walnut Avenue. The men fought in the car and then outside the vehicle.

King broke away and ran down the alley but the other man caught up with him and stabbed him, witnesses said.

Long Beach police homicide detective Sgt. Don Blachowski said officers were seeking a black man about 25 years old, 6 feet tall and about 170 pounds, and who was wearing a beige shirt, trousers and hat.

Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer.

If you have such information, call Secret Witness at 436-2526 between 8 a.m. and midnight on weekdays or between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Or write to: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90803.

Reagan scores landslide victory in Texas primary

Carter sweep tightens Demo race command

DALLAS (AP) — Ronald Reagan trounced President Ford in the Texas presidential primary election Saturday night, gaining a landslide victory in a state that was vital to his Republican challenge for the White House.

Jimmy Carter scored a runaway in the Democratic primary, and so tightened his command in that race.

There were, in effect, 21 separate Republican elections, one for delegates in each congressional district. And delegates committed to support Reagan led in all of them.

With just over half the 5,565 precincts counted, Reagan candidates led for all 96 delegate slots at stake in the primary.

In the Democratic primary, with 60 per cent of the precincts counted, Carter delegates led for 90 convention seats and favorite-son Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen for the other eight.

BENTSEN EASILY won renomination for the Senate. Rep. Alan Steelman of Dallas won the GOP nomination to oppose him.

But the former Georgia governor stopped short of claiming that this latest victory had clinched the Democratic nomination for him. "No, it would be premature of me to claim victory now," he said. Carter has said repeatedly that he expects to win nomination on the first ballot at the Democratic National Convention.

Reagan, who was in Indianapolis, thanked his Texas supporters, but left any victory statement for today. A White House spokesman said there would be no statement from there Saturday night.

IT WAS CLEAR THAT Reagan had cemented his presidential challenge into the Republican campaign platform for the rest of the campaign season.

Texas was a crucial target for Reagan, the state in which he had to start proving his claim that he could outpoll Ford in southern and western primary elections.

The GOP challenger gained his second primary victory. Ford has won seven times. Ford had made an intensive effort in Texas, spending four days on a campaign swing that ended election eve, in an obvious effort to knock his rival out of the race. It didn't work.

It appeared that a hefty crossover vote by conservative Democrats had swelled Reagan's showing. But there was no way to prove it because Texans do not register by party and had never held a presidential primary before.

STUART SPENCER, deputy manager of the Ford campaign, said he wasn't surprised at the Reagan victory. "We have always felt Texas was Reagan country," he said. "We'll be very pleased with anything we get out of Texas."

Spencer said he considered it a certainty Reagan would be in the Republican race all the way to the GOP convention at Kansas City on Aug. 16.

Reagan's campaign manager, John Sears, said, "The dimension of this victory goes well beyond the numbers." He said it would have an impact in the series of primaries scheduled for May and that it would "make this a very interesting race in Indiana," where Ford and Reagan go head-to-head Tuesday.

There was no popular vote count in the Texas race, but Reagan's top candidates for national convention seats were getting about 64 per cent of the ballots cast.

Both Ford and Reagan had indicated they thought the race was going to be close, but it wasn't. Reagan had counted on the conservative habits of Texas voters to build him a victory. It worked, apparently drawing a substantial bloc of conservative Democrats over to vote for the Californian in the Republican primary.

Ford had said Texas wouldn't necessarily set the pattern for other states, but "it certainly will be a headliner." Now, the competition shifts to Alabama, Georgia and Indiana — and in the first two, Reagan is rated the leader even by Ford strategists.

Sen. John G. Tower of Texas, the Ford state campaign manager, said Reagan organizers had the aid of former supporters of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace in "a concerted and obvious effort to get the Wallace votes in the Republican primary."

WALLACE WAS ONCE a formidable figure in Texas, but delegates pledged to him were gaining only about 18 per cent of the vote, and none of them were leading for convention seats in the partial returns.

Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who remained neutral in the Republican race, said the winner-take-all factor may have distorted the GOP results somewhat by giving Reagan more delegates than he would have received in a proportional allocation.

Bentsen said he was not surprised at the Carter victory. He said the task now is to put Democratic resources behind a ticket that can win the White House.

"Since none of the national candidates was able to cope with the Carter campaign, it was hardly likely that a favorite-son candidacy could effectively stand in its way," Bentsen said.

In Louisiana, with reports from rural areas coming in faster than those from urban areas, Alabama Gov. George Wallace took a lead Saturday in that state's Democratic primary.

SEN. HENRY JACKSON
"Still Available"
—AP Wirephoto

Jackson is officially out of race

SEATTLE (AP) — Short of money and votes, Sen. Henry Jackson formally announced Saturday that he is withdrawing from his active campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

But he declared: "I will remain a candidate."

Jackson told a news conference in his home state of Washington that his campaign had run out of money and had failed to stop the bandwagon of former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter.

"I believe the nomination is still open, although Gov. Carter quite clearly has a commanding lead," Jackson said. "I'm not involved in any move to stop Carter. I'm doing what's best for the Democratic Party. I've never done things in a negative way."

BRIAN CORCORAN, Jackson's press aide, said the 64-year-old senator would be available for a draft at the Democratic National Convention — a position similar to the one adopted by Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

Jackson said the 200 delegates he has won so far and uncommitted delegates "represent a basic element of power" to be reckoned with during the party's nomination fight. How that power will be used, he said, "will depend on what happens."

More summery weather forecast

It was a summery 85 in Long Beach Saturday and the U.S. Weather Bureau predicts it will be only slightly cooler today after the early morning low clouds dissipate.

Although inlanders were subjected to a four-hour smog alert from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday, most of Long Beach basked in breezy, clear sunshine.

The smog alert extended through the Pomona-Walnut area in Los Angeles County, into the Santa Ana Canyon area of Orange County and into Riverside County.

Some cloudiness is expected tonight with clearing by mid-morning Monday and a high in the low 70s.

Youths who broke Nixon story credit 'luck, work'

Combined News Services

Two Bethesda, Md., high school students who broke the story that then-Vice President Richard Nixon may have been exposed to heavy radiation while visiting Moscow 17 years ago say "a lot of luck" went into their coup.

But Michael Gill and Richard Berke, both 17, also say a lot of telephone calls (more than 50) and a lot of work ("day and night for the past week") also went into the story.

Their story published Friday in "Black & White," the student newspaper of Walt Whitman High School in Bethesda, was verified by two former Secret Service agents who discovered the radiation during Nixon's visit to Moscow in 1959.

The agents said that, during a routine check of the ambassador's bedroom in Spaso House, where Nixon was quartered, radiation-detection devices recorded a heavy bombardment.

Gill and Berke became interested several months ago in news stories disclosing that the Soviets were beaming microwave radiation at the American Embassy in Moscow.

"Mostly for the fun of it, we started calling around," Gill related. "Because we were only a high school newspaper, people didn't take us seriously, they put us off."

Then, Berke said, "we stumbled on one source."

The two like to jokingly compare themselves to "Woodstein" — the team of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, whose Watergate stories in The Washington Post brought a Pulitzer Prize. But they don't expect a movie to be made about "Gillberke."

Top ranking

The Maine Maritime Academy's top-ranking graduate this year is the school's first female student.

But Deborah B. Doane of Essex, Conn., not only leads the 580 members of the class in overall academic standing, she also holds top honors in her major — nautical science. And after graduation today as an ensign with full qualifications as a third mate, she becomes the first woman in the U.S. to graduate from a four-year maritime school.

The 26-year-old Connecticut native entered the academy in 1974 as a second-semester sophomore. She had graduated from the University of Vermont as a chemistry major and then decided to go to the Maine academy because of her lifelong interest in sailing. She had piloted yachts up and down the East Coast for two summers after she graduated from Vermont and before she arrived at the Maritime Academy in Castine, Maine.

Stand-in

Oliver Giscard d'Estaing, brother of the president of France, will represent his country in Rhode Island's Independence Day ceremonies next week.

Giscard d'Estaing, mayor of Estaing in France and brother of French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing, was to arrive in Rhode Island Monday. He is a distant relative of Admiral d'Estaing, who came to Newport in 1778 to help the colonies fight the British.

The state is celebrating the 200th anniversary of Rhode Island's declaration of independence on May 4, 1776.

Close look

Patricia Hearst's prosecutor says the value to the public of the the extensive press coverage of her recent bank robbery trial was that it provided a close look at the criminal justice system.

"The public ought to take a good look at our criminal justice system from time to time," U.S. Attorney James Browning Jr. said Friday at University of Oklahoma Law Day ceremonies in Norman, Okla. He said he believes the system is performing properly.

Show biz

"I feel somehow as if I had committed a crime — as if I had done something terrible by having happen to me what most people hope will happen to them," said Barbara Walters, speaking about her new television contract with ABC.

She will be paid $1 million a year to coanchor the ABC "Evening News," but Miss Walters said Friday in Memphis that the attention she received after announcing she would leave NBC's "Today Show" has been traumatic.

"Good heavens, that's show business," she said. "I think the difference now is that instead of the network collecting the money, some of it is going to go to some of the participants."

Unendorsed

The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration won't let the Rev. Sun Myung Moon use its official symbol to promote his June 1 Unification Church rally at New York's Yankee Stadium.

"The Rev. Mr. Moon seems interested in attracting people to a religious event and we are not in the business of endorsing religions," said John Scholzen, an administration official.

Moon's Bicentennial God Bless America Committee has been dropped from the National Bicentennial Service Alliance and banned from using its five-pointed star surrounded by bands of red, white and blue. "If they ever use the symbol again, the matter goes to the Justice Department," Scholzen said Friday.

Suicide

Ex-jockey Eric S. Walsh, 36, was found dead Friday afternoon in Laurel, Md., in what Prince Georges County police called an apparent suicide.

Walsh was one of four veteran jockeys sentenced to six months in prison and a $1,000 fine after being convicted of fixing the 1975 Valentine's Day race at Bowie Racecourse. Police say Walsh was found in bed at his apartment in Laurel and was pronounced dead on arrival at Prince Georges General Hospital. Cause of death was not determined.

Dream

Former California fireman Michael Taylor sets off Sunday on the voyage of his dreams — with a woman less than half his age.

"I've just retired and I intend to cruise until I drop," said Taylor, 55, who retired from the fire department of the Hughes Aircraft Corp. in Los Angeles. "We'll just follow the sun," he said Saturday as he and his co-sailor, 21-year-old Michele Bauer of Fullerton made final preparations aboard their 31-foot yacht.

Michele left a degree course in horticulture at Fullerton Community College to join the voyage.

"Naturally my parents are worried for me," she said. "They're like any other parents. But they think this is a wonderful opportunity. You don't get a trip like this more than once in a lifetime. I just want to get to the tropics — I scuba dive and I can't wait to dive in the Caribbean."

Director

The first director of the new National Institute on Aging is Dr. Robert N. Butler, a psychiatrist and gerontologist.

The agency, part of the National Institutes of Health, was set up in 1974 to study the complications of growing old. Butler had worked for more than 20 years on the problems of the elderly in private practice in Washington. He was appointed to the new post Friday.

Matador

Sidney Franklin, said to be the only matador ever born in Brooklyn, is dead at the age of 72.

The Jewish bullfighter, who died in a Manhattan nursing home on Monday, started his career at 19 in Mexico City and became a headliner in his field in Mexico, Spain, Portugal and South America.

Born in the Park Slope section of Brooklyn, Franklin attended Brooklyn Commercial High School for three years and was determind to become a commercial artist. He opened a shop in Manhattan and later went to Mexico City, intending to open an art shop there, but was sidetracked by the lure of the bull arena.

Hatfields and McCoys bury hatchet on feud

HARDY, Ky. (AP) — Descendants of the feuding Hatfields and McCoys — including two who were alive at the time of the battles — gathered Saturday at a tangled, vine-covered cemetery beside Blackberry Creek and officially closed one of the bloodiest chapters in the nation's history.

About 300 persons stood in a steady downpour as a granite monument was dedicated at the McCoy family cemetery. Two ministers, one a Hatfield and the other a McCoy, called for "peace in the valley" as the two famous families formally buried the hatchet.

An inscription on the monument read: "Six of the 16 children of Randolph and Sarah McCoy lie buried here, having suffered untimely death. Three died bound to paw paw trees at the mouth of Blackberry Creek in August 1882."

The three, Tolbert, Pharmer and Randolph Jr., were killed by William Anderson "Devil Anse" Hatfield and several of his relatives in retaliation for the earlier murder of a Hatfield. Before the feud was finished, more than 100 men, women and children had been killed or wounded, and the states of West Virginia and Kentucky were on the verge of open warfare.

The cause of the feud between the two clans was never clear. Some said it was over the theft of a McCoy hog by the Hatfields. Others said it stemmed from a grudge left by an incident during the Civil War, when the Hatfields fought for the South and the McCoys for the North.

A buffet luncheon followed the dedication. Two men who remember the feud cut the cake.

Willis Hatfield, 88, of nearby Logan, W.Va., said he had long since given up any ill feelings. "Some of those McCoys are pretty good fellows," said the last living son of Devil Anse.

Hatfield, who was only a youngster during most of the fighting, was standing beside "Grandpaw" Jim McCoy, 92, of Hardy. McCoy still lives near the old homeplace and says he well remembers the night in 1888 that the Hatfields burned down his family's log cabin home and killed two of his cousins.

"My daddy pulled me out of the cabin," he said. "All we were able to save were our nightclothes."

Like Hatfield, McCoy said he also bore no grudge. He said he soon forgave the Hatfields and even drank moonshine with Devil Anse a few years after the cabin burning.

"The Hatfields are my good friends," he added. "Just the other day a Hatfield boy brought me over three squirrels he had killed. Imagine that — a Hatfield doing that for a McCoy."

Mennonite gives up court battle to end 'shunning'

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Robert Bear, a Reformed Mennonite Church farmer who blames his Church for alienating his family and ruining his business, has given up on his court battle against the practice of shunning.

"I simply have run out of time and money. I have asked my lawyer that we stop all forward movements," Bear said Saturday. "I don't think we could ever bring this court to an objective overview."

Bear filed suit to have shunning declared illegal and to force his wife and children to return to him. Cumberland County Judge Clinton Weidner ruled against Bear last year and the case was appealed to the state Supreme Court, which sent it back to the lower court.

A new ruling is pending from Weidner, who said in an interview after hearing final arguments last Monday that Bear's case "should be thrown out because...he brought all this on himself."

Shunning is a Mennonite practice of totally ignoring by refusing to speak to or acknowledge the presence of any member of the Church who has been excommunicated. Even the wife, children and other relatives of anyone excommunicated participate in the shunning.

Bear's wife, Gail, and their six children, aged 6 to 15, have been living near Mechanicsburg, not far from the home of her brother, Glenn Gross, a Reformed Mennonite Church bishop, since Bear's excommunication.

Cottage to mansion, North Long Beach has it

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

Whether you're looking for a run-down one-bedroom home to renovate, a country-club mansion, or something in between, you can probably find it in North Long Beach.

And, according to Dorothy Siegfried, executive vice president of the Long Beach Board of Realtors, more people are buying on the north side than ever before.

She said sales early this year were running more than 50 per cent above early 1975, a year in which 1,437 properties in the area changed hands. She said 1,383 properties were bought in 1974.

MEANWHILE, nearly all the real-estate and lending officials interviewed said reports that much of North Long Beach is "redlined" are untrue.

"Redlined" describes a neighborhood which is treated —illegally — as unsuitable for conventional mortgages by banks and savings-and-loans "just because of the area."

"It is not difficult to get a conventional loan on a home in North Long Beach," Century 21 real-estate salesman Joe Jennings said Saturday. "It's just that the people who are buying up here are doing it because they can't afford a large down payment. So they go either FHA (Federal Housing Administration) or VA (Veterans Administration).

"IN FACT, more than 90 per cent of the loans up here are FHA or VA. If a guy had $6,000 to put down on a home he wouldn't be buying up here."

There is no down payment required when a veteran purchases a home under a VA mortgage or when a qualified California veteran buys a home under a Cal-Vet loan.

Under the most frequently used FHA mortgage, the buyer is required to make a down payment totaling 3 per cent of the first $25,000 of the purchase price, 10 per cent of the next $10,000 and 20 per cent of anything between $35,000 and $55,000.

THE FHA ALSO will allow a buyer to finance a portion of his closing costs.

Under that formula, a person buying a $20,000 home would be required to put only $350 down, while someone buying a $30,000 home would pay $850 down and someone buying a $50,000 home would make a down payment of $4,850.

On the other hand, to purchase a $20,000 home with an 80 per cent conventional mortgage, which is the standard percentage for North Long Beach and most of the rest of the city, a $4,000 down payment would be required.

DOWN PAYMENTS on $30,000 and $50,000 homes with 80 per cent mortgages would be $6,000 and $10,000, respectively.

The current interest rate on a conventional 80 per cent loan is 8¾ per cent, while the FHA interest rate is 8½ per cent, plus an additional one-half of 1 per cent for the insurance that guarantees the loan for the lender.

John Nead, Bank of America vice president, and Robert Jacobson, executive vice president for Home Savings, also said there is no redlining in North Long Beach.

The lending executives said all loan applications are reviewed individually and that none is rejected just because it is in one area or another.

JACOBSON SAID, "We have 10 conventional loans in North Long Beach in escrow right now, so that story about nearly all the area west of Cherry Avenue being redlined just isn't true. There are no redlined areas in North Long Beach."

Realtors working in the North Long Beach area agree that it is one of the few neighborhoods in the city where a young couple with a moderate income can still find a home they can afford; the availability of federally insured loans makes the property more easily affordable.

North Long Beach is packed with modest one- and two-bedroom Spanish stucco and frames homes, which sell from $12,000 for what realtors call a "dump" up to approximately $30,000. There is nothing currently listed for under $18,500.

WITHIN A FEW blocks of some of the least expensive homes in the area, there are neighborhoods where there isn't one house on the market for less than $100,000.

In fact, there isn't a house on Country Club Drive in the Virginia Country Club area of Los Cerritos listed for less than $120,000.

One of the most expensive homes for sale in Long Beach today is a massive, 6,000-square-foot home at 4294 Country Club Drive.

The home, which is listed with Robert Weil Associates for $275,000, has five bedrooms, a four-room master suite, maid's quarters and more than 3,600 square feet of marble patio and decking around the swimming pool.

TYPICAL PRICE listings in Bixby Knolls range from $69,900 for a 2,100 square-foot, three-bedroom home with a family room at 3913 Olive Ave. to $119,000 for a 2,866-square-foot, four-bedroom home at 4225 Myrtle Ave. It has a large family room, study and swimming pool.

Property values in Los Cerritos and Bixby Knolls have skyrocketed during the past couple of years, but values in most of the rest of North Long Beach have been increasing very little.

A 2,200-square-foot home at 4150 Chestnut Ave. sold for $57,000 in November 1974. The owners have "completely revitalized it," the listing agent said. "They added about 900 square feet during the remodeling, and it will be listed in a week or so for $169,000.

WHILE THE average appreciation rate in Bixby Knolls and Los Cerritos during the past couple of years has been running about 20 per cent, and in some cases much higher, the prices in North Long Beach have been increasing only about 5 to 10 per cent.

The reason, most of the realtors agree, is threefold: The community has always been a blue-collar area, where working people could afford to buy, and, secondly, prices for the area are set, in effect, by the FHA and VA loan appraisers.

Because nearly all of the homes are sold with government-insured loans, they cannot be sold for much more than the value appraisers set as a lending limit.

THE DIFFERENCE between the appraisal and the sale price would have to be made up by the buyers in increased down payments, and a low down payment is one of the prime considerations for obtaining a federal loan in the first place.

The third reason for the lower price appreciation, the realtors said, is that the area was subdivided and developed with small lots and small houses and, because of this, North Long Beach will probably always be an inexpensive area.

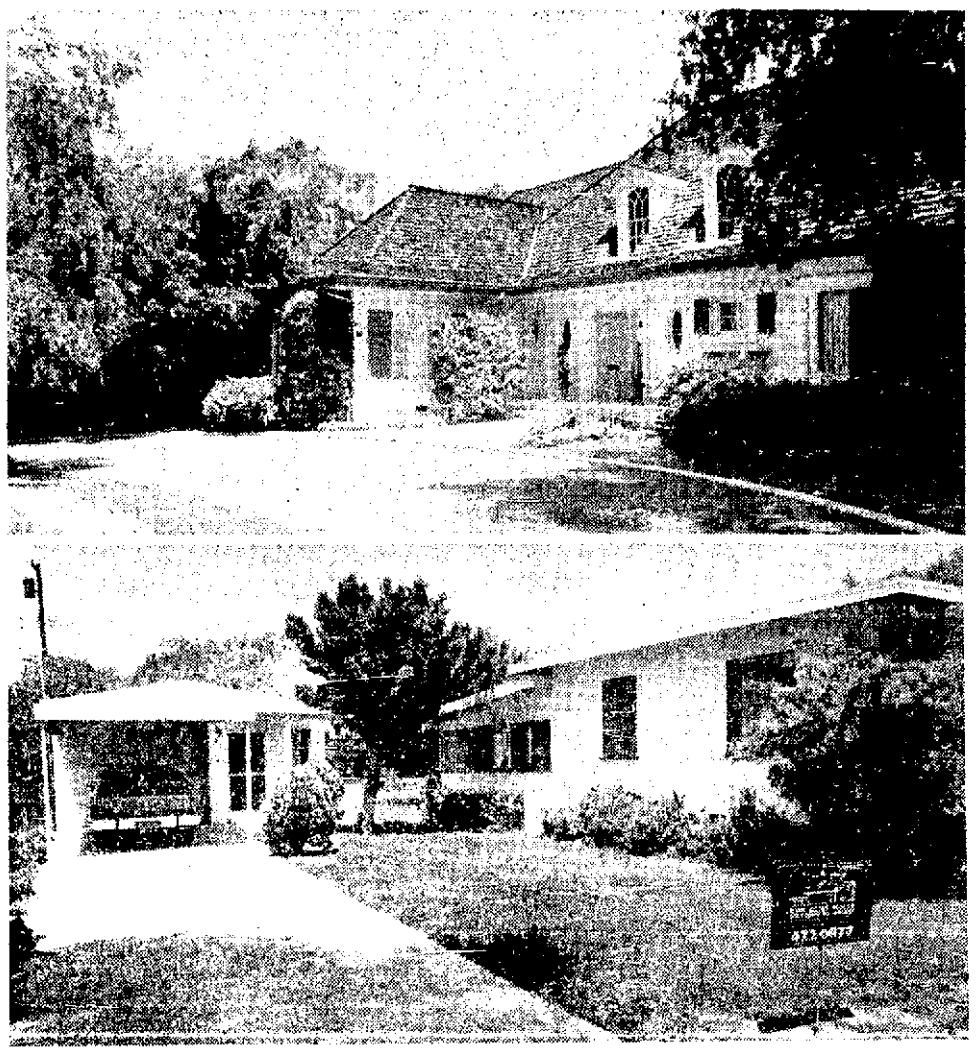

Rents in North Long Beach, however, have kept up with, and in some cases surpassed, many other areas of the city on a percentage basis.

ACCORDING TO owners of two of the largest home-rental agencies in Long Beach, rents for houses are running about 1 per cent of the property value, which means a two-bedroom home worth $25,000 would rent for about $250 per month, which would be enough to cover the landlord's loan payment.

In areas like Belmont Shore and Alamitos Bay, however, many landlords are having to make up the difference between their income and their loan payments.

HOWEVER, THE property there has been rising an average 20 per cent during the land year, so the appreciation makes up for the lower percentage of rental income.

The average rents for furnished apartments in North Long Beach range from about $80 a month for a single to as much as $225 a month for a two-bedroom.

Patty said informing FBI when abruptly transferred

By RONALD KOZIOL
Knight News Service

Patricia Hearst reportedly was disclosing secret details of successful bomb plots by underground revolutionaries to San Francisco FBI Chief Charles Bates Monday when she was taken abruptly from her hospital bed by U.S. marshals to a federal prison in San Diego.

The Chicago Tribune reported that the meeting with Bates, who led the hunt for Miss Hearst after her kidnaping and subsequent disappearance into the radical underground, was only one of several that already have taken place.

One reason for Miss Hearst's disclosures to Bates may be displeasure with her onetime comrades over violent acts aimed at her parents, Randolph and Catherine Hearst.

During her recent bank-robbery trial, a terrorist bomb caused more than $1 million damage to a guest house at the famed San Simeon castle, a onetime favorite retreat for the Hearst family. Upon hearing of the bombing, Miss Hearst became upset and reportedly blurted out, "I feel like telling everything I know about the New World Liberation Front," the terror group which took credit for the act.

Albert Johnson, Miss Hearst's attorney, had charged that she was virtually "kidnaped" by marshals from her bed at Redwood City's Sequoia Hospital, where the 22-year-old heiress was recuperating from a collapsed lung. The marshal's office has denied the charge.

Johnson said he was having a legal conference with his client when the marshals interrupted. But also present, sources say, was Bates, who reportedly was being told the inner workings of the New World Liberation Front, which has claimed responsibility for 32 bombings in California.

An FBI spokesman in San Francisco said Bates will not say "if he has or has not met with Miss Hearst."

However, it was learned from other sources that Bates and Johnson were taken by surprise by the hasty transfer of Miss Hearst to the San Diego prison, where she is to undergo three months of psychiatric examination before sentencing on her bank-robbery conviction.

They attempted to delay the transfer by placing a telephone call to Chief U.S. Marshal Frank Klein in San Francisco but could not reach him.

Bates reportedly was told by the marshals that he could visit Miss Hearst in the Pleasanton jail where she was taken for a day before being moved to San Diego. However, Johnson said the marshals' "unforgivable actions caused her an emotional disturbance, and she became very uncommunicative."

Miss Hearst is reported to have requested the meetings with Bates, who has been in charge of investigating the series of bombings in the Bay Area, including a blast that rocked a building which houses the FBI's offices in Berkeley.

A group of terrorists calling themselves the Red Guerrilla Family took credit for the FBI bombing. Miss Hearst is reported to have knowledge of the bombing and the persons connected with it.

Miss Hearst's knowledge of the radical underground network, where she spent 19 months before her arrest last September, is considered extensive by investigators. Her testimony against her former underground friends could play a major role in a reduction of her 35-year prison sentence after she completes the psychiatric tests.

Both the New World Liberation Front and the Red Guerrilla Family emerged on the California terror scene after a police shootout in Los Angeles in May 1974. At that time six members of the Symbionese Liberation Army died, but Miss Hearst and two companions, William and Emily Harris, escaped. The SLA had kidnaped Miss Hearst on Feb. 4, 1974.

After the three were arrested, investigators said documents were discovered their apartments indicating they were involved in a campaign of terrorist acts against police agencies.

Miss Hearst still faces trial on charges of kidnaping, assault, and robbery stemming from her alleged participation in a shooting at a sporting-goods store in Los Angeles. She is a codefendant with the Harrises in the Superior Court case.

'Weather warfare' feared

Associated Press

Disastrous effects of worldwide climate changes warned of in a new CIA report are likely to encourage attempts at climate modification and weather warfare, a former military weapons consultant said in Los Angeles Saturday.

Lowell Ponte said the United States and the Soviet Union are each studying ways of inflicting bad weather on the other, as well as ways of improving their own climate.

"If climate remains unstable, the Soviets, unable to feed themselves, will almost certainly decide to try improving their own climate by tampering with the polar icecap and other means," said Ponte.

Ponte formerly was a researcher in environmental and bizarre weapons for the International Research and Technology Corp., a Washington-based think tank that has had Pentagon contracts.

He is the author of the forthcoming book, "The Cooling," in which he contends the earth's climate is gradually cooling, a trend which could profoundly disrupt the world's food supplies.

A similar theory is contained in a CIA report to be released Monday, though its essentials were reported Saturday by the Associated Press.

The report said a period of adverse weather has already begun, and that the results could cause political and economic upheaval almost "beyond comprehension."

The report was based on work by Dr. Reid A. Bryson of the University of Wisconsin. Bryson wrote a preface to Ponte's book.

Deterioration in the climate has already encouraged affected nations to seek nuclear weapons, contends Ponte.

"India was only the first of many poor nations to decide, given the near-certainty of famine, that atomic weapons are a better investment for their survival than farm equipment," said Ponte.

PONTE SAID the the Pentagon's climate dynamics program has studied ways to melt the polar icecaps and, using space sateilites, to change the weather for the worse over the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union has already begun work to improve the Russian climate by reversing a river flowing into the Arctic Ocean and creating inland seas, said Ponte, the effects of which might be global.

Ponte said stricter international safeguards are needed to regulate climate modification techniques. Otherwise, natural balances could be disrupted with unforeseen consequences for the world's weather.

Talks continue in S.F., but still no end to stalemate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Talks continued into the wee hours of the 32nd day of San Francisco's longest municipal employes strike Saturday with no sign that a solution to the stalemate was near.

City negotiator Patrick Mahler reported privately to Board of Supervisors President Quentin Kopp at 2 a.m. on his latest meeting with leaders of the striking crafts union workers. Labor leaders met Saturday to discuss the overnight session.

The latest in a long chain of proposals, this one offered by labor, was reported to contain the following provisions:

—The appointment of a joint study committee with equal representation from both sides to develop a workable solution;

—The immediate return to work of strikers, with amnesty for all but those who committed violent acts or who are affected by court action;

—Removal of two salary propositions from the June 8 ballot.

They also indicated that the main stumbling block continues to be the board's insistance that the strikers accept a cut in pay.

The board has refused to meet with labor negotiators, insisting that Mahler has full authority to speak for the city.

THE STRIKE began March 31 when 1,800 of the city's 18,000 employes left their jobs in a dispute over $5.7 million in pay cuts authorized by the board and signed by Mayor George Moscone. The strikers have lost an estimated $10 million in wages since the walkout.

The controversial ballot propositions call for the dismissal of striking city workers and set salary levels by voter mandate. They have been used by the board as a bargaining tool, but their value for that purpose will be over May 10, the last day the board can take them off the ballot.

Meanwhile, contempt-of-court proceedings against union leaders were scheduled to resume Monday. Superior Court Judge John Benson disqualified himself Friday after union lawyers challenged him, noting that he was one of several judges jostled by pickets in front of city hall.

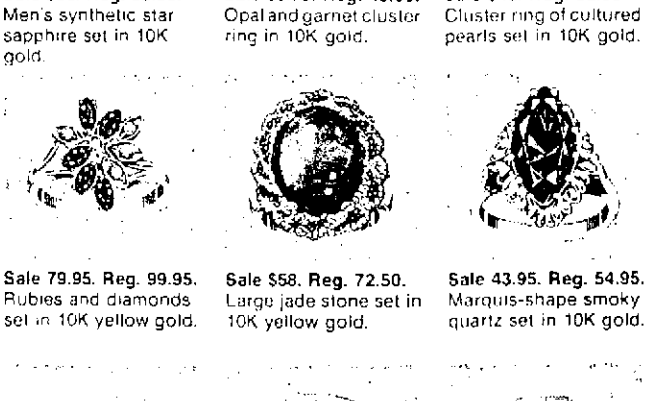

Retired Judge Clayton Horn was appointed to hear the case, but he also is under union fire because he cited labor leaders for refusing to obey a mid-April court order declaring the strike illegal and ordering an end to picketing.

31 arrested at rally in Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — Police arrested at least 31 persons Saturday in a brief confrontation with May Day demonstrators supporting striking garbage collectors.

Several other persons struck with nightsticks after they reportedly resisted arrest were taken to a local hospital for treatment. Police said they also would be booked.

ONE PERSON SURVIVED THIS PLANE CRASH ON RAILROAD TRACKS

—AP Wirephoto

Train hits crashed plane; four dead

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — A small plane crashed on railroad tracks Saturday and lay undiscovered until a train plowed into the wreckage two hours later.

Four of the five persons in the plane were killed, apparently before the train struck it, rescue workers said.

No one on the Southern Railway passenger train was injured.

State police said the twin-engine Piper Aztec apparently overshot the runway at fog-shrouded Lynchburg Municipal Airport.

The plane crashed about 3 a.m. and the 18-car Atlanta-to-Washington train struck the wreckage about 4:55 a.m., police said.

"The train crewmen said they came out of a curve and saw the plane sitting along the south track with just its nose hanging over the rails," said Pat Powell, chief dispatcher for Southern Railway.

"The train just hit the plane a glancing blow and pushed it off the rails."

Dead were Daniel Buck Candler Jr., 33, the pilot; Kent Manly Jackson, 33, and Mickey Lee Rowlett, 25, all of Lynchburg, and Kimberley Ann Croloff, 21, of Westport, Conn.

A fifth person aboard the plane, Kathy Dupree, 24, of Lynchburg, survived both the initial crash and the subsequent train-plane crash, police said. She was hospitalized in serious condition with multiple injuries.

GOOD FOR DAYS SHOWN

showed spelling errors similar to those in the will, such as "hoarse" for "horse," "converstation" for "conversation," "off" for "of" and so forth.

The manuscript, in parts ungrammatical and awkwardly phrased, tells of an industrious man who has trouble with women and falls afoul of the law. The chief characters are a woman named Darlene, her parents and friends named Jerry and Jack.

One paragraph of the manuscript demonstrates its rambling style:

". . .Two fellows were keeping a converstation in the middle of the lane on the highway, thire car running & they first sat thier the other cars were ahead off them almost 3-4 off a mile. . .I just kept on until I finally seen that they were just setting in the middle off the road."

OFFICIALS of the Mormon Church were trying to determine how the purported will was found on the 25th floor of the church office building.

They said their only clue was a "mystery woman" who refused to leave an envelope with a main-floor receptionist several hours before the will was found.

Receptionist Inis B. Stanton said a "striking" and "sophisticated-looking" blonde asked her for directions to the church president's office about 2 p.m. Tuesday and refused to turn over the envelope she carried, insisting it had to be hand-delivered.

THE DESK ON which the will was found in an envelope about 4:50 p.m. was several doors from the president's office.

In addition to trying to find the "mystery woman," church officials say they are tracing the steps of former Texas Gov. John Connally, a director of a Houston bank involved in a search for the Hughes will, who was on the 25th floor the day the will was found.

CONNALLY said through a spokesman in Austin, Tex., on Saturday that any speculation he or his bank may have been connected with the will is "a vicious, malicious, irresponsible story. Its clear implication is that the bank was guilty of wrongdoing and that I have violated professional ethics. This is all too characteristic of some reporter's interest in engaging in scandal by slander."

Connally told the Houston Post the story was "totally untrue" and that he was in Salt Lake City to talk to Mormons about "world affairs." He would not elaborate.

Connally said he had no dealings with Hughes nor does his law firm represent any Hughes interests.

The will directed that a quarter of Hughes' wealth go to the Howard Hughes Medical Institute of Miami, and the balance was apportioned to his two former wives, four universities, officers of his companies, charitable causes and Melvin Dummar, 31-year-old service-station owner formerly of Long Beach, who said he once picked up Hughes in the Nevada desert.

Carter, Reagan victors in Texas presidential primary

HOWEVER, THE returns available late Saturday were inconclusive due to the complicated procedure set up by the state party for the election, the first presidential primary in the history of the state.

Delegate candidates committed to former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter and an uncommitted slate running under the banner of Gov. Edwin Edwards had fought a head-and-head battle before Wallace surged ahead when the rural districts reported.

With just over half of the vote tabulated, Wallace delegates led for three spots, Edwards' uncommitted delegates apparently had won six and were leading for four more, and Carter delegates apparently had won eight and were leading in one other.

In Maine, Republicans selected 20 supposedly uncommitted delegates to the GOP National Convention Saturday, but 13 of those selected said they were solid supporters of President Ford.

Two delegates said they were uncommitted but leaning toward Ford. Supporters of Reagan won four seats and one delegate said he was truly uncommitted.

AND IN KANSAS, Carter picked up 13 delegates Saturday at the state's five congressional district conventions. Eleven of 27 delegates elected were uncommitted.

Two delegates were committed to Arizona Rep. Morris Udall, while one supports Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington.

Seven more Democratic delegates will be chosen at the Kansas party convention on June 5, rounding out the state's 34-member national delegation.

Reagan moved on Saturday to the campaign for Indiana's primary, one of four that will be held next Tuesday. Ford was due to take the road again today for Indiana and Alabama.

In addition to those states, Georgia and the District of Columbia hold primaries Tuesday. Ford is unopposed for the 14 District of Columbia delegates.

The Texas primary was conducted under two systems, one for each party. Republican delegates were elected to represent the 21 congressional districts and Democratic delegates were apportioned among the 31 state Senate districts. As a result, there were different polling places for Democrats and Republicans in some cases.

Furthermore, Democrats held precinct caucuses Saturday night to begin the process of picking 32 more delegates.

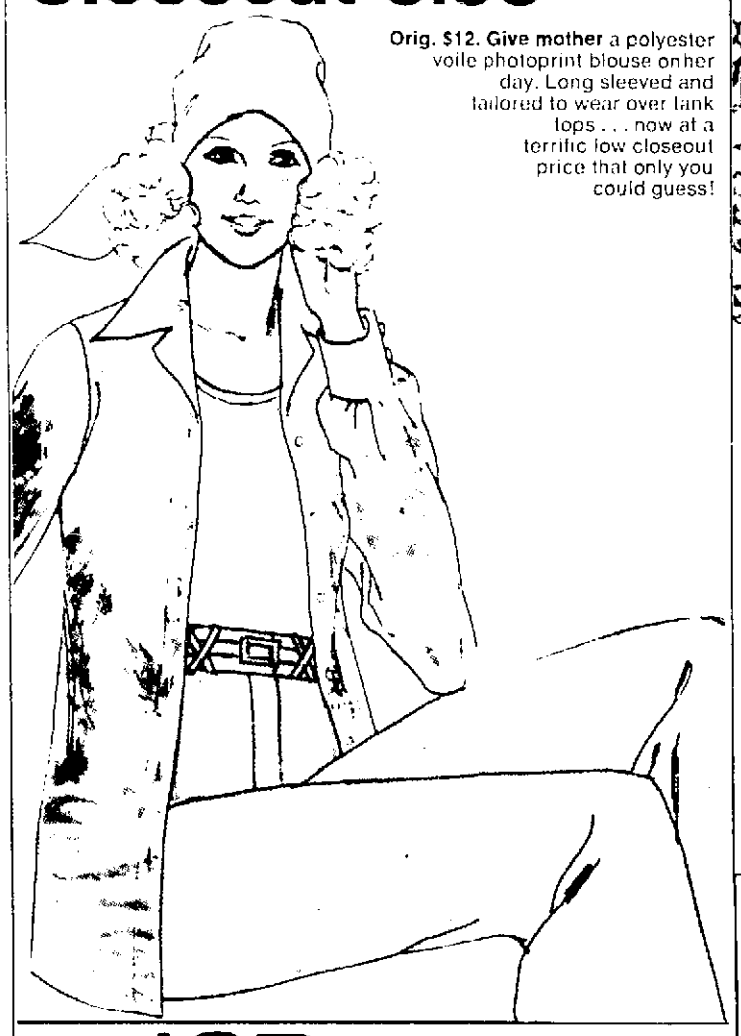

The whole business drew protests from Carter, who said it was tailored for political manipulation. "Texas has the most disgraceful primary law in the United States," he said. "It was contrived to help Sen. Bentsen."

Carter, in Augusta, Ga., said Saturday "for all practical purposes I stand alone" in the contest for the Democratic nomination.

UDALL, WHO has yet to win a primary, and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho and Gov. Brown of California, who have yet to run in any, are his remaining rivals.

Carter's Pennsylvania primary victory forced Jackson, a Washington senator, out of active primary competition for lack of money. And Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota announced Thursday that he would not enter the race.

Starts Sunday, May 2.

Violence in West
Red parades mark May Day

Associated Press

May Day brought traditional massive worker parades in Communist countries Saturday, but gave way to violence, militant antigovernment demonstrations and callups of extra police in several Western nations.

Communist East Germany staged the only military parade reported on the international labor holiday, with goosestepping soldiers brandishing Soviet weapons that revealed increased firepower and technical refinements.

THE AMERICAN, British and French commandants in West Berlin protested the show of force in East Berlin as a "renewed violation of the demilitarized status of Berlin."

In Moscow, the Soviet Union's ruling Communist Party Politburo, led by Leonid I. Brezhnev, stood atop Lenin's tomb to wave at more than 100,000 marchers in a parade lasting more than two hours. Raul Castro, the visiting Cuban defense minister, joined the Soviet leaders at the celebration that stressed economic development.

Fireworks displays climaxed the celebration in Peking, where broadcasts reported one million Chinese flocked to city parks for day-long May Day festivities.

In Vietnam and Laos, thousands celebrated at parades and rallies at which leaders called for the further development of socialism. The festivities in Hanoi and Saigon were closely linked to the first anniversary Friday of the Communist takeover of South Vietnam.

EAST GERMANS TURN "EYES RIGHT" DURING MAY DAY MILITARY PARADE —AP Wirephoto

MAY DAY brought violence in Italy, bracing for expected new elections in the wake of the resignation Friday of Premier Aldo Moro's government.

About 20 persons, some of them policemen, suffered slight injuries when police resorted to tear gas in breaking up demonstrations in Rome's Piazza del Popolo and a boulevard leading to Vatican City. Forty persons were taken into custody.

Italian factories were under tight surveillance over the holiday after a recent rash of arsonist-set blazes, most of them claimed by extreme leftist groups.

In Portugal, a powerful bomb exploded before dawn outside Lisbon Communist party headquarters, killing one person and injuring six. Later tens of thousands of persons attended two rallies in Lisbon. No violence was reported and crowds were smaller than those on the two other May Days since the 1974 military coup.

SPANISH police arrested more than 400 persons in their efforts to hold the lid on antigovernment demonstrations in at least seven cities. But they did not interfere with an open-air rally of more than 2,000 Communists in Madrid, the largest such gathering since the Spanish civil war ended in 1939.

The Spanish Communists massed on a hilltop in a Madrid park and chanted against the monarchy of King Juan Carlos and for leftist unity and release of political prisoners. One of their leaders was a Catholic worker-priest, the Rev. Francisco Garcia Salve, freed from prison by royal pardon after the death last November of Spanish ruler Francisco Franco.

Several persons were reported injured and more than 75 arrested in Barcelona, Spain's second city, when thousands of demonstrators fought with stones against police swinging clubs and firing rubber bullets.

About 3,000 Israeli Arab Communists staged a peaceful May Day rally at the biblical town of Nazareth to protest Israeli economic policies and land takeovers. There was no apparent connection with a new flareup of Arab rioting in the occupied west bank area, where Israeli soldiers shot and killed one Arab.

Leone dissolves Italy parliament

New York Times Service

ROME — President Giovanni Leone dissolved Italy's parliament Saturday night in a formal prelude to an announcement setting the date for the elections that could result in a share of power here for the Communist Party.

Leone earlier met with political party leaders and then with Premier Aldo Moro, whose 11-week-old government resigned Friday night after losing its parliament support.

The date for the elections, the most crucial here in years, is expected to be June 20.

With the dissolution of the nation's sixth post-war parliament, the political parties went to work on strategy for a campaign that will stretch over six weeks. Apart from gaining votes, the parties also will seek to curtail political violence, which is on the increase.

China premier attacks Russ

TOKYO (AP) — China's new premier, Hua Kuo-feng, attacked the Soviet Union on Saturday for what he called "sham detente and real expansionism," a Peking broadcast reported.

Hua's remarks, at a banquet given by visiting Prime Minister Robert Muldoon of New Zealand, fell short of his charge made Thursday that the Soviet Union "is the most dangerous source of war."

Hua told Muldoon: "We both deem it necessary to maintain sharp vigilance against the superpower that goes in for sham detente and real expansion."

In his banquet speech, Muldoon said: "We agreed. . .certain forces are at work which are of mutual concern and anxiety, and watched with vigilance by both of us."

FREE BEAUTY CLINIC

A free beauty clinic will be hosted by noted beauty authority, Dorothea Segal, at the Edgewater Hyatt House Hotel at 2 P.M. on Saturday, May 8, to demonstrate skin care and make-up techniques.

Free individual consultations will be given to women with skin care and make-up questions during the clinic.

The clinic will demonstrate recommended procedures for cleansing the skin, an illustration of how beauty experts use make up to contour and shape the face, and how to take care of special places and problems common to many women.

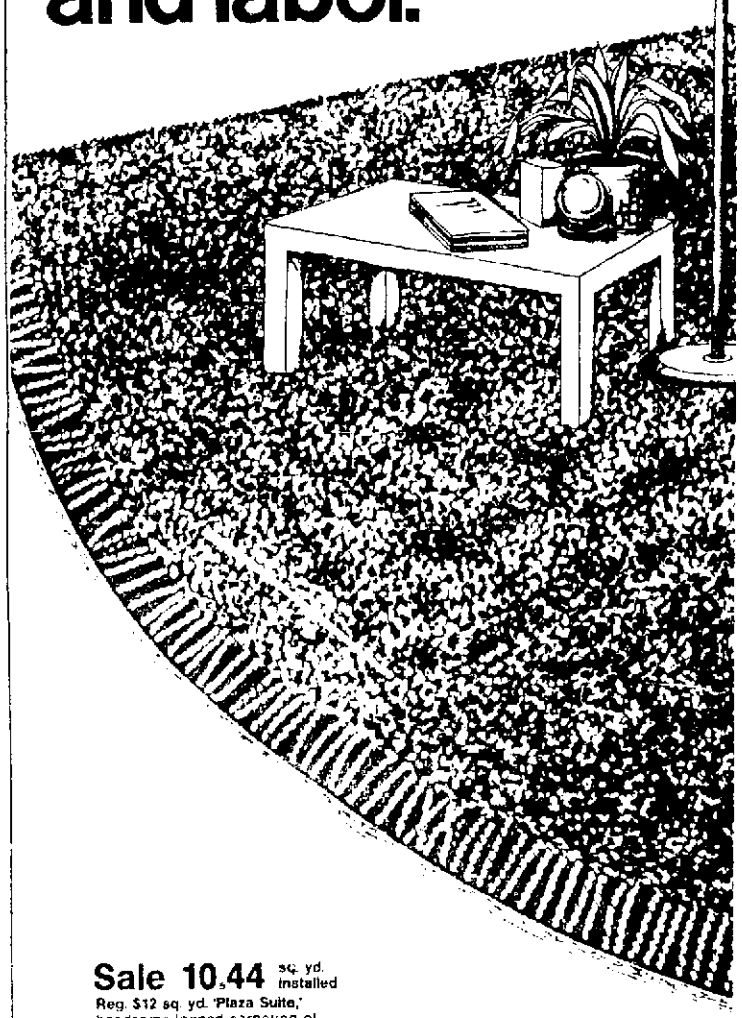

Ms. Segal will also demonstrate personalized make-up techniques designed to bring out the natural beauty of each woman while camouflaging blemishes and other less attractive facial points.

Advance reservations for the free beauty and make-up clinic on Saturday afternoon at the Edgewater Hyatt House are not required.

The clinic will start promptly at 2 P.M.

Starts Sunday, May 2.

Kissinger urges Sahara-rescue project

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger Saturday proposed a $7.5-billion rescue operation to "roll back the desert" in a drought-devastated region of West Africa, and he appealed to the world's industrial countries to join it.

"What is needed now is a comprehensive international program that will help roll back the desert, develop additional water resources, increase crop acreage and build food-storage facilities," Kissinger said in a luncheon speech shortly after arriving here from Liberia.

The relatively low-keyed stop in Senegal was Kissinger's sixth visit to an African country on his current two-week tour. He was to fly today to Nairobi, Kenya, to attend a United Nations Conference on Trade and Development.

The United States is ready to open talks with other nations to set up an international development investment program to bring the parched sub-Saharan region called the Sahel to self-sufficiency, Kissinger said.

The area has endured three devastating droughts in the past 10 years. Senegal is located on the edge of the Sahel.

Kissinger outlined an ambitious program for water conservation, reforestation, transportation, communications and scientific use of dry land areas, crops and livestock.

"Traditional aid levels and methods will not be enough," he said. "Nor can any one country or any single donor provide the resources necessary to meet the critical, long-term needs of the Sahel."

If present trends continue, the Sahel — Senegal, Mauritania, Niger, Chad, Mali and Upper Volta — will need to import one million tons of grain annually, Kissinger said.

The Soviet Union would not be excluded from the program, he said. However, Moscow has never shown interest in similar assistance programs proposed by Washington for the Third World.

Kissinger called again on Angola to dismiss the 15,000 Cuban troops on its soil, holding out the prospect of economic aid and recognition by the United States.

Cuban troops and Soviet arms support aided Angola's Marxist Popular Movement in winning a civil war among black liberation groups in the former Portuguese colony.

Kissinger asked: "How can a government be considered African that requires 15,000 Cuban troops?"

Kissinger spoke at a luncheon given by the Senegalese foreign minister, Assane Seck, in a multimillion-dollar hotel overlooking the Atlantic.

Seck appealed in his speech for the "total elimination of apartheid," saying a minority of white racists was keeping blacks in slavery in southern Africa. The minister called this "an affront to the world's conscience."

Kissinger assured the Senegalese that "change will come," and he again urged the white minority governments to negotiate with black liberation leaders.

Kissinger's tour also took him to Liberia, Zaire, Kenya, Tanzania and Zambia.

Report cites Canada-U.S. rift

By GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON—Warning of an "exchange of verbal and economic brickbats" between Canada and the United States, 15 House Republicans in a 37-page report have urged restraint and new negotiations between the two countries.

"The deteriorating relations between the United States and Canada force us to re-evaluate the friendship that we have long taken for granted," the report said.

IT ADDED, "There is a strong desire in Canada to break away from dependence on the United States."

Reps. Paul N. McCloskey of California, Mark Andrews of North Dakota and Garner E. Shriver of Kansas were among those who signed the report.

The report concentrated on problems of energy, a proposed transcanada natural-gas pipeline, the North Dakota Garrison Water Project and efforts of Canada to nationalize American-owned industries.

"Bilateral energy relations have been strained by the Canadian decision to curtail energy exports to the U.S.," the report said. "Canada announced plans to phase out crude oil exports completely by 1981, and to drastically reduce natural gas exports to ensure Canada's ability to meet domestic requirements.

"...Canadian-U.S. energy relations should be conducted on an on-going basis, dealing with regional concerns before they become national problems," the report recommended.

"The two nations should carefully examine the possibility of a swap of liquified natural gas, or a trade-off in which we import Canadian natural gas now in exchange for Alaskan natural gas exports in a few years," it said.

"Because we recognize that high prices are incentive for industries to seek new energy resource fields, we urge Canada to raise its domestic price of energy," the report concluded.

The report noted the problems of the Garrison Water Project.

"THE Canadian government has concluded that saline return flows from the project's sprinkler irrigation would have adverse effects on Canadian portions of the Souris, Assiniboine and Red rivers and on Lake Winnipeg, causing injury to health and property in Canada in contravention of the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909," the report said.

It also urged consideration of an international joint commission on the project.

Rhodesia calls up reserves to battle black guerrillas

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesia said Saturday it is mobilizing thousands of reserve troops to meet renewed offensives by Soviet-armed black nationalist guerrillas along the 800-mile border with Mozambique.

A communique from security-force headquarters here said, "Provision has been made for the call-up of territorial-force units for continuous service."

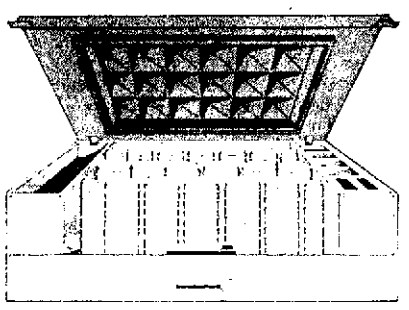

A spokesman for the white minority government later said the new territorial-force commitment, which is expected to affect thousands of young white Rhodesians, would go into effect immediately.

The communique also said the government is considering extending the draft from 12 to 18 months in an effort to field more men.

The spokesman said reserves are usually called to active duty several times a year for a month at a time but under the new policy will remain on active duty "until they are stood down." He said "it could be up to 10 years."

The London-based International Institute of Strategic Studies, in its report on military balance for 1975-76, said the Rhodesian army has 4,500 regular troops and 10,000 reservists, the air force 1,200 regular troops and 10,000 reservists and the police 8,000 active men and 35,000 reservists. Over 60 per cent of the police regulars and about 25 per cent of the reservists are blacks.

Tax rebate boost looms

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Senior-citizen property owners will receive a 10 per cent increase in their property-tax rebates if Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. signs State Sen. George Deukmejian's Senate Bill 413, which has just passed the Legislature.

Deukmejian, author of the original rebate law, said the need for the new legislation "was brought to my attention by elderly constituents who found that small, inflation-related increases in their Social Security or pensions raised their incomes to a level where it reduced the property-tax assistance provided by the state.

"In effect, we were giving them help on the one hand while taking it away on the other."

The Franchise Tax Board estimates the increase in disbursement at $5.5 million starting in the 1977-78 fiscal year. While the increase affects the 1976-77 property taxes, reimbursements will not be made until after July 1, 1977.

The existing Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance Program grants refunds to homeowners over age 62 on property taxes which have been paid on the first $7,500 of assessed value of their residences. The amount of such assistance is based upon the household income and the amount of taxes paid.

Deukmejian is a Long Beach Republican.

Malpractice bill

Long Beach Assemblyman Fred Chel's proposed legislative remedy to soaring malpractice-insurance rates moved another step Thursday with approval by the Senate Insurance and Financial Institutions Committee.

The bill, AB 2780, an urgency measure, would enable doctors to form cooperatives to indemnify one another against medical-malpractice claims.

Chel said traditional methods designed for doctor protection "have resulted in exorbitant insurance rates and higher medical bills for patients.

"My bill offers an alternative. It would cut some of the legal red tape and make it feasible for physicians not related in practice to create a co-op that would defend them against medical-malpractice judgments. It could help upgrade the quality of medical care because the co-ops will be small enough to encourage better review of members."

Chel said the legislation could also help spare patients from higher health-care fees.

"Insurance companies find it easier to pay 'nuisance claims' than to fight them. The costs are tacked on to the doctors' premiums and ultimately passed on to the patients' bills," Chel said.

Chel is a Democrat representing the 58th Assembly District.

Voorhis speech

Former California Rep. Jerry Voorhis will speak on Proposition 15, the Nuclear Power Plants initiative, at the Friday noon luncheon meeting of the Democratic Women's Study Club in the Lafayette Hotel French Room.

The club will elect officers at its 10:30 a.m. business meeting.

Reservations may be made by calling 438-0300.

Finch reception

Republican U.S. Senate candidate Robert H. Finch and his wife, Carol, will be honored at a $76-a-couple reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Tuesday in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Wilson, 4236 Country Club Drive, Long Beach.

The fund-raising event is open to the public. Reservations may be made by calling 625-0812, or tickets may be purchased at the door, according to Jack Dilday, Long Beach area cochairman of the Finch campaign with Donald B. Caffray.

Hannaford meets

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach and West Orange County, announced his May schedule of townhall meetings for next Saturday:

1 p.m., Brakensiek Library Community Room, 9945 Flower St., Bellflower.

3 p.m., Huntington Beach Library Pacific Room, 7111 Talbert Ave., Huntington Beach.

Hannaford also announced his cosponsorship of a bill calling for a 10-year, $20-billion national commitment for the development of solar energy as an alternative energy source.

With a goal of placing 10 per cent of the country's energy dependence on solar and geothermal energy within 10 years, the program would build thousands of demonstration homes and offices in all 50 states.

Bentley against coast panel

Jack W. Bentley, a Republican candidate for Assembly, 58th District, announced his opposition to the California Coastal Zone Conservation Commission as "a burden to taxpayers and local governments alike."

He said the coastal zone should be placed under local control, adding, "The present commission, consisting of a group of appointees who are answerable to no one, has too much regulatory power. Not only have they prevented reasonable development of the coastline in instance after instance but the cost to the taxpayer is horrendous."

Bentley cited a study-estimate of State Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post of $16 million for four years, $4 million more than originally estimated.

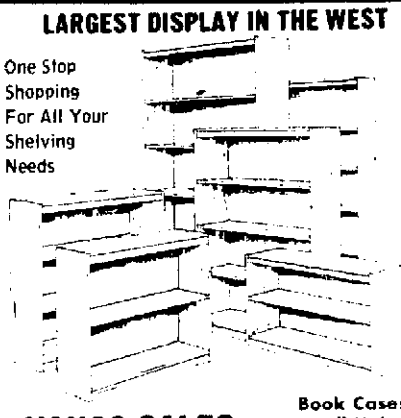

"We can bet this figure is far below what the real cost will be," Bentley said, "and even if it isn't, $16 million is much too much for us to spend on a commission whose greatest regulatory achievement so far has been to prevent a local resident, whose property is unfortunately in the 1,000-foot mean tide jurisdiction of the commission, from removing ivy from his parkway on the grounds of destruction of natural foliage.

"And since when should an appointee have the power of regulation anyway?"

He said return to local control will ultimately save tax dollars and create more jobs since more construction would be allowed than in the present situation.

Criticize mass-mailings costs

Bond, Lungren hit Hannaford

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Republicans Bill Bond and Dan Lungren renewed their attacks this week on Democrat Mark Hannaford, whose 34th Congressional District seat they are vying for.

Bond's theme continued against Hannaford's mass mailings in the district. Hannaford dismissed Bond's detailed attack with the statement, "I'm going to continue to communicate with my voters."

Lungren portrayed Hannaford as one of the greatest of the big spenders. Hannaford replied, "Absurd."

THE "GALL" of Hannaford, said Bond, to send two districtwide mailings within three weeks at taxpayer expense, one postcard mailer costing $17,000 to announce two speaking engagements, then a four-page brochure (costing $21,000), "half of which is a reproduction of government telephone numbers easily found in a phone book or by dialing information."

Bond said Hannaford's claim of credit for a $107,000 grant to Huntington Beach is less than he has spent in federal money on personal mass mailers within the last four months alone.

The mailers, Bond said, "for self-promotional purposes rank among the worst usages I have seen anywhere" and smacks of "a desperate candidate or at the very least an egomaniac."

LUNGREN SAID the evidence disputes Hannaford's protests that he is working to control the growth of government and taxes. He noted the American Conservative Union's "budget buster" award to Hannaford.

Hannaford said there are many organizations like the ACU cited by Lungren "that issue pedigrees on congressmen, both on the left and on the right... They pick out a handful of votes of a thousand cast in a year."

One such group included GOP Reps. Burt Talcott of California and John Rhodes of Arizona in its "dirty dozen" as great polluters of the land, Hannaford said, "but that's false. I may disagree with these Republican colleagues but they're not great polluters."

The same thing is true of the National Security Council which Bond used recently to point to a 12-point rating out of a possible 100 given Hannaford, the congressman said.

"THEY'RE fundamentally conservative, lobbying groups. I looked up the issues involved after that scoreboard appeared. Three of them involved aid to Southeast Asia. Well, I voted to get out of Southeast Asia and anybody who thinks that wasn't good for American security I disagree with," Hannaford said.

"One issue was the boycott of Rhodesian chrome. Well, I disagree with the white government of Rhodesia; it's not going to stay there very long and our action is proving that now.

"The National Security Council faulted us for denying our ability to go into Angola. I don't think we should have gone into Angola but they think that (denial) was contrary to American security.

"OF ALL THE things they rated us on only two involved modest cuts in defense spending; the rest were philosophical issues. One of them was whether to reveal the bottomline figure on the CIA budget. I think we should know the total amount we're spending on the CIA. I didn't vote against spending it but I voted to find out what it was," Hannaford said.

Lungren hit Hannaford for his advocacy and vote for adoption of a budget "nearly $80 billion higher than revenues, causing inflation and high interest rates to continue."

Said Hannaford, "Our deficit last year was $74.1 billion...very close to what President Ford asked for. We enacted no new programs with significant cost impact...The deficit was caused by unemployment. Each percentage point of unemployment causes $16 billion in deficit.

"Congress actually appropriated over $4 billion less last year than the President requested—more in some areas, less in others."

Lungren was critical of Hannaford's vote for creation of "a large new bureaucracy called the Agency for Consumer Advocacy," thus contributing to added cost of government "and bypassing a fundamental reform of already existing agencies."

HANNAFORD said he feels the agency will save more than it would cost and "has no power whatever to issue regulations. I have fought agencies and their abusive regulatory activities.

"Moreover, I sponsored an amendment to exempt small business from the paperwork aspects of the agency and voted for the amendment to combine all previously existing consumer agencies under the same umbrella, thus doing away with 22 window-dressing kinds of consumer activities."

Lungren attacked the vote for "establishing new labor law by adoption of the common situs picketing bill which would have permitted a strike against a single subcontractor to close down an entire construction site. This would have caused further unemployment in the construction industry as well as higher costs to the consumer. It was prevented from becoming law by a presidential veto."

Hannaford said he would remind Lungren that President Ford, of his own party, "advocated it (the picketing bill) and promised a number of times to sign it...The President's secretary of labor (John T. Dunlop), who both parties agree was one of the great scholars of labor relations in this country, resigned because the President vetoed it. People disagree on this issue and I could be wrong and as subject to error as the secretary of labor was."

Train runs out of track: it's stolen

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — A locomotive and four railroad cars derailed Saturday because someone stole 120 feet of track.

Engineer Jim DeWitt said he was heading from Cadillac to Traverse City at about 3 miles an hour when the engine suddenly dropped off the tracks.

Officials said about 200 feet of track had been cut into 2-foot sections and about 120 feet of it had vanished.

CIA, Dewey, Nixon ties claimed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The CIA pumped more than $1 million into the 1948 presidential campaign of Thomas E. Dewey and provided crucial evidence used by Richard M. Nixon against Alger Hiss, according to Rolling Stone magazine.

In a copyrighted article in its May 20 issue, the magazine says the CIA was twice instrumental in securing evidence used by Nixon against Hiss, former State Department official accused of being a member of the Communist Party. The perjury conviction of Hiss in 1950 gained national attention for Nixon, then a freshman congressman from California.

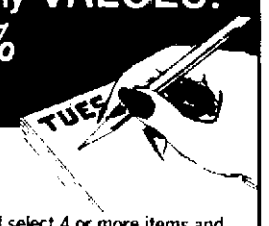

According to Rolling Stone, Dewey had established a cordial relationship with the CIA and its wartime predecessor while he was governor of New York, at one point approving parole for mobster Lucky Luciano after the spy agency arranged for the Mafia to patrol East Coast docks against Nazi saboteurs.

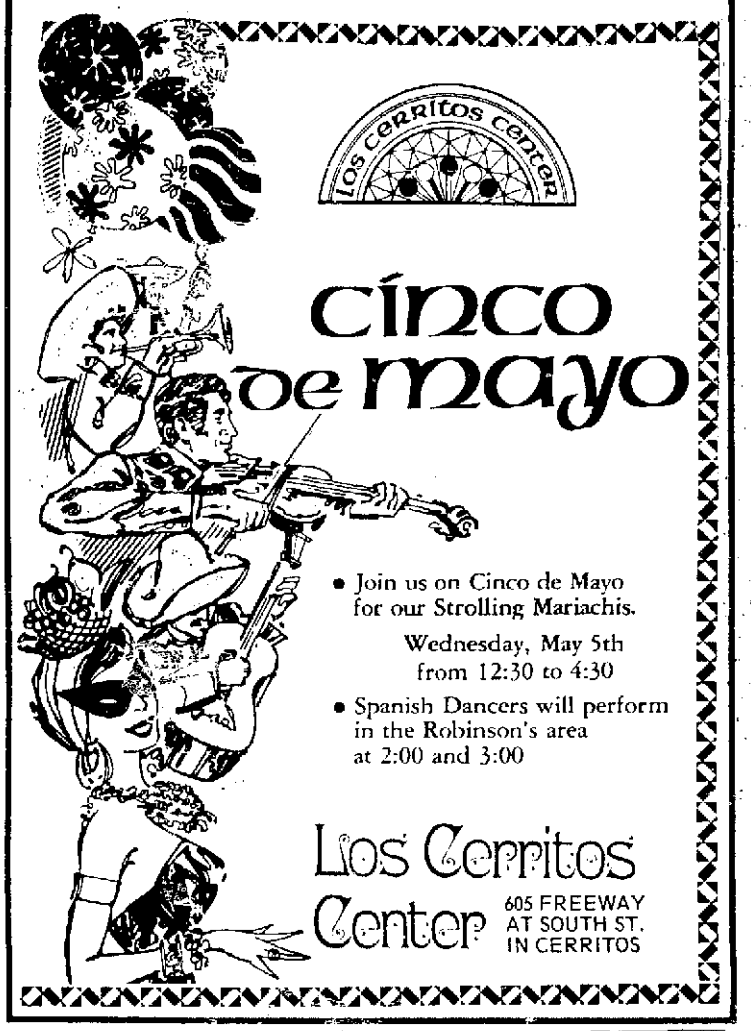

Citing "agency sources," author Howard Kohn reports that the CIA funneled more than $1 million from its secret budget into Dewey's presidential campaign. Organized-crime figures, in league with the CIA, also supported the Republican nominee, the magazine says.

Before Dewey, who died in 1971, was upset by President Harry S Truman, he saw an opportunity to embarrass him during the campaign, Rolling Stone says. The CIA had provided him with information about Hiss, and he then leaked it to the Communist-hunting Nixon, the magazine says.

Leaders in crisis

Van Buren, the magician

By SID MOODY
Associated Press Writer

If not always first in the hearts of his countrymen, Martin Van Buren can claim some other blue ribbons.

He was the first president born after the Revolution. He was the first to build a statehouse machine that could, with a little tinkering, probably still run today. He was the first to face a bellyup depression. And he was the first — but not the last — to avow that what depression did to the private purses of his constituents — it emptied them — was no business of the public government.

The eighth president was a small man: as a fledgling lawyer a judge once asked him to stand on a bench to present his arguments. But he cast his shadow over national politics for more than 30 years. Thrice he ran for president and in 1836, as the hand-picked heir of Andrew Jackson, whose vice president he had been, made it. Previously he had been a power in New York politics, a U.S. senator, governor of New York for a few months, until Jackson asked him to be his secretary of state and ambassador to Great Britain for a few more months, until rivals in Congress rejected his appointment.

Then, another first and perhaps a last, he became a truly intimate vice presidential adviser and confidant to the one man who was his superior, Jackson. Van Buren, a master politican who earned the title "the little magician" by accomplishing such feats as winning the support of both Alexander Hamilton's son and his father's slayer, Aaron Burr, made no bones about wanting the top job as soon as Old Hickory tired of it. Indeed, the Democrats nominated him 18 months before the 1836 election lest there by any doubt.

Eighth of a series

But no sooner had Van Buren assumed the purple than the bottom dropped out of the then 26 United States. All through the 1830s, America, with land for the taking as far as the eye could see and farther than stable currency could reach, had been on a speculative binge.

The young nation had achieved the incredible in 1834 by retiring the national debt, which had stood at $90 million only 13 years before. But such public thrift was overwhelmed by an orgy of private greed. Population in the new states was bursting: 400,000 almost overnight in Illinois, 1.4 million in Ohio, 350,000 in Missouri. Land sharks bought, sold and rebought and resold in the certainty that trackless forest and prairie would soon flower with new communities and crops. British money joined the frenzy.

Land in the territories was available to anyone, $1.25 an acre. Revenue from this soared from $1,507,175 in 1829 to $24,877,179 seven years later. The federal Treasury was bulging — except there was no Treasury.

JACKSON, IN A BITTER battle, had put the Bank of the United States, which handled federal monies, out of business. The funds were assigned to state banks, instead. Jackson, with some justice, hated the bank as an ominous monopoly and a corrupt one at that. Unfortunately, hard money, gold and silver, was scarce, and many banks were little more than an upturned hogshead with access to a press to print their own money.

FINANCIAL TROUBLES CARICATURED IN 1837 LITHOGRAPH

If someone were to ask what all the paper was worth and one hogshead topple, the panic would be on. In his last year in office, Jackson gave the nudge by requiring that after July 1836 all land payments would have to be in gold or silver specie except for actual settlers. The local banks, meanwhile, were holding in their coffers almost $40 million in land revenues which were to be distributed to the states starting with $9,367,000 in the first quarter of 1837. They would have to start calling in loans because of the loss of federal deposits. And repayment would mostly be in dubious paper. Lastly, times had turned sour in Britain. Hard British money went home.

As Van Buren rode to his inaugural in a carriage fashioned from timbers of the U.S.S. Constitution, the hogsheads were toppling. First banks, then everything. In the first 11 days of April 1837 there were 128 assorted failures in New York City, including 30 dry-goods jobbers and 28 real-estate speculators. Cotton plunged from 20 cents a pound to 10. Banks still afloat suspended payment of notes in hard money. The only commodity that still commanded cash was slaves.

Bankers begged Van Buren to rescind his predecessor's Specie Circular, but Jackson, hard pressed himself, roared from retirement at the Hermitage in Tennessee for "the little magician" to "stand firm." He did. Daniel Webster also roared there could be no separation of "the interests of the government and the interests of the people."

PRESSED, VAN BUREN finally called a special session of Congress in September and laid down an unwritten law that was to characterize economic orthodoxy long after he was dead (and he lived until 1862).

The government, he said, could not aid the deception that paper was gold, that value arose without labor that cities could be built on thin air. Speculation had so diverted the nation from its business, such as agriculture, that $2 million in grain had to be imported in the first six months of the year.

"It (government) was not intended to confer special favors on individuals, or on any classes of them," the president said, "to create systems of agriculture, manufactures or trade ... All communities are apt to look to government for too much ... We are prone to do so at periods of sudden embarrassment and distress ... The less government interferes with private pursuits, the best for general prosperity."

He proposed creation of an independent federal Treasury to handle government monies, free from the risks of private banking. In 1840, the last year of his administration, Congress approved it. The Whigs, riding high, revoked it when they took office from a defeated Van Buren. It was reinstated, however, in 1846 and lasted until the creation of the Federal Reserve System in 1914.

The credo, if not the precise words, of Martin Van Buren has lasted even longer.

Congress goes push-button

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thanks to a computer, a congressman working in his office can push a couple of buttons on a TV screen terminal and read a summary of the debate he's missing on the House floor.

Thirty computer terminals have been installed in congressional suites as part of a pilot study to determine their effectiveness as information-providing, time-saving devices for members of Congress.

The study will determine whether the terminals should be installed in the offices of each of the 435 members of the House and in additional committee rooms, at a total yearly cost of more than $1 million.

If the machines, which cost $180 a month each, are put into wide use around the Capitol, they may be wired into various government information networks.

Gallo ads stir up campus debate

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Advertisement of Gallo wines in college newspapers has sparked controversy in recent weeks on campuses across the state, with several reports of mass theft of student newspapers and threats of physical violence.

The most recent in a series of disturbances surrounding a long-standing United Farm Workers boycott of Gallo occurred last Tuesday at Hayward State University.

ABOUT 15 members of the campus La Raza Coalition, a Chicano student group, marched into the editorial offices of the student newspaper, the Pioneer, and demanded suspension of a Gallo ad that ran that day.

Dan Sheridan, Pioneer managing editor, said one demonstator told him the coalition would "close the paper down," using "any means we could, even if it came to doing something illegal."

Earlier this month, editors of the Sacramento State University newspaper, the Hornet, reported that they received threats of violence after publishing the Gallo ad.

THE NEXT time the Hornet advertised Gallo, 8,000 copies of the student newspaper were taken from their distribution points and were later found stuffed in trash bins.

Incidents on other campuses include:

—Inclusion of a Gallo poster was seen as having motivated the theft last week of 3,500 copies of the Highlander, the weekly student paper at UC Riverside.

—The same Gallo poster recently inserted in the UC Irvine newspaper, the New University, was "plastered all around campus," scrawled with "Boycott Gallo" and "Boycott the New U," according to news editor Leslie Sunell.

—The student government at San Diego State University financed anti-Gallo ads in the student newspaper, the Aztec, after the editorial board rejected farmworkers' pleas not to run the Gallo promotions. The student body recently rejected their government's action in a referendum vote.

—Last week UFW supporters petitioned the UC Santa Barbara newspaper, the Daily Nexus, demanding equal space, free of charge, for every paid Gallo ad.

Tim Patterson, editor of the Forty-Niner, Long Beach State University's paper, said Gallo ads have appeared severals times this semester with no comment from UFW supporters.

"We haven't taken an editorial stand on the Gallo-UFW controversy," said Patterson.

On other campuses the Gallo-ads dispute has raised questions about a campus newspaper's purpose and responsibility.

Editors of all papers interviewed agreed that press freedom includes the right not to print stories or ads they determine to be sexist, racist, or otherwise in bad taste.

Michael Dorais, lobbyist and attorney for the California Newspaper Publishers Assn., said nonstudent newspapers have the right to refuse or accept advertising from anybody.

However, the press freedom of student newspapers is not as clearly defined. A campus newspaper, unlike the general press, is not truly independent of its readership, the students. For example, student newspapers of the University of California, which are partially funded by student registration fees, are in most cases accountable to the campus media board and, ultimately, the UC Board of Regents.

Some student newspapers say they cannot afford to ban Gallo's quarter-page ads and tabloid-size poster inserts, though they would like to.

"It (the Gallo ad) keeps our paper solvent," said Dan Sheridan of Hayward State's Pioneer. "We won't be intimidated to pull out the ads." Sheridan published another Gallo ad last Thursday. He said he would have gladly banned the controversial promotion to quell student protest if an alternate ad were available.

The editor of the UCR Highlander says he has continued to run the ads for financial reasons, but has given UFW supporters a full editorial page to present their views.

Other newspapers have refused to publish Gallo ads, which editors say offend their readers and undermine the editorial board's announced support of the UFW boycott.

"We are categorically opposed to Gallo selling its products at the expense of the farmworkers," said Irv Eachus, editor of the California Aggie at UC Davis. "We are dealing here with a company which has a long history of exploitation of farmworkers."

Editorial staff of the UC Santa Barbara Daily Nexus and the UC Irvine New University have also editorialized in favor of the UFW boycott, but they run Gallo ads because they refuse to cross editorial policy over to advertising.

"We believe anyone should have the freedom to advertise and we can't start to discriminate on the basis of editorial stance," said Pat Gross, New University advertising manager.

"We figure anybody's money is equal to anyone else's," she said.

But Manuel Picket, head of Sacramento State's Chicano group, says "freedom to advertise" is deceptive. He said the UFW cannot afford to pay for ad space to counter the Gallo promotions. "The people who have been struggling in the fields do not have the money," he said.

Dave Miller, editor of Sacramento State's Hornet, said he believes press freedom includes the right not to print ads that are offensive to a large number of readers.

He said that a significant number of the 4,000 students of Mexican descent on the Sacramento campus protested against the use of Gallo ads and that the paper should have banned the ads.

The campus media board there resolved the dispute by prohibiting the newspaper from publishing both UFW and Gallo ads.

Rosie's a jewel as a 'watchdog'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The "watchdog" guarding Tom Cole's jewelry shop can make the most hardened hold-up man reconsider. Protecting the jewelry 24 hours a day is Rosie, a tiger striped tarantula.

Rosie is a lot smaller than the snarling canine normally chosen for such duties — she measures about 5½ inches from front to back leg. But she can get a lot closer to her work, actually living among the silver-and-turquoise rings and bracelets at Sterlingworks.

The ominous hairy-legged spider uses two hollow fangs to deliver poison potent enough to kill small animals like frogs and lizards, which make up most of its natural diet. Rosie's bite is uncomfortable, but not fatal, to humans.

AFTER his shop had been robbed several times, Cole says he went to a security firm which recommended the tarantula.

"I wanted some security without paying an exorbitant price," Cole said.

"I never had a spider before and I was very afraid of her at first," he remembers. "But I got used to handling her.

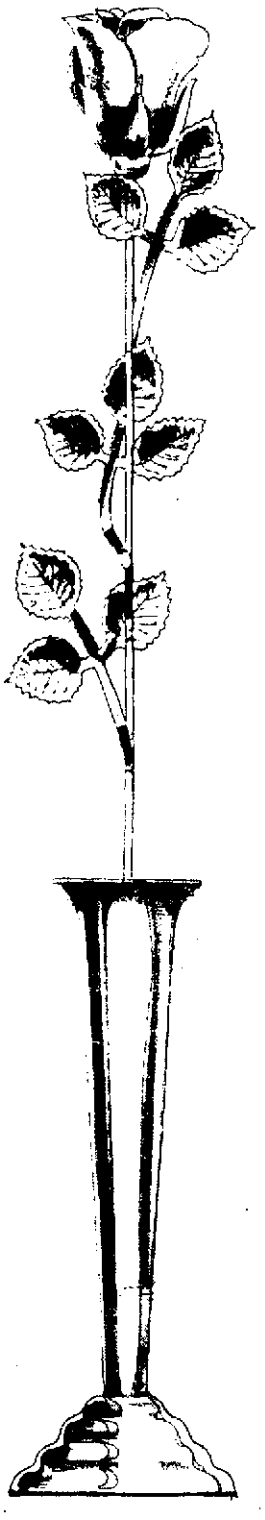

"I consider her a real pet now," he added. "She won't bite me and she seems to like being petted."

Rosie is an economical pet, eating a meal of ground meat or crickets once every five or six weeks. Cole says she often races around the display case, then sits motionless for days at a time.

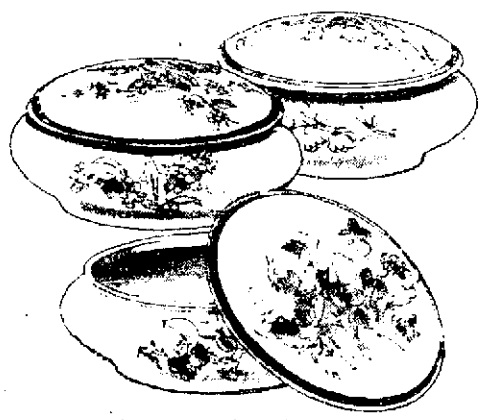

"This is a bad neighborhood," Cole says—but there have been no robberies since Rosie took over guard duty.

Check up

I'd like information about having a house inspected before buying it. Who does this kind of thing? L.K., Long Beach.

Private building-inspection firms will check a house from roof to foundation to make sure it is in good condition, and paying for such service might be money well spent if you have any doubts about the integrity of the structure. AAA Building Inspection Service in Culver City, 839-1389, employs off-duty municipal building inspectors. A company spokesman said they "check on everything we can get to." The fee for an average-sized three-bedroom, two-bath house is $88. A similar service is offered by Nationwide Real Estate Inspection Service. Its offices are in New York, but you can arrange to have a local inspector check a property by calling their toll-free number, (800) 221-2165. Their fees range from $85 to $200. Both firms check heating, plumbing, wiring, water pressure, roof, drainage, foundations, attics and interior and exterior walls, and give a written report on the condition of the building. It also is a good idea to have the local building department check to make sure there are no unauthorized additions or improvements and that the structure conforms to the building code. In Long Beach such an inspection costs $5, with an additional $10 to have the plumbing and electrical systems checked for code compliance.

Irredeemable

I came out here recently from Florida to start my own business. My wife is with her brother in Ohio until I can afford her plane ticket to California. I received my federal income-tax refund check for $1,100, which is made out to me and my wife. I sent it to my wife for her endorsement, but the Bank of Downey, where I have a savings and a checking account, still wouldn't let me cash it unless she was present. I can't get her out here without the money from that check, and it seems I can't get the money without her. What am I supposed to do? L.A.W., Downey.

U.S. Treasury Department regulations state that before a government check can be cashed it must be endorsed by both parties to whom it is issued in the presence of the bank teller, said a spokesman for Bank of Downey headquarters. However, Richard Holmes, manager of the Imperial Highway branch where you have your accounts, said you could open a joint account with your wife in which you would be allowed to deposit the check without her being present. He said if you will contact him directly he will give you the forms to fill out and send to your wife for her notarized signature to open the account.

Pickup in pickup?

We are planning a trip east soon and wonder if it is legal to carry a passenger in the back of my pickup truck. It is not a camper but has a camper shell on it. I am particularly thinking of the checkpoint at the Arizona border. T.S., Long Beach.

You can carry as many passengers as you wish in the bed of a pickup truck, with or without camper shell, said a spokesman for the California Highway Patrol. He said most states' regulations would be similar to California's on this type of thing. Action Line also checked with Arizona's Department of Public Safety and found there is no law in the state prohibiting passengers in the bed of a pickup. Both states, however, prohibit passengers in a trailer or other towed vehicle.

Stop it

I ordered two sets of children's books for some relatives from Grolier Enterprises, Inc., in Danbury, Conn., last year. The order included introductory packages in two reading programs, with additional books each month. I was supposed to be able to cancel the order at any time. I wrote five months ago to Grolier asking to cancel my account, but they did not do so and are billing me for unwanted books. I have written them twice more, but I'm still getting bills. Can Action Line help me? G.H., Long Beach.

Your account has now been canceled, and you are to disregard the bills. And your relatives may keep without charge the six books that arrived after you asked for cancellation, according to Dante Cirilli, assistant to Grolier's president. Cirilli apologized for the mixup and said, "Unfortunately, with the volume of our business, mistakes sometimes occur."

Brown woos black vote at N.C. caucus

By BOB SCHMIDT
Our State Bureau

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—Jerry Brown Saturday commenced the task of convincing skeptical black politicians that he is mounting a serious campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The California governor was the first of four candidates for the nomination to arrive at the Caucus of Black Democrats.

Shortly after he arrived, Brown heard one of his main supporters, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, issue a warning to all the candidates that "if you don't deal with the issues we identify, we will deal with you at the polls."

BROWN IS scheduled today to face the biggest challenge in his infant, but mushrooming, campaign.

He is to make a panel appearance with front-running Jimmy Carter of Georgia, Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho in the concluding event of the three-day caucus attended by 1,500 black, elected officials.

Welcomed warmly in Maryland as he launched his national campaign earlier in the week, Brown drew a cordial but restrained reception from the delegates here, most of whom appeared grieved over Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphrey's decision not to become an active presidential candidate.

"This is Humphrey country," said San Francisco Assemblyman Willie L. Brown Jr., who is clearly a force among black politicians nationally.

Blacks from outside California are curious about the governor, said Assemblyman Brown, who has not yet declared his candidate preference.

An aide to the governor said late evening talks were planned with Assemblyman Brown and with Los Angeles Congresswoman Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, who also has not yet announced support of a candidate.

Congressman Ron Dellums of Berkeley said that if Gov. Brown is to gain support from uncommitted blacks, he must abandon his questioning approach to the specific issues troubling blacks and propose specific solutions.

DELLUMS ADDED that he had urged Brown to come to Charlotte for just that purpose. "The questions have been articulated. Now we must have answers," he said.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson of Chicago, another national power among blacks, said he was prepared to come to California to stump for the governor if he is asked to do so by the state's black politicians.

"His (Gov. Brown's) destiny is locked in the hands of California's blacks who want to see how he handles the Dymally situation," Jackson said.

The "Dymally situation" refers to the contention of many blacks that the governor has relegated Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally to an insignificant role in his administration.

Brown, questioned about Jackson's statement, said: "That is puzzling. Merv is an active supporter of my campaign and will travel to Maryland on my behalf."

Dymally is scheduled to return with Brown to Maryland Wednesday as the governor steps up his effort to win that state's May 18 primary election.

Earlier Saturday, Brown concluded a three-day visit to Maryland by meeting with two groups of volunteers in two different counties.

AT THE FIRST session, Towson Township in Baltimore County, more than 150 persons waited in a church for an hour to see the 38-year-old Californian whose visit has touched off a response that has startled veteran Maryland politicians.

At the second, 75 citizens of Prince George's County traveled to another church in a driving rainstorm to see the governor.

Later Saturday, Brown met with a small group of highly influential political writers at a Washington luncheon hosted by Godfrey Sperling, publisher of the Christian Science Monitor.

The governor was scheduled to return to California later today but was to get no rest from campaigning. Two late-night, fund-raising receptions were scheduled for him in Los Angeles and Pasadena.

Ford, advisers weigh decision on Navy's size

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Ford and the National Security Council weighed Saturday a multibillion-dollar decision on whether to embark on an expanded Navy shipbuilding program, with a consequent major increase in the defense budget in future years.

There was no immediate indication of what decision emerged from the two-hour meeting of the President with his top defense, diplomatic and budget advisers. But the expectation within the administration was that, partly for political reasons, Ford would approve some increase in the Navy's shipbuilding program.

The future size of the Navy, which at 480 ships is now at the lowest level since 1939, is regarded within the Pentagon as the most important military issue confronting the administration, involving tens of billions of dollars as well as the future role of the Navy. The issue also has become involved in domestic politics as Ronald Reagan has pressed his charge in the Republican presidential primary contest that the administration has allowed the nation to slip into a position of military inferiority, including naval power.

White House officials have insisted that the timing of the decision was in no way related to or dependent on Saturday's outcome of the critical Texas primary. But Pentagon officials reported that the decision-making process has taken on urgency as the administration became more concerned about the Reagan challenge.

Vote delay in Lebanon is deadly

BEIRUT (AP) — Savage artillery battles and house-to-house fighting swirled through downtown Beirut Saturday while political efforts to end Lebanon's civil war went into a new stall.

Police reported more than 100 persons killed and 150 wounded in the clashes that erupted after postponement of a parliament session Saturday to elect a new president.

Parliament Speaker Kamel Assaad put off the election in an 11th-hour decision Friday night in the face of irreconcilable discord among the 98 assembly members charged with replacing the Christian chief of state, Suleiman Franjieh.

FRANJIEH'S departure is the leftist Moslem coalition's main condition for ending the war. The Moslems have taken the upper hand after a year of combat that has killed nearly 18,000 persons and left the country in ruins.

The politicians' inability to agree on a new leader underscored the deep split still ripping this little Arab nation — Moslem demands for political reforms and increased Arabization versus Christian determination to retain dominant positions in the government and economy.

At least 15 other political bosses in the tribe-like Lebanese political system immediately came up with offers to be the compromise candidate now talked about as a way to end the stalemate and silence the guns.

"THE DOOR HAS been opened for a third candidate," proclaimed the radio controlled by Brig. Aziz Ahdab, Beirut garrison commander and self-proclaimed provisional military governor.

But no one among the new pretenders attracted enough attention to pose an immediate threat to the two frontrunners — Elias Sarkis, the central bank governor; and Raymond Edde, National Bloc Party leader.

Both, like Franjieh, are Maronite Christians — a sect linked to Roman Catholicism and long the dominant force in Lebanon. But neither Sarkis nor Edde is identified with the president and his Maronite allies in the bloody civil war.

publicity and promotion. A fee of $40,000 would go to ICPR if the city decided to hire them.

For some immediate results ICPR thinks the ship should be cleaned up and visitors given something to do. Puppet shows, movies, local events and magic shows were suggested.

Later, boat rides from a floating dock installed at the stern could offer tours of the channel. A North Sea storm could be staged on the bridge with film and closed-circuit television.

The firm also suggests the use of lifeboats on the starboard side for rides and the introduction of people-activated exhibits on the ship.

Promotion films, a new advertising campaign and a media-oriented party to mark the 40th anniversary of the ship's maiden voyage May 27 were among ideas offered to give the ship more appeal to the nearly 12 million persons in the basin and the 8 million who visit Southern California annually, according to ICPR.

Part of the firm's presentation was a critical assessment of the Queen Mary as an attraction. The ship was termed "a money loser, an 81,000-ton deteriorating hulk, an object of political concern and attack, a source of continuous media criticism and, most important, a questionable attraction to a skeptical and indifferent public."

ICPR further observed, "The elegance, style and grandeur of the QM has been gutted, stripped and ravaged, primarily by Specialty Restaurants."

"THE SHIP HAS NO identity, no theme exploitation, no drama, no cohesiveness, no logical pedestrian traffic pattern. . .no vital entertainment appeal," ICPR states. "It does nothing and offers little."

An aggressive marketing, advertising and promotional program along with "increased coordination among existing lessees or introduction of a new lessee that realizes the importance of a comprehensive entertainment and exploitation program could turn the ship into "a major local and regional leisure-time attraction, a self-supporting profit center, a major Long Beach commercial operation, a worldwide promotional vehicle for the city of Long Beach."

William Thompson, vice president and general manager of Specialty Queen Mary Corp., reacting to ICPR's comment about Specialty Restaurants, said, "I don't know why they would make such a negative statement in a proposal where the city would come to us for funds."

Money for the ICPR ideas, if they were adopted, would come from Specialty, the Museum of the Sea and Pacific Southwest Airlines, which owns the ship's hotel.

While Thompson, some members of the City Council and other businessmen on the Queen Mary were aware of the ideas submitted by ICPR, Asst. City Manager Robert C. Creighton expressed concern lest the report be considered anything more than advisory.

HE DESCRIBED it as an entertainment concept offered at no cost or obligation to either the city or Wolff-Sesnon.

"If we wanted to have some type of promotional or entertainment program considered, we would have to invite any number of companies to submit ideas," he said.

ICPR officials appeared with Wolff at what Creighton defined as an "attorney-client" meeting at City Hall early in April. Copies of the plan have been passed around the Queen Mary, but members of the council who were not at the meeting with Wolff and ICPR said they had no knowledge of its contents.

Creighton said the meeting was one of a series of reports by Wolff on Queen Mary problems.

Hijacker rides same jet home

PARIS (AP) — A Turkish worker who hijacked a Turkish Airlines DC10 in an attempt to avoid expulsion from France left Saturday aboard the same aircraft, under police guard, for Istanbul.

A Turkish Embassy spokesman said he would be "dealt with by Turkish justice."

A French police spokesman said Zeki Ejder, 36, told them he hijacked the plane Friday night with 253 passengers aboard "to rejoin a woman he loves, who is under arrest in France."

An illegal immigrant in 1974, Ejder was given a six-month suspended jail term this year for making death threats. After he was ordered expelled, two detectives put him aboard the plane that was hijacked.

Bold Forbes all the way

Wins Ky. Derby wire-to-wire

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "The little horse was just too game—I couldn't catch him," a somber and disappointed Braulio Baeza said Saturday after failing to guide odds-on favorite Honest Pleasure to victory in the 102nd Kentucky Derby before a crowd of 115,387.

The little horse was Bold Forbes, a dark bay cannonball that burst to the front and staved off Honest Pleasure's strongest challenge to win by a length.

Baeza, the country's top jockey in 1975, refused to blame his pre-game put-down by trainer LeRoy Jolley for his disappointing failure.

"I rode the horse—he didn't," the 36-year-old Panamanian said. "I followed his instructions.

"He told me to lay back in second or third during the early part of the race. I did just what he told me. But when I made my move turning into the stretch the little horse kept going. , "He surprised me. He is a gutty little horse."

An apparent freeze in relations between jockey and trainer of the Derby favorite surfaced 48 hours before the race when Jolley erased Baeza's name as rider in entering Honest Pleasure Thursday and wrote "no boy."

The act created considerable confusion before Jolley, after being pressured by Churchill Downs officials, announced Baeza as the rider.

Both Jolley and the horse's owner, Bertram Firestone, shrugged off the incident as an "oversight." Track insiders said the misunderstanding ran deeper than that.

There were reports that Baeza, who had ridden the colt to eight victories, might be replaced in the saddle for the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes, the remaining two jewels of racing's Triple Crown for three-year-olds.

But Jolley said after the race: "Baeza raced a perfect race. I have no complaints."

Asked if he wanted another shot at Bold Forbes, Baeza shrugged his shoulders.

"I guess so."

Asked if he expected to continue riding Honest Pleasure in the remaining major events, the impassive Panamanian again showed little emotion: "Who knows?"

Unconfirmed reports were that Jolley was seeking to lure the veteran Bill Shoemaker from the West Coast to take over Honest Pleasure's reins.

Many interpreted Jolley's "no boy" gesture as a means of rapping his jockey's knuckles for failing to follow orders in the Blue Grass Stakes a week ago when Honest Pleasure won unimpressively.

"He told me I should have run the horse faster at the start," Baeza said. "I thought we would win easily and I did not want to take too much out of the horse."

Jolley also indicated that Baeza, one of the world's wealthiest and most successful riders, was reluctant to follow orders, failing to listen to prerace instructions.

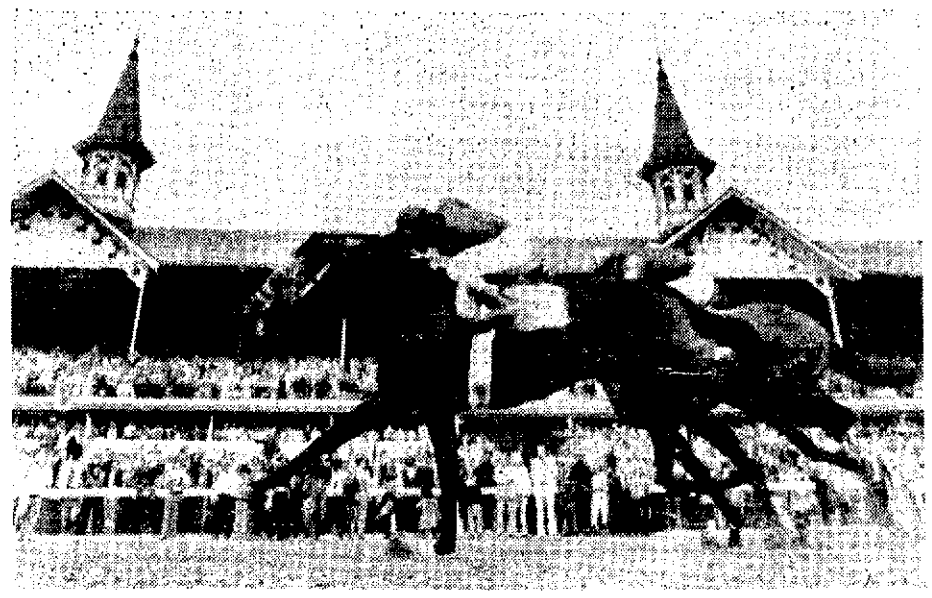

"I listen to what he says but I do not always do it," Baeza said. "I am on the horse. I must react to what develops."

Derby trainer saddles 3 winners in three states

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "When they played My Old Kentucky Home, I got goose pimples all over my body. Then I knew I was at the Derby."

The speaker was Laz Barrera, the Cuban-born trainer of Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes. Two other horses that Barrera trains also won Saturday—Life's Hope in the Illinois Derby at Sportsman's Park and Due Diligence in the Carter Handicap at Aqueduct.

Of the three, Barrera said, "Actually I thought my horse in Illinois had the best chance to win. Because, believe me, I know Honest Pleasure is a great horse. This was a great horse we beat today.

"Most guys are lucky to win one big horse race in a day. I am a very lucky man. I got three horses to win in three different states today."

USC Bush-whacks UCLA; ends 42-meet win streak

By JOHN DIXON
Staff Writer

Coach Jim Bush calculated that UCLA would have to win the 400-meter relay to defeat USC Saturday.

The Bruins gave it an Olympian try, hustling around the Drake Stadium plastic in 39.4, second swiftest time in the world. But USC ran 39.3, won the relay and won the meet, 83-62, guillotining UCLA's victory streak at 42.

"I thought 39.4 would win," Bush analyzed. "Considering the poor handoffs by both teams, the times were fantastic.

"We hoped to give our anchorman, Orlando Johnson, a five-yard lead on James Gilkes, but they were almost even. You can't beat Gilkes even. He's one of the best in the world."

While UCLA trimmed four-tenths from its quickest clocking, USC deadheated its best mark—and Trojan coach Vern Wolfe was smiling like a fellow with 1/16 of Howard Hughes.

"I was scared to death," Wolfe said. "We dropped the baton against California, you know, and our handoffs were so shaky in the Mt. San Antonio Relays that we finished third."

Wolfe's game plan was a quick getaway, "an emotional charge," in the early events.

He got it. A stunning upset in the shotput and the two-yard victory in the relay gave the Trojans an 11-3 advantage that was never threatened.

"This was a team victory," Wolfe insisted, "but give Mike Budincich some extra credit. He started it all."

Budincich shoved the shot 63-5¾, 17 inches beyond his lifetime best, to topple one of the few "sure things," Jim Neidhart of UCLA. Neidhart, a 65-1½ thrower, reached only 61-10¾.

"After that," Wolfe pointed out, "everyone caught fire.

"I was surprised at the score. I really thought it would come down to the mile relay."

Bush was surprised, too. His dope sheet read UCLA 74, USC 71.

What happened?

"I didn't think that our hurdlers would do such a bad job," Bush said with a frown. "It's the fault of the hurdles coach—and that's me."

UCLA's James Owens, with a 13.6 in the record book, was co-favored in the high hurdles, but his 13.9 scored only a point behind Trojans Fred Shaw (13.7) and Mike Johnson (13.8).

Grant Niederhaus of UCLA hadn't lost an intermediate hurdles race all season, but he was never a contender Saturday, finishing fourth in 51.6. Trojan Tom Andrews won in 49.4, fastest time in the world this year. Bruin Phil Mills snipped a second from his personal pinnacle and finished second in 50.1.

Gilkes and Ken Randle were point pacesetters for the Terrific Trojans.

Gilkes was caught in the starting blocks but rallied to win the 100 meters in 10.1. He was much the best in the 200 in 21.1—and he galloped the decisive leg of the 400 relay.

Randle was third in 21.2 as SC swept the 200, drubbed UCLA star Bennie Myles by six yards (45.6) in the 400, and kept the Trojans in contention in the 400 relay.

Freshman Conrad Suhr was UCLA's outstanding athlete.

Angels conquer daylight

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

CLEVELAND — It was 40 minutes before game time Saturday and the Angels' reserve infield was in the process of going through a warmup drill.

Going through the motions would be a more apt description. The quartet of Bill Melton, Billy Smith, Paul Dade and Adrian Garrett looked lethargic, lackadaisical and lost, perhaps epitomizing a team that had sustained six successive defeats.

Angel of Day

BRUCE BOCHTE went 3-for-3, drove in two runs and scored another as Angels tripped Cleveland, 6-1.

In the dugout, the high command seethed.

"Get those guys off the field before they run fans out of the park," screamed one.

"It was a disgrace," conceded coach Norm Sherry. "I was embarrassed."

The manager, Dick Williams, wasn't exactly enamored of what he was witnessing, either.

"I chewed some fannies, I can tell you that," he said. "I was so hot I sent one guy (Dade) to the bullpen because I didn't want to look at him. He's lucky that's as far as I sent him. It could have been Salt Lake."

Maybe that was what the Angels needed—a spark of some kind, any kind—for they went on to finally see daylight, in more ways than one.

With Nolan Ryan pitching five strong innings and Paul Hartzell, the surprise of the spring, pitching four even stronger ones, the Angels shed the darkness of the losing streak behind a 10-hit attack which delivered a 6-1 triumph over Cleveland.

Ageless Mota gives Dodgers 8th in OT

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Manny Mota, the ageless pinch hitter, capped a dramatic two-run rally in the bottom of the 10th inning Saturday night as the Dodgers scrambled from behind to overtake St. Louis, 4-3, for their eighth successive victory and third in a row over the Cardinals.

Dodger of day

MANNY MOTA singled home winning run in bottom of 10th as Dodgers beat Cardinals, 4-3.

The 38-year-old Mota rammed an Al Hrabosky pitch through the left side of the infield to score Steve Garvey from second base with the winning run. Moments before Garvey had rifled a double off the leftfield wall to get the Dodgers even at 3-3 after the Cardinals had gone in front in the top of the 10th.

Mike Marshall, who followed starter Tommy John, got the win. Marshall, incidentally, will be missing today. He's returning to Michigan State for, uh, some unfinished business. He will rejoin the club Tuesday in Chicago.

Beating Hrabosky, the self-proclaimed Mad Hungarian, was especially gratifying to the Dodgers.

Hrabosky had whipped them four times last year without a loss and had strung together six consecutive scoreless relief appearances before the 10th when Garvey doubled home Dusty Baker who was aboard on an error. Mota then drove home Garvey with the game-winner, Mota's 97th career pinch hit.

"I don't worry about how pinch hits I get," he said afterward, "only if I get one in the right situation. That's what counts.

KAREEM SAYS THERE'LL BE SOME CHANGES MADE

NEW YORK (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar says the Lakers are in for a shakeup following their failure to qualify for the National Basketball Association playoffs this season, a shakeup that could include coach Bill Sharman as well as several players.

"There definitely have to be some changes," says Abdul-Jabbar, voted the NBA's Most Valuable player in his first season with the Lakers even though the club had a losing record and failed to make the playoffs.

"Jack Kent Cooke (the Lakers' owner) invited me to his home last week and we talked about the team's future," the 7-foot-2 center disclosed. "He said he definitely wants some new personnel on the club—but I'm pretty confident he doesn't want a new center."

"We had a lot of talent—it just wasn't coordinated well. We didn't work well together."

Does that mean Cooke wants a new coordinator—a new coach?

"Anything is possible," Abdul-Jabbar replied.

Sharman has been under attack for his failure to guide the Lakers into the playoffs this season following the off-season trade which saw Los Angeles send four young players to the Milwaukee Bucks for Abdul-Jabbar. There have been reports that when the Lakers regroup for next season, a new coach will be at the helm.

"We had all the problems any new group encounters," Abdul-Jabbar said. "We were never able to establish an identity as a team. We had trouble handling teams that had big guards. We had trouble getting a team on the floor that had good offensive and defensive balance."

Adbul-Jabbar, in New York to receive an award as the winner of a computer evaluation competition to determine the "most productive and most consistent" player in pro basketball, said he felt that personally 1975-76 may have been his best season ever. He led the league in rebounding and blocked shots and was second in scoring.

But except for Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers had problems. Playmaker Lucius Allen was inconsistent, and shooting guard Gail Goodrich did little else besides score. The forward situation was even more muddled—Cazzie Russell languished on the bench, rookie Dan Ford fizzled after a fast start and Sharman finally settled on Corky Calhoun and Cornell Warner, neither of whom was an offensive threat. The Lakers finished with a 40-42 record, fourth in the Pacific Division behind defending champion Golden State and two young clubs, Seattle and Phoenix.

"I think as an individual, I had an exceptional year," said Abdul-Jabbar, who averaged 27.7 points, 16.9 rebounds, 4.12 blocked shots and 5.0 assists per game.

"But it could have been a lot better. I was disappointed in that we didn't win as often as people expected, we didn't get any sellouts, we didn't build any interest in the team.

"I wouldn't say it was a very disappointing season—after all, I think we were better than most teams in the league. But we didn't win as often as most people expected.

"Mr. Cooke said he definitely wants quite a few changes in personnel, if they can be made."

'Gades win Metro track; Vikings 4th

By PAUL McLEOD
Staff Writer

As expected Bakersfield College captured its ninth consecutive Metropolitan Conference track title Saturday at Long Beach City College but the team win wasn't the expected runaway.

El Camino, which returned 27 men from Wednesday's prelims to match Bakersfield, stayed even with the Gades throughout the meet and may have reversed the unofficial 120-114 final had it not been for a foul on the last leap of the triple jump by Anthony Berry.

Pasadena finished third in a mild surprise, while Long Beach, which got victories from Gerald Peete (48.5 440) and Gary Jenkins (9.6 photo finish 100), and double wins by Dave Fuller (156-7 discus and 51-4 shotput), dropped to fourth after failing to finish the 440 relay and being disqualified from the mile relay.

With all events but the triple jump completed, El Camino unofficially trailed Bakersfield by just two points. Berry went 51-8 in his final attempt—a mark that would have gained him the blue ribbon and possibly El Camino a tie. Officials ruled Berry had fouled and Chris DeFrance of Bakersfield was declared the winner. Berry led the competition until DeFrance, who also won the long jump but finished in a disappointing tie for sixth with LBCC's David Oliver in the high jump at 6-4, leaped 50-7¼ on his final try.

Long Beach lost its bid for the title in the first running event of the day—the 440 yard relay. On the first exchange 110 yards into the race Leon Hawkins, pressed into service for the injured Ridgeway Robinson, failed to properly hand the baton to Gerald Peete, who dropped the late exchange. East Los Angeles won the event.

The Vikings slipped farther back in the mile relay when Peete was disqualified for jostling Pasadena's John Rudd. The official decision in the final crucial 220 yards, which touched off heated debate between athletes and coaches, marked the second relay this season that Peete was involved in a shoving match on the final turn. Earlier in the season Long Beach lost a mile relay during a dual meet against Bakersfield when a similar event occurred.

Official Walt Smith of Glendale ruled Saturday that Peete, who drew even with Rudd with a half lap to go, had impeded Rudd's progress. In the ensuing final yards, Rudd's retaliation was "only defensive," according to Smith, causing Peete to cross the finish line without the baton. Another claim of jostling on the backstretch between the two was not upheld.

In the pole vault El Camino's Charlie Brown bested Craig Wilson of Long Beach and Taimo Eskola of Pasadena, while establishing a conference record of 16-10¾. Wilson's pole shattered when he was halfway up on his first attempt at the height but he was uninjured.

Baird vaults 18-1; only good for 3rd

Long Beach State pole vaulter Don Baird set a school record and personal best by springing 18-1 Saturday afternoon, but placed third behind the Pacific Coast Club's Dan Ripley and Dave Roberts of the Florida track club at the San Jose Invitational.

Baird's previous pinnacle was 17-10, established last week in an all-comers meet at Long Beach State. Ripley and Roberts, the indoor and outdoor record holders, made overtures at 18-7 but were unsuccessful. (A related story on the meet appears on page S-5.)

At Baton Rouge, La., Harvey Glance tied the world record in the 100-meters with a 9.9 clocking, only the eighth man to post that time. At Tucson, an Arizona University quartet of Charles Nash, Dwayne Strozier, Elijah Jefferson and Ed Gilbreath equalled the fastest 400 meter relay clocking in the world this year with a time of 39.1 seconds during a meet against Arizona State.

Montreal pulls it out, 3-2

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Guy Lapointe, Jim Roberts and Yvon Lambert scored third-period goals as the Montreal Canadiens rallied from a 2-0 deficit to beat the New York Islanders 3-2 Saturday night and gain a 3-0 lead in National Hockey League semifinal series.

New York goaltender Glenn Resch made first period goals by Garry Howatt and rookie Bryan Trottier stand up until the Canadiens' offense got untracked and the Islanders defense disintegrated.

The third-period burst started at 3:29 when Lapointe connected from 10 feet. And 8:31 later, with Montreal's Serge Savard serving a tripping penalty, Roberts pounced on a missed Islanders' pass and sent a 25-footer past Resch to pull Montreal even. Then Lambert gave the Canadiens' their seventh consecutive playoff triumph with a short blast over Resch's shoulder.

Boston hosts Philadelphia tonight in the third game of their semifinal playoff.

U.S. preps nip USSR, 76-71

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

SANTA CLARA — It was hard to tell who was more embarrassed in the first half here Saturday night—the California High School All-Stars or the person who supplied the band with the wrong Soviet national anthem.

Fortunately, things took a turn for the better, both for the musicians and California's top prep basketball players who overcame a ragged start to record a 76-71 victory before a disappointing turnout of 2,004 at the bubble-domed Tosco Pavilion on the University of Santa Clara campus.

The teams meet again tonight at the Forum at 7.

The game was held up for nearly 25 minutes after the Soviets sat down obviously miffed midway through what was thought to be the USSR national anthem as played by a local high school pep band.

Someone finally found a correct recording, the music went on and so did the game, marking the first of six the Russian national junior team will play in the United States.

The Soviets led by as many as 13 points, 27-14, in the first half before the Californians, alternating a North and South unit for most of the game, were able to rally.

A team of Poly's Michael Wiley and Johnny Nash, Rich Branning of Marina, James Wilkes of L.A. Dorsey and Kiki Vandeweghe of Palisades was the one most responsible for getting the U.S. untracked.

Branning, the Notre Dame-bound sensation, made things happen, feeding Vandeweghe for a basket and a 54-53 California lead at 13:20 of the second half, the first time the crowd-favorites had led since the initial minute of the game.

"All we heard was how physical the Russians were supposed to be," said Nash who scored four points. "Once we settled down and played as a unit, things took a turn for the better."

Wiley, who was co-CIF Southern Section player of the year with his teammate Nash also scored four points and said he was surprised at how well the Russians shot.

"I thought we'd get pushed around a lot more than we did."

Ten of the 12 California players scored, paced by Cal-bound Doug True of College Park High in Pleasant Hills who netted 16 points. Vandeweghe and Long Beach State signee Donnie Martin each had 12.

Martin, a superb leaper, was only 6 for 19 from the field, alternating at point guard with Branning.

The Russians, who appeared to tire in the late going, were paced by 6-7 Nikolai Fesenko who scored 23 of his team's 41 first-half points. Fesenko, who sank 11 of 13 first-half shots, finished with a game-high 28 but cooled off considerably in the later stages, especially after having two shots blocked by Redondo's Gig Sims.

Erving sinks 45 for Nets

DENVER (AP) — Julius Erving hit a 20-foot jumper at the buzzer to cap a brilliant 45-point performance Saturday night, lifting the New York Nets to a 120-118 triumph over the Denver Nuggets in the opening game of their American Basketball Association championship series.

The Nets, going almost exclusively to Erving in the closing minutes, pulled out the victory after Denver rookie center Marvin Webster had stuffed home a missed shot with four seconds left.

The Nets' triumph came before an aroused partisan crowd of 19,034, a record for an ABA game.

Game two of the series will be played here Tuesday night.

Rain washes out Orioles and A's

BALTIMORE (AP) — Saturday's American League game between the Baltimore Orioles and the Oakland A's was postponed because of rain.

No makeup date for the rainout was set. A doubleheader already is scheduled for Sunday as the windup of the series.

Barons take two from Patriots

Jack Van Voorst (13) and Roger Teske (14) combined for 27 strikeouts and permitted only one run and seven hits as the Lakewood Barons eased by the Orange Patriots, 11-0 and 9-1, Saturday afternoon at Hart Park.

The Barons, led offensively by Larry DuRee and Vic Munoz, lifted their Western Softball Congress record to 10-1 while the Patriots slipped to 1-9.

Strings win net opener

OAKLAND (AP) — Rosie Casals and Dianne Fromholtz won the night's final match to bring the Los Angeles Strings from behind to a 22-19 victory over the Golden Gaters in a World Team Tennis season opener Saturday.

The L.A. women swept the final five games against Francois Durr and Betty Stove as the Gater pair failed to hold service even once during the set. Stove flew in from a South Carolina tournament only five hours before she was due at the Oakland Arena.

Fromholtz, a left-hander, beat Durr in singles 6-2, and Durr failed to hold service through that entire set.

Casals and Vijay Amritraj downed Frew McMillan and Stove in mixed doubles 6-4.

DODGERS WIN—

"I just try to get a good pitch and to make contact."

Pinch hitting is a tough art anytime. But against Hrabosky it's tougher yet.

"I was watching him from the bench," Mota said. "He's different. Awfully quick. I think I might have even closed my eyes when I hit it."

Maybe so, but the ball had eyes, bounding between shortstop Kessinger and third baseman Vic Harris and into leftfield.

The Dodgers had to come from behind all evening. The Cardinals scored twice in the second on three successive singles and an error by shortstop Rick Auerbach.

John, of all people, followed walks to Steve Yeager and Auerbach with a run-scoring single in the bottom of the second and then Garvey singled home Ted Sizemore in the sixth with the tying run.

St. Louis broke the tie in the top of the 10th when former Dodger Willie Crawford's sacrifice fly off Marshall made it 3-2. The win streak is the longest in the majors this season and it matches the Dodgers' longest of 1975, a streak that began, ironically, on the exact day as the current spree—April 21.

"That's the day I started taking the lineup card out to the umpires before the game," said a smiling Mota. "I figured maybe it would change our luck a little. We weren't winning then, remember?"

Asked if he would be taking the card out before tonight's game, he smiled again and said:

"What do you think?"

DODGER DOPE: When Ed Goodson opened in leftfield Saturday night it marked his first-ever appearance in the outfield. He played only first and third while with the Giants and Braves. It was the first time he started anywhere since last September . . . Ron Cey and Steve Garvey took seven and six-game hitting streaks into Saturday night's game . . . The Cardinals' Reggie Smith will return to St. Louis today to have his injured left shoulder examined. He suffered the injury April 17 when he ran into the wall in St. Louis . . . Joe Ferguson missed Saturday night's game with a groin pull. He's also slowed with a slightly sprained ankle . . . Pitching the final game of the series and the home stand today at 1 p.m. will be Doug Rau (2-0) and Lynn McGlothen (2-1) . . . The Dodgers leave Monday for a 12-game trip to Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Pittsburgh, then return to Dodger Stadium May 17-18 for two games with the Reds.

How they scored

CARDINALS SECOND
Simmons singled. Anderson singled. Cruz singled, scoring Simmons, the runners taking second and third on the throw to the plate. Rudolph was safe when Auerbach booted his grounder for an error, Anderson scoring. Richard grounded to Cey who threw Cruz out at the plate, Forsch grounded into a double play. Two runs (earned), three hits, one error.

DODGERS SECOND
With two out, Yeager and Auerbach walked. Joan singled, scoring Yeager. Cruz grounded out. One run, one hit.

DODGERS SIXTH
Sizemore and Baker walked. Garvey singled, scoring Sizemore, Baker taking third. Hrabosky relieved Forsch on the mound for the Cardinals. Cey popped out, Goodson took a third strike. Yeager flied out. One run, one hit.

CARDINALS TENTH
With Mike Wallace pinch-hitting for Hrabosky, Bernie Carbo singled. Kessinger sacrificed, Crawford to first, Carbo to second. Harris' ground-out scored Carbo. One run, one hit.

DODGERS TENTH
With Hrabosky pitching and one out, Baker was safe on Kessinger's error. Garvey doubled, scoring Baker. Cey was walked intentionally. Mota batted for Burke and singled to left, scoring Garvey. Two runs (one earned), two hits, one error.

Cerritos rips OCC, clinches tie

Shortstop Frank Vilorio cracked out four hits, drove in three runs and stole two bases as Cerritos College clinched a tie for its fifth South Coast Conference baseball title by pounding Orange Coast College, 13-1, Saturday on the winners' field.

Trailing 3-2 going into the bottom of the sixth inning, the Falcons exploded for seven runs on five hits and three stolen bases to hike their conference record to 13-3. Cerritos now leads Mt. San Antonio and Santa Ana by 2½ games with two games remaining.

Although touched for eight hits, Pat McGehee went the distance while improving his record to 8-1. He struck out five and walked one batter.

Wilkins seeking only satisfaction

"I figure I could be out making a lot of money and getting ulcers, but this is what I want to do. Material things, financial security and so on really aren't important." — Mac Wilkins.

Seismologists concerned about recent tremors along the San Andreas Fault shouldn't worry.

It's just all those superstuds up in San Jose throwing their weight around.

"There's probably nowhere in the world that has so many top athletes around," says Mac Wilkins, who checks in at 6-4 and 255 pounds. "Especially throwers."

If a world weight-throwing record doesn't belong to an athlete training around San Jose, it just has or soon will again. Notables of the shotputting set include Brian Oldfield (pro) and Al Feuerbach (amateur).

Last weekend at Mt. San Antonio College Wilkins took the discus record away from a crosstown cop, John Powell, who set it a year ago at Long Beach State, where Wilkins will compete today in the Long Beach invitational.

MAC WILKINS
Wants to improve

MAC MAURICE WILKINS, 25, is a relatively recent arrival at the mecca of muscle. He had been a resident of Eugene, Ore., where he was born and attended the University of Oregon, although he spent much of his youth in Portland and Tacoma, Wash.

"I came down about the middle of December," he says by phone. "I decided the best thing for me to do was come to San Jose for the training environment, with all these top athletes here. Also, the weather is much better."

"We don't see each other all the time. There's a group toward the west side of town and they hang out together. Another group lives and trains toward the east side. We all lift weights at the YMCA.

"Actually, I don't see John Powell that much . . . probably three or four times since I moved here. He wasn't at Mt. SAC. I was hoping he would be, but he has his plan for the year and I have mine. We're just going to have to stick by our training schedules and see who has the best idea and who's the best thrower."

WITH SO MANY muscles bulging around every corner, San Jose bars would seem to be well stocked in bouncers. But most of the athletes are not interested in employment during this Olympic year.

Powell has taken an eight-month leave of absence from the police department; Wilkins taught high school in Eugene last year but is now surviving off his savings while sharing an apartment with Vince Pluckebaum, an aspiring decathlete.

"I'm still hanging on by the threads," Mac says. "I'm strictly training and that's pretty much a fulltime job. In actual physical work I train 5 to 7 hours a day, and the mental part of the program is just as important."

Wilkins' program includes weightlifting, throwing, running and swimming.

"I've found it helpful. It seems to loosen me up, stretch me out and get me balanced better."

WILKINS' LIFESTYLE might seem unproductive to straight society. He has never been married, drives a '63 Volkswagen—the only car he has ever owned—and is not interested in any career other than throwing the discus.

He admits that his may be "a counter-culture way of life.

"But I just want to do the things I feel are important to me, and do them to the best of my ability. I've come to the conclusion that it's not important what you're doing but how you do it, as long as it's satisfying, rewarding and challenging.

"I figure I could be out making a lot of money and getting ulcers, but this is what I want to do. Material things, financial security and so on really aren't important."

WILKINS EXPERIENCED only a brief thrill when he threw 226 feet, 11½ inches last week, surpassing Powell's effort by 3½ inches, and he is not particularly turned on by the prospect of an Olympic medal.(Editor's Note: Wilkins added more than 6 feet to his world record Saturday with a throw of 232 feet, 6 inches at the San Jose Bicentennial Invitational.)

"When I made the throw I thought, well, that's pretty good. I didn't have any idea it was that far—maybe 217, 220. Then I saw them put the tape down and it looked like it was going to be over 69 meters and I got pretty excited. Then when I saw it was definitely over 69 meters, 10 (centimeters) I was screaming and yelling.

"But I don't think in terms of throwing world records or winning Olympic medals. Mainly, I was very pleased that I had improved, and the record happened to go. So it was four inches farther than anyone else. That was not the significant thing for me at the time. It seemed more like another step on the way to what I want to do.

"I can't say what I want to do in feet and inches. I just want to keep improving until I feel I'm doing my best."

Wilkins reflects a moment, then adds:

"Of course, if it had been one inch shorter than the record, it wouldn't have been quite as exciting."

No roadblock too 'Major' for Johnny to overcome

Everything Johnny Majors touches has turned to gold, so when the 40-year-old University of Pittsburgh football coach says this may be the year that the once-fabled Panthers hit the jackpot—a major bowl game—it behooves one to pay attention.

From the beginning, at age 8 when he led the entire town of Huntland, Tenn. (pop. 300) in a World War II scrap iron drive, Majors has been a winner.

He even launched his dad, Shirley, on a successful football coaching career. The elder Majors inaugurated football at Huntland High in 1949, then Johnny came along to be his tailback.

"We never lost a game in my three years," boasted Johnny Majors, "and for the nine years that his sons played tailback, dad had a 70-1-1 record."

Johnny is a member of one of the most famous football families in America. He and brothers Bill and Bobby were stars at the University of Tennessee. Joe starred at Florida State and Larry played for their father when Shirley left Huntland for University of the South.

After Johnny tailbacked three seasons for dad at Huntland, Joe, Bill and Larry spent two successive years' apiece as Shirley's bread-and-butter runners.

BUT JOHNNY was the biggest star. An all-America tailback at Tennessee, he led the Vols to a 10-0 record in 1956, No. 2 national ranking and a trip to the Sugar Bowl. He also finished second to Paul Hornung in Heisman Trophy balloting.

This year he was selected as one of 11 members of the Quarter Century All-Star team — the best players in the Southeastern Conference during the last 25 years. His name still is splattered throughout the Tennessee record book.

Johnny's great grasp of football further emerged when he turned to coaching. Following graduation, he became an assistant at his alma mater, moved to Mississippi State, then in '63 to Arkansas as Frank Broyles' defensive back coach, where he stayed until he got the Iowa State head job in '68.

Majors took downtrodden Iowa State to two bowl games in five years and after steering the Cyclones to the Liberty Bowl in '72, he went to Pitt.

The Panther turnaround was dramatic. His three-year record of 22-13-1 is the best Pitt has done since Jock Sutherland's days of the '30s. Pitt's nine-year record prior to Majors' appointment was 28-60.

EACH SEASON at Pitt was a Panther milestone. In '73, the Panthers had their first winning season in 11 years and their first bowl bid (Fiesta) in 17 years. For his job of resurrection, Johnny was voted Coach of the Year by the Football Writers' Association.

In '74, Pitt attendance jumped 10,000 (to 42,000) over the '73 average and the Golden Panther Booster Club grew from 300 to more than 2,000 members.

Last season, the Panthers were 8-4, including a 33-19 Sun Bowl win over Kansas, and season ticket sales had doubled since Majors' arrival.

"I think we acquired the confidence and poise last season that may put us in the top 10 and into a major bowl this season," said Majors Friday, during a 24-hour Southland visit on behalf of the American Football Coaches Association and the Tea Council of U.S.A.

"We became men last year. We lost to Penn State, 7-6, in our final game, but (Joe) Paterno's team crossed our 50 only twice. That was the first time that I felt I had arrived at Pitt. The big guy wasn't kicking us; we were doing the kicking.

"We beat Notre Dame, 34-20, and that was the biggest Pittsburgh win in 20 or 30 years."

WHAT IS the secret to turning around a sick football program?

"There's no secret," replied Johnny, modestly. "Every product has something to sell. Both Iowa State and Pittsburgh were uniquely similar in that both had long losing histories. Both also needed shaking up.

"When I first got to Iowa State all I heard was that it was a coaches' graveyard, and I almost believed it myself. But I had wanted to be a head coach, so I remembered what my father had drilled into me — that the worst thing to do was to make excuses.

"I was very low at first when I was at Iowa State, but I told myself that I was better off then before.

"Iowa State was the last place in the world that I ever thought I'd coach and Pitt probably was the second to last. Being from the South, I had expected to live and die there. Oh, I did get interviewed for the Vanderbilt job, but that situation wasn't for me.

"Iowa State was in Big 10 country, but I sold people there on the idea of the Big 8's strength in football. After all, Big 8 teams had beaten Big 10 opponents 80 per cent of the time. A percentage of the people I was recruiting believed it."

"IT WAS TOUGH to put a staff together at Iowa State because all my friends were in the South, so it took me a month to assemble a staff. My coaches were all 24 to 26 years old, and they busted their tails. I took the whole group with me when I went to Pittsburgh."

With Paterno at Penn State, isn't Pitt recruiting difficult?

"No place is easy. USC might have climate, tradition and the athletes, but in western Pennsylvania we have some of the best football players in the country. They're not as fast as Southern Cal kids, but they're tough.

"We are strong now in western Pennsylvania, while Paterno is strong in the East around Philadelphia. But there are enough good football players in western Pennsylvania to always have a winning team.

"At first, I was on a champagne diet with a beer allowance at Pitt. We played some tough ones right away, like USC and Oklahoma, and I had only 19 scholarships the first year. But to play big time, you must have pride, and to get that I went out and spent money for equipment, uniforms and a decent locker room."

MAJORS HAS a lot of pride in his Heisman Trophy candidate, Tony Dorsett.

JOHNNY MAJORS
Smoky City messiah

"Dorsett is the best running back I've ever seen," he declared, emphatically. "Personally, I think the only one in his class is O.J. Simpson. Tony has a burst of speed rare in running backs. He has the two all-time highest rushing games against Notre Dame — 303 yards last year and 209 as a freshman."

Your name was mentioned for the SC and UCLA posts. Were you interested?

"Both are fine jobs, but I made no pitch for either, no matter what might have been written. Besides, both jobs were filled quickly."

Have you ever considered pro football, like so many other successful college coaches?

"Yes, but not seriously now. I was interviewed by a pro club three years ago, about the time I took the Pitt job, but my heart still was in college football. I don't detest college recruiting yet. When that time comes, who knows?

"But I want to coach until I retire for good. Football and the contact is the greatest sport of all. There was nothing like breaking a tackle and escaping from everybody.

"Now, there's nothing like sustaining a winner over a period of time and coaching a national championship team.

"I get edgy in the off-season in my office, but on the first day of practice, the adrenalin flows again."

Of such juices are bowl bids won and national championships made.

A hit in the park, but not in clubhouse

Reggie Jackson his own biggest fan

By JOHN LINDBLOM
Ridder News Service

Long ago, when black-white room-sharing arrangements in baseball were considered unique, pitcher Chuck Dobson spent almost a season rooming with Reggie Jackson.

But finally, Dobson, one of the most popular and best-liked members of the Oakland A's, could endure it no longer. The separation came not because of racial differences, but class distinction. Jackson's....

Dobson moved out when he no longer could bear having Jackson, then in the early stages of his career, tell him: "Chuck, you don't know how tough it is to be a superstar."

Several times since then baseball fans have learned there's just no living with the egotisic, moody, unpredictable Reggie Jackson.

The Baltimore Oriole management recently learned. Charlie Finley, Oakland club owner, traded Jackson to Baltimore weeks ago, but Reggie has refused to report until he gets terms exactly to his liking. He changed his ways a little Friday, reporting, but still not signing.

After the A's moved West from Kansas City eight years ago, Jackson never quite delivered on the promise he brought with him. But, in a sense, he delivered much more. If he didn't make it happen on the field the way that Mays did, he made it happen in the locker room.

The wisened Leonard Koppett of the New York Times once opined that Jackson was the "sportswriter's best friend" because he could always be counted on to provide a story. The writers have voted him Most Valuable Palyer only once. But if there had been a balloting for Most Valuable Mouth, Reggie would win unanimously every year.

Even in 1970, when Jackson had what was considered a poor season (23 homers, 66 RBI), Reggie stole the show and the headlines. His running verbal battle with Finley that year was a classic.

When Finley threatened to banish him to the minor leagues to brush up on his hitting, the writers knew they could count on Reggie to provide the anticipated response.

"Did that SOB really say that?" Reggie raged. "Well, damn it, I won't go! I will never go!" He didn't.

One can remember Jackson's triumphant trot around the bases at Oakland Coliseum that year after hitting a pinch-hit grand slam homer, topped off by a whispered obscenity toward Charlie's personal box that doubtlessly stung Finley's ears even if he could never hear it.

...And how Finley humbled him for the only time he ever really could a few days later by forcing him to sign a prepared apology.

Jackson coined names like "heat-bringers" for pitchers and "pole hitters" for sluggers.

When he slumped, he was, "The bad luck buzzard who can't kill nothin' and nothin' won't die."

He was the non-hitting, non-fielding, non-uniformed star—dramatically, anyway—of the A's '72 World Series triumph when he hobbled pathetically around the batting cage on crutches after being sidelined in the A.L. playoffs.

When the action lulled during the '74 Series, Jackson spiced up the scene by censuring a magazine story written by Murray Olderman by informing him before a huge crowd of writers that he could anticipate "getting his mail by gopher."

REGGIE JACKSON
Legend in own mind

Often during football season, he made himself obvious to the Oakland Raider throng by pacing up and down the sidelines, an attention-getting ploy because he could certainly have seen the game better from another vantage point.

All of this doubtlessly grated on the sensitivities of his teammates. He had clubhouse brawls with Billy North and Mike Epstein. Sal Bando frequently let it be known that he considered Jackson immature.

Following A's fifth consecutive division title last year, a victory party Reggie staged at his Berkeley home can be best remembered for the A's who didn't come. Only Billy Williams and Claudell Washington were among the guests.

It was their way of letting Reggie know they preferred not to be in his company. But the same guys would admit today they're not so sure of that anymore.

Without Reggie, they're not so sure there'll be any more victory parties.

Young refused to play clown

By Bill Lyon
Knight News Service

LANDOVER, Md. — Muhammad Ali wants bad burlesque, shabby vaudeville, Keystone Kops, slapstick, pie-in-the-face hilarity.

Jimmy Young gave him Shakespeare instead and almost turned Ali into Hamlet.

They had figured this would be another farce, one more million-dollar-plus night for Ali against some dupe who would be willing to be humiliated in return for maybe one-twentieth what Ali gets.

Pay the stiff 75 grand, let Ali taunt him and embarrass him, and then ship him back to obscurity. He'll go through the dough quick enough, but he'll have his scrapbooks, and one day he can tell his grandchildren that he once fought for the heavyweight championship of the world.

JIMMY YOUNG
Can't believe decision

But Jimmy Young shrugged off Ali's tired, worn psychological ploys. He was not intimidated, not cowed.

But, for nine rounds, he was in awe. By the time the 10th started, the 27-year-old Philadelphian realized Ali could not knock him out. You could see the confidence begin to swell in Jimmy Young.

H won the 10th, he won the 11th, crisply double left hooking to Ali's head and body. Young was fast, nimble, quick on his feet. Certainly the quickest fighter Ali has seen in several years.

Ali has been fattening up on Chuck Wepners and Jean-Pierre Coopmans, who have all the mobility of a stone pillar. Moreover, they are easy targets for Ali's cobra jabs. But Young was slipping Ali's heavy blows, ducking them, getting inside. He made Ali, who was obviously, puffily overweight, look lumbering and wild, far from the graceful fighter we have come to expect.

By the 14th, Young was putting together his own combinations. He jolted Ali with hard rights, making him blink in pain. Just as you could see the confidence growing in Jimmy Young's face, you could see doubt, bewilderment etched in Ali's face, a face that usually shows only contempt.

About this time the crowd had begun to turn, too. It was ironic. Young had been variously identifed as Jimmy Jones and Jimmy Carter by some spectators before the fight, such was his lack of identity.

When he had entered the ring, it was to thunderous silence. Well, they never do cheer for the sacrificial lamb, do they?

But after the 10th round, when it had become obvious that Jimmy Young would not play the fool, would not sacrifice himself, his pride, was an unwilling martyr, the crowd began to pull for him. Ali looked startled. This was heresy.

Yet he could do nothing about it. He tried, desperately in the 15th round, to knock out Young. He couldn't reach him. He tried rope-a-dope, he tried letting Young pound at his arms, he tried two rounds of dancing and jabbing, he tried right hand leads, he tried talking to Young. None of it worked.

Ali was out of shape, and, by his own admiss ion, he badly underestimated Young. A lot of us were guilty of that.

This was a night that Muhammad Ali was ripe for the taking. I think he escaped only because of his considerable reputation.

It wasn't fear in Jimmy Young's eyes at the start; it was more respect, caution.

"I was being careful at the start," Young said later. "Maybe too careful."

Ali had predicted after the weigh-in that Young would be tense.

"This is my 18th title fight," Ali said. "It's old stuff for me, just another night. But Jimmy Young, this is the first time he'll see all those people, all those lights. It's a chance of a lifetime for him. He's gonna be nervous."

He was. But, unlike most of the others, Young did not run scared.

Reds' homers sink Montreal

CINCINNATI (AP) — Homers by Dan Driessen and Johnny Bench, his third in two days, and the eight-strikeout pitching of Don Gullett gave the Cincinnati Reds a 6-1 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night.

Gullett (2-0) with both victories over Montreal, gave up a home run to Pete Mackanin and two hits to Bombo Rivera before being lifted in the eighth inning. Pat Zachary pitched the ninth for the Reds.

Cincinnati broke the game open with three runs in each the fourth and fifth innings, chasing former Lynwood High graduate Don Carrithers (1-2).

Carrithers held Cincinnati hitless for three innings, then Dan Driessen hit his first homer of the season to open the fourth.

Carrithers struck out Bench, then gave up doubles to Mike Lum and George Foster for the second run of the inning. Gullett, helping his own cause, lined a single through the box to score Foster and the Reds went ahead 3-0.

Mackanin blasted his homer in the fifth, his second of the year and the first run given up by Gullett this season. But Bench upped the margin when he clouted a three-run homer in the fifth.

Parker, Zisk hit homers to rip S.D.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dave Parker drove in five runs with a pair of homers and two singles and Richie Zisk added four RBI with a double and his first home run of the season to spark the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 10-6 victory over the San Diego Padres Saturday night.

Although the Pirates were outhit 15-9, they took their second consecutive decision from San Diego after losing seven of their previous eight games.

Pirates starter John Candelaria was ripped for 11 hits in 6⅔ innings but picked up the win with relief help from Larry Demery, Ramon Hernandez and Bob Moose.

Tito Fuentes collected three hits and Willie Davis had two but San Diego never could catch up after falling behind 6-0 in the first four innings.

ANGELS WIN—

It was also their first daylight success after five previous reversals, reinforcing the theory that sooner or later everyone earns a place in the sun.

Bruce Bochte, the first baseman who was a perfect 3-for-3 with two RBI and a run scored, was beginning to wonder, however.

"We were basically horsefeathers," he said of the team's performance during the streak, which reminded him of the pratfall of 1975.

"Those thoughts crossed my mind every other minute," he admitted. "But this team is going to hit. We're just a little late getting started, that's all—about 17 games late."

Bochte helped ease the burden for Ryan and then Hartzell, putting the exclamation point behind a three-run first inning assault against Pat Dobson with a two-run single.

Melton capped the offensive display with a solo home run off Don Hood in the fifth.

Ryan, who has achieved half of the six Angel victories this season, developed a blister on his index finger and was removed over mild protests after five innings during which he struck out six, walked three and yielded three hits and the only Tribe run.

"I really didn't want to come out but they were pretty persistent," said Ryan, who has permitted only 14 hits and six earned runs in 38 innings for a 1.42 ERA.

But when Hartzell, the phenomenal 22-year-old who earned a position on the varsity this spring with a grand total of two months of professional experience, replaced Ryan there was scarcely a drop in class.

Hartzell rendered the Indians inept the final four rounds, yielding but two hits, and was credited with his first save.

Hartzell has not permitted a run of any kind in his last five appearances, which span 16.2 innings.

"It may look easy but it's really not," Hartzell smiled, trying to forget a slight embarrassment of his own.

With two out in the Angels' ninth, Hartzell grabbed his glove and was halfway to the mound before realizing that it takes three outs to retire a side these days.

"I was hoping nobody caught that," he said sheepishly.

Williams caught other Hartzell traits—all of which he liked.

"He was the story of the day," the manager applauded. "And he could be the story of the year. He's a job to behold."

Forty-five minutes after the game the manager was still attired in his traveling greys.

"It's been so long," he explained. "I want to savor this one awhile."

How they scored

ANGELS FIRST

With one out, Remy singled to center. Bonds bunted toward third for a hit, Remy taking second. Melton walked, loading the bases. Remy scored and the other runners moved up on a wild pitch. Bochte singled to center, scoring Bonds and Melton. Lahoud struck out. Chalk struck out. Three runs, three hits, one left.

ANGELS FOURTH

Bochte walked. Lahoud flied to right. Chalk singled to center, Bochte taking third and Chalk second on the throw. Herrmann was walked intentionally, loading the bases. Ramirez forced Herrmann, Bochte scoring and Chalk taking third. Torres singled to right, Chalk scoring and Ramirez advancing to third. Hood replaced Dobson. Ramirez was caught stealing home. Two runs, two hits, one left.

INDIANS FOURTH

Carty doubled to right. Hendrick grounded to third. Lowenstein singled to center, Carty stopping at third. Lowenstein stole second. Spikes grounded to short, Carty scoring. Ashby grounded to the mound. One run, two hits, one left.

ANGELS FIFTH

Giants score brawling win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chris Speier's triple and Bobby Murcer's single in the eighth broke a 1-1 tie and triggered San Francisco to a 3-1 victory over Chicago Saturday in a game marred by a pair of bench-clearing brawls that resulted in the ejections of the Cubs' Jose Cardenal and Bill Madlock.

The Cubs were ejected after two separate incidents were triggered by Jim Barr's inside pitches.

Barr was warned by plate umpire Ed Runge for brushing back Cardenal — the warning bringing an automatic $50 fine.

While the Giants were disputing the call, Barr and Cardenal exchanged words and the Cubs' outfielder threw his batting helmet at the Giants hurler, who had to be restrained by teammates.

Cardenal was then thrown out of the game.

Bill Madlock then was struck by a Barr pitch and he started toward the mound. Giants' catcher Marc Hill stepped between the combatants, but Madlock reached around the catcher and hit Barr in the face with a right hook.

In the ensuing melee, Hill was decked by Madlock and an enraged Giant outfielder Gary Matthews plowed through several Cubs, landing punches. The hardest blow decked George Mitterwald.

When order was restored for the second time, Madlock was allowed to take first base briefly and Barr remained on the mound.

But after discussion, the umpires ejected Madlock, who protested loudly while pointing to his left shoulder, the spot where Barr's pitch hit him.

Rick Monday's double, Cardenal's grounder and Madlock's single gave Chicago a 1-0 lead in the first.

The Giants tied the score off Ray Burris in the fourth. Bobby Murcer led off with a double, went to third on Matthews' grounder and scored on Willie Montanez' single.

Houston lead to Armstrong

HOUSTON (AP) — Wally Armstrong, given second life by the rain that washed out Thursday's play, fired a 69 to establish a one-stroke lead Saturday halfway through the $200,000 Houston Open Golf Tournament.

Armstrong, 29, a non-winner in his third full season of tour activity, broke out of a fourway tie to gain the top spot with a 36-hole total of 136, eight-under-par.

"I'd hurt my left wrist—a sprain—in New Orleans," Armstrong said. "A few days ago I was seriously considering withdrawing. I'm real glad we had the rain-out. It gave me an extra day to rest."

PGA Tour officials had to schedule a double round, 36 holes, for today and cut to 50—as opposed to the usual 70—in order to insure a finish today. This annoyed a number of tour players and sent some of the game's big guns down the road, the victims of the low cut.

Among them were Arnold Palmer, who failed to qualify for the fifth time this season with a second round 75 and a 146 total. Double winners Johnny Miller and Ben Crenshaw also missed. Crenshaw had 77-151 and Miller 74-147.

Just one stroke off Armstrong's lead was Hubert Green, who lashed his way through the tricky winds, for a 68 and a 137 total.

Rookie George Burns, Barry Jaeckel and Forrest Fezler, one of three who shared the first round lead with Armstrong, were at 138. Jaeckel shot a 69, Burns 70 and Fezler 71.

Lee Trevino, still seeking his first victory ever in his native Texas, shot a 70 and headed a large group at 140.

Braves drop doubleheader

ATLANTA (AP) — Tim McCarver and Terry Harmon ripped run-scoring singles in the fourth inning and the Philadelphia Phillies held on for a 4-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves to sweep a twi-night doubleheader Saturday and send the Braves to their sixth consecutive defeat.

The Phillies won the opener 3-0 as major league home run leader Mike Schmidt drilled his 12th of the season. It also was Atlanta's third shutout loss in a row, one short of the major league record.

The Braves snapped their string of scoreless innings at 35 in the nightcap when Earl Williams slammed a two-run homer—his first of the year—in the sixth inning off winner Steve Carlton.

In the opener Schmidt gave the Phils the only run they needed with his solo blast in the fifth inning.

Carner tied for golf lead

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Jo Anne Carner shot a six-under-par 67 Saturday for a 36-hole total of 139 to move into a tie for the lead with Argentinian Silvia Bertolaccini in the $50,000 Lady Tara Golf Classic.

Miss Bertolaccini shot a 71 Saturday to go with her first-round 68. Pat Bradley, in her second year on tour, shot a two-under-par 71 for a 142, followed at 143 by South Africa's Sally Little and last year's LPGA's rookie of the year, Amy Alcott.

Texas powers past Red Sox

ARLINGTON (AP) — Tom Grieve and Jeff Burroughs belted three-run homers off Boston's Rick Wise to power the Texas Rangers to a 7-1 triumph Saturday night, their third consecutive victory over the Red Sox.

Bill Singer, 2-1, handcuffed Boston in the clutch, yielding Fred Lynn's second homer of the season in the sixth inning as the only damage. He finished with a six-hitter.

Texas, leading the American League West by 1½ games over rained-out Oakland, jumped on Wise, 1-1, in the fourth inning with singles by Burroughs and John Ellis. Grieve then tagged a 3-2 pitch over the left field wall for his third homer in the last five games.

Busby tames Yanks

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Steve Busby scattered eight hits in posting his first victory of the season and Amos Otis slammed a two-run double as the Kansas City Royals tamed the New York Yankees 4-1 Saturday night.

Making his third start since coming off the disabled list April 17, Busby (1-1) became the first Kansas City pitcher to go the distance. He struck out three and walked two while permitting only two singles through the first five innings.

Frank White's one-out single was Kansas City's first hit of the game and started an uprising in the third off losing pitcher Ed Figueroa. After Jim Wohlford singled, the Royals pulled a double steal and both runners scored on the double by Otis. After a single by George Brett, Otis scored on John Mayberry's high chopper.

Tigers maul Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Jason Thompson slugged a two-run double and his first major league home run and Vern Ruhle pitched a five-hitter to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 10-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

Thompson, a 21-year-old first baseman who came up from the minor leagues a week ago, doubled off loser Bart Johnson after Willie Horton and Rusty Staub had walked with two out in the first inning.

The Tigers piled up a 7-0 lead before Thompson hit his homer in the seventh. He also singled in the eighth.

Brewers soaked by Twins

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota's Lyman Bostock singled twice, drove in two runs and scored two as the Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 9-5 in an American League game Saturday.

Bostock's fourth-inning sacrifice fly sent the Twins into a 6-2 advantage and reliever Bill Campbell survived five shaky innings for the victory to boost his record to 3-1.

49ers gain split with Fullerton

Mike Zouras and Steve Fenoglio each belted a pair of home runs as Long Beach State bombed Fulleton State 10-1 in the first game of a doubleheader Saturday, but the Titans won the second game 3-0 behind Dan Boone's 8-hit shutout to mathematically eliminate the 4ers from the PCAA title chase.

Buoyed by the four homers, LBSU pitcher Jim Davis registered his fifth complete game. Zouras and Fenoglio have each hit eight home runs this season.

But Boone, now 7-2, subdued the 49ers in the nightcap as host Fullerton improved its PCAA record to 15-3 and 41-12 over-all. LBSU is 10-8 in conference play with three games remaining and 27-21-1 over-all.

Wilkins sets world discus record again

SAN JOSE (AP) — Discus thrower Mac Wilkins of Long Beach's Pacific Coast Club increased the world record to 232 feet, 6 inches Saturday, breaking his week-old world mark on each of his first three attempts at the San Jose Bicentennial Invitational track and field meet.

The former University of Oregon athlete broke his week-old record of 226-11 on his first throw with a toss of 229-0, then reached 230-5 before spinning the discus 232-6. The third throw was almost six feet beyond his previous mark.

The weather conditions were ideal, just as they were a week earlier for Wilkins at the Mt. San Antonio Relays in Walnut, with a brisk crosswind blowing. John Powell, a PCC teammate of Wilkins, held the old record of 226-8 and threw 220-4 Saturday.

There were several other outstanding winning marks here, with a few aided by the wind.

Arnie Robinson won the long jump with a leap of 26-11½, James Butts went 55-7½ in the triple jump and Ron Whitaker of San Jose State edged Clancy Edwards in the 100-meter dash in which both were timed at 10 seconds flat. Whitaker also nipped Edwards in the 200 in 20.4.

George Woods, another Pacific Coast Club athlete, won the shotput with a 69-½ effort, while former world record holder Al Feuerbach was forced to watch, scratching from the event because of a pulled hamstring. Woods had two other attempts over 68 feet.

Many of the athletes, including Wilkins, will compete in the Long Beach Invitational today.

L.B. Invitational will be 'jumping'

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

The sky's the limit?

Not today. Not, at least, in the jump competition in the Long Beach Invitational at Long Beach State.

Action begins with the hammer throw at noon. First running event is at 1. Admission is $1 for adults, 50 cents for students.

The four jump events — high jump, pole vault, triple jump and long jump — are indicative of the caliber of athletes entered throughout the invitational.

Consider:

• High jump: world record holder Dwight Stones (7-6½) and No. 2 rated Tom Woods (7-5½) meet for the first time outdoors this year in a field that includes Reynaldo Brown (7-4) and Dean Bauck (7-4) of Canada among 16 jumpers that have soared 6-10 or higher.

• Pole vault: Long Beach State sophomore Don Baird, who went a lifetime best 17-10 in an "all-comers meet" last week, takes on a group that includes teammate Jim Knaub (17-½), Ken Wenman (16-10) of Canada, Jim Greene (16-9) and Steve Hardison (16-9).

• Long jump: Olympic gold medal winner Randy Williams (26-4½) faces a host of challengers including Arnie Robinson (27-2), Dan Seay (26-8), Bouncy Moore (26-4½)) and Stanford Brewer (25-8¼).

• Triple jump: A solid group, led by Harold Freeman (53-0), Clarence Taylor (52-10½), Dave Watt (52-8) of Canada and Harry Pratt (52-5).

Over-all, it is the most talented collection of athletes ever assembled in a Long Beach track meet.

The entrants include four world record holders: Mac Wilkins, who obliterated the world record in the discus for the second time in eight days Saturday with a toss of 232-6 at San Jose; Don Quarrie, 19.81 in the 200 meters; Stones, 7-6½ in the high jump; and Jim Bolding, 48.7 in the 440 intermediate hurdles.

Among the 337 contestants are 48 athletes that have already met Olympic qualifying standards in their events. Innumerable others are capable of reaching required performances today.

LBCC turns away El Camino, 9-5

Long Beach City College exploded for four runs in the fourth inning to subdue El Camino, 9-5, Saturday in Metropolitan Conference play.

The Vikings received a two-run single by Pat Estes in the third inning to claim a 2-0 lead but El Camino whittled one run off that margin in its half of the inning.

Danny Gausepohl, who collected two doubles in four at-bats, singled and stole second to open the fourth. Rick Kienast coaxed a walk off losing pitcher Don Bain. Perry Maloney singled to fill the bases. Then Bain uncorked two wild pitches and Gausepohl and Kienast scored. Following a walk to Brad Liebeck, Todd Hewitt and Estes delivered run-scoring singles.

Mike Lord struck out nine to record the victory.

Mannon leads Cal track win

BERKELEY, Calif.(AP) — Cal's Brett Mannon put the shot 57 feet 3½ inches for a career best Saturday as the Bears won 13 of 17 events to beat Stanford 95-50 in the 82nd Big Meet between the rivals.

It was the fifth straight triumph for California in the Pacific-8 Conference dual meet and evened the series, which dates back to 1893, at 40-40-2.

Cal's 400-meter relay team of Wesley Walker, McKinley Mosley, Paul Wallace and Carl Florant posted a 40.3 winning time, its best of the season.

Now you can ride in a luxury car without paying the price of running one.

The price you pay to ride in a big, luxurious car isn't just the price on the sticker. It's the price you pay for fill-ups and eight-cylinder runs-ups.

A Peugeot 504 SL has much the same headroom, legroom and luxuries as a full-size luxury car (luxuries like a sliding sunroof, electric front windows, tinted glass, power disc brakes, power steering, metallic paint, and more). But with no excessive weight and overhang, you save at the gas pump* and in the repair shop.

With a 504 SL you can fulfill your desire to enjoy as much comfort and luxury as possible. As well as your desire to pay as little as possible for it.

'75 Bruin hero comes up short — 3/4 of an inch

Banks wishes it had been horseshoes

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

If anyone personified the UCLA Bruin track team Saturday, it was Willie Banks.

A year ago as a freshman Banks catapulted 55 feet, 1 inch on the final triple jump of competition to not only win the event but win the meet over arch-rival USC.

As the Trojans, attired in their cardinal and gold "USC BUSH WHACKERS" T-shirts, completed their 83-62 trouncing of the Bruins Saturday, a dejected Banks sat alone.

There was no roaring crowd, no victory ride on the shoulders of his teammates this year. Banks had been defeated by Trojan Tom Cochee. The difference between victory and defeat was only a scant three-quarters of an inch (54-2¼ to 54-1½), someone mentioned.

"Yes, but this wasn't a horseshoe tournament and that's the only sports event where close counts," Willie answered. It mattered little to Banks that he extended his season best nor that Cochee was required to jump nearly two feet beyond his 1976 high.

"I'm not really disappointed, I'm just not happy. All I'll remember is choking my last jump. I should have gone all the way through the board instead of trying to keep under control."

Going all-out earlier had earned Willie a blue ribbon on his first long jump of the afternoon (25-8½).

"I thought to get the team up I'd have to get out there as far as I could. We just never got into this meet. I'm an enthusiastic jumper. When the crowd's yelling and my teammates are behind me, I get better. When there's no enthusiasm, my jumps don't improve."

It was an exhilarating moment for Cochee, who has lived with Banks' come-through performance for a year.

"This was long overdue," said the Trojan, "especially after last year. That day I went blank after Willie's jump. I felt handicapped because I had no chance for a comeback. The whole event flashed in my mind again today."

Cochee said he made up his mind that he—not Banks—would have the last jump in the finals. To earn that he knew he had to take the lead in the preliminaries.

"I also felt I owed the team something. We've lost the three years I've been here, and, being a senior, I wanted to go out on a winning note."

Another senior, shotputter Mike Budincich, echoed Cochee's statement. He used a lifetime best 63-5¾ to score the day's initial upset, defeating UCLA's Jim Neidhart (61-10¼).

"I didn't place as a freshman or sophomore and only took second as a junior, so I felt it was my duty as a senior to get us started," said the 6-3, 260-pounder. "In my mind we were like a string of dominoes and all we needed was my win to get us moving."

UCLA was carrying a 42-meet win streak—31 in a row at Drake Stadium. The national dual meet championship was on the line. The Bruins wouldn't go under without a fight, almost literally.

Sophomore Steve Beck won a shoving, elbowing-swinging duel with USC's Rayfield Beaton in the 1,500 meters, running a lifetime best 3:45.8 to Beaton's 3:46.2, also a career low.

Afterward the freckle-faced Beck called the race "every man for himself. It started as a tactical race with everyone wanting position.

"Rayfield veered out slightly beginning one turn and caught me with a spike. So I cut inside and put him in lane two. I've got no complaints at all."

Beaton did.

"He should have been disqualified," said the native of Guyana. "You're not allowed to pass on the inside and he did it."

UCLA's ploy was to force Beaton to run himself out in the 1,500 and have nothing left for the 800 later. It worked perfectly, one of the few strategical plusses on the Bruin ledger.

"They knew I was doubling, so they tried to get me in a box. To get out I'd have to run outside. Then my back started bothering me."

Beaton strained his lower back muscles by lengthening his stride and was staggering at the finish. With USC holding a 19-point advantage, he was scratched from the 800.

"If the meet had been closer, I would have run. I could have won and probably run 1:45; but there are more important meets ahead, like the Pacific-8, the NCAA and the Olympics."

With Beaton on the sidelines, the 800 appeared to be a shoo-in for UCLA's Jeff Haynes. Not so.

Unheralded teammate Conrad Suhr, overcoming a nagging cold, won with a lifetime best of 1:47.8, while Haynes suffered his first defeat of the season while posting a career best 1:48.9.

"It definitely wasn't a good race for me," Haynes remarked. "I tried something different by going out fast. It backfired. I didn't have anything at the end.

"I had to grin when Conrad went past me. I'm glad for him."

"We'll be competitive from now on," assured Suhr.

TROJANS-

He caught and conquered SC's Lloyd Johnson with 80 yards to go in the 800, trimming the meet and school records to 1:47.8. Jeff Haynes of Long Beach and UCLA suffered his first defeat of the year, but fought off Johnson's late assault to take second in 1:48.9, a personal peak by 1.1 seconds.

The day's biggest surprise was the 1,500.

Steve Beck of UCLA and Rayfield Beaton of USC fought tooth and nail — and arm and elbow — around the track. Surprisingly, Beck won, 3:45.8 to 3:46.2, as Beaton flailed and stumbled through the final yards. Surprisingly, Beck was not disqualified for pushing, nor Beaton for cutting in.

Among the over-capacity crowd of 15,011 were former Trojan all-Americas O.J. Simpson and Lynn Swann, wearing T shirts emblazoned "USC Bush Whackers."

Bush should be able to survive the whacking. It's his first one in five years.

Watson upset by 'junior'

By DAVE FERRELL
Staff Writer

Brenda Winston, a 14-year-old runner from the Rialto Road Runners track club, upset Olympic medalist Martha Watson in the 100-meter finals Saturday to highlight the fourth Lakewood International Invitational women's track meet at Lakewood High.

Miss Watson, representing Lakewood International Track Club, finished third with a 12.2 clocking behind Miss Winston (11.8) and Lakewood's Penny Slaughter (12.2), after winning the long jump with a leap of 19 feet, 11¾ inches.

More than 650 athletes from Canada, Arizona and California competed on a slow track.

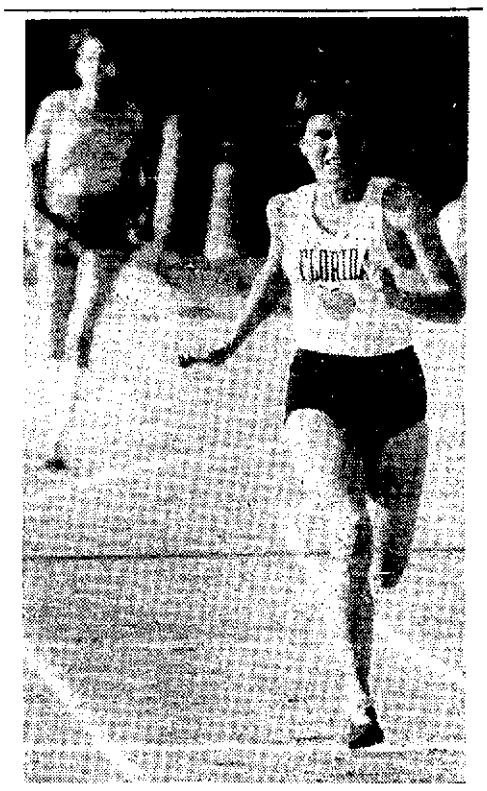

"I just need a lot of work," said Miss Watson, whose winning long jump was far off her best of 21-2.

"I'm too old to lose my form, but my timing's off," she said. "Usually when you're in top shape you just hum. But I could feel myself. I sound like a used car—just too many parts rattling," noted the 29-year-old, who is looking forward to her fourth Olympic Games.

A foursome of Canadian runners ran impressive times in the 200 and 400-meter sprints as Canada bested Lakewood International for the open team championship, 36-74.

Marjorie Bailey and Patty Loverock tied in 200 with times of 23.9 and Pam Medland of Canada won the 400 in 55.8, beating teammate Ann Mackie (56.5) and Jarvis Scott of the Premier Track Club (56.9).

Canadians also performed well in the field events, led by winners Louise Walker in the high jump (5-9) and Maureen Dowds in the shotput (50-½). Miss Dowds won her event by more than 12 feet.

Oh Canada

It was a big day for Canada in the Lakewood International track meet Saturday at Lakewood High. Pam Medland (of Canada despite her Florida shirt), far outdistancing teammate Ann Mackie. The Canadian girls went on to win team title.

The most Fiat we've ever brought to America.

A steel cage completely surrounds and protects the passenger compartment.

A twin overhead cam engine. The same kind found on some of the finest sports cars in the world.

A 5-speed transmission. Only one of 6 sedans in the world with this as standard equipment.

The gas tank is tucked away behind the backseat.

Impact-absorbing front and rear bumpers

Rack-and-pinion steering.

Unitized body.

Dual braking system. Power-assisted front disc brakes.

One of the most advanced rustproofing systems in the world.

Safety anti-burst door locks (Child-proof rear door locks on the four-door model).

And here are a few other things that come as standard equipment.

Carpeted trunk.
Rear window defroster.
Radial tires.
Tachometer.
Reclining bucket seats.
Fully carpeted.
Tilting steering wheel.
All-vinyl interior.
Mag wheels.
Quartz clock.
Tinted glass all around.

At Fiat, we've always held to one simple idea: the idea of a practical, sensible, intelligent car.

Well, we've taken that idea and made it somewhat bigger, and more powerful, and more luxurious. And we call it the Fiat 131.

If you've never considered a Fiat before, maybe it's time.

The new Fiat 131.

Badminton, net titles on the line

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Two conference tournaments are in progress this weekend and two more will be decided during the coming week as women's intercollegiate athletics moves into the final weeks of spring competition.

Two titles are on the line today. UC Irvine is hosting the SCWIAC tennis playoffs, and the SCCCIAC badminton champions will be decided at Cerritos College.

LBSU tennis coach Gloria Hendricks reported that during first day play

WOMEN IN SPORTS

her team split 3-3 in singles and was 2-1 in doubles. USC, which won the team title at the recent Ojai tournament, should be a strong contender in the competition.

The finals in doubles may bring a rematch of LBSU's DeeDee Cronk and Penny Johnson against USC's Diane Desfor and Gretchen Galt. In the Ojai event, the Trojan pair won, 6-3, 6-3.

BIG WEEK ahead for the Long Beach City College volleyball team. A win this weekend in the semifinals of the San Bernardino Invitational Tournament, will mean a return trip for the finals Wednesday.

The following day, LBCC hosts the SCCCIAC tournament with play set at Orange Coast and Pierce Colleges.

Pool competition will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday (JVs) and Friday (varsity) at OCC. The top two teams from each grouping will participate in a double elimination playoff Saturday at Pierce.

LBCC clinched the league title last week, sailing by West L. A. College, 15-0, 15-2, and Golden West, 16-14, 15-13. The JVs took West L. A. easily, 15-8, 15-5, but were outpointed by Golden West 15-10, 15-11. Only one league match, Monday against Santa Ana College, remains on the schedule.

TWO ADDITIONAL school records fell to LBCC's Mary Hammond at Thursday's swimming meet with San Bernardino College. This was the final dual session before the SCCCIAC finals Thursday and Friday at East L. A. College.

Mary's new marks are in the 100 individual medley with 1:06.9 and the 50 butterfly with :28.9.

Other firsts were recorded by Janet Balter with 2:49 flat in the 200 individual medley and 1:18.5 in the 100 backstroke. Janis Cook took first and Jayne Stillwell second in the 100 breaststroke and 50 breaststroke. Their times were 1:19.7 and 1:30.4 and :41.1 and :36.7.

A victory in the final relay gave the meet to San Bernardino with a 70-60 score.

MARLENE SILCOCKS shot the best round of any woman this season in the Southern California Archery Conference to lead the Cerritos College archery team to a tri-meet sweep over L. A. Harbor and Mt. San Antonio Colleges.

Silcocks, who qualified earlier in the season for the 1976 U.S. Intercollegiate Archery Championships, shot a sizzling 805 in the meet. Her mark was better than any men's individual effort this season.

Janice Rockept shot a 709 in the meet for the third place in women's competition. Arlene Grace fired a 571 to finish fifth.

The victory for the men's team was led by national qualifier Mike Demming with 779 and Bill Silcocks, 750. Bill is the husband of Marlene and both are qualified for the nationals. Jeff Smoy finished fourth in the men's competition with a 739 round.

Cerritos will host the U.S. Intercollegiate Archery Championships May 13-15 on the Falcon field.

THREE RUNS in the bottom of the seventh inning gave the LBCC softball team a 5-4 win over Chaffey College Wednesday. With two outs in the bottom of the last inning, Barbara Fernau and Vicki Lewellyn both hit singles. Then Jane Baker singled for an RBI, Vicki scored on a passed ball to tie and Dawn Wiley singled to drive in the winning run.

Jeannine Maygren was the winning pitcher, and Kim Doyle hit a two-run homer.

The team, coached by Donna Prindle, also broke even for the week with a 5-3 loss to Mt. San Antonio College. High point of the game was a triple play executed by LBCC on a caught bunt that trapped runners on first and second.

Beth Tasker was two-for-four at the plate and Barbara Fernau had a triple and one RBI. Kim Doyle was on the mound.

Kim Maybee has sports future mapped out

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press

An uninhibited teenager will make women's boxing a part of many cards in California. She's also going to Hawaii and perhaps to ports more distant.

Kim Maybee, 18, who played basketball in high school, wants to be a wide receiver in women's professional football and does the Ali shuffle in the boxing ring, proved that gals are tough.

The 6-foot, 1½-inch high school graduate of 1975 stopped Pat Pineda in the second round at the Forum Wednesday in the first professional boxing match between women in California.

Ms. Maybee, who prefers that designation, bounced out of the ring with a youngster's enthusiasm and received a big ovation from the crowd of 7,758 at the Forum. Loser Pat Pineda said she planned to get married and would sack the boxing ring.

"I'll fight any contender among women," Ms. Maybee declared. "But I won't fight guys. They're different."

She's been offered a fight in Honolulu and apparently will accept although she wants to be on hand to try to become a wide receiver with the Los Angeles Dandelions of women's football.

"I learned to fight in the street. When somebody jumped me I'd jump back," Ms. Maybee told newsmen. "My Mom told me 'You get whipped and come home and you get whipped again.'"

Kim didn't get whipped and she had some "brothers" who helped her develop her skills.

"They really showed me what to do," the tall gal related. "I think I can beat any gal."

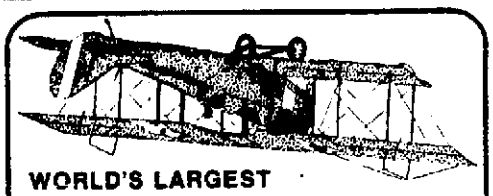

The Pineda bout at the Forum was her first professional outing and she collected $250 for the 2 minutes, 57 seconds of action. During that time she mimicked the Muhammad Ali shuffle and led first with her left, then with her right—completely befuddling her opponent and bringing smiles and applause from the crowd.

The only trouble for Ms. Maybee in California is that Ms. Pineda retired immediately after the beating and only two other women are licensed to box. Pat Syverson of Montebello and Janet Haffner of Los Angeles might provide opposition as both are in the gal's middleweight class.

Ms. Maybee weighed 165 when she stepped on the scales and had to lose five pounds to reach the stipulated weight for her initial bout.

"Those five pounds were easy to lose," she said. "I just sat in the sweat box and then ran. No problem."

Ms. Maybee will continue fighting. She has boyfriends — "they're all big fellows" — and she can cook and she can knit "but that's a waste of time."

BOLD FORBES WINS IT—

Baeza said he had no way of reacting to the smoke bomb tossed onto the track as the field passed in front of the grandstand.

"I still see the smoke when we get to the stretch," the jockey said. "My horse hesitated a little."

Baeza refused to second guess Jolley on orders to lay back for the early stages of the race.

Asked if he agreed with his trainer, he said: "Yes."

Baeza was asked if Jolley said anything to him after the race.

"Yes, he told me our horse tried hard but didn't have it," Baeza replied.

"Did he criticize you?" someone asked.

"He never told me anything," the rider said.

Baeza said Honest Pleasure was responsive to his every command but lacked the power to overtake the streaking pacesetter.

"I thought I had a shot at catching him when we moved into the stretch," he said. "He was too much horse for us today."

Asked if he saw the smoke bomb, Bold Forbes' jockey Angel Cordero said: "I missed the smoke and I'm glad I missed it."

Cordero, who will be 34 today, was asked if he expected to win the race wire-to-wire. "I don't make no plan of the race," he said. "I just waited to see what would happen after the break. I knew there was no plan. I was just hoping for a good break and everything worked good.

"I was not worried about how fast he was going because my trainer didn't give me any orders. He just told me to use my head and ride the way I wanted. I knew he was training very good for this race.

"I knew I'd get criticized if I didn't win so I just went ahead and rode my race."

Cordero then spoke to Baeza, a Panamanian, in Spanish, and gave him a rose to give to his wife.

Later, Cordero left the jockeys quarters and moved to the press box where he said, "We broke very good and I let him run. I relaxed on him. I kept talking to him. He was so relaxed I was afraid at one time of the other horses."

Cordero said he urged Bold Forbes in the last eighth of a mile when Honest Pleasure challenged.

Queried again about the smoke bomb, Cordero said with a smile. "I thought the smoke was coming from my own horse."

Time for the Derby was 2:01⅗ for the 1¼-mile, and the winner returned $8, $2.40 and $2.60. The Derby record of 1:59⅖ was set by Secretariat in 1973. Honest Pleasure, sent off as the first odds-on favorite in the Derby since Native Dancer in 1953, paid $2.40 and $2.20 when he finished second—just like Native Dancer. Elocutionist paid $2.60.

Dk B or Br C By Irish Castle—Comely Nell by Commodore M. Trainer L. S. Barrera. Bred by Eaton Farms—Red Bull Stable, Ky.

BOLD FORBES broke alertly to make the pace, raced slightly removed from inner railing, drew into a lengthy advantage round first turn, continued wide thereafter, rallied gamely when engaged by HONEST PLEASURE on final bend, drifted out a bit on entering stretch but responded to strong left handed whipping through the drive to prove best. HONEST PLEASURE also broke in stride to duel with BOLD FORBES through initial run through the stretch, was then taken back after three furlongs to be kept under snug restraint, commenced a rally from the outside on the second turn while under a hand ride to loom menacingly on final bend. Lost additional ground when the winner drifted out in upper stretch but continued gamely under a hand ride to midstretch while engaging the winner only to falter slightly through the closing strides. ELOCUTIONIST reserved off the pace while along the inside, continued to save ground to loom menacingly on stretch turn but could not sustain his rally. AMANO in hand early, advanced steadily along outside after a half mile to reach striking distance of the leaders a quarter mile away but had nothing left when the real test came. ON THE SLY was without early speed. COJAK closed some ground in his belated bid but could not menace. INCA ROCA bobbled slightly soon after the start and was outrun. PLAY THE RED raced wide throughout. Bidson was without speed.

Barrera, who left Cuba by way of Mexico, started training in California in 1959. Several of his brothers became trainers and his son, Albert, is training in New York.

It was Barrera's first trip to Churchill Downs and he spent considerable time studying past performances of previous Derbies. He found that the frontrunners won quite often.

Plans were to send Bold Forbes to the front at the start and hope he could hold off Honest Pleasure. It was just the way things turned out.

At Sportsman's Park, Life's Hope churned out of the far turn to take the lead and came home in front by four lengths in the $125,000-added Illinois Derby.

The winner, ridden by Sandy Hawley and owned by Harbor View Farms of Ocala, Fla., was timed in 1:51⅗ for the 1⅛-mile race.

Life's Hope, the heavy favorite, paid $4.60, $3 and $2.40.

Due Diligence again displayed his fondness for an off track by winning the $56,350 Carter Handicap at Aqueduct.

Due Diligence came from next-to-last with a stretch run to win by three-quarters of a length over Honorable Miss, another fast-closer.

Coronado 'Cap a lesson in history

Whittingham-Shoe clicks

Tabbing the winner of the $43,900 Coronado Handicap at Hollywood Park Saturday was a simple lesson in history.

Looking back at previous runnings of the Coronado, one would have discovered that jockey Bill Shoemaker had won it five times and that trainer Charlie Whittingham had scored three times.

That pairing of all-time Hollypark stakes leaders combined talents with Marje Everett's Bynoderm in Saturday's 19th renewal of the race and the result was a neck win for the three-year-old French-bred colt.

Shoemaker maneuvered Bynoderm to the inside midway through the stretch when pacesetting Sure Fire drifted out and carried favored Double Discount with him.

Sure Fire, after bumping Double Discount off stride, finished second but was disqualified and placed third.

Bynoderm's time for the mile on the turf was 1:36. As a well-backed second choice of the 36,205 Kentucky Derby Day crowd, he returned $6.60, $3.40 and $3.

"I started to go outside of the leaders but when Sure Fire started to get out I ducked to the inside and we just did get up," said Shoemaker.

Colombian-born Marcos Castaneda and female rider Robyn Smith also were saddle stars Saturday.

Castaneda, riding at the Inglewood track for the first time, booted home three winners, including longshot Morrion ($36.20), who triggered a "grinning bird" exacta ($747.50).

Ms. Smith, in action at Hollypark for the very first time, directed Austin Mittler's frontrunning victory in the fifth race to become the first female ever to win at the track.

Highlighting today's card is a clash of "horses for courses" in the first race; the debut of another female, Amy Rankin, in the fourth race, and the split of the featured Inglewood Handicap, to be run as the seventh and eighth races.

Willmar, Claiming Horse of the Meeting last year after winning four races, and Gum Four Me, who clicked at Hollypark three times last year and has two scores already this year, collide in the opener.

Ms. Rankin, 24, is scheduled to ride for trainer Henry Moreno aboard Consejo in the fourth race.

SAWTOOTH broke in stride, chased WITH APLOMB to midway on the turn, got a clear lead into the stretch and won in full stride. SELECTING raced close up and kept to his task but could make little headway against the winner. NEAT CLAIM saved ground while being unhurried and went evenly in the drive. NATIVE GUEST hit the stall at the break, dropped back, had a mild bid wide on the turn then slackened.

No scratches.

BYNODERM took a striking position close up on the rail, raced pocketed to the stretch, moved nearer in the middle of the course to be briefly blocked, got clear inside and came up to outfinish SURE FIRE. The latter sent to a clear early lead, saved something for the drive, responded to left handed urging to hold DOUBLE DISCOUNT, drifted out under the pressure and could not hold the winner. The stewards posted the inquiry and disqualified SURE FIRE back to third for his bothering DOUBLE DISCOUNT in the final furlong. The latter forced the pace from the outside then was iolated in the drive.

MORRION lagged early, rallied wide on the final turn then battled BELLENOBLE late to take a close decision. The latter took up while blocked on the rail at the far turn, got clear to move up and challenge PERSONALITY KNIGHT, took some intimidation from that one but bravely kept to her task, held a slim edge inside the sixteenth pole and just failed. PERSONALITY KNIGHT prompted the pace, took the lead into the stretch and drifted out while tiring. WHIZAROO had his best bid on the far turn then weakened.

Butler did it at Alamitos

So Jo Butler, who became only the second horse to turn in three "magic miles" in a single season and who owned the two fastest pacing times of the 56-night spring harness schedule at Los Alamitos, has been chosen Horse of the Meeting, the Southern California Racing Association announced on closing night Saturday.

Trained by Dick McGregor, So Jo Butler paced a 1:58⅘ mile and a 1:58⅘ clocking early in the season and capped his sub-two-minute campaign with a 1:59⅘ mark.

BC Count also had three "magic miles" at the meeting but lost his only head-to-head confrontation with So Jo Butler.

Cuba King, a four-year-old who won four races in a row with a best of 2:01⅘, was honored as Trotter of the Meeting and V Time, also a winner of four races, was honored as Claiming Horse of the Meeting.

Gene Vallandingham, who established a single-season record with 54 victories and who has an outstanding Universal Driver Rating of .394, was chosen Driver of the Meeting.

UCLA captures NCAA volleyball

Woman driver cracks mark

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Richard Childress led the final group of qualifiers Saturday for today's $216,325 Winston 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race, turning a top lap of 178.900 miles per hour around the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway trioval.

Meanwhile, drag racer Paula Murphy hiked her own women's closed course speed record to 172.336 mph, and Johnny Halford cruised to an easy victory after Lennie Pond dropped out in a 200-mile Automobile Racing Club of America stock car race.

The Grand National qualifying for positions 16 through 30 had been rained out Friday and combined with the scheduled time trials for the final 10 spots in the 40-car field. Pond topped the final 10 with a speed of 177.745 m.p.h.

Miss Murphy, who set the old women's record of 171.499 mph in 1971, said this was her first time in a stock car on an oval track since her earlier record run.

"I think the car is capable of more speed. I was hoping for 175," said Miss Murphy of her Richard Petty Dodge car. "But my legs were shaking so bad I couldn't hold the throttle down hard enough."

Her speed would have been fast enough for 36th starting position in Sunday's 500-miler, but Miss Murphy, who says she is not a women's libber, said, "I don't approve of women in Grand National or Indianapolis cars. It takes too much physical ability and it's too competitive."

Specifically Miss Murphy said she did not support the efforts of women like Janet Guthrie and Arlene Hiss, who are trying to break the sex barrier in the Indianapolis 500.

Miss Murphy said she did not plan any more oval track competition, but would come back if another woman broke her record.

Satellite 'ruler' may measure earth, quakes

By RONALD KOTULAK
Knight News Service

A unique ruler that will enable scientists to measure the world and perhaps forecast earthquakes is expected to be launched into orbit this week.

The ruler comes in the form of a satellite that looks like a giant golf ball. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to place it in a 3,600-mile-high orbit that will take it over the poles.

The mirror-studded satellite is expected to be in such precise orbit that it will circle the earth for eight million years.

Scientists will be able to bounce laser beams off the mirrors. By measuring the time it takes for the laser beam to make the round trip back to earth, scientists will be able to detect surface movements as small as eight inches anywhere on our planet.

The satellite is called the Laser Geodynamic Satellite (Lageos) and it is scheduled for launch aboard a Delta rocket Tuesday from the Western Test Range in California.

With the satellite, scientists hope to measure earth's crustal movements, polar motion, solid earth tides and precise locations of various spots on earth.

A similar device was placed on the moon by the Apollo II astronauts in 1969. By bouncing laser beams off the mirrors, astronomers at the Lick Observatory in San Jose were able to measure the distance from the earth to the moon with great accuracy. The distance was 226,970.9 miles, give or take 150 feet, the astronomers said.

The Lageos satellite is covered with 427 prisms called cube-corner retroreflectors, giving it the dimpled effect of a big golf ball. The retroreflectors are three-dimensional prisms that reflect light back to its source regardless of the angle at which it is received.

The Geological Survey will use the 903-pound satellite for possible earthquake prediction. By measuring small land movements along critical faults, such as the San Andreas fault, they hope to tell when an earthquake will occur.

The satellite also will be used to study continental drift. Most geologists believe that the continents and ocean floors are made up of huge slabs of crust called tectonic plates, which move.

A small plaque designed by Dr. Carl Sagan of Cornell University will be on the satellite. The plaque contains three drawings depicting the position of the continents 200 million years ago, the way they are now and what they are expected to look like 10 million years from now.

At that time, according to theory, California will be off the coast of Washington and Oregon, Australia will be linked to Southeast Asia and New Guinea, the Indian Ocean will contain several large islands and the Italian boot will disappear.

The satellite is expected to have a useful life of 50 years.

One of the reasons for including the maps on the plaque is that when the satellite returns to earth in about eight million years, anyone who finds it will be able to figure out how drastically the continents have drifted over the eons.

Scientists estimate that the continents move at the rate of about two inches a year, a movement that is impossible to detect by anyone standing on earth.

"Whoever is inhabiting earth in that distant epoch may appreciate a little greeting card from the remote past," said Sagan.

Lageos is the first step in the solid-earth dynamics portion of a NASA program to use the vantage point of space to get a better understanding of the earth and oceans.

$405,000 plan given to aid QM

Special activities suggested as lure

By JAMES LEAVY
Staff Writer

A $405,000 entertainment and promotion plan for the Queen Mary featuring production of the Merv Griffin Show, starlight dancing on weekends and other events has been proposed to city officials by a Los Angeles public-relations firm.

InterComm Public Relations Associates (ICPR) presented its ideas at an "informal" meeting in City Manager John Mansell's office recently. Also present were Mayor Thomas Clark, Councilmen Ernie Kell and Don Phillips and city staffers.

Morton Segal of ICPR said the ideas were submitted on speculation. The corporation specializes in clients with leisure and entertainment activities.

IT LISTS AMONG its clients Wolff-Sesnon Development Co., according to Segal. Louis Wolff of that firm was hired by the city last Nov. 25 as a consultant and interim manager for the Queen Mary. He is being paid $48,000 under the terms of a contract due to expire June 30.

Segal said his firm sent a team of four to visit the ship four or five times. The result was a calendar of events outlining entertainment ideas from May to September.

They include a Little Miss Queen Mary Contest; a Battle of the Bands Week; appearances by Merv Griffin, Anson Williams, Peter Marshall and Bo Donaldson; a School's Out celebration in June; a square-dance festival in August, and starlight dancing on weekends.

WOLFF SAID the ideas offered by ICPR were among many solicited by him. He said they did not represent a formal proposal and pointed out that "no contact has been made with Merv Griffin" about producing his show aboard ship.

ICPR suggested the allocation of $171,500 for entertainment. This does not include the cost of building a stage and providing lighting and sound systems for television productions aboard ship.

It was also recommended that $233,500 be spent for advertising.

Crude Hughes 'novel' revealed in will inquiry

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Efforts to judge the authenticity of a purported Howard Hughes will have brought to light a crudely written manuscript, possibly a draft of a novel by the late billionaire.

The manuscript, scrawled on 100 or so pages of unlined white paper, is part of the contents of a wrinkled paper bag in the custody of Clark County court officials.

The bag also contained numerous small scraps of paper and gambling cards on which random thoughts are written.

"WE KNOW THE writing on these papers belongs to Howard Hughes, and we think the white pages are part of a manuscript he was writing," said County Clerk Loretta Bowman.

She said the papers were taken from a Las Vegas hotel by local authorities, but she would not say where or when. There was no indication when the manuscript may have been written.

Hughes lived on the top floor of the Desert Inn here from about 1967 to 1970.

After studying the handwriting on the manuscript and the will and on papers known to be in Hughes's hand, graphoanalyst Henry Silver said Friday he was "positive beyond doubt" that the will was genuine.

Silver, who has served as a handwriting analyst in three court matters relating to Hughes, examined the documents with the approval of a judge, but his study was not an official court evaluation. Officials said the burden of proving the will is authentic will be up to former Hughes aide Noah Dietrich, designated executor in the will.

Dietrich prepared to file petitions of administration on Monday. If his petition is accepted, he will be charged by the court with dividing up the Hughes fortune, estimated at between $1.5 billion and $2.5 billion.

Dietrich and others originally doubted the authenticity of the will, partly because its poor spelling seemed uncharacteristic of Hughes. The will was discovered Tuesday on a desk at the headquarters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) in Salt Lake City.

SILVER DECLARED "there is no question" the will and manuscript were "written by the same man, Howard Robard Hughes."

$2,000 offered in alley stabbing death

About 7:30 p.m. April 12, Kermit Euland King, 56, of 14102 Ash St., Westminster, was stabbed to death and robbed in a Long Beach alley by a man who then drove off but abandoned the car a short distance away.

King was found with several stab wounds in the chest, and with his pockets turned inside out.

Witnesses said King was a passenger in a car driven by his assailant that stopped in the alley behind the 1400 block of Walnut Avenue. The men fought in the car and then outside the vehicle.

King broke away and ran down the alley but the other man caught up with him and stabbed him, witnesses said.

Long Beach police homicide detective Sgt. Don Blachowski said officers were seeking a black man about 25 years old, 6 feet tall and about 170 pounds, and who was wearing a beige shirt, trousers and hat.

Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer.

Reagan scores landslide victory in Texas primary

Carter sweep tightens Demo race command

DALLAS (AP) — Ronald Reagan trounced President Ford in the Texas presidential primary election Saturday night, gaining a landslide victory in a state that was vital to his Republican challenge for the White House.

Jimmy Carter scored a runaway in the Democratic primary, and so tightened his command in that race.

There were, in effect, 24 separate Republican elections, one for delegates in each congressional district. And delegates committed to support Reagan led in all of them.

With just over half the 5,565 precincts counted, Reagan candidates led for all 96 delegate slots at stake in the primary.

In the Democratic primary, with 60 per cent of the precincts counted, Carter delegates led for 90 convention seats and favorite-son Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen for the other eight.

BENTSEN EASILY won renomination for the Senate. Rep. Alan Steelman of Dallas won the GOP nomination to oppose him.

But the former Georgia governor stopped short of claiming that this latest victory had clinched the Democratic nomination for him. "No, it would be premature of me to claim victory now," he said. Carter has said repeatedly that he expects to win nomination on the first ballot at the Democratic National Convention.

Reagan, who was in Indianapolis, thanked his Texas supporters, but left any victory statement for today. A White House spokesman said there would be no statement from there Saturday night.

IT WAS CLEAR THAT Reagan had cemented his presidential challenge into the Republican campaign platform for the rest of the campaign season.

Texas was a crucial target for Reagan, the state in which he had to start proving his claim that he could outpoll Ford in southern and western primary elections.

The GOP challenger gained his second primary victory. Ford has won seven times. Ford had made an intensive effort in Texas, spending four days on a campaign swing that ended election eve, in an obvious effort to knock his rival out of the race. It didn't work.

It appeared that a hefty crossover vote by conservative Democrats had swelled Reagan's showing. But there was no way to prove it because Texans do not register by party and had never held a presidential primary before.

STUART SPENCER, deputy manager of the Ford campaign, said he wasn't surprised at the Reagan victory. "We have always felt Texas was Reagan country," he said. "We'll be very pleased with anything we get out of Texas."

Spencer said he considered it a certainty Reagan would be in the Republican race all the way to the GOP convention at Kansas City on Aug. 16.

Reagan's campaign manager, John Sears, said, "The dimension of this victory goes well beyond the numbers." He said it would have an impact in the series of primaries scheduled for May and that it would "make this a very interesting race in Indiana," where Ford and Reagan go head-to-head Tuesday.

There was no popular vote count in the Texas race, but Reagan's top candidates for national convention seats were getting about 61 per cent of the ballots cast.

Both Ford and Reagan had indicated they thought the race was going to be close, but it wasn't. Reagan had counted on the conservative habits of Texas voters to build him a victory. It worked, apparently drawing a substantial bloc of conservative Democrats over to vote for the Californian in the Republican primary.

Ford had said Texas wouldn't necessarily set the pattern for other states, but "it certainly will be a headliner." Now, the competition shifts to Alabama, Georgia and Indiana — and in the first two, Reagan is rated the leader even by Ford strategists.

Sen. John G. Tower of Texas, the Ford state campaign manager, said Reagan organizers had the aid of former supporters of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace in "a concerted and obvious effort to get the Wallace votes in the Republican primary."

WALLACE WAS ONCE a formidable figure in Texas, but delegates pledged to him were gaining only about 18 per cent of the vote, and none of them were leading for convention seats in the partial returns.

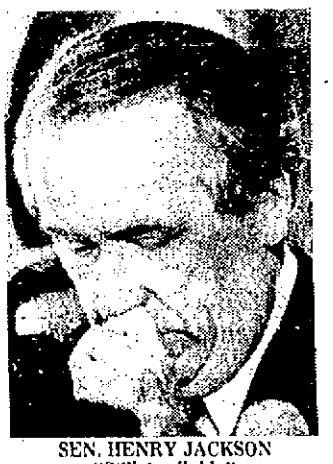

Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who remained neutral in the Republican race, said the winner-take-all factor may have distorted the GOP results somewhat by giving Reagan more delegates than he would have received in a proportional allocation.

Bentsen said he was not surprised at the Carter victory. He said the task now is to put Democratic resources behind a ticket that can win the White House.

"Since none of the national candidates was able to cope with the Carter campaign, it was hardly likely that a favorite-son candidacy could effectively stand in its way," Bentsen said.

In Louisiana, with reports from rural areas coming in faster than those from urban areas, Alabama Gov. George Wallace took a lead Saturday in that state's Democratic primary.

SEN. HENRY JACKSON "Still Available" —AP Wirephoto

Jackson is officially out of race

SEATTLE (AP) — Short of money and votes, Sen. Henry Jackson formally announced Saturday that he is withdrawing from his active campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

But he declared: "I will remain a candidate."

Jackson told a news conference in his home state of Washington that his campaign had run out of money and had failed to stop the bandwagon of former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter.

"I believe the nomination is still open, although Gov. Carter quite clearly has a commanding lead," Jackson said. "I'm not involved in any move to stop Carter. I'm doing what's best for the Democratic Party. I've never done things in a negative way."

BRIAN CORCORAN, Jackson's press aide, said the 64-year-old senator would be available for a draft at the Democratic National Convention — a position similar to the one adopted by Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

Jackson said the 200 delegates he has won so far and uncommitted delegates "represent a basic element of power" to be reckoned with during the party's nomination fight. How that power will be used, he said, "will depend on what happens."

More summery weather forecast

It was a summery 85 in Long Beach Saturday and the U.S. Weather Bureau predicts it will be only slightly cooler today after the early morning low clouds dissipate.

Although inlanders were subjected to a four-hour smog alert from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday, most of Long Beach basked in breezy, clear sunshine.

The smog alert extended through the Pomona-Walnut area in Los Angeles County, into the Santa Ana Canyon area of Orange County and into Riverside County.

Some cloudiness is expected tonight with clearing by mid-morning Monday and a high in the low 70s.

Youths who broke Nixon story credit 'luck, work'

Combined News Services

Two Bethesda, Md., high school students who broke the story that then-Vice President Richard Nixon may have been exposed to heavy radiation while visiting Moscow 17 years ago say "a lot of luck" went into their coup.

But Michael Gill and Richard Berke, both 17, also say a lot of telephone calls (more than 50) and a lot of work ("day and night for the past week") also went into the story.

Their story published Friday in "Black & White," the student newspaper of Walt Whitman High School in Bethesda, was verified by two former Secret Service agents who discovered the radiation during Nixon's visit to Moscow in 1959.

The agents said that, during a routine check of the ambassador's bedroom in Spaso House, where Nixon was quartered, radiation-detection devices recorded a heavy bombardment.

Gill and Berke became interested several months ago in news stories disclosing that the Soviets were beaming microwave radiation at the American Embassy in Moscow.

"Mostly for the fun of it, we started calling around," Gill related. "Because we were only a high school newspaper, people didn't take us seriously, they put us off."

Then, Berke said, "we stumbled on one source."

The two like to jokingly compare themselves to "Woodstein" — the team of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, whose Watergate stories in The Washington Post brought a Pulitzer Prize. But they don't expect a movie to be made about "Gillberke."

Top ranking

The Maine Maritime Academy's top-ranking graduate this year is the school's first female student.

But Deborah B. Doane of Essex, Conn., not only leads the 580 members of the class in overall academic standing, she also holds top honors in her major — nautical science. And after graduation today as an ensign with full qualifications as a third mate, she becomes the first woman in the U.S. to graduate from a four-year maritime school.

The 26-year-old Connecticut native entered the academy in 1974 as a second-semester sophomore. She had graduated from the University of Vermont as a chemistry major and then decided to go to the Maine academy because of her lifelong interest in sailing. She had piloted yachts up and down the East Coast for two summers after she graduated from Vermont and before she arrived at the Maritime Academy in Castine, Maine.

Stand-in

Oliver Giscard d'Estaing, brother of the president of France, will represent his country in Rhode Island's Independence Day ceremonies next week.

Giscard d'Estaing, mayor of Estaing in France and brother of French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing, was to arrive in Rhode Island Monday. He is a distant relative of Admiral d'Estaing, who came to Newport in 1778 to help the colonies fight the British.

The state is celebrating the 200th anniversary of Rhode Island's declaration of independence on May 4, 1776.

Close look

Patricia Hearst's prosecutor says the value to the public of the the extensive press coverage of her recent bank robbery trial was that it provided a close look at the criminal justice system.

"The public ought to take a good look at our criminal justice system from time to time," U.S. Attorney James Browning Jr. said Friday at University of Oklahoma Law Day ceremonies in Norman, Okla. He said he believes the system is performing properly.

Show biz

"I feel somehow as if I had committed a crime — as if I had done something terrible by having happen to me what most people hope will happen to them," said Barbara Walters, speaking about her new television contract with ABC.

She will be paid $1 million a year to coanchor the ABC "Evening News," but Miss Walters said Friday in Memphis that the attention she received after announcing she would leave NBC's "Today Show" has been traumatic.

"Good heavens, that's show business," she said. "I think the difference now is that instead of the network collecting the money, some of it is going to go to some of the participants."

Unendorsed

The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration won't let the Rev. Sun Myung Moon use its official symbol to promote his June 1 Unification Church rally at New York's Yankee Stadium.

"The Rev. Mr. Moon seems interested in attracting people to a religious event and we are not in the business of endorsing religions," said John Scholzen, an administration official.

Moon's Bicentennial God Bless America Committee has been dropped from the National Bicentennial Service Alliance and banned from using its five-pointed star surrounded by bands of red, white and blue. "If they ever use the symbol again, the matter goes to the Justice Department," Scholzen said Friday.

Suicide

Ex-jockey Eric S. Walsh, 36, was found dead Friday afternoon in Laurel, Md., in what Prince Georges County police called an apparent suicide.

Walsh was one of four veteran jockeys sentenced to six months in prison and a $1,000 fine after being convicted of fixing the 1975 Valentine's Day race at Bowie Racecourse. Police say Walsh was found in bed at his apartment in Laurel and was pronounced dead on arrival at Prince Georges General Hospital. Cause of death was not determined.

Dream

Former California fireman Michael Taylor sets off Sunday on the voyage of his dreams — with a woman less than half his age.

"I've just retired and I intend to cruise until I drop," said Taylor, 55, who retired from the fire department of the Hughes Aircraft Corp. in Los Angeles. "We'll just follow the sun," he said Saturday as he and his co-sailor, 21-year-old Michele Bauer of Fullerton made final preparations aboard their 31-foot yacht.

Michele left a degree course in horticulture at Fullerton Community College to join the voyage.

"Naturally my parents are worried for me," she said. "They're like any other parents. But they think this is a wonderful opportunity. You don't get a trip like this more than once in a lifetime. I just want to get to the tropics — I scuba dive and I can't wait to dive in the Caribbean."

Director

The first director of the new National Institute on Aging is Dr. Robert N. Butler, a psychiatrist and gerontologist.

The agency, part of the National Institutes of Health, was set up in 1974 to study the complications of growing old. Butler had worked for more than 20 years on the problems of the elderly in private practice in Washington. He was appointed to the new post Friday.

Matador

Sidney Franklin, said to be the only matador ever born in Brooklyn, is dead at the age of 72.

The Jewish bullfighter, who died in a Manhattan nursing home on Monday, started his career at 19 in Mexico City and became a headliner in his field in Mexico, Spain, Portugal and South America.

Born in the Park Slope section of Brooklyn, Franklin attended Brooklyn Commercial High School for three years and was determind to become a commercial artist. He opened a shop in Manhattan and later went to Mexico City, intending to open an art shop there, but was sidetracked by the lure of the bull arena.

Hatfields and McCoys bury hatchet on feud

HARDY, Ky. (AP) — Descendants of the feuding Hatfields and McCoys — including two who were alive at the time of the battles — gathered Saturday at a tangled, vine-covered cemetery beside Blackberry Creek and officially closed one of the bloodiest chapters in the nation's history.

About 300 persons stood in a steady downpour as a granite monument was dedicated at the McCoy family cemetery. Two ministers, one a Hatfield and the other a McCoy, called for "peace in the valley" as the two famous families formally buried the hatchet.

An inscription on the monument read: "Six of the 16 children of Randolph and Sarah McCoy lie buried here, having suffered untimely death. Three died bound to paw paw trees at the mouth of Blackberry Creek in August 1882."

The three, Tolbert, Pharmer and Randolph Jr., were killed by William Anderson "Devil Anse" Hatfield and several of his relatives in retaliation for the earlier murder of a Hatfield. Before the feud was finished, more than 100 men, women and children had been killed or wounded, and the states of West Virginia and Kentucky were on the verge of open warfare.

The cause of the feud between the two clans was never clear. Some said it was over the theft of a McCoy hog by the Hatfields. Others said it stemmed from a grudge left by an incident during the Civil War, when the Hatfields fought for the South and the McCoys for the North.

A buffet luncheon followed the dedication. Two men who remember the feud cut the cake.

Willis Hatfield, 88, of nearby Logan, W.Va., said he had long since given up any ill feelings. "Some of those McCoys are pretty good fellows," said the last living son of Devil Anse.

Hatfield, who was only a youngster during most of the fighting, was standing beside "Grandpaw" Jim McCoy, 92, of Hardy. McCoy still lives near the old homeplace and says he well remembers the night in 1888 that the Hatfields burned down his family's log cabin home and killed two of his cousins.

"My daddy pulled me out of the cabin," he said. "All we were able to save were our nightclothes."

Like Hatfield, McCoy said he also bore no grudge. He said he soon forgave the Hatfields and even drank moonshine with Devil Anse a few years after the cabin burning.

"The Hatfields are my good friends," he added. "Just the other day a Hatfield boy brought me over three squirrels he had killed. Imagine that — a Hatfield doing that for a McCoy."

Mennonite gives up court battle to end 'shunning'

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Robert Bear, a Reformed Mennonite Church farmer who blames his Church for alienating his family and ruining his business, has given up on his court battle against the practice of shunning.

"I simply have run out of time and money. I have asked my lawyer that we stop all forward movements," Bear said Saturday. "I don't think we could ever bring this court to an objective overview."

Bear filed suit to have shunning declared illegal and to force his wife and children to return to him. Cumberland County Judge Clinton Weidner ruled against Bear last year and the case was appealed to the state Supreme Court, which sent it back to the lower court.

A new ruling is pending from Weidner, who said in an interview after hearing final arguments last Monday that Bear's case "should be thrown out because...he brought all this on himself."

Shunning is a Mennonite practice of totally ignoring by refusing to speak to or acknowledge the presence of any member of the Church who has been excommunicated. Even the wife, children and other relatives of anyone excommunicated participate in the shunning.

Bear's wife, Gail, and their six children, aged 6 to 15, have been living near Mechanicsburg, not far from the home of her brother, Glenn Gross, a Reformed Mennonite Church bishop, since Bear's excommunication.

Widow moved by city's concern for a troubled senior

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

Rosalind Reimann tugged at her tousled hair and looked around the living room stacked high with boxes.

"You can't imagine how grateful I am to the National Guard and the Long Beach Housing Authority," she said, a smile forming on her weathered face.

"I knew I was going to have to move. I couldn't afford the rent anymore, you know. And I was worried plenty about it. I couldn't have done it alone."

Mrs. Reimann, a widow in her 70s, was taking a brief rest from moving chores at her new apartment in the 900 block of Dawson Avenue. Until Friday, she lived eight blocks away in an apartment on Gardenia Avenue.

But the increasing grip of inflation on her monthly Social Security check forced Mrs. Reimann, a 20-year resident of Long Beach, to seek lower-cost housing.

That's not easy when you're a senior citizen who's "outlived everybody" and has nowhere to turn, Mrs. Reimann said.

"I really didn't know what I would do. Those high rents, you know, people just can't afford them. And it's not easy to find someplace cheaper to live."

Mrs. Reimann, a frequent visitor to Bixby Park, said she had just about given up hope when she found help at the park from a worker for the city's Department of Senior Citizen Affairs.

"I had no idea the city could help," she said. "But Mr. (Joe) Anakin said he thought the city's Housing Authority would help me find another place to live.

"I can't say enough good things about him and the city," she added. "They found this apartment for me (the rent is less than half of what she had been paying) and got the National Guard to help me move.

"Mr. Anakin works with and for the senior citizens," she said. "And the four men from the National Guard were so polite and helpful. They moved everything this afternoon."

Mrs. Reimann said her new apartment is "more modern" than the one she just vacated after seven years.

"But it's also a lot smaller," she added, gesturing to stack after stack of cardboard boxes containing the accumulation of more than 70 years of living.

"I'll have to go through all this stuff and get rid of a lot of it, but I don't really mind. I think I'll be happy here."

As she spoke, the spring songs of birds filtered through the screen door, and the vibrant pink blossoms of a flowering peach swayed in a soft afternoon breeze just across the walk.

But flowers and birds do not make up for the loneliness of growing old, Mrs. Reimann said, noting that they're nice accompaniments, but she prefers the comfort of knowing that someone in the city cares.

"You know," she said, "a lot of people criticize the city for the things they say it doesn't do, or the things they say it does wrong. But I needed help, and they were here to help me. I appreciate that."

Doctors causing new pain for medical establishment

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

What is described by the head of the Long Beach Medical Association as a "crack in the walls of organized medicine" is occurring locally, spreading to the state level and is expected to be felt nationally within the next month or two.

The crack — a dramatic drop in membership in medical societies, long the security blankets of the medical establishment — has happened in Long Beach, in the Los Angeles County Medical Association and other county associations, and is being reflected in membership rolls of the California Medical Association.

It's certain to affect American Medical Association membership as well.

THE LONG Beach Medical Association, for the first time in its history, experienced a significant membership loss this year — 160 out of 727 doctors fell by the wayside.

The Los Angeles County Medical Association (LACMA), which had a 1975 membership of 10,017, lost about 1,000 members and may lose as many as 1,100, predicted Don Rosenthal, assistant executive director of the county group.

Les Carpenter, spokesman for the California Medical Association, said the trend is being noticed in CMA's San Francisco office although a final tally won't be available for a week or two when reports from all the county societies are in.

And at the AMA in Chicago, a spokesman said that group won't have a clear picture until mid-June, but since doctors who join the AMA normally do so through a county or state association, a national decline seems inevitable.

THERE are two major factors in the membership dip. Foremost is the medical malpractice insurance crisis, a nagging problem still unsettled despite a doctors' slowdown last January and February, which left many physicians frustrated because the medical establishment was unable to prescribe an immediate cure.

The second key issue driving doctors away from traditional affiliations is the mandatory membership required in the CMA and AMA if the doctors join county associations.

The issue has become so ticklish the CMA currently is mailing to its membership a referendum which, if enough doctors concur, would divorce AMA and CMA membership.

Separating CMA and county membership is another problem. CMA charters county societies, so without a CMA bylaw change, it is impossible to join county associations without joining the CMA.

"Many people see the AMA as a far-away thing," Rosenthal said. "They might like to join a county group but they balk at joining the AMA."

The issue of freedom of choice plays more of a part in doctors' not wanting to join the state and national groups than does dissatisfaction with the groups, several spokesmen for county societies said.

Bach, not rock

Her plants dig the sound of music

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

They may have laughed when college student Dorothy Retallack sat down to play music to potted plants for her biology class in 1968, but her experiment won worldwide recognition and made her an author.

Her book "The Sound of Music and Plants" is an expansion of data from experiments which led to an article in the Denver Post, a spot on the CBS Evening News and articles in European journals.

Plants come alive with the sound of music, she proved, but only if it's the right kind.

Speaking at Long Beach City College's Pacific Coast campus recently, the Denver grandmother of 17 detailed her original experiments at Colorado Women's College in which test plants thrived with Bach and died with rock.

She had no scientific conclusion about why plants subjected to acid rock wilted in her 1968 experiments, and said it was "not proven by any means" that rock harms humans.

However, Mrs. Retallack said, plants which leaned away by up to 70 degrees from speakers playing rock music "looked like they were trying to tell me something."

By contrast, plants subjected to Bach organ music "absolutely adored it," and plants given concerts of classical Indian sitar music by Ravi Shankar "almost embraced the speakers."

Test plants also did well with the type of bland, canned background music found in supermarkets and elevators, she said, and "they loved jazz."

Country-and-western music was played in "the only experiment I've ever done in which nothing hap-

Chief, aide out after school audit

Superintendent Stanley Ross has been removed from command of the North Orange County Regional Occupational Program after an audit disclosed "some irregularities," it was learned Saturday.

Ross was reassigned to a post as special consultant, which the program's trustees created for him. They said he will be paid his $30,000 annual salary at least until the term of his former position expires June 30.

The trustees named John Dewey, program coordinator, to be acting chief administrator of the vocational training program, which since 1972 has been sponsored jointly by Anaheim and Fullerton union high-school districts and Placentia and Brea-Olinda unified school districts.

The program operates on an annual budget of $6.5 million and is the largest such setup in the county. It has an enrollment of almost 12,000 and has classes in schools, store buildings and other places of business.

Board President William Yeats said John Bremer, former teacher in the program's nursery department, resigned after the audit showed the need for corrections of procedures.

The audit presented a long list of "minor" discrepancies, stressed the need for better business practices and questioned a system of "virtually no internal control. . .in the handling of cash receipts and sales."

The auditing firm of Holmgren and Sawyer of Newport Beach noted a shortage of $400 in nursery-plant sales records and complained of inadequate accounting methods and internal control.

Sheldon Houts, who preceded Yeats as president of the trustees, disclosed that the audit was requested in February because it was determined that many procedural changes were necessary.

People Talk

E.C. Anderson

SOMETIMES we tend to take a community resource for granted. A case in point is Frances Bond, a quiet, modest heroine in the Long Beach war against poverty.

Frances is past retirement age, and she could be taking life easy, knitting, basking in the sun and trading stories about and pictures of her three grandchildren. Instead, she is out in the community 10 to 12 hours a day (many times on weekends), busy with camera and notebook recording the story of the poor and the agencies that help them.

Frances is director of community relations, Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities. Her news beat is hunger, loneliness, discouragement, hope, opportunity, old age, youth, the charity that looks beyond today and touches brighter tomorrows.

Poverty programs mean money spent, personnel employed, statistics, projections and talk—at least the poverty war is seen in such terms by its critics. But the poverty war has a human face, a soul, a vitality that is generated by people like Frances Bond.

Frances doesn't see a statistic—she sees a human being in need. She sees a father or mother who needs a job to support a family. She sees a youngster who needs an off-the-street interest as an alternative to delinquency. She sees a senior citizen in need of proper nutrition. She sees an elderly shut-in to be visited and comforted.

THERE ARE 20-odd programs under the tent of the LBCEO, and the stewardship of those programs is reported to the public through the camera and typewriter of Frances Bond. If you are a reader of "Action Forum," the publication of the LBCEO, you already know the work of Frances Bond, although you probably don't know her personally.

The poor of Long Beach know Frances. She's their friend, their confidante, their morale booster, their counselor, their listener. She's the "lady who always has time," as one woman client of the Downtown Neighborhood Center put it.

The third annual California-Nevada Community Action conference was held at the Edgewater Hyatt House Hotel April 22-25 Opening day was typical of the schedule Frances Bond keeps. She was on the job at 6:30 a.m., setting up media exhibits, making notes, telephone calls, arrangements. She was still on the job at 11 p.m., bone tired but still smiling.

She had time to talk to the 15-year-old Chicano lad from Delano, whose Nairobi communal farm project photographs incisively portrayed the vigor of boot-strap economics. She gave the youngster advice, and she in turn learned from him.

I kidded her about clock-watching. "I never seem to have time to watch a clock," she said.

Clocks watching Frances Bond in action would soon grow weary and ask for time out.

Prior to going to work for the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities in 1967, Frances had been employed in private industry. Successfully, too. Her last stop before coming to the West Coast was the editorship of the Marshall Field department store house organ in Chicago. That position had been preceded by newspaper work in Chicago, and in Rochester, Ind., her home town.

WHEN ONE is born in Rochester, Ind., the work ethic comes with baptism. Frances doesn't know what it is to be idle, as the journalism department at the University of Missouri discovered to its delight. She was one of the department's star graduates in 1932.

Frances is a true journalist. News is people to her. News is what people do to and for each other. She concentrates on what people do for each other—that's what the LBCEO's prize-winning "Action Forum" is all about.

Frances is a friend of mine. But, then, that's not exceptional. She has nothing but friends. And the circle of her friendships now includes a little girl on a poverty war poster, a child of farm workers who does not know Frances but has become an important part of her thoughts.

The child has dark, saucer eyes, eyes that follow one around an exhibit room and ask this question: "Will you make my life better? Will you tell them about me and my life, or must I stand here at my glassless window with nothing to hang on to but a ragged burlap curtain and a poverty that sets me apart?"

I heard those questions asked by a silent child as I stood with Frances Bond before a poster on the wall. I listened with my eyes, Frances with her heart. And having heard the questions, Frances went back to work to find the answers.

Cottage to mansion, North Long Beach has it

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

Whether you're looking for a run-down one-bedroom home to renovate, a country-club mansion, or something in between, you can probably find it in North Long Beach.

And, according to Dorothy Siegfried, executive vice president of the Long Beach Board of Realtors, more people are buying on the north side than ever before.

She said sales early this year were running more than 50 per cent above early 1975, a year in which 1,137 properties in the area changed hands. She said 1,383 properties were bought in 1974.

MEANWHILE, nearly all the real-estate and lending officials interviewed said reports that much of North Long Beach is "redlined" are untrue.

"Redlined" describes a neighborhood which is treated —illegally — as unsuitable for conventional mortgages by banks and savings-and-loans "just because of the area."

"It is not difficult to get a conventional loan on a home in North Long Beach," Century 21 real-estate salesman Joe Jennings said Saturday. "It's just that the people who are buying up here are doing it because they can't afford a large down payment. So they go either FHA (Federal Housing Administration) or VA (Veterans Administration).

"IN FACT, more than 90 per cent of the loans up here are FHA or VA. If a guy had $6,000 to put down on a home he wouldn't be buying up here."

There is no down payment required when a veteran purchases a home under a VA mortgage or when a qualified California veteran buys a home under a Cal-Vet loan.

Under the most frequently used FHA mortgage, the buyer is required to make a down payment totaling 3 per cent of the first $25,000 of the purchase price, 10 per cent of the next $10,000 and 20 per cent of anything between $35,000 and $55,000

THE FHA ALSO will allow a buyer to finance a portion of his closing costs.

Under that formula, a person buying a $20,000 home would be required to put only $350 down, while someone buying a $30,000 home would pay $850 down and someone buying a $50,000 home would make a down payment of $1,850.

On the other hand, to purchase a $20,000 home with an 80 per cent conventional mortgage, which is the standard percentage for North Long Beach and most of the rest of the city, a $4,000 down payment would be required.

DOWN PAYMENTS on $30,000 and $50,000 homes with 80 per cent mortgages would be $6,000 and $10,000, respectively.

The current interest rate on a conventional 80 per cent loan is 8¼ per cent, while the FHA interest rate is 8½ per cent, plus an additional one-half of 1 per cent for the insurance that guarantees the loan for the lender.

John Nead, Bank of America vice president, and Robert Jacobson, executive vice president for Home Savings, also said there is no redlining in North Long Beach.

The lending executives said all loan applications are reviewed individually and that none is rejected just because it is in one area or another.

JACOBSON SAID, "We have 10 conventional loans in North Long Beach in escrow right now, so that story about nearly all the area west of Cherry Avenue being redlined just isn't true. There are no redlined areas in North Long Beach."

Realtors working in the North Long Beach area agree that it is one of the few neighborhoods in the city where a young couple with a moderate income can still find a home they can afford; the availability of federally insured loans makes the property more easily affordable.

North Long Beach is packed with modest one- and two-bedroom Spanish stucco and frames homes, which sell from $12,000 for what realtors call a "dump" up to approximately $30,000. There is nothing currently listed for under $18,500.

WITHIN A FEW blocks of some of the least expensive homes in the area, there are neighborhoods where there isn't one house on the market for less than $100,000.

In fact, there isn't a house on Country Club Drive in the Virginia Country Club area of Los Cerritos listed for less than $120,000.

One of the most expensive homes for sale in Long Beach today is a massive, 6,000-square-foot home at 4284 Country Club Drive.

The home, which is listed with Robert Weil Associates for $275,000, has five bedrooms, a four-room master suite, maid's quarters and more than 3,600 square feet of marble patio and decking around the swimming pool.

TYPICAL PRICE listings in Bixby Knolls range from $69,900 for a 2,100-square-foot, three-bedroom home with a family room at 3913 Olive Ave. to $119,000 for a 2,866-square-foot, four-bedroom home at 4225 Myrtle Ave. It has a large family room, study and swimming pool.

Property values in Los Cerritos and Bixby Knolls have skyrocketed during the past couple of years, but values in most of the rest of North Long Beach have been increasing very little.

A 2,200-square-foot home at 4150 Chestnut Ave. sold for $57,000 in November 1974. The owners have "completely revitalized it," the listing agent said. "They added about 900 square feet during the remodeling, and it will be listed in a week or so for $169,000.

WHILE THE average appreciation rate in Bixby Knolls and Los Cerritos during the past couple of years has been running about 20 per cent, and in some cases much higher, the prices in North Long Beach have been increasing only about 5 to 10 per cent.

The reason, most of the realtors agree, is threefold: The community has always been a blue-collar area, where working people could afford to buy, and, secondly, prices for the area are set, in effect, by the FHA and VA loan appraisers.

Because nearly all of the homes are sold with government-insured loans, they cannot be sold for much more than the value appraisers set as a lending limit.

THE DIFFERENCE between the appraisal and the sale price would have to be made up by the buyers in increased down payments, and a low down payment is one of the prime considerations for obtaining a federal loan in the first place.

The third reason for the lower price appreciation, the realtors said, is that the area was subdivided and developed with small lots and small houses and, because of this, North Long Beach will probably always be an inexpensive area.

Rents in North Long Beach, however, have kept up with, and in some cases surpassed, many other areas of the city on a percentage basis.

ACCORDING TO owners of two of the largest home-rental agencies in Long Beach, rents for houses are running about 1 per cent of the property value, which means a two-bedroom home worth $25,000 would rent for about $250 per month, which would be enough to cover the landlord's loan payment.

In areas like Belmont Shore and Alamitos Bay, however, many landlords are having to make up the difference between their income and their loan payments.

HOWEVER, THE property there has been rising an average 20 per cent during the land year, so the appreciation makes up for the lower percentage of rental income.

The average rents for furnished apartments in North Long Beach range from about $80 a month for a single to as much as $225 a month for a two-bedroom.

Editorials

Sensible, and unusual

Once a politician begins to think about being president, it becomes very hard for him to be objective about the quest.

Harold Stassen, Wilbur Mills, Richard Nixon and many others persisted in the quest long after it became obvious to everyone else they hadn't a chance. In the case of Richard Nixon, everyone else was wrong. That case was an anomaly. This year everyone else knows that Frank Church and Mo Udall don't have a chance. But Church and Udall are still in there fighting.

HUBERT HUMPHREY did have a chance, although not much of one. He thus deserves all the more credit for bowing out of the race gracefully and with a sense of humor.

It must have been harder for Humphrey than for a man who had only recently contracted the disease. Humphrey was bitten long ago. He hoped to be his party's vice presidential nominee in 1956, but Adlai Stevenson left the question to Democratic convention delegates and Estes Kefauver got the nod. In 1960, Humphrey sought his party's presidentialnomination but fared badly in the primaries against the money and charm of John Kennedy. Four years later, Humphrey was elected vice president. In 1968 he got the presidential nomination but lost the election by a narrow margin. His effort to get the 1972 nomination collapsed when he lost the California primary by a close vote to George McGovern.

So Humphrey's decision not to fight for the nomination this year came against the background of two decades of desire, of hard work, and of near misses.

THE FACT THAT Humphrey's decision was sensible does not make it any less unusual.

Hubert Humphrey has never been a man to succumb to bitterness or futile regret. He is, as he said the other day, "a good senator." Given the feelings of Minnesotans, his re-election is as likely as anything in the uncertain world of politics.

We don't always agree with Senator Humphrey's proposals he is sometimes as generous with the taxpayers' money as he is with his own words — but we admire his energy and legislative imagination, and we applaud his constructive spirit. We wish him continued success as a senator and as the Democrats' floor leader if his colleagues choose to make him Mike Mansfield's successor in that important post.

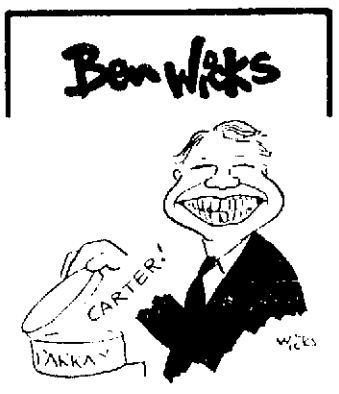

Closing a freeway gap

The California Highway Commission has agreed to advance $1.2 million from reserve funds to start work on completing the 14.5-mile gap in Interstate 5 that slows traffic between Stockton and Sacramento.

That will bring $9 million in federal funds, and the work should be completed in 2½ years. When it's done, the 1,400-mile freeway will stretch uninterrupted from Canada to Mexico.

The commission deserves credit. So do the citizens and newspapers throughout California who responded to pleas from Stockton for help in getting the job done. We're glad to have played a small part in the campaign.

As we suggested the other day, we hope that such campaigns — or special legislative action — won't be necessary in the future. It's important that a sensible program of priorities be established to enable reasonably swift completion of all the California freeways that still have dangerous and costly gaps.

'Jerry Brown: a turn-on guy'

BALTIMORE — Politics has been called the art of compromise, but that hopeful metaphor can be used only for officeholders, really.

For candidates, politics is the harsh reality of numbers, of votes.

California Gov. Jerry Brown has elected to be a candidate for the presidency, and, for him, politics is the harsh reality of the number 1,504.

DURING THE next 80 days or so, he must help give at least that many of the 3,008 delegates to the Democratic Party's national convention reason to vote for someone other than Jimmy Carter on the convention's first ballot, and then the second.

After that, it is believed, the chances of some candidate other than Carter receiving the 50 per cent plus one needed to win the party's nomination figure to improve. Jerry Brown, one must now be convinced, sincerely wants to be that candidate.

Jerry Brown, age 38, governor of California for only 16 months, the Democratic Party nominee for President of the United States?

It is, at best, highly unlikely.

BROWN ANNOUNCED his candidacy just seven weeks ago, then, characteristically, did virtually nothing to advance that candidacy. The Maryland, Nevada, and California secretaries of state decided to put his name on the Democratic primary ballots in their states, and last Sunday, Brown says, he decided to campaign actively in Maryland.

A half-dozen California reporters trailed along, curious to see what other folks might think of the governor and his celebrated Spartan life style. What other folks think is startling, to say the least.

"Jerry Brown is a turn-on guy," wrote Baltimore Evening Sun columnist Lou Panos, "the first politician since Kennedy to hit Maryland with a poetic appeal to our nobler instincts."

BROWN, IN Maryland, "played crowds with the skill of a stump preacher," noted the Washington Post in a story

Bob Schmidt

He is, wrote Peter A. Jay, a Morning Sun columnist, a "spiritual descendant" of William Jennings Bryan, "preaching a new kind of ascetic evangelism that captures 16-year-old imaginations today as magically as did Bryan 80 years and 20 campaigns ago."

The Baltimore News American commented approvingly that Brown "is often a living paradox of what a candidate should be," whatever that means, and also that he has "substantiated his image as a person with more questions than answers and as one with a flair for the unexpected."

But while the three Baltimore papers and the Post agreed that the Californian was an exciting new face in national politics, there was also some amusing disagreement.

THE EVENING SUN'S Panos, after about 12 paragraphs of lyrical comparisons between Brown and John F. Kennedy, apparently pinched himself and cautioned: "There seems to be more example of the Kennedy cool here, less of the light, self-deprecating, warm wit."

While an editorial in the morning Sun called particular attention to "Mr. Brown's sense of irony and capacity for self-mockery."

Panos was not the only observer to invoke the memory of Kennedy.

Maryland Lt. Gov. Blair Lee III described Brown to the Washington Post as "a West Coast Jack Kennedy."

"I like him," Lee said, "and it looks like a lot of other people do, too."

"He definitely made points here, there's no question about it," said Baltimore City Council President Walter Orlinsky.

"We're getting a media star here. Everyone wants to see him. The question is, will he wear?"

THAT IS A question only time can answer. And only time will tell whether Brown can overcome the handicap of his youth, his inexperience, and his late entry into the race to coalesce those Democrats who, for various reasons, are opposed to the front-running Jimmy Carter.

For those curious California reporters, though, a few things are no longer in doubt. If Jerry Brown is right and "the people in Maryland are just like the people anywhere else," than the governor of California has a national image, thanks to his appearances on television, particularly on CBS's "60 Minutes," and thanks to lengthy pieces in Playboy, Reader's Digest, and other magazines.

People know Jerry Brown refuses to live in California's $1.5 million governor's mansion, they know he works long hours, they know he prefers a Plymouth to a Cadillac, and they know he stands for fiscal conservatism. And they like him.

What does Carter believe?

FIERY RUN, Va. — With Hubert Humphrey and now Scoop Jackson on the sidelines, the attention of the nation is turning to Governor Carter.

Carter's success has been a triumph of hard work and tough political organization in the primary states, but probably more important, it has been the result of something personal, something new but very old: something quiet, courteous and philosophical in a noisy, unmannerly and cynical age.

James Reston

New York Times News Service

THIS HAS changed the attitudes and votes of a lot of people. Politically, Virginia is not typical of the nation, but here in the foothills of the Blue Ridge, he has transformed the attitudes of the voters along our lonely and winding roads.

Fauquier County, Va., is conservative Harry Byrd country. Once solidly Democratic, it has been sliding toward the Republicans for a generation, but Carter seems to be swinging it back. The fact that he has prevailed in the primaries against the Democratic Party and labor organizations has changed the mood of voters along these roads. They like his independence. They say that maybe a Southerner is finally going to have an honest shot at the presidency, and they are impressed by his religious faith.

Accordingly, this little community may help explain one aspect of Carter's success. It is divided on political issues, but it pays attention to its churches — of whatever denomination. The churches are not only the philosophical but the social centers of this country. People talk here, as in Louisiana, about how the people of the "parish" voted.

ONLY TWICE in the last 50 years has the "religious issue" been important in our presidential election. The Democratic Party's national convention in 1924 at Madison Square Garden in New York, where the Democrats will meet again in July, was hopelessly divided, with urban Catholics and Jews favoring Alfred E. Smith and rural Protestants voting for William Gibbs McAdoo — and John W. Davis emerging as the compromise candidate after 103 ballots.

The issue came up again in 1960 when Jack Kennedy, a Roman Catholic, finally won the nomination and the presidency after proclaiming: "I do not speak for my church on public matters, and the church does not speak for me." The issue is not so prominent now, but it has been raised, not by Carter but by the questions of the press, and Carter has not hesitated to give witness to a deep religious faith.

This has encouraged many voters and troubled many others. Carter, unlike Kennedy, is a "true believer," and for the rest of the campaign, many voters will undoubtedly be asking what he truly believes.

IT IS A fair enough question. Already some of his opponents are suggesting privately that he is a "religious fanatic" who thinks he is an important instrument of "the Lord's work," but there is no evidence to support this thesis.

He is said to be a great admirer of the late Reinhold Niebuhr, former professor of Christian ethics at the Union Theological Seminary of New York. Niebuhr, far from being a "religious fanatic," was one of the most eloquent critics both of American theology and politics, and of the challenge of Communist ideology.

Few Americans of the postwar world have kept a better balance between our ethical and political dilemmas than Niebuhr, or been more aware of the irony of American history.

IN A BOOK on that irony, Niebuhr stated his philosophy in two revealing statements:

First, he said: "Our idealists are divided between those who would renounce the responsibilities of power for the sake of preserving the purity of our soul and those who are ready to cover every ambiguity of good and evil in our actions by the frantic insistence that any measure taken in a good cause must be unequivocally virtuous. We take, and must continue to take, morally hazardous actions to preserve our civilization. We must exercise our power. But we ought (not) believe that a nation is capable of perfect disinterestedness in its exercise. . . . Communism is a vivid object lesson in the monstrous consequences of moral complacency about the relation of dubious means to supposedly good ends."

Second, Niebuhr observed: "Nothing that is worth doing can be achieved in our lifetime; therefore we must be saved by hope. Nothing which is true or beautiful or good makes complete sense in any immediate context of history; therefore we must be saved by faith. Nothing we do, however virtuous, can be accomplished alone; therefore we are saved by love. No virtuous act is quite as virtuous from the standpoint of our friend or foe as it is from our standpoint. Therefore we must be saved by the final form of love which is forgiveness."

IF THIS ALSO represents Carter's connection between his ethical and political philosophy, the chances are that he will gain more support by his faith than he will lose; but of course, we still do not know. He will be questioned on this in the coming months, quite fairly too, and there will be time to find out more about what he really believes.

Meanwhile, we will probably hear a lot of doubt about a man who claims to have a "pipeline to God," which is odd, first, because Carter has never claimed he had, and second, because we've had a pipeline to almost everywhere else lately, and it hasn't been a spectacular success.

The Senate's sunshine addicts

WASHINGTON — The Senate Intelligence Committee disgorged its 651-page report on Monday. By Tuesday night, we may be certain, the report was being gleefully dissected in the Kremlin. In the annals of stupid congressional stunts, this massive piece of folly will rank exceedingly high.

Yes, the report does contain some thoughtful observations. Yes, it gives lip service to the idea that our nation needs a foreign intelligence service. Yes, the report calls attention to the dangers of Soviet espionage. The principal authors stoutly insist that their publication will not weaken, but rather will strengthen the Central Intelligence Agency.

WHEN THESE perfunctory pieties have been acknowledged, little of value remains. The committee has raised a banner with a strange device: "Let It All Hang Out." The majority members seem genuinely to be wedded to the naive notion that an agency whose function is to deal in secrets must have no secrets — it must shed itself of "secret practices that have eroded the processes of open democratic government."

What is the first accomplishment of the committee's long investigation and report? It is to belittle the CIA, to stigmatize the honorable men who have served it, and to make the agency's successful performance vastly more difficult. The committee's disclosures "blow the cover" on sensitive operations; many of the committee's recommendations would treat the agency as if it were merely another government bureau — a crop-reporting service, or a bureau of labor statistics.

Consider, if you please, one legislative recommendation that provides an accurate indication of the tone and approach of the sunshine addicts in the Senate. Their idea is to prohibit virtually all covert actions; only in "extraordinary circumstances involving grave threats to the U.S. national security" would they tolerate a secret operation. And then, mind you, the committee's proposed statute would require prior disclosure to a congressional oversight committee before any funding could be provided.

THAT IS marvelous, is it not? The director of the CIA would be required to travel to Capitol Hill, hat in hand, and spell out his most sensitive recommendations before a gaggle of loose-jawed senators or congressmen. Why not, one wonders, require the director to hire a skywriting airplane and spell his plans out in mile-high letters over Washington?

Over the past two years, the Congress has forfeited whatever confidence one might have had in its discretion. How long will it be before the "unexpurgated edition" of the committee report is leaked to Jack Anderson?

Patty said informing FBI when abruptly transferred

By RONALD KOZIOL
Knight News Service

Patricia Hearst reportedly was disclosing secret details of successful bomb plots by underground revolutionaries to San Francisco FBI Chief Charles Bates Monday when she was taken abruptly from her hospital bed by U.S. marshals to a federal prison in San Diego.

The Chicago Tribune reported that the meeting with Bates, who led the hunt for Miss Hearst after her kidnaping and subsequent disappearance into the radical underground, was only one of several that already have taken place.

One reason for Miss Hearst's disclosures to Bates may be displeasure with her onetime comrades over violent acts aimed at her parents, Randolph and Catherine Hearst.

During her recent bank-robbery trial, a terrorist bomb caused more than $1 million damage to a guest house at the famed San Simeon castle, a onetime favorite retreat for the Hearst family. Upon hearing of the bombing, Miss Hearst became upset and reportedly blurted out, "I feel like telling everything I know about the New World Liberation Front," the terror group which took credit for the act.

Albert Johnson, Miss Hearst's attorney, had charged that she was virtually "kidnaped" by marshals from her bed at Redwood City's Sequoia Hospital, where the 22-year-old heiress was recuperating from a collapsed lung. The marshal's office has denied the charge.

Johnson said he was having a legal conference with his client when the marshals interrupted. But also present, sources say, was Bates, who reportedly was being told the inner workings of the New World Liberation Front, which has claimed responsibility for 32 bombings in California.

EXCLUSIVE

An FBI spokesman in San Francisco said Bates will not say "if he has or has not met with Miss Hearst."

However, it was learned from other sources that Bates and Johnson were taken by surprise by the hasty transfer of Miss Hearst to the San Diego prison, where she is to undergo three months of psychiatric examination before sentencing on her bank-robbery conviction.

They attempted to delay the transfer by placing a telephone call to Chief U.S. Marshal Frank Klein in San Francisco but could not reach him.

Bates reportedly was told by the marshals that he could visit Miss Hearst in the Pleasanton jail where she was taken for a day before being moved to San Diego. However, Johnson said the marshals' "unforgivable actions caused her an emotional disturbance, and she became very uncommunicative."

Miss Hearst is reported to have requested the meetings with Bates, who has been in charge of investigating the series of bombings in the Bay Area, including a blast that rocked a building which houses the FBI's offices in Berkeley.

A group of terrorists calling themselves the Red Guerrilla Family took credit for the FBI bombing. Miss Hearst is reported to have knowledge of the bombing and the persons connected with it.

Miss Hearst's knowledge of the radical underground network, where she spent 19 months before her arrest last September, is considered extensive by investigators. Her testimony against her former underground friends could play a major role in a reduction of her 35-year prison sentence after she completes the psychiatric tests.

Both the New World Liberation Front and the Red Guerrilla Family emerged on the California terror scene after a police shootout in Los Angeles in May 1974. At that time six members of the Symbionese Liberation Army died, but Miss Hearst and two companions, William and Emily Harris, escaped. The SLA had kidnaped Miss Hearst on Feb. 4, 1974.

After the three were arrested, investigators said documents were discovered their apartments indicating they were involved in a campaign of terrorist acts against police agencies.

Miss Hearst still faces trial on charges of kidnaping, assault, and robbery stemming from her alleged participation in a shooting at a sporting-goods store in Los Angeles. She is a codefendant with the Harrises in the Superior Court case.

'Weather warfare' feared

Associated Press

Disastrous effects of worldwide climate changes warned of in a new CIA report are likely to encourage attempts at climate modification and weather warfare, a former military weapons consultant said in Los Angeles Saturday.

Lowell Ponte said the United States and the Soviet Union are each studying ways of inflicting bad weather on the other, as well as ways of improving their own climate.

"If climate remains unstable, the Soviets, unable to feed themselves, will almost certainly decide to try improving their own climate by tampering with the polar icecap and other means," said Ponte.

Ponte formerly was a researcher in environmental and bizarre weapons for the International Research and Technology Corp., a Washington-based think tank that has had Pentagon contracts.

He is the author of the forthcoming book, "The Cooling," in which he contends the earth's climate is gradually cooling, a trend which could profoundly disrupt the world's food supplies.

A similar theory is contained in a CIA report to be released Monday, though its essentials were reported Saturday by the Associated Press.

The report said a period of adverse weather has already begun, and that the results could cause political and economic upheaval almost "beyond comprehension."

The report was based on work by Dr. Reid A. Bryson of the University of Wisconsin. Bryson wrote a preface to Ponte's book.

Deterioration in the climate has already encouraged affected nations to seek nuclear weapons, contends Ponte.

"India was only the first of many poor nations to decide, given the near-certainty of famine, that atomic weapons are a better investment for their survival than farm equipment," said Ponte.

PONTE SAID the the Pentagon's climate dynamics program has studied ways to melt the polar icecaps and, using space satellites, to change the weather for the worse over the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union has already begun work to improve the Russian climate by reversing a river flowing into the Arctic Ocean and creating inland seas, said Ponte, the effects of which might be global.

Ponte said stricter international safeguards are needed to regulate climate modification techniques. Otherwise, natural balances could be disrupted with unforeseen consequences for the world's weather.

Talks continue in S.F., but still no end to stalemate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Talks continued into the wee hours of the 32nd day of San Francisco's longest municipal employes strike Saturday with no sign that a solution to the stalemate was near.

City negotiator Patrick Mahler reported privately to Board of Supervisors President Quentin Kopp at 2 a.m. on his latest meeting with leaders of the striking crafts union workers. Labor leaders met Saturday to discuss the overnight session.

The latest in a long chain of proposals, this one offered by labor, was reported to contain the following provisions:

—The appointment of a joint study committee with equal representation from both sides to develop a workable solution;

—The immediate return to work of strikers, with amnesty for all but those who committed violent acts or who are affected by court action;

—Removal of two salary propositions from the June 8 ballot.

They also indicated that the main stumbling block continues to be the board's insistance that the strikers accept a cut in pay.

The board has refused to meet with labor negotiators, insisting that Mahler has full authority to speak for the city.

THE STRIKE began March 31 when 1,800 of the city's 18,000 employes left their jobs in a dispute over $17 million in pay cuts authorized by the board and signed by Mayor George Moscone. The strikers have lost an estimated $10 million in wages since the walkout.

The controversial ballot propositions call for the dismissal of striking city workers and set salary levels by voter mandate. They have been used by the board as a bargaining tool, but their value for that purpose will be over May 10, the last day the board can take them off the ballot.

Meanwhile, contempt-of-court proceedings against union leaders were scheduled to resume Monday. Superior Court Judge John Benson disqualified himself Friday after union lawyers challenged him, noting that he was one of several judges jostled by pickets in front of city hall.

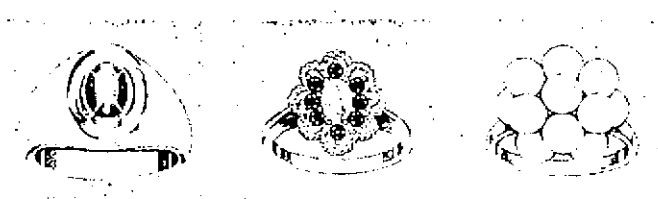

Retired Judge Clayton Horn was appointed to hear the case, but he also is under union fire because he cited labor leaders for refusing to obey a mid-April court order declaring the strike illegal and ordering an end to picketing.

31 arrested at rally in Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — Police arrested at least 31 persons Saturday in a brief confrontation with May Day demonstrators supporting striking garbage collectors.

Several other persons struck with nightsticks after they reportedly resisted arrest were taken to a local hospital for treatment. Police said they also would be booked.

ONE PERSON SURVIVED THIS PLANE CRASH ON RAILROAD TRACKS

—AP Wirephoto

Train hits crashed plane; four dead

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — A small plane crashed on railroad tracks Saturday and lay undiscovered until a train plowed into the wreckage two hours later.

Four of the five persons in the plane were killed, apparently before the train struck it, rescue workers said.

No one on the Southern Railway passenger train was injured.

State police said the twin-engine Piper Aztec apparently overshot the runway at fog-shrouded Lynchburg Municipal Airport.

The plane crashed about 3 a.m. and the 18-car Atlanta-to-Washington train struck the wreckage about 4:55 a.m., police said.

"The train crewmen said they came out of a curve and saw the plane sitting along the south track with just its nose hanging over the rails," said Pat Powell, chief dispatcher for Southern Railway.

"The train just hit the plane a glancing blow and pushed it off the rails."

Dead were Daniel Buck Caudler Jr., 33, the pilot; Kent Manly Jackson, 33, and Mickey Lee Rowlett, 25, all of Lynchburg, and Kimberley Ann Croloff, 21, of Westport, Conn.

A fifth person aboard the plane, Kathy Dupree, 24, of Lynchburg, survived both the initial crash and the subsequent train-plane crash, police said. She was hospitalized in serious condition with multiple injuries.

GOOD FOR DAYS SHOWN

showed spelling errors similar to those in the will, such as "hoarse" for "horse," "converstation" for "conversation," "off" for "of" and so forth.

The manuscript, in parts ungrammatical and awkwardly phrased, tells of an industrious man who has trouble with women and falls afoul of the law. The chief characters are a woman named Darlene, her parents and friends named Jerry and Jack.

One paragraph of the manuscript demonstrates its rambling style:

". . .Two fellows were keeping a converstation in the middle of the lane on the highway, thire car running & they first sat thier the other cars were ahead off them almost 3-4 off a mile. . .I just kept on until I finally seen that they were just setting in the middle off the road."

OFFICIALS of the Mormon Church were trying to determine how the purported will was found on the 25th floor of the church office building.

They said their only clue was a "mystery woman" who refused to leave an envelope with a main-floor receptionist several hours before the will was found.

Receptionist Inis B. Stanton said a "striking" and "sophisticated-looking" blonde asked her for directions to the church president's office about 2 p.m. Tuesday and refused to turn over the envelope she carried, insisting it had to be hand-delivered.

THE DESK ON which the will was found in an envelope about 4:50 p.m. was several doors from the president's office.

In addition to trying to find the "mystery woman," church officials say they are tracing the steps of former Texas Gov. John Connally, a director of a Houston bank involved in a search for the Hughes will, who was on the 25th floor the day the will was found.

CONNALLY said through a spokesman in Austin, Tex., on Saturday that any speculation he or his bank may have been connected with the will is "a vicious, malicious, irresponsible story. Its clear implication is that the bank was guilty of wrongdoing and that I have violated professional ethics. This is all too characteristic of some reporter's interest in engaging in scandal by slander."

Connally told the Houston Post the story was "totally untrue" and that he was in Salt Lake City to talk to Mormons about "world affairs." He would not elaborate.

Connally said he had no dealings with Hughes nor does his law firm represent any Hughes interests.

The will directed that a quarter of Hughes' wealth go to the Howard Hughes Medical Institute of Miami, and the balance was apportioned to his two former wives, four universities, officers of his companies, charitable causes and Melvin Dummar, 31-year-old service-station owner formerly of Long Beach, who said he once picked up Hughes in the Nevada desert.

HOWEVER, THE returns available late Saturday were inconclusive due to the complicated procedure set up by the state party for the election, the first presidential primary in the history of the state.

Delegate candidates committed to former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter and an uncommitted slate running under the banner of Gov. Edwin Edwards had fought a head-and-head battle before Wallace surged ahead when the rural districts reported.

With just over half of the vote tabulated, Wallace delegates led for three spots, Edwards' uncommitted delegates apparently had won six and were leading for four more, and Carter delegates apparently had won eight and were leading in one other.

In Maine, Republicans selected 20 supposedly uncommitted delegates to the GOP National Convention Saturday, but 13 of those selected said they were solid supporters of President Ford.

Two delegates said they were uncommitted but leaning toward Ford. Supporters of Reagan won four seats and one delegate said he was truly uncommitted.

AND IN KANSAS, Carter picked up 13 delegates Saturday at the state's five congressional district conventions. Eleven of 27 delegates elected were uncommitted.

Two delegates were committed to Arizona Rep. Morris Udall, while one supports Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington.

Seven more Democratic delegates will be chosen at the Kansas party convention on June 5, rounding out the state's 34-member national delegation.

Reagan moved on Saturday to the campaign for Indiana's primary, one of four that will be held next Tuesday. Ford was due to take the road again today for Indiana and Alabama.

In addition to those states, Georgia and the District of Columbia hold primaries Tuesday. Ford is unopposed for the 14 District of Columbia delegates.

The Texas primary was conducted under two systems, one for each party. Republican delegates were elected to represent the 24 congressional districts and Democratic delegates were apportioned among the 31 state Senate districts. As a result, there were different polling places for Democrats and Republicans in some cases.

Furthermore, Democrats held precinct caucuses Saturday night to begin the process of picking 32 more delegates.

The whole business drew protests from Carter, who said it was tailored for political manipulation. "Texas has the most disgraceful primary law in the United States," he said. "It was contrived to help Sen. Bentsen."

Carter, in Augusta, Ga., said Saturday "for all practical purposes I stand alone" in the contest for the Democratic nomination.

UDALL, WHO has yet to win a primary, and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho and Gov. Brown of California, who have yet to run in any, are his remaining rivals.

Carter's Pennsylvania primary victory forced Jackson, a Washington senator, out of active primary competition for lack of money. And Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota announced Thursday that he would not enter the race.

Starts Sunday, May 2.

Violence in West

Red parades mark May Day

Associated Press

May Day brought traditional massive worker parades in Communist countries Saturday, but gave way to violence, militant antigovernmentdemonstrations and callups of extra police in several Western nations.

Communist East Germany staged the only military parade reported on the international labor holiday, with goosestepping soldiers brandishing Soviet weapons that revealed increased firepower and technical refinements.

THE AMERICAN, British and French commandants in West Berlin protested the show of force in East Berlin as a "renewed violation of the demilitarized status of Berlin."

In Moscow, the Soviet Union's ruling Communist Party Politburo, led by Leonid I. Brezhnev, stood atop Lenin's tomb to wave at more than 100,000 marchers in a parade lasting more than two hours. Raul Castro, the visiting Cuban defense minister, joined the Soviet leaders at the celebration that stressed economic development.

Fireworks displays climaxed the celebration in Peking, where broadcasts reported one million Chinese flocked to city parks for day-long May Day festivities.

In Vietnam and Laos, thousands celebrated at parades and rallies at which leaders called for the further development of socialism. The festivities in Hanoi and Saigon were closely linked to the first anniversary Friday of the Communist takeover of South Vietnam.

MAY DAY brought violence in Italy, bracing for expected new elections in the wake of the resignation Friday of Premier Aldo Moro's government.

About 20 persons, some of them policemen, suffered slight injuries when police resorted to tear gas in breaking up demonstrations in Rome's Piazza del Popolo and a boulevard leading to Vatican City. Forty persons were taken into custody.

Italian factories were under light surveillance over the holiday after a recent rash of arsonist-set blazes, most of them claimed by extreme leftist groups.

In Portugal, a powerful bomb exploded before dawn outside Lisbon Communist party headquarters, killing one person and injuring six. Later tens of thousands of persons attended two rallies in Lisbon. No violence was reported and crowds were smaller than those on the two other May Days since the 1974 military coup.

SPANISH police arrested more than 400 persons in their efforts to hold the lid on antigovernment demonstrations in at least seven cities. But they did not interfere with an open-air rally of more than 2,000 Communists in Madrid, the largest such gathering since the Spanish civil war ended in 1939.

The Spanish Communists massed on a hilltop in a Madrid park and chanted against the monarchy of King Juan Carlos and for leftist unity and release of political prisoners. One of their leaders was a Catholic worker-priest, the Rev. Francisco Garcia Salve, freed from prison by royal pardon after the death last November of Spanish ruler Francisco Franco.

Several persons were reported injured and more than 75 arrested in Barcelona, Spain's second city, when thousands of demonstrators fought with stones against police swinging clubs and firing rubber bullets.

About 3,000 Israeli Arab Communists staged a peaceful May Day rally at the biblical town of Nazareth to protest Israeli economic policies and land takeovers. There was no apparent connection with a new flareup of Arab rioting in the occupied west bank area, where Israeli soldiers shot and killed one Arab.

Leone dissolves Italy parliament

New York Times Service

ROME — President Giovanni Leone dissolved Italy's parliament Saturday night in a formal prelude to an announcement setting the date for the elections that could result in a share of power here for the Communist Party.

Leone earlier met with political party leaders and then with Premier Aldo Moro, whose 11-week-old government resigned Friday night after losing its parliament support.

The date for the elections, the most crucial here in years, is expected to be June 20.

With the dissolution of the nation's sixth post-war parliament, the political parties went to work on strategy for a campaign that will stretch over six weeks. Apart from gaining votes, the parties also will seek to curtail political violence, which is on the increase.

China premier attacks Russ

TOKYO (AP) — China's new premier, Hua Kuo-feng, attacked the Soviet Union on Saturday for what he called "sham detente and real expansionism," a Peking broadcast reported.

Hua's remarks, at a banquet given by visiting Prime Minister Robert Muldoon of New Zealand, fell short of his charge made Thursday that the Soviet Union "is the most dangerous source of war."

Hua told Muldoon: "We both deem it necessary to maintain sharp vigilance against the superpower that goes in for sham detente and real expansion."

In his banquet speech, Muldoon said: "We agreed. . .certain forces are at work which are of mutual concern and anxiety, and watched with vigilance by both of us."

FREE BEAUTY CLINIC

A free beauty clinic will be hosted by noted beauty authority, Dorothea Segal, at the Edgewater Hyatt House Hotel at 2 P.M. on Saturday, May 8, to demonstrate skin care and make-up techniques.

Free individual consultations will be given to women with skin care and make-up questions during the clinic.

The clinic will demonstrate recommended procedures for cleansing the skin, an illustration of how beauty experts use make up to contour and shape the face, and how to take care of special places and problems common to many women.

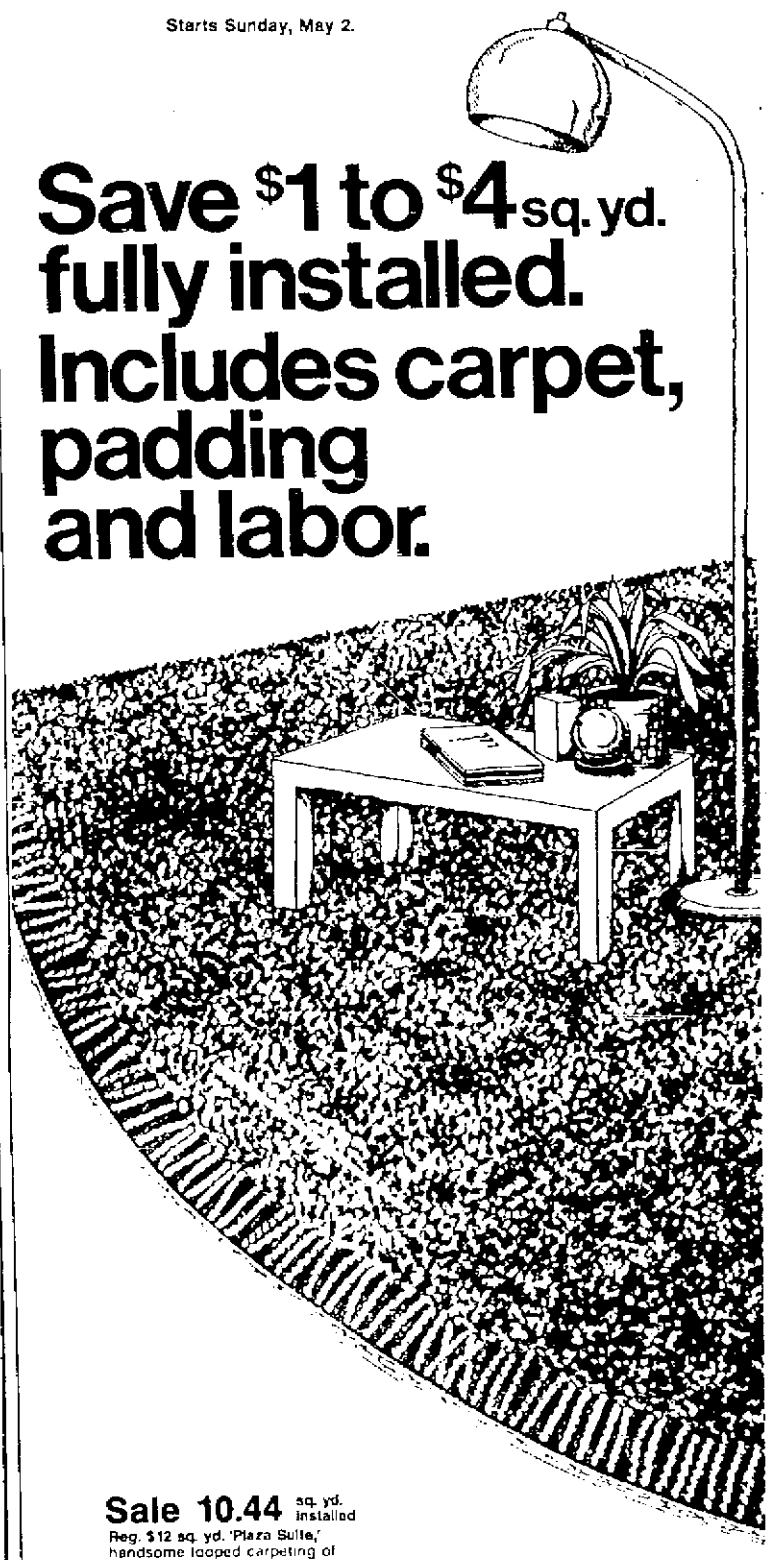

Ms. Segal will also demonstrate personalized make-up techniques designed to bring out the natural beauty of each woman while camouflaging blemishes and other less attractive facial points.

Advance reservations for the free beauty and make-up clinic on Saturday afternoon at the Edgewater Hyatt House are not required.

The clinic will start promptly at 2 P.M.

Starts Sunday, May 2.

Letters to the editor

Readers comment on police, officials, I, P-T

It is unfortunate for the police officers of Long Beach that your newspaper is one-sided. It is more unfortunate for the three officers who have been dismissed.

I cannot speak for two of the officers, but I can for one, Paul Steed.

Paul's life was the police department. He was one of the most dedicated. I know this because when he first was hired he told me that if he ever had to choose between the department and me, he would have to choose the department. I didn't mind because being a policeman was what he truly wanted to do, and I respected this. There are few men that are able to do what they want to do.

Now, thanks to the public pressure created by your constant articles, Paul no longer has his job. His actions at his party may not have been becoming to his profession, but there were justifications for his actions. The paper has not printed the whole storyy of the evening of March 10 or those justifications.

Police Chief Kortz felt that a 10-day suspension was proper and sufficient punishment, and I respected his decision. But City Manager John Mansell (who is not one to judge proper conduct for a city official) overruled Kortz's decisions because of what the I, P-T called "public pressure."

The newspaper has blown this incident way out of proportion and it's tragic that my husband's job was sacrificed to satisfy the public.

I applaud Mayor Clark for his comment that this "is a departmental investigation and should be kept within the department."

It is regrettable that it was not.

NELA WILKINSON STEED

How sweet it is to read the "good" articles about those wonderful, courageous boys in blue!

BABS GORDON

My experience with the police force in Long Beach has, in general, been a good one. I find myself identifying with the conscientious officers I have met. The frustration they must feel at this time must be incredible. What glory can be found in attempting to live up to the ideals of the police force if only minor reprimands are given to those accused in a bar-hopping spreed of violence and brutality? I would request that each of the accused, upon proof of guilt, be dismissed from our police force.

These offenders should be criminally charged. City Manager John Mansell obviously wants to minimize these actions. He should be fired for not demanding full prosecution of those guilty.

The great majority of our police are fine officers, and I am certain they are mightily angered and embarrassed by this situation. They undoubtedly hope for severe treatment of these hoodlums.

By not revealing the incident promptly, by recommending light penalties and no criminal charges, by not disciplining the vice squad officers who tolerated this behavior, Police Chief Ralph Kortz showed that he is more concerned with protecting his reputation than protecting the public. If he is this soft on crime, he should not be in police work.

I was pleased to read someone speak up in defense of the officers accused of wild misconduct. It seems to me these 13 men were found guilty without even the benefit provided the toughest of hoods.

I know one of these young men personally. I know he was left an orphan as a high school student along with several younger brothers and sisters. He worked to help provide for his family after his parents' death while still managing not only to complete high school but to hold a fulltime job nights and complete over two years of police science in college in preparation for his dream of being a police officer.

He is a clean-cut, honest, kind young man, father and husband. He did atttend a bachelor party for a fellow officer who was about to be married. They probably did go to the bars mentioned, but I'm not sure the whole story was really told. I'm not saying the officers were justified. I'm only saying I could see how it could happen to almost any young man. Only another police officer knows the pressures a police officer must deal with day in and day out.

The young officer I know does not know I am writing this letter. I just know how sick he and his family are of having him hanged without a trial.

Police Sergeant P. E. P. expressed his emotional distaste with letters from upset citizens concerned with the 13 off-duty officers who, according to the news media, ran rampant in the streets attacking citizens and violating other laws.

These public servants are expected to demonstrate the conduct of a model citizen, on duty or off duty. If a person cannot expect to be safe from the police, what is left?

Therefore, Police Sergeant P. E. P., I do not share a mildly upset view of the letters the police department has been receiving. Rather, I am outraged.

STERLING S. SHARRAR JR.

I do not believe that I am without fault, but I do believe I can toss a pebble or two at Police Sergeant P. E. P.

I think he resorted to a rather poor choice of words when he referred to his fellow Long Beach citizens' statements as idiotic. Perhaps it was because their opinions differed from his, but does this give him the right to refer to them as idiots?

He compares this group of police officers to teachers, plumbers and aircraft workers. I find this just a bit unfair. Has he lost sight of the fact that police officers fall into the select group of people known as public servants? As do teachers. The clergyman, the politician, the teacher and most certainly the law enforcement officers carry very heavy responsibilities in addition to their normal eight hours of work. When a man chooses his occupation, he should take into consideration the added responsibilities he accepts when he enters his chosen field.

So far as the newspaper publicity is concerned, I find it impossible to believe that a wild pack of 13 people (regardless of their occupations) could terrorize the streets and bars of our city without our alert I, P-T being aware of it and reporting it to its fullest detail. And I would stake my life on the fact that it would be reported within a day or two at the most, not a month later.

What has happened to reason, responsibility and accountability? Must we be for or against? Why must lines be drawn by labeling statements and comments idiotic?

The "people of Long Beach" include many who are parents. Should we as parents say to our children "You misbehaved today but since you were good in the past we will forget about our rules and penalties"? Or perhaps, "You misbehaved but your brothers were good, so you will not be punished"?

The real point is that most people want dependable policemen, policewomen, teachers, plumbers, workers, mechanics, gardeners, secretaries or whatever. And most people want to support those who are dependable.

MRS. ECCO S. OCHOA

How often do our police officers — paid to protect people, not to destroy them — act like beasts, or like the Nazi storm troopers who sadistically beat innocent people? I believe a grand jury investigation is indicated. Let the "bad apple" officers be fingered, and fired from our "protective" services.

JOHN CONNOLLY

One letter writer appeared to be of the opinion that nothing should have been publicized pertaining to the charged wrongdoing of up to 13 of our Long Beach policemen and made reference to "all this trash you keep writing in your newspaper."

It appears that our city fathers, or at least our police department, attempted to suppress the story about these police officers — until this somehow leaked out and became published in the newspapers.

The Watergate exposure began in much the same way.

GERALD HARTPENCE

In my opinion your articles were both distorted and biased.

While the conduct of the officers cannot be condoned, the facts were that the officers were off duty and were celebrating a bachelor party. No one was hurt. Hardly what you would call a crime spree. The whole affair was not as one-sided as you made it appear.

I saw very little mention made of one civilian attacking an officer with a pool cue, and a woman throwing a glass of beer in an officer's face.

Amen to the letters by P. E. P. and Ralph White. The officers were wrong, but why condemn them and the whole department for one foolish evening? If they had been executives or politicians, the whole incident could have been buried.

V. L. PUGH

The Long Beach Police Department is no prize package, and I have my own personal gripe.

One time I got a ticket for parking in front of 1540 E. Fourth St. I checked and found there is no such address. I was charged $5 for parking in front of an address that doesn't exist.

Can anything be done about this kind of police harassment?

M. CLARK

When a cop stops people now, they will think he is one of the bums.

E. P. McCOY

After a great deal of public outrage, the department has decided to patronize the citizens of Long Beach by firing three officers instead of one. How many more letters of outrage will be required until all the officers, as well as those conspiring to cover up the scandal, are dismissed from their public service positions?

PATRICIA INSLEY

An answer to Patrol Sergeant P. E. P.:

You say that if a group of teachers or plumbers did what your group of fine police officers did, they would not have their names written up in the paper. Right! They instead might have been shot for resisting arrest. If not, then surely handcuffed, beaten, thrown face down on the pavement with hands cuffed behind them, then taken to jail, left in a holding cell for three to six hours, then booked, given showers to cleanse them of any body filth, and yet another holding cell until the next day between 10 and 5 o'clock to face a judge to make arrangements for bail. Or, if you are lucky enough to own property, you may be released on your own recognizance.

This person is not just suspended three days from work for his behavior. He will probably be fired if he can't get out of jail to get to work.

LARRY JOHNSON

I was beginning to believe that the Long Beach citizenry and our I, P-T resembled vultures ready for the kill. Thank you, Patrol Sergeant P. E. P. and the other defenders of our police department for dispelling some of this belief.

The I, P-T has always buried the good acts in the back or middle pages, but this affair was plastered on the front.

A. M. C.

If these men had been working in any other occupation, I wonder if all this publicity would have been warranted.

I have been associated actively in law enforcement for over 25 years and still am actively engaged in criminal and civil investigations. I have never seen such a display of the public's animosity toward those who are "life on the line" employed for the preservation of life, limb and property of the citizenry. The taxpayers and hangers-on are the first to jump on the backs of those so engaged. Yet let them get themselves into a position of jeopardy and who are the people they first call upon for protection?

I am sick of reading the gripes from all these individuals pertaining to the few police officers who threw a bash one night.

My husband lost his voice box May 4, 1966, and many times I have had to call the police and fire department to rush him to a hospital. He died March 27, 1965. When I needed their help, you can rest assured I didn't specify that I wanted someone that had not had a drink the night before. This whole thing is perfectly ridiculous.

Regardless of whether these men have families or not, I believe they have more than paid for their conduct many ways. Forgive them for their human ways as you would want them to forgive you.

MRS. H. A. McGOVERN

It seems to me that the Independent, Press-Telegram has now taken it into their power to assume all responsibilities for the criminal justice system in the city of Long Beach.

Since they have already tried and convicted the officers involved in this alleged incident on March 10, only one question is left: Can the citizens of downtown Long Beach be brutalized and harassed?

Since the downtown area has been infested with porno bookstores and nude movie houses along with the low-level life that frequents these establishments, it is my opinion that your newspaper fits well in this area. But don't subject the rest of us to your trash.

To the Long Beach Police Department, I say: Roll on.

I read the letters castigating the officials of Long Beach, running down the personnel of Long Beach, saying how lousy the events are. Even national figures come in for nasty remarks, with a very few exceptions.

All I've got to say is, there are buses and ships leaving every day. So long to you!

RUSSEL W. SHOUP

I was aghast at all the letters you got from incipient Nazis and bleeding hearts about the "poor policemen" who went on a tear and beat up on the citizenry.

Two key points have been overlooked in this whole mess:

1. Policemen swear a solemn oath to uphold the law. In exchange for this, the people trust them and pay them. They are supposed to be the friends of the people who hire them.

2. This bunch of renegades broke the law they had sworn and were being paid to uphold, thus betraying a solemn public trust.

President Nixon violated the public trust and had to resign. Why should it be any different for a gang of would-be storm troopers?

B. B. KINCAID

An editorial attacking Police Chief Ralph Kortz accused him of being a poor administrator and causing poor discipline, and suggested that the members of the police department are running rampant about the town. The I, P-T evidently has forgotten that the officers involved were off duty. The chief cannot hold their hands to insure that the officers would do nothing wrong during their off-duty hours.

While reporting the incident, the I, P-T seems to delight in trying these officers not in the courts but in the pages of your newspaper. Even the lowliest criminal is afforded certain rights regarding pretrial publicity. The I, P-T is ignoring the fact that police officers have the same rights as anyone else who has been accused of wrongdoing.

Three Long Beach police officers gave their lives and all the happiness that goes with living while in the performance of their duties, within a period of 100 days. During the investigation of the police officers' murders, the rights of the accused were closely observed by the I, P-T; however, while the investigation of the murder of Officer G. O. Elkins was being conducted, the I, P-T was "reporting" their version by interviewing unnamed "people on the street," members of antipolice groups or anyone else who had a rumor believable enough to cause the public to purchase a newspaper.

While the Long Beach Police Department was trying to compile the reports regarding the murder of Officer Elkins, the I, P-T raised the question of whether the department was covering up some parts of the investigation.

After the facts were presented to the I, P-T regarding the murder, the I, P-T continued to "report" and to "wonder" regarding the cause of the murder. One of the last articles attempted to raise doubt in the mind of the reader that perhaps Officer Elkins' murderer mistook Elkins for a prowler instead of a police officer in full uniform, responding to a plea for help from the very person who fired the gun which killed Officer Elkins.

KEITH E. ELKINS

Sergeant P. E. P. seems to feel that the officers involved are being discriminated against because their names and involvement have received newspaper publicity.

Sergeant P. E. P. fails to remember that a police force is supposed to be composed of the finest of the community they serve. When it turns out that a few members of a police force become the very ones they have sworn to protect the community against, I say the aforementioned publicity is fully justified.

MICHAEL A. TRAYNOR

To Sergeant P. E. P.:

You knew the hazards when you volunteered to be a policeman. So did these men. Being a cop is a 24-hour-a-day, 365-day-a-year job. You and these men knew that when you violate the oath you took to uphold the laws of this state and to protect its people, public and private chastisement would and should happen.

MRS. JOAN BOWERS

Sergeant P. E. P. says the worst offense committed by the speed-run officers is battery. I say they committed two worse offenses. They forcibly removed a prisoner from custody. They destroyed evidence: a bag of marijuana.

Sergeant P. E. P., the situation of these men is not identical to that of a drunken teacher. It is more like a teacher drunk and assaulting his students in the classroom, or an aircraft worker drunk and sabotaging an airplane.

I feel certain that when a man trains to become a police officer he is told that his behavior must be above reproach at all times.

These men demonstrated contempt for the "citizens," their fellow officers and the law.

You should not defend them.

DAVE JOHNSON

I have met many Long Beach police officers. I was at one period of my life a regular inmate of the jail. I am a recovered alcoholic and have been sober about six years. Before I was able to regain my sobriety I at one time or another met almost every officer on the force.

A few of them were brutal and sadistic, but the majority were nice guys.

On three separate occasions I was beaten by police officers while I was too drunk even to stand alone. Once, I was battered in the ribs and stomach by two officers while my hands were cuffed behind me. I suffered a fractured rib. During another arrest, while spread for the frisk, an officer kicked my feet from beneath me and my chin struck the edge of a counter upon which I was leaning. Result: five stitches. The latter was witnessed by a sergeant who said nothing. Another officer protested mildly, but was told, "He's just a ——— wino."

On the other side of the coin: After maintaining my sobriety for five years, I did some volunteer work with the Long Beach Alcoholism Diversion Project. Twice weekly, I would go to the jail and talk with the men who had been arrested for public intoxication. If I felt any of them wanted to try to do something about his drinking, I could have him released to the diversion project. During this time, I found the officers I met extremely interested and helpful.

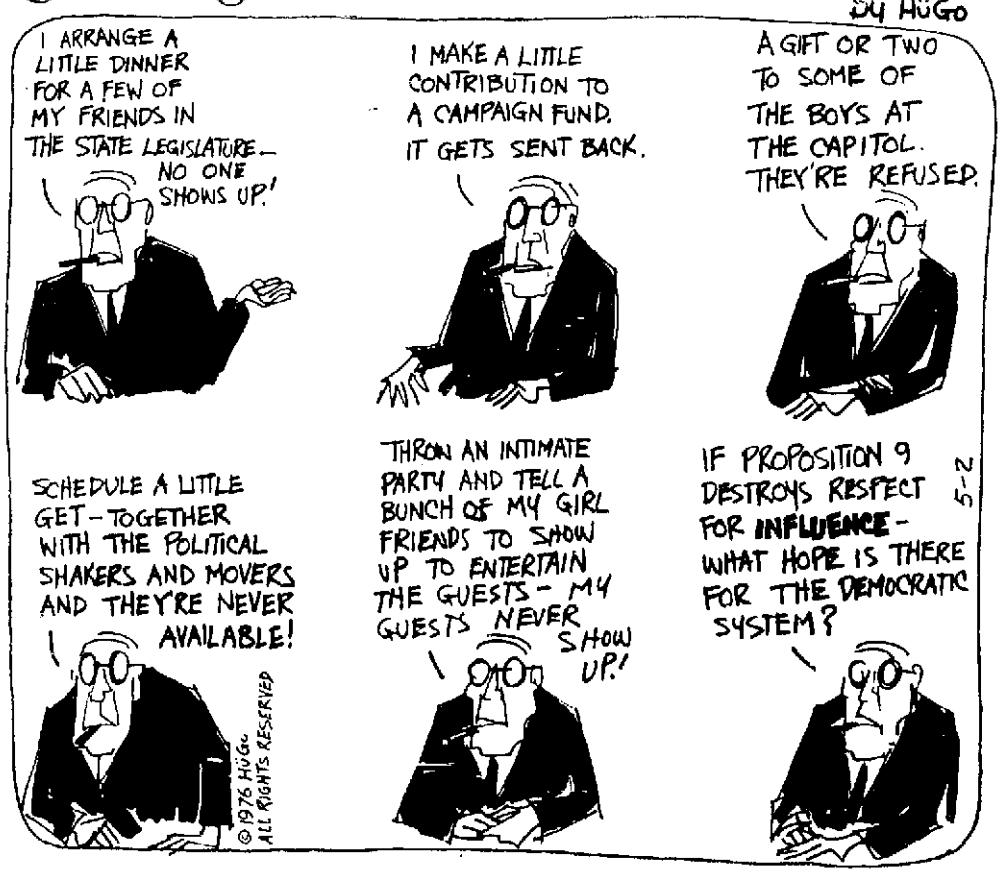

I abhor the type of policeman who mistreats helpless drunks, but I have found that this type is in the minority.

The officers who participated in the recent drunken caper should be disciplined, but not dismissed. Where would I be if I wasn't given a second chance by the Alcoholism Rehabilitation Center? Unless the involved officers are alcoholic (it happens), I doubt if they will ever become involved in such an incident again.

When I first read the article I became angry, but my experiences have served to make me more tolerant. I doubt that there are many among us who haven't at one time or another let alcohol take over our better judgment. I would suggest that the officers involved go to a couple of meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous. They might find out something about themselves.

Kissinger urges Sahara-rescue project

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger Saturday proposed a $7.5-billion rescue operation to "roll back the desert" in a drought-devastated region of West Africa, and he appealed to the world's industrial countries to join it.

"What is needed now is a comprehensive international program that will help roll back the desert, develop additional water resources, increase crop acreage and build food-storage facilities," Kissinger said in a luncheon speech shortly after arriving here from Liberia.

The relatively low-keyed stop in Senegal was Kissinger's sixth visit to an African country on his current two-week tour. He was to fly today to Nairobi, Kenya, to attend a United Nations Conference on Trade and Development.

The United States is ready to open talks with other nations to set up an international development investment program to bring the parched sub-Saharan region called the Sahel to self-sufficiency, Kissinger said.

The area has endured three devastating droughts in the past 10 years. Senegal is located on the edge of the Sahel.

Kissinger outlined an ambitious program for water conservation, reforestation, transportation, communications and scientific use of dry land areas, crops and livestock.

"Traditional aid levels and methods will not be enough," he said. "Nor can any one country or any single donor provide the resources necessary to meet the critical, long-term needs of the Sahel."

If present trends continue, the Sahel — Senegal, Mauritania, Niger, Chad, Mali and Upper Volta — will need to import one million tons of grain annually, Kissinger said.

The Soviet Union would not be excluded from the program, he said. However, Moscow has never shown interest in similar assistance programs proposed by Washington for the Third World.

Kissinger called again on Angola to dismiss the 15,000 Cuban troops on its soil, holding out the prospect of economic aid and recognition by the United States.

Cuban troops and Soviet arms support aided Angola's Marxist Popular Movement in winning a civil war among black liberation groups in the former Portuguese colony.

Kissinger asked: "How can a government be considered African that requires 15,000 Cuban troops?"

Kissinger spoke at a luncheon given by the Senegalese foreign minister, Assane Seck, in a multimillion-dollar hotel overlooking the Atlantic.

Seck appealed in his speech for the "total elimination of apartheid," saying a minority of white racists was keeping blacks in slavery in southern Africa. The minister called this "an affront to the world's conscience."

Kissinger assured the Senegalese that "change will come," and he again urged the white minority governments to negotiate with black liberation leaders.

Kissinger's tour also took him to Liberia, Zaire, Kenya, Tanzania and Zambia.

Report cites Canada-U.S. rift

By GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Warning of an "exchange of verbal and economic brickbats" between Canada and the United States, 15 House Republicans in a 37-page report have urged restraint and new negotiations between the two countries.

"The deteriorating relations between the United States and Canada force us to re-evaluate the friendship that we have long taken for granted," the report said.

IT ADDED, "There is a strong desire in Canada to break away from dependence on the United States."

Reps. Paul N. McCloskey of California, Mark Andrews of North Dakota and Garner E. Shriver of Kansas were among those who signed the report.

The report concentrated on problems of energy, a proposed transcanada natural-gas pipeline, the North Dakota Garrison Water Project and efforts of Canada to nationalize American-owned industries.

"Bilateral energy relations have been strained by the Canadian decision to curtail energy exports to the U.S.," the report said. "Canada announced plans to phase out crude oil exports completely by 1981, and to drastically reduce natural gas exports to ensure Canada's ability to meet domestic requirements.

"...Canadian-[illegible] energy relations [illegible] be conducted on an on-going basis, dealing with regional concerns before they become national problems," the report recommended.

"The two nations should carefully examine the possibility of a swap of liquified natural gas, or a trade-off in which we import Canadian natural gas now in exchange for Alaskan natural gas exports in a few years," it said.

"Because we recognize that high prices are incentive for industries to seek new energy resource fields, we urge Canada to raise its domestic price of energy," the report concluded.

The report noted the problems of the Garrison Water Project.

"THE Canadian government has concluded that saline return flows from the project's sprinkler irrigation would have adverse effects on Canadian portions of the Souris, Assiniboine and Red rivers and on Lake Winnipeg, causing injury to health and property in Canada in contravention of the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909," the report said.

It also urged consideration of an international joint commission on the project

Rhodesia calls up reserves to battle black guerrillas

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesia said Saturday it is mobilizing thousands of reserve troops to meet renewed offensives by Soviet-armed black nationalist guerrillas along the 800-mile border with Mozambique.

A communique from security-force headquarters here said, "Provision has been made for the call-up of territorial-force units for continuous service."

A spokesman for the white minority government later said the new territorial-force commitment, which is expected to affect thousands of young white Rhodesians, would go into effect immediately.

The communique also said the government is considering extending the draft from 12 to 18 months in an effort to field more men.

The spokesman said reserves are usually called to active duty several times a year for a month at a time but under the new policy will remain on active duty "until they are stood down." He said "it could be up to 10 years."

The London-based International Institute of Strategic Studies, in its report on military balance for 1975-76, said the Rhodesian army has 4,500 regular troops and 10,000 reservists, the air force 1,200 regular troops and 10,000 reservists and the police 8,000 active men and 35,000 reservists. Over 60 per cent of the police regulars and about 25 per cent of the reservists are blacks.

'Crack' in medical groups may be spreading

malpractice insurance, also figure.

Still another factor is the growing militancy of some younger doctors who are joining unions because they think the unions have more muscle than conventional medical groups.

In Long Beach, Dr. William Hyman, president of the local medical association, said the membership decrease here would have been even greater if it had not been for "some last-minute pleading by many of us in the establishment."

Hyman said disenchantment with organized medicine goes beyond the medical malpractice crisis and the mandatory membership question.

He said it also comes from "a feeling of futility, a feeling of despair that our profession is to be made a scapegoat for a country that has lost its work ethic, its idealism, its pioneer spirit, its dedication to freedom and individualism, all those things that the 'guys' talked about 200 years ago."

What he means, Hyman explained, is that the modern doctor is caught in the midst of a social evolution that has been occurring in the country but which has passed some doctors by.

Suddenly, in the wake of growing demands for better and cheaper medical care, especially for the disadvantaged, the doctor is faced with what seems to be the imminent takeover of medicine by government and he doesn't like it.

He sees his freedom in jeopardy and he rebels, and part of this rebellion is reflected in his disillusionment with organized medicine.

At the same time, Hyman continues, doctors are becoming aware there has to be better public access to the nation's system of medical care. They also are aware of the skyrocketing costs of that care.

Hyman said that, while there are some doctors who still see medical care as a privilege instead of the right of every citizen, most have moved from this position.

Still, a complete government takeover of medicine, something Hyman himself feels may be inevitable, depresses doctors. Hyman, describing the sadness he feels at this prospect, says, "I would not want my sons to go into medicine."

A self-described middle-of-the-roader, Hyman thinks government control of medicine would be "bad for the soul of the nation. . . We need some free enterprise, some creativeness with new ideas and a rededication to the doctor-patient relationship that is private and personal and warm and real.

"But by the year 2000, medical practice as we know it will be gone. You will see an entirely different thing."

Hyman also mentioned an unhappiness some doctors feel about "the lack of appreciation by some patients for the good that many of us doctors do for them. Certainly, there are many who appreciate us and respect us for trying to help them, but there are enough who hate the doctor and who make the doctor the scapegoat for every miserable thing that has happened in their miserable lives, and some of them have had miserable lives."

What are the answers to organized medicine's dilemma?

—Better leadership: "Just like the country at large, we have to find leaders we can trust and believe in and respect," Hyman says.

—Improved image: "Our future depends in part on the public image we project. A little more honesty and earthiness will counteract more of the demigod and pompous attitudes of a few doctors."

—A compromise on the question of government control: "The future looks bleak for free enterprise in medicine. There will be more and more governmental control and the best we can hope for is a compromise that helps reduce the cost of medical care, but allows us enough freedom of thought and ideas to make it rewarding and satifying for boys and girls to still want to study medicine."

(If doctors had become involved in such things as private medical insurance plans in the '30s and Medicare in the '50s, instead of fighting them, they would have been better off, Hyman thinks.)

"If becoming a doctor becomes a second-rate type of job, you are going to find second-rate applicants applying for it. The cream of the crop will go into other fields."

—More unity among doctors who are traditionally individualistic: "There has to be some kind of raft to cling to....This is not to say that by sticking with organized medicine, (doctors) won't drown. But we have a better chance of surviving in private practice if we stay on the raft and try to build it into a battleship."

Chicanos urged to try harder to reach goals

By JOE SEGURA
Staff Writer

Declaring that they had a "tremendous future," Mario Obledo, California's health and welfare secretary, called on Long Beach Chicanos to unite to achieve their social objectives.

"We're just really starting," Obledo told more than 200 Long Beach Council of Raza Organization (CORO) members at the group's second annual banquet Saturday.

"Considering our 200 years of history, we have made tremendous strides, but not nearly enough."

OBLEDO cautioned the audience against despairing about economic and social setbacks and said Chicanos must "work harder" to achieve their goals at the community and state levels.

"Our commitment," he said, "is not of the same intensity as in the late '60s. It is therefore incumbent upon our Chicano community leaders to be diligent in confronting institutions that do not meet their responsibilities."

CORO is an umbrella organization of Long Beach Chicano groups involved in education, health and welfare.

Earlier Saturday, those attending the conference, entitled "Issues and Actions," adopted more than two dozen resolutions aimed at battling what they termed the dwindling Chicano status in Long Beach.

THE resolutions, dealing with affirmative action, women's rights, education and community affairs, were hammered out during day-long workshops.

Reports presented to the workshops painted a bleak general outlook for Chicanos.

Professional jobs in education and the civil service are limited, educational scholarships and grants have evaporated, school enrollment at all levels is falling and the cycle of opportunities is shrinking, the workshops concluded.

"Many people think that because of the Chicano movement, things are getting better," said Dr. Joseph Rocha, a University of California instructor. "But there's been a peaking and leveling off, and there are fewer and fewer students in upper education."

RESOLUTIONS adopted by the education workshop dealt mainly with what was described as the inability of elementary and secondary education systems to properly prepare students for college, the failure of colleges to provide adequate tutoring and counseling and the prohibitive expenses of college.

Of the resolutions drafted by the community affairs workshop and approved by CORO, only two —support of gun-control legislation and legislation giving legal aliens the right to vote after three years' residency—provoked extended debate.

One major proposal hammered out by the women's rights workshop called for better female representation on the academic staff at Long Beach State University, which now has only four Chicana instructors.

Another called on the City of Long Beach to develop a program to prepare for promotion Chicanas working in low-paying positions.

"I have trouble supporting the women's lib movement when it's already moving on from points we (the Chicanas) haven't reached yet," said Ann Ramirez, a member of the city Fair Employment Practice Commission.

BECAUSE the conference centered on local issues, CORO didn't move to support legislation that would fund the now inoperative Agriculture Labor Relations Board.

However, the luncheon speaker, Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, discussed the ongoing battle between Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers union, the Teamsters and growers.

"If we allow racism and destruction in the field, then we're allowing racism and discrimination in the urban area.

"You (CORO members) have been important in the past and will be in the future, not only politically but economically. Long Beach has not always been progressive, but we're going to change that."

Rally in South Gate marks International Worker Day

About 150 persons celebrated International Workers' Day with a peaceful but somewhat edgy rally in South Gate Park Saturday afternoon.

The rally, sponsored by the United May Day Committee, had been planned for some time, but a tiff with the South Gate City Council early last week left sponsors without a permit for reserved space in the park.

The council voted unanimously Monday to revoke a reserved-space permit for the rally on grounds that a city ordinance prohibits use of municipal facilities for religious, labor or political organizations.

Committee spokesman Al Adams of Cudahy and other committee members vowed to hold the event anyway.

On Wednesday, the city attorney told the group they could have the rally but could not reserve any special place in the park.

On Saturday members of the crowd—composed mostly of blue-collar and unemployed workers—were reluctant to speak with the press. Many cited the group's encounter with the city and said they didn't want to talk about the rally for fear of "retribution by the establishment."

When the rally began, several young workers formed a loose circle around the crowd, while plainclothes police officers and city officials watched from a distance.

A team of policemen took movies of the rally "at the request of the City Council so we will have a record of the size of the crowd and its behavior," said Mayor John Murdock.

Adams said the rally, conducted simultaneously with similar events in 20 other cities across the country, was staged "to let the members of the rich, profit-making classes know that we want better wages, and jobs for everyone.

"We are facing higher unemployment rates, wages that don't keep up with the cost of living and reductions in social services," Adams told the crowd.

"They used to say 3 per cent unemployment was acceptable. Now they say 6 per cent is acceptable, and by 1980 they say a 10 per cent unemployment rate will be acceptable. Well, behind every one of those percentage points stands 1 million unemployed workers, and that's not acceptable."

Teamsters picketing Cal's place

An attempt to unionize 45 garage workers at Cal Worthington Ford, 2850 Bellflower Blvd., moved into its sixth day Saturday as pickets continued to walk in front of the agency.

Spokesman Gregory Roth of Teamster Local 208 said the union is seeking recognition as bargaining agent for mechanics, porters, parts department workers and detail men.

Worthington was reportedly out of town and unavailable for comment Saturday.

Neighborhood sealed off; man, 78, held in shooting

A downtown neighborhood was sealed off by Long Beach police Saturday after a bullet whistled by two officers answering a complaint.

The incident ended with the arrest of a 78-year-old man on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

It erupted about 7:20 a.m. when officers, called by neighbors, heard a shot as they tried to talk to a man inside an apartment on West Fourth Street.

Patrolmen Mural Asbill and Marc Platt reported they had been speaking with the occupant, later identified as Bailey Stone, of 323 W. Fourth St., when the shot whizzed through the front door, spraying them with splinters.

They had earlier knocked on the door, asking the occupant to come out and talk to them, but were answered with "I don't care who you are—I'm not talking to nobody," according to their report.

After the shot, they radioed for assistance and the area was barricaded.

When the occupant continued to refuse to come out, Asbill kicked open the door and disarmed Stone, who was loading a .32-caliber revolver, according to police reports.

Neighbors earlier told the officers Stone had been "making noise all night." Police said they were unable to determine the reason for the disturbance other than that Stone appeared to have been drinking.

Sierra Club's initiative view

Doug DeNike will present the Sierra Club's position favoring the Nuclear Initiative at a meeting of the Rancho Cerritos Chapter of the Sierra Club at 7:30 p.m. May 11.

The measure, which would limit the use of nuclear power in California unless stronger safeguards were imposed, will be on the June ballot.

The public is invited to the meeting at the Liberty Park recreation building, 19500 Studebaker Road, Cerritos.

pened," she added. The plants were either in "extreme harmony" with this "very earthy type music" or "so bored with it they didn't hear."

Mrs. Retallack, the wife of a doctor, didn't exactly set out to be a botanical luminary. In fact, she told the LBCC audience, she begged her dean to let her skip the biology class required for graduation.

Her begging was futile, and she found herself in a class for which she was told she'd have to perform an original experiment. "I wilted," she said.

The professor suggested using her major field of music for the experiment, however, and she remembered reading about some uses of sound with plants.

In one experiment, plants which had been prayed over grew better than those which were ignored. Also, in a yoga book on the use of music for health, she had read that African violets responded well to the notes B and D.

In an experiment with another student, she raised corn, radishes, philodendrons, geraniums and "six of the droopingest African violets you've ever seen" under grow-lights in a basement.

The plants were subjected to a self-rewinding 15-minute tape which played five minutes of the note B being struck on a piano keyboard, five minutes of D and five minutes of silence.

The African violets revived, but the other plants died.

Experiments with different styles of music followed, and the effects of the Led Zeppelin, Vanilla Fudge and Jimi Hendrix were deadly.

By contrast, plants leaned only five degrees away from modern, dissonant concert music, about the same reaction they showed to the dissonant compositions of Claude Debussy.

While she had no experimental evidence to explain the plants' pronounced likes and dislikes in music, Mrs. Retallack said the experiments were rigorously controlled, and she had some ideas for possible explanations.

While the effects of different types of music on plants could be explained by different effects of high or low frequencies, by heat energy or by some other physical factor, Mrs. Retallack is fascinated by the "theory of intent."

She says Ravi Shankar and rock musicians use "essentially the same kinds of instruments," but with vastly different intentions.

Shankar's music has a religious objective, she said, while the "intent of the acid rock was entirely different."

Acid rock "simulates drug trips" and has a "definite message referring to the possible effects of drug use, body eroticism and the dropout culture," she declared. It's a matter of the "highest spiritual nature" versus the "lowest animal nature."

Cross burned at residence

A cross was burned Ku Klux Klan-style on the lawn outside the home of a black Redondo Beach family early Saturday in the second such incident in the city within three weeks.

Investigators said the wooden, 36-by-32-inch cross was placed on the lawn in the Redondo Hills area between 1 and 6 a.m. It was discovered during the night by the house's residents—a mother and her three children—when a piece of wood was thrown through a window. The family notified police at about 6 a.m.

A similar incident occurred April 13 in the front yard of a home about a half-mile away.

Tax rebate boost looms

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Senior-citizen property owners will receive a 10 per cent increase in their property-tax rebates if Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. signs State Sen. George Deukmejian's Senate Bill 413, which has just passed the Legislature.

Deukmejian, author of the original rebate law, said the need for the new legislation "was brought to my attention by elderly constituents who found that small, inflation-related increases in their Social Security or pensions raised their incomes to a level where it reduced the property-tax assistance provided by the state.

"In effect, we were giving them help on the one hand while taking it away on the other."

The Franchise Tax Board estimates the increase in disbursement at $5.5 million starting in the 1977-78 fiscal year. While the increase affects the 1976-77 property taxes, reimbursements will not be made until after July 1, 1977.

The existing Senior Citizens Property Tax Assistance Program grants refunds to homeowners over age 62 on property taxes which have been paid on the first $7,500 of assessed value of their residences. The amount of such assistance is based upon the household income and the amount of taxes paid.

Deukmejian is a Long Beach Republican.

Malpractice bill

Long Beach Assemblyman Fred Chel's proposed legislative remedy to soaring malpractice-insurance rates moved another step Thursday with approval by the Senate Insurance and Financial Institutions Committee.

The bill, AB 2780, an urgency measure, would enable doctors to form cooperatives to indemnify one another against medical-malpractice claims.

Chel said traditional methods designed for doctor protection "have resulted in exorbitant insurance rates and higher medical bills for patients.

"My bill offers an alternative. It would cut some of the legal red tape and make it feasible for physicians not related in practice to create a co-op that would defend them against medical-malpractice judgments. It could help upgrade the quality of medical care because the co-ops will be small enough to encourage better review of members."

Chel said the legislation could also help spare patients from higher health-care fees.

"Insurance companies find it easier to pay 'nuisance claims' than to fight them. The costs are tacked on to the doctors' premiums and ultimately passed on to the patients' bills," Chel said.

Chel is a Democrat representing the 58th Assembly District.

John Philip Sousa IV, campaign coordinator for Dale Dykema, a Republican candidate for Assembly in the 58th District (East Long Beach, Lakewood, Hawaiian Gardens and Signal Hill), announced members of an executive committee for the Dykema campaign:

Voorhis speech

Former California Rep. Jerry Voorhis will speak on Proposition 15, the Nuclear Power Plants initiative, at the Friday noon luncheon meeting of the Democratic Women's Study Club in the Lafayette Hotel French Room.

The club will elect officers at its 10:30 a.m. business meeting.

Reservations may be made by calling 438-0300.

Finch reception

Republican U.S. Senate candidate Robert H. Finch and his wife, Carol, will be honored at a $76-a-couple reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Tuesday in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Wilson, 4236 Country Club Drive, Long Beach.

The fund-raising event is open to the public. Reservations may be made by calling 625-0812, or tickets may be purchased at the door, according to Jack Dilday, Long Beach area cochairman of the Finch campaign with Donald B. Caffray.

Hannaford meets

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach and West Orange County, announced his May schedule of town-hall meetings for next Saturday:

1 p.m., Brakensiek Library Community Room, 9945 Flower St., Bellflower.

3 p.m., Huntington Beach Library Pacific Room, 7111 Talbert Ave., Huntington Beach.

Hannaford also announced his cosponsorship of a bill calling for a 10-year, $20-billion national commitment for the development of solar energy as an alternative energy source.

With a goal of placing 10 per cent of the country's energy dependence on solar and geothermal energy within 10 years, the program would build thousands of demonstration homes and offices in all 50 states.

Bentley against coast panel

Jack W. Bentley, a Republican candidate for Assembly, 58th District, announced his opposition to the California Coastal Zone Conservation Commission as "a burden to taxpayers and local governments alike."

He said the coastal zone should be placed under local control, adding, "The present commission, consisting of a group of appointees who are answerable to no one, has too much regulatory power. Not only have they prevented reasonable development of the coastline in instance after instance but the cost to the taxpayer is horrendous."

Bentley cited a study-estimate of State Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post of $16 million for four years, $4 million more than originally estimated.

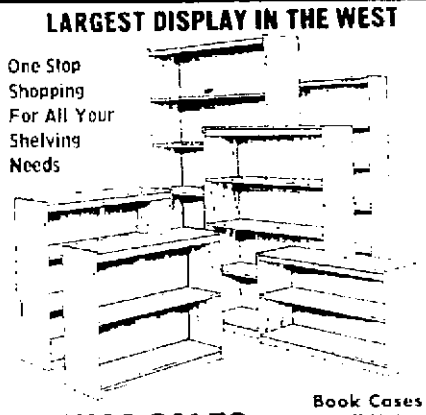

"We can bet this figure is far below what the real cost will be," Bentley said, "and even if it isn't, $16 million is much too much for us to spend on a commission whose greatest regulatory achievement so far has been to prevent a local resident, whose property is unfortunately in the 1,000-foot mean tide jurisdiction of the commission, from removing ivy from his parkway on the grounds of destruction of natural foliage.

"And since when should an appointee have the power of regulation anyway?"

He said return to local control will ultimately save tax dollars and create more jobs since more construction would be allowed than in the present situation.

Public asked 'Is sludge waste or resource?'

By MARY ELLIS
CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

Sludge.

Is it a waste or a resource? Can it be processed for reuse? And, if processed, is it marketable?

These are the multimillion-dollar questions sanitation experts are currently trying to solve.

Five government agencies working together on the problem don't have the answers yet, but they hope to start off on the right foot by seeking public input.

The Regional Wastewater Solids Management Program for Los Angeles and the Orange County Metropolitan Area (LA/OMA Project) will hold an introductory public hearing Monday, starting at 7 a.m., in the auditorium of the Los Angeles County Health Services building, 313 N. Figueroa St., Los Angeles.

"It is not yet clear what reuse or disposal methods will be environmentally, socially and economically acceptable," said Bill B. Dendy, executive officer of the State Water Resources Control Board and chairman of the LA/OMA Project Policy Board.

"However, it is imperative that long-term, cost-effective solutions for handling these large quantities of wastewater solids be found. We plan to encourage public participation in each phase of the planning."

He said more than 600 dry tons of sludge were generated each day in Los Angeles and Orange counties during 1975.

To further compound the problem, it is anticipated that, by the year 2000, this amount may reach 1,200 tons a day. And that's no small problem.

Sanitation officials say there are two ways to go: We can consider the sludge as a waste product...and dispose of it somewhere. Or we can consider it a resource...and reuse it, somehow.

What is sludge?

Sewage — from where you live, work, play and shop — contains solid particles, most of which are removed as a slurry, or sludge, from tanks at sewage treatment plants.

This sludge must be processed to decompose organic matter and destroy harmful organisms and to remove as much water as necessary to make it suitable for disposal or recycling.

Dendy said sludge processing and disposal account for up to 50 per cent of the operating costs for a typical sewage treatment plant.

Some of the reuse and disposal alternatives to be studied and evaluated during the LA/OMA Project study, due for completion in 1979, include:

— Recycling...as soil nutrients and humus, natural gas, crude oil and thermal energy, charcoal and organic compounds and, possibly, some valuable metals and gases;

— Land disposal... sanitary landfills, remote drying basins and spreading on land set aside for sludge disposal;

— Air disposal...incineration and pyrolysis.

"Each of the alternatives has important environmental, social and economic issues that must be resolved," Dendy said.

He acknowledged that products derived from sludge are useful. But are they marketable? Would their value really offset processing costs, energy needs and use of natural resources?

He noted that an inexpensive alternative, such as ocean disposal, would cost about $7 million annually. Other alternatives, which involve sophisticated or remote processing, could range as high as $70 million annually.

The three-year planning program will cost $2 million, according to David Burack, project manager.

It is being sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the California Water Resources Control Board, the City of Los Angeles and Los Angeles and Orange counties' sanitation districts.

Groups and individuals who have questions on public meetings or wish to receive materials may contact LA/OMA Project officials at the Sanitation Districts of Los Angeles County offices in Whittier.

Services held for longtime L.B. educator

Funeral services were held Saturday morning for Thelma Barnes, longtime Southland educator, at the First United Methodist Church in Long Beach. Miss Barnes died Monday at age 70.

Born in Nebraska, Miss Barnes lived 53 years in Long Beach. She received her doctorate from USC and taught for 43 years in Los Angeles schools, including Hollenbeck Junior High, San Pedro High and Wilmington Junior High. She also had been president of the Los Angeles Junior High School Principals Association.

She was active in the YWCA, American Association of University Women, Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, the Eastern Star, the PEO, Delta Kappa Gamma, Phi Lambda Theta and Educare.

Miss Barnes is survived by a brother, Burt of Riverside; sisters, Mrs. Orpha Mae Brauti of Riverside and Mrs. LaVerne Bever of Pauma Valley; and ten nieces and nephews.

Bids set for Artesia Blvd. improvements

Bids on a contract to beautify the center dividing island of Artesia Boulevard from the east to the west city limits will be opened by the Long Beach city manager's office May 12.

Plans for the project, prepared by the Engineering Department in cooperation with the Park Department, were approved last Tuesday by the City Council.

The plans include installation of an automatic irrigation system, the planting of trees, shrubs and ground cover and construction of decorative rock pavement.

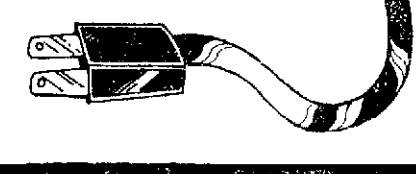

City Engineer Tom Marchese said the project should start in mid-June and be completed by October. The cost is estimated at $150,000, which will come from gasoline-tax funds.

Mayor seeks nominees for advisory unit

Because Helen Wakefield has been appointed to the Long Beach Manpower Advisory Council, a vacancy now exists on the city's Community Development Advisory Commission and the mayor's office is inviting suggestions for an appointee.

Mrs. Wakefield represented the social services category on the commission, and candidates also must represent that category.

Criticize mass-mailings costs

Bond, Lungren hit Hannaford

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Republicans Bill Bond and Dan Lungren renewed their attacks this week on Democrat Mark Hannaford, whose 34th Congressional District seat they are vying for.

Bond's theme continued against Hannaford's mass mailings in the district. Hannaford dismissed Bond's detailed attack with the statement, "I'm going to continue to communicate with my voters."

Lungren portrayed Hannaford as one of the greatest of the big spenders. Hannaford replied, "Absurd."

THE "GALL" of Hannaford, said Bond, to send two districtwide mailings within three weeks at taxpayer expense, one postcard mailer costing $17,000 to announce two speaking engagements, then a four-page brochure (costing $21,000), "half of which is a reproduction of government telephone numbers easily found in a phone book or by dialing information."

Bond said Hannaford's claim of credit for a $107,000 grant to Huntington Beach is less than he has spent in federal money on personal mass mailers within the last four months alone.

The mailers, Bond said, "for self-promotional purposes rank among the worst usages I have seen anywhere" and smacks of "a desperate candidate or at the very least an egomaniac."

LUNGREN SAID the evidence disputes Hannaford's protests that he is working to control the growth of government and taxes. He noted the American Conservative Union's "budget buster" award to Hannaford.

Hannaford said there are many organizations like the ACU cited by Lungren "that issue pedigrees on congressmen, both on the left and on the right... They pick out a handful of votes of a thousand cast in a year."

One such group included GOP Reps. Burt Talcott of California and John Rhodes of Arizona in its "dirty dozen" as great polluters of the land, Hannaford said, "but that's false. I may disagree with these Republican colleagues but they're not great polluters."

The same thing is true of the National Security Council which Bond used recently to point to a 12-point rating out of a possible 100 given Hannaford, the congressman said.

"THEY'RE fundamentally conservative, lobbying groups. I looked up the issues involved after that scoreboard appeared. Three of them involved aid to Southeast Asia. Well, I voted to get out of Southeast Asia and anybody who thinks that wasn't good for American security I disagree with," Hannaford said.

"One issue was the boycott of Rhodesian chrome. Well, I disagree with the white government of Rhodesia; it's not going to stay there very long and our action is proving that now.

"The National Security Council faulted us for denying our ability to go into Angola. I don't think we should have gone into Angola but they think that (denial) was contrary to American security.

"OF ALL THE things they rated us on only two involved modest cuts in defense spending; the rest were philosophical issues. One of them was whether to reveal the bottomline figure on the CIA budget. I think we should know the total amount we're spending on the CIA. I didn't vote against spending it but I voted to find out what it was," Hannaford said.

Lungren hit Hannaford for his advocacy and vote for adoption of a budget "nearly $80 billion higher than revenues, causing inflation and high interest rates to continue."

Said Hannaford, "Our deficit last year was $74.1 billion...very close to what President Ford asked for. We enacted no new programs with significant cost impact...The deficit was caused by unemployment. Each percentage point of unemployment causes $16 billion in deficit.

"Congress actually appropriated over $4 billion less last year than the President requested—more in some areas, less in others."

Lungren was critical of Hannaford's vote for creation of "a large new bureaucracy called the Agency for Consumer Advocacy," thus contributing to added cost of government "and bypassing a fundamental reform of already existing agencies."

HANNAFORD said he feels the agency will save more than it would cost and "has no power whatever to issue regulations. I have fought agencies and their abusive regulatory activities.

"Moreover, I sponsored an amendment to exempt small business from the paperwork aspects of the agency and voted for the amendment to combine all previously existing consumer agencies under the same umbrella, thus doing away with 22 window-dressing kinds of consumer activities."

Lungren attacked the vote for "establishing new labor law by adoption of the common situs picketing bill which would have permitted a strike against a single subcontractor to close down an entire construction site. This would have caused further unemployment in the construction industry as well as higher costs to the consumer. It was prevented from becoming law by a presidential veto."

Hannaford said he would remind Lungren that President Ford, of his own party, "advocated it (the picketing bill) and promised a number of times to sign it...The President's secretary of labor (John T. Dunlop), who both parties agree was one of the great scholars of labor relations in this country, resigned because the President vetoed it. People disagree on this issue and I could be wrong and as subject to error as the secretary of labor was."

Train runs out of track: it's stolen

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — A locomotive and four railroad cars derailed Saturday because someone stole 120 feet of track.

Engineer Jim DeWitt said he was heading from Cadillac to Traverse City at about 3 miles an hour when the engine suddenly dropped off the tracks.

Officials said about 200 feet of track had been cut into 2-foot sections and about 120 feet of it had vanished.

CIA, Dewey, Nixon ties claimed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The CIA pumped more than $1 million into the 1948 presidential campaign of Thomas E. Dewey and provided crucial evidence used by Richard M. Nixon against Alger Hiss, according to Rolling Stone magazine.

In a copyrighted article in its May 20 issue, the magazine says the CIA was twice instrumental in securing evidence used by Nixon against Hiss, former State Department official accused of being a member of the Communist Party. The perjury conviction of Hiss in 1950 gained national attention for Nixon, then a freshman congressman from California.

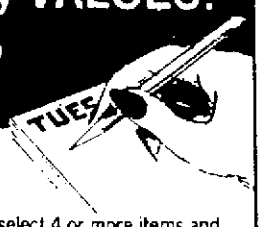

According to Rolling Stone, Dewey had established a cordial relationship with the CIA and its wartime predecessor while he was governor of New York, at one point approving parole for mobster Lucky Luciano after the spy agency arranged for the Mafia to patrol East Coast docks against Nazi saboteurs.

Citing "agency sources," author Howard Kohn reports that the CIA funneled more than $1 million from its secret budget into Dewey's presidential campaign. Organized-crime figures, in league with the CIA, also supported the Republican nominee, the magazine says.

Before Dewey, who died in 1971, was upset by President Harry S Truman, he saw an opportunity to embarrass him during the campaign, Rolling Stone says. The CIA had provided him with information about Hiss, and he then leaked it to the Communist-hunting Nixon, the magazine says.

Leaders in crisis

Van Buren, the magician

By SID MOODY
Associated Press Writer

If not always first in the hearts of his countrymen, Martin Van Buren can claim some other blue ribbons.

He was the first president born after the Revolution. He was the first to build a statehouse machine that could, with a little tinkering, probably still run today. He was the first to face a bellyup depression. And he was the first — but not the last — to avow that what depression did to the private purses of his constituents — it emptied them — was no business of the public government.

The eighth president was a small man: as a fledgling lawyer a judge once asked him to stand on a bench to present his arguments. But he cast his shadow over national politics for more than 30 years. Thrice he ran for president and in 1836, as the hand-picked heir of Andrew Jackson, whose vice president he had been, made it. Previously he had been a power in New York politics, a U.S. senator, governor of New York for a few months, until Jackson asked him to be his secretary of state and ambassador to Great Britain for a few more months, until rivals in Congress rejected his appointment.

Then, another first and perhaps a last, he became a truly intimate vice presidential adviser and confidant to the one man who was his superior, Jackson. Van Buren, a master politican who earned the title "the little magician" by accomplishing such feats as winning the support of both Alexander Hamilton's son and his father's slayer, Aaron Burr, made no bones about wanting the top job as soon as Old Hickory tired of it. Indeed, the Democrats nominated him 18 months before the 1836 election lest there by any doubt.

Eighth of a series

But no sooner had Van Buren assumed the purple than the bottom dropped out of the then 26 United States. All through the 1830s, America, with land for the taking as far as the eye could see and farther than stable currency could reach, had been on a speculative binge.

The young nation had achieved the incredible in 1834 by retiring the national debt, which had stood at $90 million only 13 years before. But such public thrift was overwhelmed by an orgy of private greed. Population in the new states was bursting: 400,000 almost overnight in Illinois, 1.4 million in Ohio, 350,000 in Missouri. Land sharks bought, sold and rebought and resold in the certainty that trackless forest and prairie would soon flower with new communities and crops. British money joined the frenzy.

Land in the territories was available to anyone, $1.25 an acre. Revenue from this soared from $1,507,175 in 1829 to $24,877,179 seven years later. The federal Treasury was bulging — except there was no Treasury.

JACKSON, IN A BITTER battle, had put the Bank of the United States, which handled federal monies, out of business. The funds were assigned to state banks, instead. Jackson, with some justice, hated the bank as an ominous monopoly and a corrupt one at that. Unfortunately, hard money, gold and silver, was scarce, and many banks were little more than an upturned hogshead with access to a press to print their own money.

FINANCIAL TROUBLES CARICATURED IN 1837 LITHOGRAPH

If someone were to ask what all the paper was worth and one hogshead topple, the panic would be on. In his last year in office, Jackson gave the nudge by requiring that after July 1836 all land payments would have to be in gold or silver specie except for actual settlers. The local banks, meanwhile, were holding in their coffers almost $40 million in land revenues which were to be distributed to the states starting with $9,367,000 in the first quarter of 1837. They would have to start calling in loans because of the loss of federal deposits. And repayment would mostly be in dubious paper. Lastly, times had turned sour in Britain. Hard British money went home.

As Van Buren rode to his inaugural in a carriage fashioned from timbers of the U.S.S. Constitution, the hogsheads were toppling. First banks, then everything. In the first 11 days of April 1837 there were 128 assorted failures in New York City, including 30 dry-goods jobbers and 28 real-estate speculators. Cotton plunged from 20 cents a pound to 10. Banks still afloat suspended payment of notes in hard money. The only commodity that still commanded cash was slaves.

Bankers begged Van Buren to rescind his predecessor's Specie Circular, but Jackson, hard pressed himself, roared from retirement at the Hermitage in Tennessee for "the little magician" to "stand firm." He did. Daniel Webster also roared there could be no separation of "the interests of the government and the interests of the people."

PRESSED, VAN BUREN finally called a special session of Congress in September and laid down an unwritten law that was to characterize economic orthodoxy long after he was dead (and he lived until 1862).

The government, he said, could not aid the deception that paper was gold, that value arose without labor, that cities could be built on thin air. Speculation had so diverted the nation from its business, such as agriculture, that $2 million in grain had to be imported in the first six months of the year.

"It (government) was not intended to confer special favors on individuals, or on any classes of them," the president said, "to create systems of agriculture, manufactures or trade ... All communities are apt to look to government for too much ... We are prone to do so at periods of sudden embarrassment and distress ... The less government interferes with private pursuits, the best for general prosperity."

He proposed creation of an independent federal Treasury to handle government monies, free from the risks of private banking. In 1840, the last year of his administration, Congress approved it. The Whigs, riding high, revoked it when they took office from a defeated Van Buren. It was reinstated, however, in 1846 and lasted until the creation of the Federal Reserve System in 1914.

The credo, if not the precise words, of Martin Van Buren has lasted even longer.

Congress goes push-button

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thanks to a computer, a congressman working in his office can push a couple of buttons on a TV screen terminal and read a summary of the debate he's missing on the House floor.

Thirty computer terminals have been installed in congressional suites as part of a pilot study to determine their effectiveness as information-providing, time-saving devices for members of Congress.

The study will determine whether the terminals should be installed in the offices of each of the 435 members of the House and in additional committee rooms, at a total yearly cost of more than $1 million.

If the machines, which cost $180 a month each, are put into wide use around the Capitol, they may be wired into various government information networks.

Gallo ads stir up campus debate

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Advertisement of Gallo wines in college newspapers has sparked controversy in recent weeks on campuses across the state, with several reports of mass theft of student newspapers and threats of physical violence.

The most recent in a series of disturbances surrounding a long-standing United Farm Workers boycott of Gallo occurred last Tuesday at Hayward State University.

ABOUT 15 members of the campus La Raza Coalition, a Chicano student group, marched into the editorial offices of the student newspaper, the Pioneer, and demanded suspension of a Gallo ad that ran that day.

Dan Sheridan, Pioneer managing editor, said one demonstator told him the coalition would "close the paper down," using "any means we could, even if it came to doing something illegal."

Earlier this month, editors of the Sacramento State University newspaper, the Hornet, reported that they received threats of violence after publishing the Gallo ad.

THE NEXT time the Hornet advertised Gallo, 8,000 copies of the student newspaper were taken from their distribution points and were later found stuffed in trash bins.

Incidents on other campuses include:

—Inclusion of a Gallo poster was seen as having motivated the theft last week of 3,500 copies of the Highlander, the weekly student paper at UC Riverside.

—The same Gallo poster recently inserted in the UC Irvine newspaper, the New University, was "plastered all around campus," scrawled with "Boycott Gallo" and "Boycott the New U," according to news editor Leslie Sunell.

—The student government at San Diego State University financed anti-Gallo ads in the student newspaper, the Aztec, after the editorial board rejected farmworkers' pleas not to run the Gallo promotions. The student body recently rejected their government's action in a referendum vote.

—Last week UFW supporters petitioned the UC Santa Barbara newspaper, the Daily Nexus, demanding equal space, free of charge, for every paid Gallo ad.

Tim Patterson, editor of the Forty-Niner, Long Beach State University's paper, said Gallo ads have appeared severals times this semester with no comment from UFW supporters.

"We haven't taken an editorial stand on the Gallo-UFW controversy," said Patterson.

On other campuses the Gallo-ads dispute has raised questions about a campus newspaper's purpose and responsibility.

Editors of all papers interviewed agreed that press freedom includes the right not to print stories or ads they determine to be sexist, racist, or otherwise in bad taste.

Michael Dorals, lobbyist and attorney for the California Newspaper Publishers Assn., said nonstudent newspapers have the right to refuse or accept advertising from anybody.

However, the press freedom of student newspapers is not as clearly defined. A campus newspaper, unlike the general press, is not truly independent of its readership, the students. For example, student newspapers of the University of California, which are partially funded by student registration fees, are in most cases accountable to the campus media board and, ultimately, the UC Board of Regents.

Some student newspapers say they cannot afford to ban Gallo's quarter-page ads and tabloid-size poster inserts, though they would like to.

"It (the Gallo ad) keeps our paper solvent," said Dan Sheridan of Hayward State's Pioneer. "We won't be intimidated to pull out the ads." Sheridan published another Gallo ad last Thursday. He said he would have gladly banned the controversial promotion to quell student protest if an alternate ad were available.

The editor of the UCR Highlander says he has continued to run the ads for financial reasons, but has given UFW supporters a full editorial page to present their views.

Other newspapers have refused to publish Gallo ads, which editors say offend their readers and undermine the editorial board's announced support of the UFW boycott.

"We are categorically opposed to Gallo selling its products at the expense of the farmworkers," said Irv Eachus, editor of the California Aggie at UC Davis. "We are dealing here with a company which has a long history of exploitation of farmworkers."

Editorial staff of the UC Santa Barbara Daily Nexus and the UC Irvine New University have also editorialized in favor of the UFW boycott, but they run Gallo ads because they refuse to cross editorial policy over to advertising.

"We believe anyone should have the freedom to advertise and we can't start to discriminate on the basis of editorial stance," said Pat Gross, New University advertising manager.

"We figure anybody's money is equal to anyone else's," she said.

But Manuel Picket, head of Sacramento State's Chicano group, says "freedom to advertise" is deceptive. He said the UFW cannot afford to pay for ad space to counter the Gallo promotions. "The people who have been struggling in the fields do not have the money," he said.

Dave Miller, editor of Sacramento State's Hornet, said he believes press freedom includes the right not to print ads that are offensive to a large number of readers.

He said that a significant number of the 4,000 students of Mexican descent on the Sacramento campus protested against the use of Gallo ads and that the paper should have banned the ads.

The campus media board there resolved the dispute by prohibiting the newspaper from publishing both UFW and Gallo ads.

Rosie's a jewel as a 'watchdog'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The "watchdog" guarding Tom Cole's jewelry shop can make the most hardened hold-up man reconsider. Protecting the jewelry 24 hours a day is Rosie, a tiger-striped tarantula.

Rosie is a lot smaller than the snarling canine normally chosen for such duties — she measures about 5½ inches from front to back leg. But she can get a lot closer to her work, actually living among the silver-and-turquoise rings and bracelets at Sterling-works.

The ominous hairy-legged spider uses two hollow fangs to deliver poison potent enough to kill small animals like frogs and lizards, which make up most of its natural diet. Rosie's bite is uncomfortable, but not fatal, to humans.

AFTER his shop had been robbed several times, Cole says he went to a security firm which recommended the tarantula.

"I wanted some security without paying an exorbitant price," Cole said.

"I never had a spider before and I was very afraid of her at first," he remembers. "But I got used to handling her.

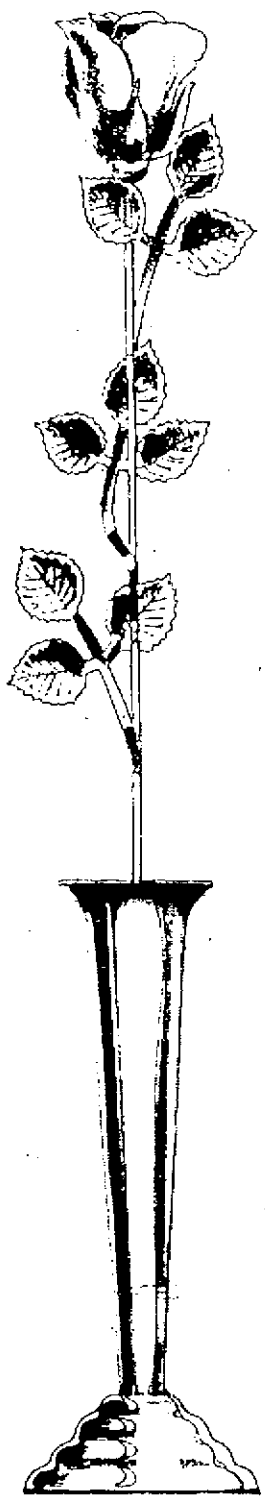

"I consider her a real pet now," he added. "She won't bite me and she seems to like being petted."

Rosie is an economical pet, eating a meal of ground meat or crickets once every five or six weeks. Cole says she often races around the display case, then sits motionless for days at a time.

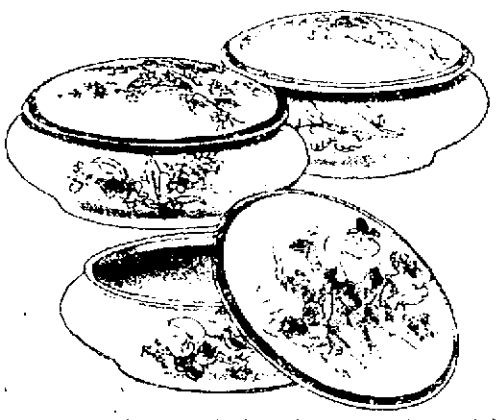

"This is a bad neighborhood," Cole says—but there have been no robberies since Rosie took over guard duty.

Check up

I'd like information about having a house inspected before buying it. Who does this kind of thing? L.K., Long Beach.

Private building-inspection firms will check a house from roof to foundation to make sure it is in good condition, and paying for such service might be money well spent if you have any doubts about the integrity of the structure. AAA Building Inspection Service in Culver City, 839-1389, employs off-duty municipal building inspectors. A company spokesman said they "check on everything we can get to." The fee for an average-sized three-bedroom, two-bath house is $88. A similar service is offered by Nationwide Real Estate Inspection Service. Its offices are in New York; but you can arrange to have a local inspector check a property by calling their toll-free number, (800) 221-2165. Their fees range from $85 to $200. Both firms check heating, plumbing, wiring, water pressure, roof, drainage, foundations, attics and interior and exterior walls, and give a written report on the condition of the building. It also is a good idea to have the local building department check to make sure there are no unauthorized additions or improvements and that the structure conforms to the building code. In Long Beach such an inspection costs $5, with an additional $10 to have the plumbing and electrical systems checked for code compliance.

Irredeemable

I came out here recently from Florida to start my own business. My wife is with her brother in Ohio until I can afford her plane ticket to California. I received my federal income-tax refund check for $1,100, which is made out to me and my wife. I sent it to my wife for her endorsement, but the Bank of Downey, where I have a savings and a checking account, still wouldn't let me cash it unless she was present. I can't get her out here without the money from that check, and it seems I can't get the money without her. What am I supposed to do? L.A.W., Downey.

U.S. Treasury Department regulations state that before a government check can be cashed it must be endorsed by both parties to whom it is issued in the presence of the bank teller, said a spokesman for Bank of Downey headquarters. However, Richard Holmes, manager of the Imperial Highway branch where you have your accounts, said you could open a joint account with your wife in which you would be allowed to deposit the check without her being present. He said if you will contact him directly he will give you the forms to fill out and send to your wife for her notarized signature to open the account.

Pickup in pickup?

We are planning a trip east soon and wonder if it is legal to carry a passenger in the back of my pickup truck. It is not a camper but has a camper shell on it. I am particularly thinking of the checkpoint at the Arizona border. T.S., Long Beach.

You can carry as many passengers as you wish in the bed of a pickup truck, with or without camper shell, said a spokesman for the California Highway Patrol. He said most states' regulations would be similar to California's on this type of thing. Action Line also checked with Arizona's Department of Public Safety and found there is no law in the state prohibiting passengers in the bed of a pickup. Both states, however, prohibit passengers in a trailer or other towed vehicle.

Stop it

I ordered two sets of children's books for some relatives from Grolier Enterprises, Inc., in Danbury, Conn., last year. The order included introductory packages in two reading programs, with additional books each month. I was supposed to be able to cancel the order at any time. I wrote five months ago to Grolier asking to cancel my account, but they did not do so and are billing me for unwanted books. I have written them twice more, but I'm still getting bills. Can Action Line help me? G.H., Long Beach.

Your account has now been canceled, and you are to disregard the bills. And your relatives may keep without charge the six books that arrived after you asked for cancellation, according to Dante Cirilli, assistant to Grolier's president. Cirilli apologized for the mixup and said, "Unfortunately, with the volume of our business, mistakes sometimes occur."

Brown woos black vote at N.C. caucus

By BOB SCHMIDT
Our State Bureau

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—Jerry Brown Saturday commenced the task of convincing skeptical black politicians that he is mounting a serious campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The California governor was the first of four candidates for the nomination to arrive at the Caucus of Black Democrats.

Shortly after he arrived, Brown heard one of his main supporters, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, issue a warning to all the candidates that "if you don't deal with the issues we identify, we will deal with you at the polls."

BROWN IS scheduled today to face the biggest challenge in his infant, but mushrooming, campaign.

He is to make a panel appearance with front-running Jimmy Carter of Georgia, Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho in the concluding event of the three-day caucus attended by 1,500 black, elected officials.

Welcomed warmly in Maryland as he launched his national campaign earlier in the week, Brown drew a cordial but restrained reception from the delegates here, most of whom appeared grieved over Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphery's decision not to become an active presidential candidate.

"This is Humphrey country," said San Francisco Assemblyman Willie L. Brown Jr., who is clearly a force among black politicians nationally.

Blacks from outside California are curious about the governor, said Assemblyman Brown, who has not yet declared his candidate preference.

An aide to the governor said late evening talks were planned with Assemblyman Brown and with Los Angeles Congresswoman Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, who also has not yet announced support of a candidate.

Congressman Ron Dellums of Berkeley said that if Gov. Brown is to gain support from uncommitted blacks, he must abandon his questioning approach to the specific issues troubling blacks and propose specific solutions.

DELLUMS ADDED that he had urged Brown to come to Charlotte for just that purpose. "The questions have been articulated. Now we must have answers," he said.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson of Chicago, another national power among blacks, said he was prepared to come to California to stump for the governor if he is asked to do so by the state's black politicians.

"His (Gov. Brown's) destiny is locked in the hands of California's blacks who want to see how he handles the Dymally situation," Jackson said.

The "Dymally situation" refers to the contention of many blacks that the governor has relegated Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally to an insignificant role in his administration.

Brown, questioned about Jackson's statement, said: "That is puzzling. Merv is an active supporter of my campaign and will travel to Maryland on my behalf."

Dymally is scheduled to return with Brown to Maryland Wednesday as the governor steps up his effort to win that state's May 18 primary election.

Earlier Saturday, Brown concluded a three-day visit to Maryland by meeting with two groups of volunteers in two different counties.

AT THE FIRST session, Towson Township in Baltimore County, more than 150 persons waited in a church for an hour to see the 38-year-old Californian whose visit has touched off a response that has startled veteran Maryland politicians.

At the second, 75 citizens of Prince George's County traveled to another church in a driving rainstorm to see the governor.

Later Saturday, Brown met with a small group of highly influential political writers at a Washington luncheon hosted by Godfrey Sperling, publisher of the Christian Science Monitor.

The governor was scheduled to return to California later today but was to get no rest from campaigning. Two late-night, fund-raising receptions were scheduled for him in Los Angeles and Pasadena.

Ford, advisers weigh decision on Navy's size

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Ford and the National Security Council weighed Saturday a multibillion-dollar decision on whether to embark on an expanded Navy shipbuilding program, with a consequent major increase in the defense budget in future years.

There was no immediate indication of what decision emerged from the two-hour meeting of the President with his top defense, diplomatic and budget advisers. But the expectation within the administration was that, partly for political reasons, Ford would approve some increase in the Navy's shipbuilding program.

The future size of the Navy, which at 480 ships is now at the lowest level since 1939, is regarded within the Pentagon as the most important military issue confronting the administration, involving tens of billions of dollars as well as the future role of the Navy. The issue also has become involved in domestic politics as Ronald Reagan has pressed his charge in the Republican presidential primary contest that the administration has allowed the nation to slip into a position of military inferiority, including naval power.

White House officials have insisted that the timing of the decision was in no way related to or dependent on Saturday's outcome of the critical Texas primary. But Pentagon officials reported that the decision-making process has taken on urgency as the administration became more concerned about the Reagan challenge.

Vote delay in Lebanon is deadly

BEIRUT (AP) — Savage artillery battles and house-to-house fighting swirled through downtown Beirut Saturday while political efforts to end Lebanon's civil war went into a new stall.

Police reported more than 100 persons killed and 150 wounded in the clashes that erupted after postponement of a parliament session Saturday to elect a new president.

Parliament Speaker Kamel Assaad put off the election in an 11th-hour decision Friday night in the face of irreconcilable discord among the 98 assembly members charged with replacing the Christian chief of state, Suleiman Franjieh.

FRANJIEH'S departure is the leftist Moslem coalition's main condition for ending the war. The Moslems have taken the upper hand after a year of combat that has killed nearly 18,000 persons and left the country in ruins.

The politicians' inability to agree on a new leader underscored the deep split still ripping this little Arab nation — Moslem demands for political reforms and increased Arabization versus Christian determination to retain dominant positions in the government and economy.

At least 15 other political bosses in the tribe-like Lebanese political system immediately came up with offers to be the compromise candidate now talked about as a way to end the stalemate and silence the guns.

"THE DOOR HAS been opened for a third candidate," proclaimed the radio controlled by Brig. Aziz Abdah, Beirut garrison commander and self-proclaimed provisional military governor.

But no one among the new pretenders attracted enough attention to pose an immediate threat to the two frontrunners — Elias Sarkis, the central bank governor, and Raymond Edde, National Bloc Party leader.

Both, like Franjieh, are Maronite Christians — a sect linked to Roman Catholicism and long the dominant force in Lebanon. But neither Sarkis nor Edde is identified with the president and his Maronite allies in the bloody civil war.

Promotion gimmicks suggested for Queen

publicity and promotion. A fee of $10,000 would go to ICPR if the city decided to hire them.

For some immediate results ICPR thinks the ship should be cleaned up and visitors given something to do. Puppet shows, movies, local events and magic shows were suggested.

Later, boat rides from a floating dock installed at the stern could offer tours of the channel. A North Sea storm could be staged on the bridge with film and closed-circuit television.

The firm also suggests the use of lifeboats on the starboard side for rides and the introduction of people-activated exhibits on the ship.

Promotion films, a new advertising campaign and a media-oriented party to mark the 40th anniversary of the ship's maiden voyage May 27 were among ideas offered to give the ship more appeal to the nearly 12 million persons in the basin and the 8 million who visit Southern California annually, according to ICPR.

Part of the firm's presentation was a critical assessment of the Queen Mary as an attraction. The ship was termed "a money loser, an 81,000-ton deteriorating hulk, an object of political concern and attack, a source of continuous media criticism and, most important, a questionable attraction to a skeptical and indifferent public."

ICPR further observed, "The elegance, style and grandeur of the QM has been gutted, stripped and ravaged, primarily by Specialty Restaurants."

"THE SHIP HAS NO identity, no theme exploitation, no drama, no cohesiveness, no logical pedestrian traffic pattern. . .no vital entertainment appeal," ICPR states. "It does nothing and offers little."

An aggressive marketing, advertising and promotional program along with "increased coordination among existing lessees or introduction of a new lessee that realizes the importance of a comprehensive entertainment and exploitation program could turn the ship into "a major local and regional leisure-time attraction, a self-supporting profit center, a major Long Beach commercial operation, a worldwide promotional vehicle for the city of Long Beach."

William Thompson, vice president and general manager of Specialty Queen Mary Corp., reacting to ICPR's comment about Specialty Restaurants, said, "I don't know why they would make such a negative statement in a proposal where the city would come to us for funds."

Money for the ICPR ideas, if they were adopted, would come from Specialty, the Museum of the Sea and Pacific Southwest Airlines, which owns the ship's hotel.

While Thompson, some members of the City Council and other businessmen on the Queen Mary were aware of the ideas submitted by ICPR, Asst. City Manager Robert C. Creighton expressed concern lest the report be considered anything more than advisory.

HE DESCRIBED it as an entertainment concept offered at no cost or obligation to either the city or Wolff-Sesnon.

"If we wanted to have some type of promotional or entertainment program considered, we would have to invite any number of companies to submit ideas," he said.

ICPR officials appeared with Wolff at what Creighton defined as an "attorney-client" meeting at City Hall early in April. Copies of the plan have been passed around the Queen Mary, but members of the council who were not at the meeting with Wolff and ICPR said they had no knowledge of its contents.

Creighton said the meeting was one of a series of reports by Wolff on Queen Mary problems.

Hijacker rides same jet home

PARIS (AP) — A Turkish worker who hijacked a Turkish Airlines DC10 in an attempt to avoid expulsion from France left Saturday aboard the same aircraft, under police guard, for Istanbul.

A Turkish Embassy spokesman said he would be "dealt with by Turkish justice."

A French police spokesman said Zeki Ejder, 36, told them he hijacked the plane Friday night with 253 passengers aboard "to rejoin a woman he loves, who is under arrest in France."

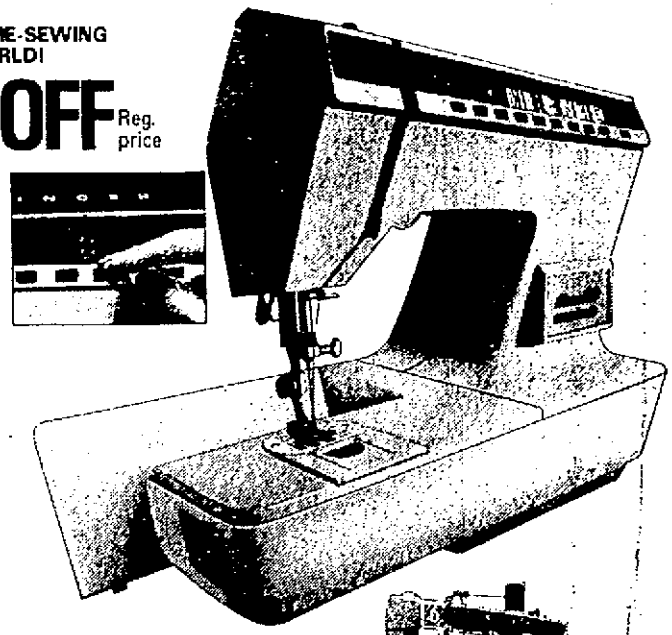

An illegal immigrant in 1974, Ejder was given a six-month suspended jail term this year for making death threats. After he was ordered expelled, two detectives put him aboard the plane that was hijacked.

Bold Forbes all the way

Wins Ky. Derby wire-to-wire

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "The little horse was just too game—I couldn't catch him," a somber and disappointed Braulio Baeza said Saturday after failing to guide odds-on favorite Honest Pleasure to victory in the 102nd Kentucky Derby before a crowd of 115,387.

The little horse was Bold Forbes, a dark bay cannonball that burst to the front and staved off Honest Pleasure's strongest challenge to win by a length.

Baeza, the country's top jockey in 1975, refused to blame his pre-game put-down by trainer LeRoy Jolley for his disappointing failure.

"I rode the horse—he didn't," the 36-year-old Panamanian said. "I followed his instructions.

"He told me to lay back in second or third during the early part of the race. I did just what he told me. But when I made my move turning into the stretch the little horse kept going.

"He surprised me. He is a gutty little horse."

An apparent freeze in relations between jockey and trainer of the Derby favorite surfaced 48 hours before the race when Jolley erased Baeza's name as rider in entering Honest Pleasure Thursday and wrote "no boy."

The act created considerable confusion before Jolley, after being pressured by Churchill Downs officials, announced Baeza as the rider.

Both Jolley and the horse's owner, Bertram Firestone, shrugged off the incident as an "oversight." Track insiders said the misunderstanding ran deeper than that.

There were reports that Baeza, who had ridden the colt to eight victories, might be replaced in the saddle for the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes, the remaining two jewels of racing's Triple Crown for three-year-olds.

But Jolley said after the race: "Baeza raced a perfect race. I have no complaints."

Asked if he wanted another shot at Bold Forbes, Baeza shrugged his shoulders.

"I guess so."

Asked if he expected to continue riding Honest Pleasure in the remaining major events, the impassive Panamanian again showed little emotion: "Who knows?"

Unconfirmed reports were that Jolley was seeking to lure the veteran Bill Shoemaker from the West Coast to take over Honest Pleasure's reins.

Many interpreted Jolley's "no boy" gesture as a means of rapping his jockey's knuckles for failing to follow orders in the Blue Grass Stakes a week ago when Honest Pleasure won unimpressively.

"He told me I should have run the horse faster at the start," Baeza said. "I thought we would win easily and I did not want to take too much out of the horse."

Jolley also indicated that Baeza, one of the world's wealthiest and most successful riders, was reluctant to follow orders, failing to listen to pre-race instructions.

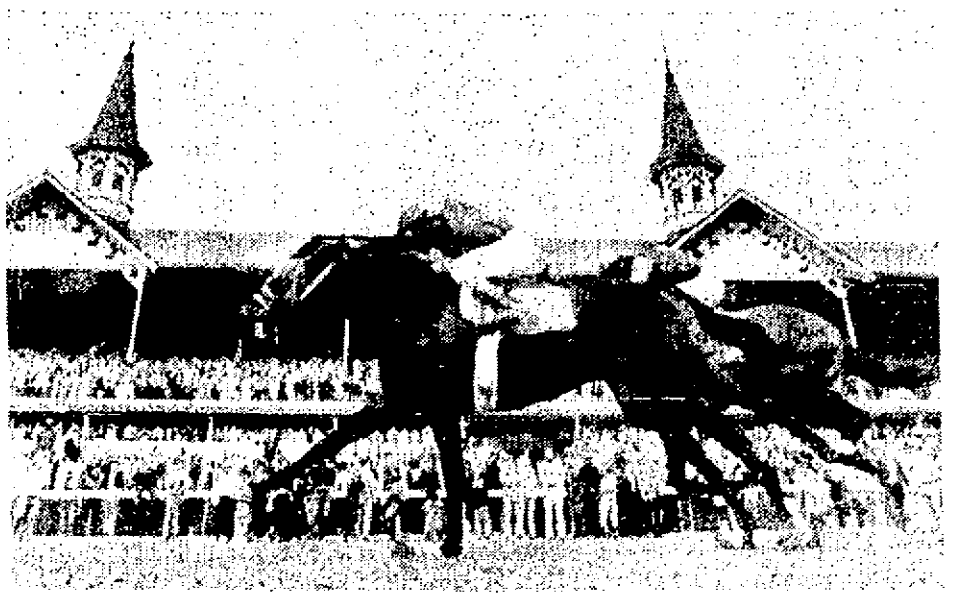

"I listen to what he says but I do not always do it," Baeza said. "I am on the horse. I must react to what develops."

Derby trainer saddles 3 winners in three states

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "When they played My Old Kentucky Home, I got goose pimples all over my body. Then I knew I was at the Derby."

The speaker was Laz Barrera, the Cuban-born trainer of Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes. Two other horses that Barrera trains also won Saturday—Life's Hope in the Illinois Derby at Sportsman's Park and Due Diligence in the Carter Handicap at Aqueduct.

Of the three, Barrera said, "Actually I thought my horse in Illinois had the best chance to win. Because, believe me, I know Honest Pleasure is a great horse. This was a great horse we beat today.

"Most guys are lucky to win one big horse race in a day. I am a very lucky man. I got three horses to win in three different states today."

USC Bush-whacks UCLA; ends 42-meet win streak

By JOHN DIXON
Staff Writer

Coach Jim Bush calculated that UCLA would have to win the 400-meter relay to defeat USC Saturday.

The Bruins gave it an Olympian try, hustling around the Drake Stadium plastic in 39.4, second swiftest time in the world. But USC ran 39.3, won the relay and won the meet, 83-62, guillotining UCLA's victory streak at 42.

"I thought 39.4 would win," Bush analyzed. "Considering the poor handoffs by both teams, the times were fantastic.

"We hoped to give our anchorman, Orlando Johnson, a five-yard lead on James Gilkes, but they were almost even. You can't beat Gilkes even. He's one of the best in the world."

While UCLA trimmed four-tenths from its quickest clocking, USC deadheated its best mark—and Trojan coach Vern Wolfe was smiling like a fellow with 1/16 of Howard Hughes.

"I was scared to death," Wolfe said. "We dropped the baton against California, you know, and our handoffs were so shaky in the Mt. San Antonio Relays that we finished third."

Wolfe's game plan was a quick getaway, "an emotional charge," in the early events.

He got it. A stunning upset in the shotput and the two-yard victory in the relay gave the Trojans an 11-3 advantage that was never threatened.

"This was a team victory," Wolfe insisted, "but give Mike Budincich some extra credit. He started it all."

Budincich shoved the shot 63-5¾, 17 inches beyond his lifetime best, to topple one of the few "sure things," Jim Neidhart of UCLA. Neidhart, a 65-1½ thrower, reached only 61-10¼.

"After that," Wolfe pointed out, "everyone caught fire.

"I was surprised at the score. I really thought it would come down to the mile relay."

Bush was surprised, too. His dope sheet read UCLA 74, USC 71.

What happened?

"I didn't think that our hurdlers would do such a bad job," Bush said with a frown. "It's the fault of the hurdles coach—and that's me."

UCLA's James Owens, with a 13.6 in the record book, was co-favored in the high hurdles, but his 13.9 scored only a point behind Trojans Fred Shaw (13.7) and Mike Johnson (13.8).

Grant Niederhaus of UCLA hadn't lost an intermediate hurdles race all season, but he was never a contender Saturday, finishing fourth in 51.6. Trojan Tom Andrews won in 49.4, fastest time in the world this year. Bruin Phil Mills snipped a second from his personal pinnacle and finished second in 50.1.

Gilkes and Ken Randle were point pacesetters for the Terrific Trojans.

Gilkes was caught in the starting blocks but rallied to win the 100 meters in 10.1. He was much the best in the 200 in 21.1—and he galloped the decisive leg of the 400 relay.

Randle was third in 21.2 as SC swept the 200, drubbed UCLA star Bennie Myles by six yards (45.8) in the 400, and kept the Trojans in contention in the 400 relay.

Freshman Conrad Suhr was UCLA's outstanding athlete.

Angels conquer daylight

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

CLEVELAND — It was 40 minutes before game time Saturday and the Angels' reserve infield was in the process of going through a warmup drill.

Going through the motions would be a more apt description. The quartet of Bill Melton, Billy Smith, Paul Dade and Adrian Garrett looked lethargic, lackadaisical and lost, perhaps epitomizing a team that had sustained six successive defeats.

Angel of Day

BRUCE BOCHTE went 3-for-3, drove in two runs and scored another as Angels tripped Cleveland, 6-1.

In the dugout, the high command seethed.

"Get those guys off the field before they run fans out of the park," screamed one.

"It was a disgrace," conceded coach Norm Sherry. "I was embarrassed."

The manager, Dick Williams, wasn't exactly enamored of what he was witnessing, either.

"I chewed some fannies, I can tell you that," he said. "I was so hot I sent one guy (Dade) to the bullpen because I didn't want to look at him. He's lucky that's as far as I sent him. It could have been Salt Lake."

Maybe that was what the Angels needed—a spark of some kind, any kind—for they went on to finally see daylight, in more ways than one.

With Nolan Ryan pitching five strong innings and Paul Hartzell, the surprise of the spring, pitching four even stronger ones, the Angels shed the darkness of the losing streak behind a 10-hit attack which delivered a 6-1 triumph over Cleveland.

Ageless Mota gives Dodgers 8th in OT

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Manny Mota, the ageless pinch hitter, capped a dramatic two-run rally in the bottom of the 10th inning Saturday night as the Dodgers scrambled from behind to overtake St. Louis, 4-3, for their eighth successive victory and third in a row over the Cardinals.

Dodger of day

MANNY MOTA singled home winning run in bottom of 10th as Dodgers beat Cardinals, 4-3.

The 38-year-old Mota rammed an Al Hrabosky pitch through the left side of the infield to score Steve Garvey from second base with the winning run. Moments before Garvey had rifled a double off the leftfield wall to get the Dodgers even at 3-3 after the Cardinals had gone in front in the top of the 10th.

Mike Marshall, who followed starter Tommy John, got the win. Marshall, incidentally, will be missing today. He's returning to Michigan State for, uh, some unfinished business. He will rejoin the club Tuesday in Chicago.

Beating Hrabosky, the self-proclaimed Mad Hungarian, was especially gratifying to the Dodgers.

Hrabosky had whipped them four times last year without a loss and had strung together six consecutive scoreless relief appearances before the 10th when Garvey doubled home Dusty Baker who was aboard on an error. Mota then drove home Garvey with the game-winner, Mota's 97th career pinch hit.

"I don't worry about how pinch hits I get," he said afterward, "only if I get one in the right situation. That's what counts.

WELLINGTON CHILDREN AND SISTERS VISIT ICEBREAKER

Icebreaker's crew gives, gets a day to remember

The 199 officers and crew of the Coast Guard icebreaker Burton Island —based in Long Beach — aren't likely to forget two recent calls to Wellington, New Zealand.

The first stop, en route to Antarctica, was during Christmas last year. The ship was delayed in port three days while repairs were made on a helicopter, and the city's newspapers, television and radio stations urged local residents to invite the Americans to their homes for Christmas. The offers from Wellington's citizens poured in.

"We had more invitations than we could fill," noted the ship's commanding officer, Capt. James Fournier of Fountain Valley.

DURING the next two months, while the Burton Island participated in Operation Deepfreeze 1976, the crew recalled the warm Wellington hospitality and decided to do something in return.

They held auctions, staged Reno nights and sold popcorn during their evening movies, raising $1,741 for the Wellington Home of Compassion, a home for deaf, retarded and crippled children. And as a salute to the U.S. Bicentennial, the ship's petty officers first class donated an extra $35 to boost the contribution to $1,776.

By radio, the Burton Island sent out an invitation for some of the home's children to come aboard when the ship returned to New Zealand Feb. 23.

With newsmen from the city's two TV stations and its newspaper on hand, 24 children aged 4 to 12 and six sisters from the home boarded the icebreaker. They were fed fried chicken with all the trimmings prepared and served by Mario Janajabab, Victor Santos, Danny Ray, Richard Sanchez, Tom Farrell and Merle Shiltz.

THEN followed a stem-to-stern ship's tour and a request from the children to see "where the captain lives." After a visit to the captain's quarters, they were taken to the flight deck and hoisted aboard a helicopter, where PO Dave LaGrange explained the complicated equipment.

"A few sisters were a mite apprehensive about leaving the children with the crewmen. But when they saw the children, their tummies full, cradled in crewmen's arms and sound asleep, they relaxed, convinced their charges were in good arms," Fournier said.

"One little girl—Julie—was particularly looked after by several big brothers. Soft brown eyes, pixie hair, dimples and a delightful smile. Julie is missing two arms and a leg, but she had what it took to win a sailor's heart," said the Burton Island's skipper.

After the tour the youngsters and sisters were taken back to the mess deck for a treat of ice cream and soft drinks.

"THE ENTIRE event, the fund-raising, the tour, the meal, everything, was handled by the enlisted personnel. It was their show from start to finish," Fournier said.

The day ended with the crewmen carrying the youngsters down the gangway to the waiting bus for home.

"There must have been an eye irritant in the air because some of the crew were pretty misty-eyed as the bus pulled out," said Fournier. "That was a day the Burton Island's entire crew will remember for a long, long time."

It's a relatively safe bet that the children will remember the day even longer.

La Jolla pair rescued from Baja beach

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A La Jolla couple was rescued from a narrow Baja California beach Saturday by a Coast Guard helicopter after their 45-foot ketch ran aground in stormy seas and heavy fog.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnson were picked up shortly after 7 a.m. on the rocky beach near Punta San Fernando, about 125 miles south of Ensenada.

The couple said they spent most of the night aboard the boat Summer Wind after it was washed onto the rocks.

Johnson, 56, a retired Navy warrant officer, said he had a few broken ribs and his wife had a sprained ankle and wrenched knee

He said they were on their way home from a four-month cruise in Mexican waters.

A radio operator on a passing merchant ship heard their distress call and passed it on to the Coast Guard.

Johnson said he would attempt to salvage the boat, valued at $85,000.

LB.-L.A. harbors 2nd in nation in arrivals

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

The Long Beach-Los Angeles port complex was second only to New York in the nation in the number of vessels arriving last year, according to the New York Maritime Association.

The two Southland back-to-back ports (considered by the U.S. Customs Service as a single port) counted 4,894 ship arrivals, while New York, which includes the ports in New Jersey, tallied 7,832 arrivals, accounting for 17.4 per cent of the national total.

The Long Beach-Los Angeles count was 10.8 per cent of the nation's total ship arrivals during 1975.

New Orleans was in third place with 4,700 arrivals, or 10.4 per cent.

Whirlybirds

Catalina Airlines, which operates seaplanes between Long Beach Airport and Avalon on Catalina Island, wants to fly two helicopters on a daily basis between the Catalina Terminal in San Pedro and the island.

Randy Bombard, 27-year-old general manager of the airline, who was born and raised on Catalina (as was his father, Doug), wants to fly the two whirlybirds from a landing pad in the San Pedro terminal parking lot to another landing pad near Pebbly Beach, a short distance from Avalon's city limits.

Bombard tells the Waterfront that the helicopters, unlike the seaplanes of Catalina Airlines and a competitive airline, Air Catalina, will be able to make night flights to and from the island.

Proposed fare for the 12-passenger helicopters would be $13.50 one way for an adult. Flight time would be 12 minutes, about the same as the fixed-wing seaplanes.

CATALINA AIRLINES was recently purchased by the Paul R. Bryles Wing and Helicopters Co., an international company operating both fixed and rotary-wing aircraft throughout the world.

Catalina Airlines apparently does not need approval of the California Public Utilities Commission to operate the helicopter service—something to do with flights over international waters over which the state has no jurisdiction.

But Long Beach/Catalina Cruises, which operates three 700-passenger vessels out of Long Beach and Avalon, wants to operate also out of the Catalina Terminal in Los Angeles Harbor. That company must obtain permission of the PUC because of a section in the state code relating to "vessels." The shipping lines operating boats between the mainland and the island and passing through international waters—those beyond the three-mile limit—must have PUC approval, but airlines flying over international waters do not.

HOW COME?

And what is a "vessel?"

If a seaplane takes off from land (Long Beach Airport) but lands on water (at Catalina), when does it become an aircraft and/or a vessel?

And if a seaplane takes off from the water and lands on water, as does Air Catalina operating out of the San Pedro Catalina Terminal and the island, when does it become a vessel or an aircraft, and are the operators subject to PUC regulation?

The PUC doesn't have a firm answer.

Mention of Randy Bombard brings to mind another related matter. His father, who for many years managed the Cove and Camp Agency for the Santa Catalina Island Co. and who is known to thousands of Southland pleasure boaters who visit the Two Harbors area at the Isthmus on Catalina, has purchased the agency from the island company.

Profits up

Pacific Far East Line, Inc., which last year was foundering in financially troubled seas, has reported a profit for the first quarter of this year in excess of $10 million.

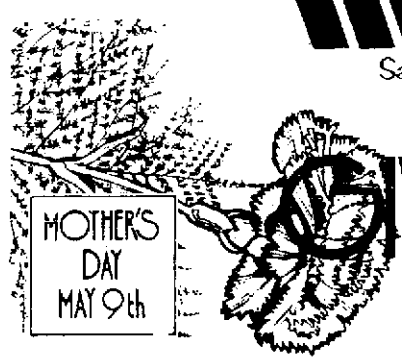

During the same period a year ago the company, which recently shifted its Southland base of operations from Los Angeles to Long Beach, reported a loss of $1.3 million or about $1.46 per share. The profit during the 1976 first quarter is about $11.22 per share.

Most of the profit resulted from a capital gain of $9 million from the sale last year of four PFEL ships in the Australian-U.S. West Coast trade to Farrell Line.

KAREEM SAYS THERE'LL BE SOME CHANGES MADE

NEW YORK (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar says the Lakers are in for a shakeup following their failure to qualify for the National Basketball Association playoffs this season, a shakeup that could include coach Bill Sharman as well as several players.

"There definitely have to be some changes," says Abdul-Jabbar, voted the NBA's Most Valuable player in his first season with the Lakers even though the club had a losing record and failed to make the playoffs.

"Jack Kent Cooke (the Lakers' owner) invited me to his home last week and we talked about the team's future," the 7-foot-2 center disclosed. "He said he definitely wants some new personnel on the club—but I'm pretty confident he doesn't want a new center.

"We had a lot of talent—it just wasn't coordinated well. We didn't work well together."

Does that mean Cooke wants a new coordinator—a new coach?

"Anything is possible," Abdul-Jabbar replied.

Sharman has been under attack for his failure to guide the Lakers into the playoffs this season following the off-season trade which saw Los Angeles send four young players to the Milwaukee Bucks for Abdul-Jabbar. There have been reports that when the Lakers regroup for next season, a new coach will be at the helm.

"We had all the problems any new group encounters," Abdul-Jabbar said. "We were never able to establish an identity as a team. We had trouble handling teams that had big guards. We had trouble getting a team on the floor that had good offensive and defensive balance."

Adbul-Jabbar, in New York to receive an award as the winner of a computer evaluation competition to determine the "most productive and most consistent" player in pro basketball, said he felt that personally 1975-76 may have been his best season ever. He led the league in rebounding and blocked shots and was second in scoring.

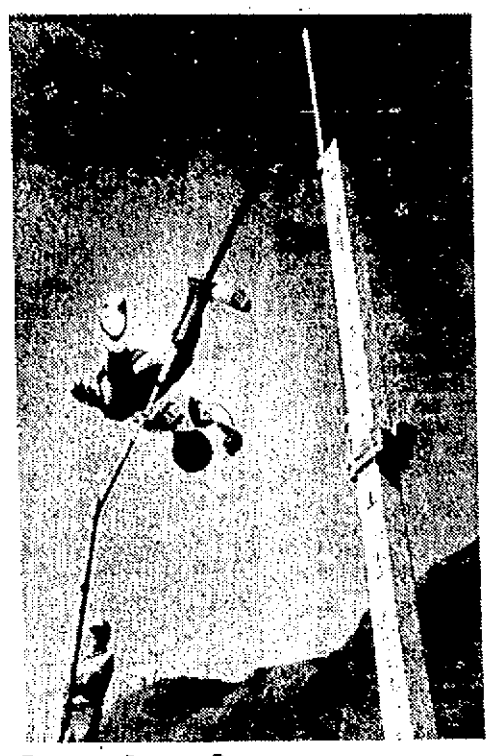

But except for Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers had problems. Playmaker Lucius Allen was inconsistent, and shooting guard Gail Goodrich did little else besides score. The forward situation was even more muddled—Cazzie Russell languished on the bench, rookie Dan Ford fizzled after a fast start and Sharman finally settled on Corky Calhoun and Cornell Warner, neither of whom was an offensive threat. The Lakers finished with a 40-42 record, fourth in the Pacific Division behind defending champion Golden State and two young clubs, Seattle and Phoenix.

"I think as an individual, I had an exceptional year," said Abdul-Jabbar, who averaged 27.7 points, 16.9 rebounds, 4.12 blocked shots and 5.0 assists per game.

"But it could have been a lot better. I was disappointed in that we didn't win as often as people expected, we didn't get any sellouts, we didn't build any interest in the team.

"I wouldn't say it was a very disappointing season—after all, I think we were better than most teams in the league. But we didn't win as often as most people expected.

"Mr. Cooke said he definitely wants quite a few changes in personnel, if they can be made."

'Gades win Metro track; Vikings 4th

By PAUL McLEOD
Staff Writer

As expected Bakersfield College captured its ninth consecutive Metropolitan Conference track title Saturday at Long Beach City College but the team win wasn't the expected runaway.

El Camino, which returned 27 men from Wednesday's prelims to match Bakersfield, stayed even with the Gades throughout the meet and may have reversed the unofficial 126-114 final had it not been for a foul on the last leap of the triple jump by Anthony Berry.

Pasadena finished third in a mild surprise, while Long Beach, which got victories from Gerald Peete (48.5 440) and Gary Jenkins (9.6 photo finish 100), and double wins by Dave Fuller (156-7 discus and 51-4 shotput), dropped to fourth after failing to finish the 440 relay and being disqualified from the mile relay.

With all events but the triple jump completed, El Camino unofficially trailed Bakersfield by just two points. Berry went 51-8 in his final attempt—a mark that would have gained him the blue ribbon and possibly El Camino a tie. Officials ruled Berry had fouled and Chris DeFrance of Bakersfield was declared the winner. Berry led the competition until DeFrance, who also won the long jump but finished in a disappointing tie for sixth with LBCC's David Oliver in the high jump at 6-4, leaped 50-7¼ on his final try.

Long Beach lost its bid for the title in the first running event of the day—the 440 yard relay. On the first exchange 110 yards into the race Leon Hawkins, pressed into service for the injured Ridgeway Robinson, failed to properly hand the baton to Gerald Peete, who dropped the late exchange. East Los Angeles won the event.

The Vikings slipped farther back in the mile relay when Peete was disqualified for jostling Pasadena's John Rudd. The official decision in the final crucial 220 yards, which touched off heated debate between athletes and coaches, marked the second relay this season that Peete was involved in a shoving match on the final turn. Earlier in the season Long Beach lost a mile relay during a dual meet against Bakersfield when a similar event occurred.

Official Walt Smith of Glendale ruled Saturday that Peete, who drew even with Rudd with a half lap to go, had impeded Rudd's progress. In the ensuing final yards, Rudd's retaliation was "only defensive," according to Smith, causing Peete to cross the finish line without the baton. Another claim of jostling on the backstretch between the two was not upheld.

In the pole vault El Camino's Charlie Brown bested Craig Wilson of Long Beach and Taimo Eskola of Pasadena, while establishing a conference record of 16-10¾. Wilson's pole shattered when he was halfway up on his first attempt at the height but he was uninjured.

Baird vaults 18-1; only good for 3rd

Long Beach State pole vaulter Don Baird set a school record and personal best by springing 18-1 Saturday afternoon, but placed third behind the Pacific Coast Club's Dan Ripley and Dave Roberts of the Florida track club at the San Jose Invitational.

Baird's previous pinnacle was 17-10, established last week in an all-comers meet at Long Beach State. Ripley and Roberts, the indoor and outdoor record holders, made overtures at 18-7 but were unsuccessful. (A related story on the meet appears on page S-5.)

At Baton Rouge, La., Harvey Glance tied the world record in the 100-meters with a 9.9 clocking, only the eighth man to post that time. At Tueson, an Arizona University quartet of Charles Nash, Dwayne Strozier, Elijah Jefferson and Ed Gilbreath equalled the fastest 400 meter relay clocking in the world this year with a time of 39.1 seconds during a meet against Arizona State.

Montreal pulls it out, 3-2

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Guy Lapointe, Jim Roberts and Yvon Lambert scored third-period goals as the Montreal Canadiens rallied from a 2-0 deficit to beat the New York Islanders 3-2 Saturday night and gain a 3-0 lead in National Hockey League semifinal series.

New York goaltender Glenn Resch made first period goals by Garry Howatt and rookie Bryan Trottier stand up until the Canadiens' offense got untracked and the Islanders defense disintegrated.

The third-period burst started at 3:29 when Lapointe connected from 10 feet. And 8:31 later, with Montreal's Serge Savard serving a tripping penalty, Roberts pounced on a missed Islanders' pass and sent a 25-footer past Resch to pull Montreal even. Then Lambert gave the Canadiens' their seventh consecutive playoff triumph with a short blast over Resch's shoulder.

Boston hosts Philadelphia tonight in the third game of their semifinal playoff.

U.S. preps nip USSR, 76-71

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

SANTA CLARA — It was hard to tell who was more embarrassed in the first half here Saturday night—the California High School All-Stars or the person who supplied the band with the wrong Soviet national anthem.

Fortunately, things took a turn for the better, both for the musicians and California's top prep basketball players who overcame a ragged start to record a 76-71 victory before a disappointing turnout of 2,001 at the bubble-domed Tosco Pavilion on the University of Santa Clara campus.

The teams meet again tonight at the Forum at 7.

The game was held up for nearly 25 minutes after the Soviets sat down obviously miffed midway through what was thought to be the USSR national anthem as played by a local high school pep band.

Someone finally found a correct recording, the music went on and so did the game, marking the first of six the Russian national junior team will play in the United States.

The Soviets led by as many as 13 points, 27-14, in the first half before the Californians, alternating a North and South unit for most of the game, were able to rally.

A team of Poly's Michael Wiley and Johnny Nash, Rich Branning of Marina, James Wilkes of L.A. Dorsey and Kiki Vandeweghe of Palisades was the one most responsible for getting the U.S. untracked.

Branning, the Notre Dame-bound sensation, made things happen, feeding Vandeweghe for a basket and a 51-53 California lead at 13:20 of the second half, the first time the crowd-favorites had led since the initial minute of the game.

"All we heard was how physical the Russians were supposed to be," said Nash who scored four points. "Once we settled down and played as a unit, things took a turn for the better."

Wiley, who was co-CIF Southern Section player of the year with his teammate Nash also scored four points and said he was surprised at how well the Russians shot.

"I thought we'd get pushed around a lot more than we did."

Ten of the 12 California players scored, paced by Cal-bound Doug True of College Park High in Pleasant Hills who netted 16 points. Vandeweghe and Long Beach State signee Donnie Martin each had 12.

Martin, a superb leaper, was only 6 for 19 from the field, alternating at point guard with Branning.

The Russians, who appeared to tire in the late going, were paced by 6-7 Nikolai Fesenko who scored 23 of his team's 41 first-half points. Fesenko, who sank 11 of 13 first-half shots, finished with a game-high 23 but cooled off considerably in the later stages, especially after having two shots blocked by Redondo's Gig Sims.

CALIFORNIA (76): Branning 3-5 2-2 8, Martin 6-9 0-0 12, Nash 2-5 0-0 4, Sims 2-5 3-3 6, Wiley 2-4 0-0 4, Rumble 1-3 0-0 2, Wilkes 2-4 1-2 5, Tarkanian 0-3 0-0 0, Trott 1-2 0-0 2, Vandeweghe 5-9 2-2 12, Wise 2-7 0-1 4, Thom 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 31-57 7-10—76.

Strings win net opener

OAKLAND (AP) — Rosie Casals and Dianne Fromholtz won the night's final match to bring the Los Angeles Strings from behind to a 22-19 victory over the Golden Gaters in a World Team Tennis season opener Saturday.

The L.A. women swept the final five games against Francois Durr and Betty Stove as the Gater pair failed to hold service even once during the set. Stove flew in from a South Carolina tournament only five hours before she was due at the Oakland Arena.

Fromholtz, a left-hander, beat Durr in singles 6-2, and Durr failed to hold service through that entire set.

Casals and Vijay Amritraj downed Frew McMillan and Stove in mixed doubles 6-4.

Erving sinks 45 for Nets

DENVER (AP) — Julius Erving hit a 20-foot jumper at the buzzer to cap a brilliant 45-point performance Saturday night, lifting the New York Nets to a 120-118 triumph over the Denver Nuggets in the opening game of their American Basketball Association championship series.

The Nets, going almost exclusively to Erving in the closing minutes, pulled out the victory after Denver rookie center Marvin Webster had stuffed home a missed shot with four seconds left.

The Nets' triumph came before an aroused partisan crowd of 19,034, a record for an ABA game.

Game two of the series will be played here Tuesday night.

Rain washes out Orioles and A's

BALTIMORE (AP) — Saturday's American League game between the Baltimore Orioles and the Oakland A's was postponed because of rain.

No makeup date for the rainout was set. A doubleheader already is scheduled for Sunday as the windup of the series.

DODGERS WIN—

"I just try to get a good pitch and to make contact."

Pinch hitting is a tough art anytime. But against Hrabosky it's tougher yet.

h"I was watching him from the bench," Mota said. "He's different. Awfully quick. I think I might have even closed my eyes when I hit it."

Maybe so, but the ball had eyes, bounding between shortstop Kessinger and third baseman Vic Harris and into leftfield.

The Dodgers had to come from behind all evening. The Cardinals scored twice in the second on three successive singles and an error by shortstop Rick Auerbach.

John, of all people, followed walks to Steve Yeager and Auerbach with a run-scoring single in the bottom of the second and then Garvey singled home Ted Sizemore in the sixth with the tying run.

St. Louis broke the tie in the top of the 10th when former Dodger Willie Crawford's sacrifice fly off Marshall made it 3-2. The win streak is the longest in the majors this season and it matches the Dodgers' longest of 1975, a streak that began, ironically, on the exact day as the current spree—April 21.

"That's the day I started taking the lineup card out to the umpires before the game," said a smiling Mota. "I figured maybe it would change our luck a little. We weren't winning then, remember?"

Asked if he would be taking the card out before tonight's game, he smiled again and said:

"What do you think?"

DODGER DOPE: When Ed Goodson opened in leftfield Saturday night it marked his first ever appearance in the outfield. He played only first and third while with the Giants and Braves. It was the first time he started anywhere since last September . . . Ron Cey and Steve Garvey took seven and six-game hitting streaks into Saturday night's game . . . The Cardinals' Reggie Smith will return to St. Louis today to have his injured left shoulder examined. He suffered the injury April 17 when he ran into the wall in St. Louis . . . Joe Ferguson missed Saturday night's game with a groin pull. He's also slowed with a slightly sprained ankle . . . Pitching the final game of the series and the home stand today at 1 p.m. will be Doug Rau 2-0 and Lynn McGlothen 2-0 . . . The Dodgers leave Monday for a 12-game trip to Chicago, Philadelphia, St Louis and Pittsburgh, then return to Dodger Stadium May 17-18 for two games with the Reds

How they scored

CARDINALS SECOND
Simmons singled. Anderson singled. Cruz singled, scoring Simmons, the runners taking second and third on the throw to the plate. Rudolph was safe when Auerbach booted his grounder for an error. Anderson scoring. Rich and grounded to Cey who threw Cruz out at the plate. Forsch grounded into a double play. Two runs (earned), three hits, one error.

DODGERS SECOND
With two out, Yeager and Auerbach walked. John singled, scoring Yeager. Cruz grounded out. One run, one hit.

DODGERS SIXTH
Sizemore and Baker walked. Garvey singled, scoring Sizemore. Baker taking third. Rasmussen replaced Forsch on the mound for the Cardinals. Cey popped out. Goodson took a third strike. Yeager flied out. One run, one hit.

CARDINALS TENTH
With Marshall pitching, Hunsicker batted for Kessinger. Sacrificed. Crawford hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Hunsicker. Simmons grounded out. One run, one hit.

DODGERS TENTH
With Hrabosky pitching and one out, Baker was safe on Rudolph's error. Garvey doubled, scoring Baker. Cey was walked intentionally. Muñoz batted for Burke and singled to left, scoring Garvey. Two runs (one earned), two hits, one error.

Cerritos rips OCC, clinches tie

Shortstop Frank Vilorio cracked out four hits, drove in three runs and stole two bases as Cerritos College clinched a tie for its fifth South Coast Conference baseball title by pounding Orange Coast College, 13-4, Saturday on the winners' field.

Trailing 3-2 going into the bottom of the sixth inning, the Falcons exploded for seven runs on five hits and three stolen bases to hike their conference record to 12-3. Cerritos now leads Mt. San Antonio and Santa Ana by 2½ games with two games remaining.

Although touched for eight hits, Pat McGehee went the distance while improving his record to 8-1. He struck out five and walked one batter.

Wilkins seeking only satisfaction

"I figure I could be out making a lot of money and getting ulcers, but this is what I want to do. Material things, financial security and so on really aren't important."— Mac Wilkins.

Seismologists concerned about recent tremors along the San Andreas Fault shouldn't worry.

It's just all those superstuds up in San Jose throwing their weight around.

"There's probably nowhere in the world that has so many top athletes around," says Mac Wilkins, who checks in at 6-4 and 255 pounds. "Especially throwers."

If a world weight-throwing record doesn't belong to an athlete training around San Jose, it just has or soon will again. Notables of the shotputting set include Brian Oldfield (pro) and Al Feuerbach (amateur).

Last weekend at Mt. San Antonio College Wilkins took the discus record away from a crosstown cop, John Powell, who set it a year ago at Long Beach State, where Wilkins will compete today in the Long Beach Invitational.

MAC WILKINS
Wants to improve

MAC MAURICE WILKINS, 25, is a relatively recent arrival at the mecca of muscle. He had been a resident of Eugene, Ore., where he was born and attended the University of Oregon, although he spent much of his youth in Portland and Tacoma, Wash.

"I came down about the middle of December," he says by phone. "I decided the best thing for me to do was come to San Jose for the training environment, with all these top athletes here. Also, the weather is much better."

"We don't see each other all the time. There's a group toward the west side of town and they hang out together. Another group lives and trains toward the east side. We all lift weights at the YMCA.

"Actually, I don't see John Powell that much . . . probably three or four times since I moved here. He wasn't at Mt. SAC. I was hoping he would be, but he has his plan for the year and I have mine. We're just going to have to stick by our training schedules and see who has the best idea and who's the best thrower."

WITH SO MANY muscles bulging around every corner, San Jose bars would seem to be well stocked in bouncers. But most of the athletes are not interested in employment during this Olympic year.

Powell has taken an eight-month leave of absence from the police department; Wilkins taught high school in Eugene last year but is now surviving off his savings while sharing an apartment with Vince Pluckebaum, an aspiring decathlete.

"I'm still hanging on by the threads," Mac says. "I'm strictly training and that's pretty much a fulltime job. In actual physical work I train 5 to 7 hours a day, and the mental part of the program is just as important."

Wilkins' program includes weightlifting, throwing, running and swimming.

"I've found it helpful. It seems to loosen me up, stretch me out and get me balanced better."

WILKINS' LIFESTYLE might seem unproductive to straight society. He has never been married, drives a '63 Volkswagen—the only car he has ever owned—and is not interested in any career other than throwing the discus.

He admits that his may be "a counter-culture way of life.

"But I just want to do the things I feel are important to me, and do them to the best of my ability. I've come to the conclusion that it's not important what you're doing but how you do it, as long as it's satisfying, rewarding and challenging.

"I figure I could be out making a lot of money and getting ulcers, but this is what I want to do. Material things, financial security and so on really aren't important."

WILKINS EXPERIENCED only a brief thrill when he threw 226 feet, 11½ inches last week, surpassing Powell's effort by 3½ inches, and he is not particularly turned on by the prospect of an Olympic medal.(Editor's Note: Wilkins added more than 6 feet to his world record Saturday with a throw of 232 feet, 6 inches at the San Jose Bicentennial Invitational.)

"When I made the throw I thought, well, that's pretty good. I didn't have any idea it was that far—maybe 217, 220. Then I saw them put the tape down and it looked like it was going to be over 69 meters and I got pretty excited. Then when I saw it was definitely over 69 meters, 10 (centimeters) I was screaming and yelling.

"But I don't think in terms of throwing world records or winning Olympic medals. Mainly, I was very pleased that I had improved, and the record happened to go. So it was four inches farther than anyone else. That was not the significant thing for me at the time. It seemed more like another step on the way to what I want to do.

"I can't say what I want to do in feet and inches. I just want to keep improving until I feel I'm doing my best."

Wilkins reflects a moment, then adds:

"Of course, if it had been one inch shorter than the record, it wouldn't have been quite as exciting."

No roadblock too 'Major' for Johnny to overcome

Everything Johnny Majors touches has turned to gold, so when the 40-year-old University of Pittsburgh football coach says this may be the year that the once-fabled Panthers hit the jackpot—a major bowl game—it behooves one to pay attention.

From the beginning, at age 8 when he led the entire town of Huntland, Tenn. (pop. 300) in a World War II scrap iron drive, Majors has been a winner.

He even launched his dad, Shirley, on a successful football coaching career. The elder Majors inaugurated football at Huntland High in 1949, then Johnny came along to be his tailback.

"We never lost a game in my three years," boasted Johnny Majors, "and for the nine years that his sons played tailback, dad had a 70-1-1 record."

Johnny is a member of one of the most famous football families in America. He and brothers Bill and Bobby were stars at the University of Tennessee. Joe starred at Florida State and Larry played for their father when Shirley left Huntland for University of the South.

After Johnny tailbacked three seasons for dad at Huntland, Joe, Bill and Larry spent two successive years' apiece as Shirley's bread-and-butter runners.

BUT JOHNNY was the biggest star. An all-America tailback at Tennessee, he led the Vols to a 10-0 record in 1956, No. 2 national ranking and a trip to the Sugar Bowl. He also finished second to Paul Hornung in Heisman Trophy balloting.

This year he was selected as one of 11 members of the Quarter Century All-Star team — the best players in the Southeastern Conference during the last 25 years. His name still is splattered throughout the Tennessee record book.

Johnny's great grasp of football further emerged when he turned to coaching. Following graduation, he became an assistant at his alma mater, moved to Mississippi State, then in '63 to Arkansas as Frank Broyles' defensive back coach, where he stayed until he got the Iowa State head job in '68.

Majors took downtrodden Iowa State to two bowl games in five years and after steering the Cyclones to the Liberty Bowl in '72, he went to Pitt.

The Panther turnaround was dramatic. His three-year record of 22-13-1 is the best Pitt has done since Jock Sutherland's days of the '30s. Pitt's nine-year record prior to Majors' appointment was 28-60.

EACH SEASON at Pitt was a Panther milestone. In '73, the Panthers had their first winning season in 11 years and their first bowl bid (Fiesta) in 17 years. For his job of resurrection, Johnny was voted Coach of the Year by the Football Writers' Association.

In '74, Pitt attendance jumped 10,000 (to 42,000) over the '73 average and the Golden Panther Booster Club grew from 300 to more than 2,000 members.

Last season, the Panthers were 8-4, including a 33-19 Sun Bowl win over Kansas, and season ticket sales had doubled since Majors' arrival.

"I think we acquired the confidence and poise last season that may put us in the top 10 and into a major bowl this season," said Majors Friday, during a 24-hour Southland visit on behalf of the American Football Coaches Association and the Tea Council of U.S.A.

"We became men last year. We lost to Penn State, 7-6, in our final game, but (Joe) Paterno's team crossed our 50 only twice. That was the first time that I felt I had arrived at Pitt. The big guy wasn't kicking us; we were doing the kicking.

"We beat Notre Dame, 34-20, and that was the biggest Pittsburgh win in 20 or 30 years."

WHAT IS the secret to turning around a sick football program?

"There's no secret," replied Johnny, modestly. "Every product has something to sell. Both Iowa State and Pittsburgh were uniquely similar in that both had long losing histories. Both also needed shaking up.

"When I first got to Iowa State all I heard was that it was a coaches' graveyard, and I almost believed it myself. But I had wanted to be a head coach, so I remembered what my father had drilled into me — that the worst thing to do was to make excuses.

"I was very low at first when I was at Iowa State, but I told myself that I was better off then before.

"Iowa State was the last place in the world that I ever thought I'd coach and Pitt probably was the second to last. Being from the South, I had expected to live and die there. Oh, I did get interviewed for the Vanderbilt job, but that situation wasn't for me.

"Iowa State was in Big 10 country, but I sold people there on the idea of the Big 8's strength in football. After all, Big 8 teams had beaten Big 10 opponents 80 per cent of the time. A percentage of the people I was recruiting believed it."

"IT WAS TOUGH to put a staff together at Iowa State because all my friends were in the South, so it took me a month to assemble a staff. My coaches were all 24 to 26 years old, and they busted their tails. I took the whole group with me when I went to Pittsburgh."

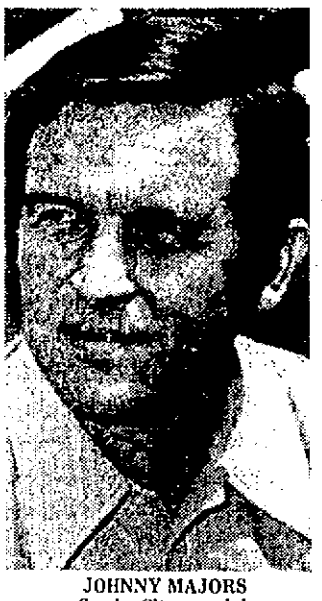

With Paterno at Penn State, isn't Pitt recruiting difficult?

"No place is easy. USC might have climate, tradition and the athletes, but in western Pennsylvania we have some of the best football players in the country. They're not as fast as Southern Cal kids, but they're tough.

"We are strong now in western Pennsylvania, while Paterno is strong in the East around Philadelphia. But there are enough good football players in western Pennsylvania to always have a winning team.

"At first, I was on a champagne diet with a beer allowance at Pitt. We played some tough ones right away, like USC and Oklahoma, and I had only 19 scholarships the first year. But to play big time, you must have pride, and to get that I went out and spent money for equipment, uniforms and a decent locker room."

MAJORS HAS a lot of pride in his Heisman Trophy candidate, Tony Dorsett.

JOHNNY MAJORS
Smoky City messiah

"Dorsett is the best running back I've ever seen," he declared, emphatically. "Personally, I think the only one in his class is O.J. Simpson. Tony has a burst of speed rare in running backs. He has the two all-time highest rushing games against Notre Dame — 303 yards last year and 209 as a freshman."

Your name was mentioned for the SC and UCLA posts. Were you interested?

"Both are fine jobs, but I made no pitch for either, no matter what might have been written. Besides, both jobs were filled quickly."

Have you ever considered pro football, like so many other successful college coaches?

"Yes, but not seriously now. I was interviewed by a pro club three years ago, about the time I took the Pitt job, but my heart still was in college football. I don't detest college recruiting yet. When that time comes, who knows?

"But I want to coach until I retire for good. Football and the contact is the greatest sport of all. There was nothing like breaking a tackle and escaping from everybody.

"Now, there's nothing like sustaining a winner over a period of time and coaching a national championship team.

"I get edgy in the off-season in my office, but on the first day of practice, the adrenalin flows again."

Of such juices are bowl bids won and national championships made.

A hit in the park, but not in clubhouse

Reggie Jackson his own biggest fan

By JOHN LINDBLOM
Ridder News Service

Long ago, when black-white room-sharing arrangements in baseball were considered unique, pitcher Chuck Dobson spent almost a season rooming with Reggie Jackson.

But finally, Dobson, one of the most popular and best-liked members of the Oakland A's, could endure it no longer. The separation came not because of racial differences, but class distinction. Jackson's....

Dobson moved out when he no longer could bear having Jackson, then in the early stages of his career, tell him: "Chuck, you don't know how tough it is to be a superstar."

Several times since then baseball fans have learned there's just no living with the egotisic, moody, unpredictable Reggie Jackson.

The Baltimore Oriole management recently learned. Charlie Finley, Oakland club owner, trailed Jackson to Baltimore weeks ago, but Reggie has refused to report until he gets terms exactly to his liking. He changed his ways a little Friday, reporting, but still not signing.

After the A's moved West from Kansas City eight years ago, Jackson never quite delivered on the promise he brought with him. But, in a sense, he delivered much more. If he didn't make it happen on the field the way that Mays did, he made it happen in the locker room.

The wisened Leonard Koppett of the New York Times once opined that Jackson was the "sportswriter's best friend" because he could always be counted on to provide a story. The writers have voted him Most Valuable Palyer only once. But if there had been a balloting for Most Valuable Mouth, Reggie would win unanimously every year.

Even in 1970, when Jackson had what was considered a poor season (23 homers, 66 RBI), Reggie stole the show and the headlines. His running verbal battle with Finley that year was a classic.

When Finley threatened to banish him to the minor leagues to brush up on his hitting, the writers knew they could count on Reggie to provide the anticipated response.

"Did that SOB really say that?" Reggie raged. "Well, damn it, I won't go! I will never go!" He didn't.

One can remember Jackson's triumphant trot around the bases at Oakland Coliseum that year after hitting a pinch-hit grand slam homer, topped off by a whispered obscenity toward Charlie's personal box that doubtlessly stung Finley's ears even if he could never hear it.

...And how Finley humbled him for the only time he ever really could a few days later by forcing him to sign a prepared apology.

Jackson coined names like "heat-bringers" for pitchers and "pole hitters" for sluggers.

When he slumped, he was, "The bad luck buzzard who can't kill nothin' and nothin' won't die."

He was the non-hitting, non-fielding, non-uniformed star—dramatically, anyway—of the A's '72 World Series triumph when he hobbled pathetically around the batting cage on crutches after being sidelined in the A.L. playoffs.

When the action lulled during the '74 Series, Jackson spiced up the scene by censuring a magazine story written by Murray Olderman by informing him before a huge crowd of writers that he could anticipate "getting his mail by gopher."

REGGIE JACKSON
Legend in own mind

Often during football season, he made himself obvious to the Oakland Raider throng by pacing up and down the sidelines, an attention-getting ploy because he could certainly have seen the game better from another vantage point.

All of this doubtlessly grated on the sensitivities of his teammates. He had clubhouse brawls with Billy North and Mike Epstein. Sal Bando frequently let it be known that he considered Jackson immature.

Following A's fifth consecutive division title last year, a victory party Reggie staged at his Berkeley home can be best remembered for the A's who didn't come. Only Billy Williams and Claudell Washington were among the guests.

It was their way of letting Reggie know they preferred not to be in his company. But the same guys would admit today they're not so sure of that anymore.

Without Reggie, they're not so sure there'll be any more victory parties.

Young refused to play clown

By Bill Lyon
Knight News Service

LANDOVER, Md. — Muhammad Ali wants bad burlesque, shabby vaudeville, Keystone Kops, slapstick, pie-in-the-face hilarity.

Jimmy Young gave him Shakespeare instead and almost turned Ali into Hamlet.

They had figured this would be another farce, one more million-dollar-plus night for Ali against some dupe who would be willing to be humiliated in return for maybe one-twentieth what Ali gets.

Pay the stiff 75 grand, let Ali taunt him and embarrass him, and then ship him back to obscurity. He'll go through the dough quick enough, but he'll have his scrapbooks, and one day he can tell his grandchildren that he once fought for the heavyweight championship of the world.

JIMMY YOUNG
Can't believe decision

But Jimmy Young shrugged off Ali's tired, worn psychological ploys. He was not intimidated, not cowed.

But, for nine rounds, he was in awe. By the time the 10th started, the 27-year-old Philadelphian realized Ali could not knock him out. You could see the confidence begin to swell in Jimmy Young.

If won the 10th, he won the 11th, crisply double left hooking to Ali's head and body. Young was fast, nimble, quick on his feet. Certainly the quickest fighter Ali has seen in several years.

Ali has been fattening up on Chuck Wepners and Jean-Pierre Coopmans, who have all the mobility of a stone pillar. Moreover, they are easy targets for Ali's cobra jabs. But Young was slipping Ali's heavy blows, ducking them, getting inside. He made Ali, who was obviously, puffily overweight, look lumbering and wild, far from the graceful fighter we have come to expect.

By the 14th, Young was putting together his own combinations. He jolted Ali with hard rights, making him blink in pain. Just as you could see the confidence growing in Jimmy Young's face, you could see doubt, bewilderment etched in Ali's face, a face that usually shows only contempt.

About this time the crowd had begun to turn, too. It was ironic. Young had been variously identified as Jimmy Jones and Jimmy Carter by some spectators before the fight, such was his lack of identity.

When he had entered the ring, it was to thunderous silence. Well, they never do cheer for the sacrificial lamb, do they?

But after the 10th round, when it had become obvious that Jimmy Young would not play the fool, would not sacrifice himself, his pride, was an unwilling martyr, the crowd began to pull for him. Ali looked startled. This was heresy.

Yet he could do nothing about it. He tried, desperately in the 15th round, to knock out Young. He couldn't reach him. He tried rope-a-dope, he tried letting Young pound at his arms, he tried two rounds of dancing and jabbing, he tried right hand leads, he tried talking to Young. None of it worked.

Ali was out of shape, and, by his own admiss ion, he badly underestimated Young. A lot of us were guilty of that.

This was a night that Muhammad Ali was ripe for the taking. I think he escaped only because of his considerable reputation.

It wasn't fear in Jimmy Young's eyes at the start; it was more respect, caution.

"I was being careful at the start," Young said later. "Maybe too careful."

Ali had predicted after the weigh-in that Young would be tense.

"This is my 18th title fight," Ali said. "It's old stuff for me, just another night. But Jimmy Young, this is the first time he'll see all those people, all those lights. It's a chance of a lifetime for him. He's gonna be nervous."

He was. But, unlike most of the others, Young did not run scared.

Reds' homers sink Montreal

CINCINNATI (AP) — Homers by Dan Driessen and Johnny Bench, his third in two days, and the eight-strikeout pitching of Don Gullett gave the Cincinnati Reds a 6-1 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday night.

Gullett (2-0) with both victories over Montreal, gave up a home run to Pete Mackanin and two hits to Bombo Rivera before being lifted in the eighth inning. Pat Zachary pitched the ninth for the Reds.

Cincinnati broke the game open with three runs in each the fourth and fifth innings, chasing former Lynwood High graduate Don Carrithers (1-2).

Carrithers held Cincinnati hitless for three innings, then Dan Driessen hit his first homer of the season to open the fourth.

Carrithers struck out Bench, then gave up doubles to Mike Lum and George Foster for the second run of the inning. Gullett, helping his own cause, lined a single through the box to score Foster and the Reds went ahead 3-0.

Mackanin blasted his homer in the fifth, his second of the year and the first run given up by Gullett this season. But Bench upped the margin when he clouted a three-run homer in the fifth.

Parker, Zisk hit homers to rip S.D.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dave Parker drove in five runs with a pair of homers and two singles and Richie Zisk added four RBI with a double and his first home run of the season to spark the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 10-6 victory over the San Diego Padres Saturday night.

Although the Pirates were outhit 15-9, they took their second consecutive decision from San Diego after losing seven of their previous eight games.

Pirates starter John Candelaria was ripped for 11 hits in 6⅔ innings but picked up the win with relief help from Larry Demery, Ramon Hernandez and Bob Moose.

Tito Fuentes collected three hits and Willie Davis had two but San Diego never could catch up after falling behind 6-0 in the first four innings.

ANGELS WIN—

It was also their first daylight success after five previous reversals, reinforcing the theory that sooner or later everyone earns a place in the sun.

Bruce Bochte, the first baseman who was a perfect 3-for-3 with two RBI and a run scored, was beginning to wonder, however.

"We were basically horsefeathers," he said of the team's performance during the streak, which reminded him of the pratfall of 1975.

"Those thoughts crossed my mind every other minute," he admitted. "But this team is going to hit. We're just a little late getting started, that's all—about 17 games late."

Bochte helped ease the burden for Ryan and then Hartzell, putting the exclamation point behind a three-run first inning assault against Pat Dobson with a two-run single.

Melton capped the offensive display with a solo home run off Don Hood in the fifth.

Ryan, who has achieved half of the six Angel victories this season, developed a blister on his index finger and was removed over mild protests after five innings during which he struck out six, walked three and yielded three hits and the only Tribe run.

"I really didn't want to come out but they were pretty persistent," said Ryan, who has permitted only 14 hits and six earned runs in 38 innings for a 1.42 ERA.

But when Hartzell, the phenomenal 22-year-old who earned a position on the varsity this spring with a grand total of two months of professional experience, replaced Ryan there was scarcely a drop in class.

Hartzell rendered the Indians inept the final four rounds, yielding but two hits, and was credited with his first save.

Hartzell has not permitted a run of any kind in his last five appearances, which span 16.2 innings.

"It may look easy but it's really not," Hartzell smiled, trying to forget a slight embarrassment of his own.

With two out in the Angels' ninth, Hartzell grabbed his glove and was halfway to the mound before realizing that it takes three outs to retire a side these days.

"I was hoping nobody caught that," he said sheepishly.

Williams caught other Hartzell traits—all of which he liked.

"He was the story of the day," the manager applauded. "And he could be the story of the year. He's a job to behold."

Forty-five minutes after the game the manager was still attired in his traveling greys.

"It's been so long," he explained. "I want to savor this one awhile."

How they scored

ANGELS FIRST

With one out, Remy singled to center. Bonds bunted toward third for a hit, Remy taking second. Melton walked, loading the bases. Remy scored and the other runners moved up on a wild pitch. Bochte singled to center, scoring Bonds and Melton. Lahoud struck out. Chalk struck out. Three runs, three hits, one left.

ANGELS FOURTH

Bochte walked. Lahoud flied to right. Chalk singled to center, Bochte taking third and Chalk second on the throw. Herrmann was walked intentionally, loading the bases. Ramirez forced Herrmann, Bochte scoring and Chalk taking third. Torres singled to right, Chalk scoring and Ramirez advancing to third. Hood replaced Dobson. Ramirez was caught stealing home. Two runs, two hits, one left.

INDIANS FOURTH

Carty doubled to right. Hendrick grounded to third. Lowenstein singled to center, Carty stopping at third. Lowenstein stole second. Spikes grounded to short, Carty scoring. Ashby grounded to the mound. One run, two hits, one left.

ANGELS FIFTH

Heavyweight bout

Giants score brawling win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chris Speier's triple and Bobby Murcer's single in the eighth broke a 1-1 tie and triggered San Francisco to a 3-1 victory over Chicago Saturday in a game marred by a pair of bench-clearing brawls that resulted in the ejections of the Cubs' Jose Cardenal and Bill Madlock.

The Cubs were ejected after two separate incidents were triggered by Jim Barr's inside pitches.

Barr was warned by plate umpire Ed Runge for brushing back Cardenal — the warning bringing an automatic $50 fine.

While the Giants were disputing the call, Barr and Cardenal exchanged words and the Cubs' outfielder threw his batting helmet at the Giants hurler, who had to be restrained by teammates.

Cardenal was then thrown out of the game.

Bill Madlock then was struck by a Barr pitch and he started toward the mound. Giants' catcher Marc Hill stepped between the combatants, but Madlock reached around the catcher and hit Barr in the face with a right hook.

In the ensuing melee, Hill was decked by Madlock and an enraged Giant outfielder Gary Matthews plowed through several Cubs, landing punches. The hardest blow decked George Mitterwald.

When order was restored for the second time, Madlock was allowed to take first base briefly and Barr remained on the mound.

But after discussion, the umpires ejected Madlock, who protested loudly while pointing to his left shoulder, the spot where Barr's pitch hit him.

Rick Monday's double, Cardenal's grounder and Madlock's single gave Chicago a 1-0 lead in the first.

The Giants tied the score off Ray Burris in the fourth. Bobby Murcer led off with a double, went to third on Matthews' grounder and scored on Willie Montanez' single.

Houston lead to Armstrong

HOUSTON (AP) — Wally Armstrong, given second life by the rain that washed out Thursday's play, fired a 69 to establish a one-stroke lead Saturday halfway through the $200,000 Houston Open Golf Tournament.

Armstrong, 29, a non-winner in his third full season of tour activity, broke out of a fourway tie to gain the top spot with a 36-hole total of 136, eight-under-par.

"I'd hurt my left wrist—a sprain—in New Orleans," Armstrong said. "A few days ago I was seriously considering withdrawing. I'm real glad we had the rain-out. It gave me an extra day to rest."

PGA Tour officials had to schedule a double round, 36 holes, for today and cut to 50—as opposed to the usual 70—in order to insure a finish today. This annoyed a number of tour players and sent some of the game's big guns down the road, the victims of the low cut.

Among them were Arnold Palmer, who failed to qualify for the fifth time this season with a second round 75 and a 146 total. Double winners Johnny Miller and Ben Crenshaw also missed. Crenshaw had 77-151 and Miller 74-147.

Just one stroke off Armstrong's lead was Hubert Green, who lashed his way through the tricky winds for a 68 and a 137 total.

Rookie George Burns, Barry Jaeckel and Forrest Fezler, one of three who shared the first round lead with Armstrong, were at 138. Jaeckel shot a 69, Burns 70 and Fezler 71.

Lee Trevino, still seeking his first victory ever in his native Texas, shot a 70 and headed a large group at 140.

Braves drop doubleheader

ATLANTA (AP) — Tim McCarver and Terry Harmon ripped run-scoring singles in the fourth inning and the Philadelphia Phillies held on for a 4-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves to sweep a twi-night doubleheader Saturday and send the Braves to their sixth consecutive defeat.

The Phillies won the opener 3-0 as major league home run leader Mike Schmidt drilled his 12th of the season. It also was Atlanta's third shutout loss in a row, one short of the major league record.

The Braves snapped their string of scoreless innings at 35 in the nightcap when Earl Williams slammed a two-run homer—his first of the year—in the sixth inning off winner Steve Carlton.

In the opener Schmidt gave the Phils the only run they needed with his solo blast in the fifth inning.

Texas powers past Red Sox

ARLINGTON (AP) — Tom Grieve and Jeff Burroughs belted three-run homers off Boston's Rick Wise to power the Texas Rangers to a 7-1 triumph Saturday night, their third consecutive victory over the Red Sox.

Bill Singer, 2-1, handcuffed Boston in the clutch, yielding Fred Lynn's second homer of the season in the sixth inning as the only damage. He finished with a six-hitter.

Texas, leading the American League West by 1½ games over rained-out Oakland, jumped on Wise, 1-1, in the fourth inning with singles by Burroughs and John Ellis. Grieve then tagged a 3-2 pitch over the left field wall for his third homer in the last five games.

Tigers maul Chisox

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Jason Thompson slugged a two-run double and his first major league home run and Vern Ruhle pitched a five-hitter to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 10-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

Thompson, a 21-year-old first baseman who came up from the minor leagues a week ago, doubled off loser Bart Johnson after Willie Horton and Rusty Staub had walked with two out in the first inning.

The Tigers piled up a 7-0 lead before Thompson hit his homer in the seventh. He also singled in the eighth.

Busby tames Yanks

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Steve Busby scattered eight hits in posting his first victory of the season and Amos Otis slammed a two-run double as the Kansas City Royals tamed the New York Yankees 4-1 Saturday night.

Making his third start since coming off the disabled list April 17, Busby (1-1) became the first Kansas City pitcher to go the distance. He struck out three and walked two while permitting only two singles through the first five innings.

Frank White's one-out single was Kansas City's first hit of the game and started an uprising in the third off losing pitcher Ed Figueroa. After Jim Wohlford singled, the Royals pulled a double steal and both runners scored on the double by Otis. After a single by George Brett, Otis scored on John Mayberry's high chopper.

Brewers soaked by Twins

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota's Lyman Bostock singled twice, drove in two runs and scored two as the Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 9-5 in an American League game Saturday.

Bostock's fourth-inning sacrifice fly sent the Twins into a 6-2 advantage and reliever Bill Campbell survived five shaky innings for the victory to boost his record to 3-1.

49ers gain split with Fullerton

Mike Zouras and Steve Fenoglio each belted a pair of home runs as Long Beach State bombed Fulleton State 10-1 in the first game of a doubleheader Saturday, but the Titans won the second game 3-0 behind Dan Boone's 8-hit shutout to mathematically eliminate the 49ers from the PCAA title chase.

Buoyed by the four homers, LBSU pitcher Jim Davis registered his fifth complete game. Zouras and Fenoglio have each hit eight home runs this season.

But Boone, now 7-2, subdued the 49ers in the nightcap as host Fullerton improved its PCAA record to 15-3 and 41-12 over-all. LBSU is 10-8 in conference play with three games remaining and 27-21-1 over-all.

Wilkins sets world discus record again

SAN JOSE (AP) — Discus thrower Mac Wilkins of Long Beach's Pacific Coast Club increased the world record to 232 feet, 6 inches Saturday, breaking his week-old world mark on each of his first three attempts at the San Jose Bicentennial Invitational track and field meet.

The former University of Oregon athlete broke his week-old record of 226-11 on his first throw with a toss of 229-0, then reached 230-5 before spinning the discus 232-6. The third throw was almost six feet beyond his previous mark.

The weather conditions were ideal, just as they were a week earlier for Wilkins at the Mt. San Antonio Relays in Walnut, with a brisk crosswind blowing. John Powell, a PCC teammate of Wilkins, held the old record of 226-8 and threw 220-4 Saturday.

There were several other outstanding winning marks here, with a few aided by the wind.

Arnie Robinson won the long jump with a leap of 26-11½, James Butts went 55-7½ in the triple jump and Ron Whitaker of San Jose State edged Clancy Edwards in the 100-meter dash in which both were timed at 10 seconds flat. Whitaker also nipped Edwards in the 200 in 20.4.

George Woods, another Pacific Coast Club athlete, won the shotput with a 69-½ effort, while former world record holder Al Feuerbach was forced to watch, scratching from the event because of a pulled hamstring. Woods had two other attempts over 68 feet.

Many of the athletes, including Wilkins, will compete in the Long Beach Invitational today.

L.B. Invitational will be 'jumping'

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

The sky's the limit?

Not today. Not, at least, in the jump competition in the Long Beach Invitational at Long Beach State.

Action begins with the hammer throw at noon. First running event is at 1. Admission is $1 for adults, 50 cents for students.

The four jump events — high jump, pole vault, triple jump and long jump — are indicative of the caliber of athletes entered throughout the invitational.

Consider:

• High jump: world record holder Dwight Stones (7-6½) and No. 2 rated Tom Woods (7-5½) meet for the first time outdoors this year in a field that includes Reynaldo Brown (7-1) and Dean Bauck (7-4) of Canada among 16 jumpers that have soared 6-10 or higher.

• Pole vault: Long Beach State sophomore Don Baird, who went a lifetime best 17-10 in an "all-comers meet" last week, takes on a group that includes teammate Jim Knaub (17-½), Ken Weaman (16-10) of Canada, Jim Greene (16-9) and Steve Hardison (16-9).

• Long jump: Olympic gold medal winner Randy Williams (26-1½) faces a host of challengers including Arnie Robinson (27-2), Dan Seay (26-8), Bouncy Moore (26-4½)) and Stanford Brewer (25-8¾).

• Triple jump: A solid group, led by Harold Freeman (53-0), Clarence Taylor (52-10½), Dave Watt (52-8) of Canada and Harry Pratt (52-5).

Over-all, it is the most talented collection of athletes ever assembled in a Long Beach track meet.

The entrants include four world record holders: Mac Wilkins, who obliterated the world record in the discus for the second time in eight days Saturday with a toss of 232-6 at San Jose; Don Quarrie, 19.81 in the 200 meters; Stones, 7-6½ in the high jump; and Jim Bolding, 48.7 in the 440 intermediate hurdles.

Among the 337 contestants are 48 athletes that have already met Olympic qualifying standards in their events. Innumerable others are capable of reaching required performances today.

LBCC turns away El Camino, 9-5

Long Beach City College exploded for four runs in the fourth inning to subdue El Camino, 9-5, Saturday in Metropolitan Conference play.

The Vikings received a two-run single by Pat Estes in the third inning to claim a 2-0 lead but El Camino whittled one run off that margin in its half of the inning.

Danny Gausepohl, who collected two doubles in four at-bats, singled and stole second to open the fourth. Rick Kienast coaxed a walk off losing pitcher Don Bain. Perry Maloney singled to fill the bases. Then Bain uncorked two wild pitches and Gausepohl and Kienast scored. Following a walk to Brad Liebeck, Todd Hewitt and Estes delivered run-scoring singles.

Mike Lord struck out nine to record the victory.

Mannon leads Cal track win

BERKELEY, Calif.(AP) — Cal's Brett Mannon put the shot 57 feet 3½ inches for a career best Saturday as the Bears won 13 of 17 events to beat Stanford 95-50 in the 82nd Big Meet between the rivals.

It was the fifth straight triumph for California in the Pacific-8 Conference dual meet and evened the series, which dates back to 1893, at 40-40-2.

Cal's 400-meter relay team of Wesley Walker, McKinley Mosley, Paul Wallace and Carl Florant posted a 40.3 winning time, its best of the season

Now you can ride in a luxury car without paying the price of running one.

The price you pay to ride in a big, luxurious car isn't just the price on the sticker. It's the price you pay for fill-ups and eight-cylinder tuneups.

A Peugeot 504 SL has much the same headroom, legroom and luxuries as a full-size luxury car (luxuries like a sliding sunroof, electric front windows, tinted glass, power disc brakes, power steering, metallic paint, and more). But with no excessive weight and overhang, you save at the gas pump* and in the repair shop.

With a 504 SL you can fulfill your desire to enjoy as much comfort and luxury as possible. As well as your desire to pay as little as possible for it.

Lockheed troubles: news for 20 years

By JOHN M. LEE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — For two decades Lockheed Aircraft Corp. has been at the center of assorted corporate dramas.

There were the failures with the Electra turboprop in the 1950s, the Central Intelligence Agency links with the U2 spy plane, the huge cost overruns on the C5A military transport, the crash-prone F104s in West Germany, the cliff-hanger on marketing the wide-bodied L1011 jetliner with Rolls-Royce engines, the extraordinary government-guaranteed loan in 1971 to avert bankruptcy, and the continuing battle to achieve financial viability, given a grotesque burden of debt.

FEW corporations have so preoccupied public attention. But then Lockheed is something special — a key link in the military-industrial complex, with close ties to the Pentagon and CIA; a provider of advanced technology; arms-seller to the Western alliance and instrument of national policy in the confrontation with communism. Clearly, Lockheed's survival and even its prosperity have been deemed vital to the national interest.

Now, Lockheed finds itself at the center of the most far-reaching controversy of its crisis-prone history — namely, the payment of some $24 million in bribes and kickbacks over a number of years to promote the sale of both military and commercial aircraft abroad. In its zeal for selling, Lockheed overstepped the bounds of what many consider proper corporate conduct.

OF COURSE Lockheed is but one of some 100 major U.S. corporations that have admitted, under pressure from the Securities and Exchange Commission, improper payments.

But here again Lockheed is something special. Although the machinations of the Gulf Oil Corp., Northrop Corp. and United Brands are startling enough, Lockheed has admitted payments to pro-Western government figures in Italy and Japan, as well as to Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands. It has thereby provided devastating political ammunition to opposition elements in those countries.

Indeed, business-government efforts in arms sales or other exports are more coordinated abroad. It is almost inconceivable that the French or Japanese governments would accuse their own businessmen of bribery. Japanese officials have been notably slow in pursuing their Lockheed bribery probe lest confidence in the long-standing Liberal Democratic government be undermined.

In the United States, life is more pluralistic and interests more diverse.

President Ford belatedly recognized the spreading scandal by appointing a panel of Cabinet members to come up with recommendations. But little is expected until after the November election, and by then whatever public anxiety exists may have subsided.

The thrust for disclosure thus seems to rest with the SEC, senators like Frank Church, D-Idaho, and William Proxmire, D-Wis., and some of the news media.

Some people like SEC Chairman Roderick M. Hills assert that much progress has already been made in cleaning up U.S. business methods. Many corporations have set up special audit committees, strengthened the role of their outside (nonexecutive) directors and established new codes of conduct or reaffirmed old ones. Auditors are more vigilant, and a couple of the most conspicuously involved executives — Daniel J. Haughton at Lockheed and Bob R. Dorsey at Gulf — have been ousted.

In the view of many, the massive disclosures of improper corporate conduct by Lockheed and others have a uniquely American flavor. There stands the moralistic Church lecturing the cynical Europeans. Shades of Woodrow Wilson! But the genie is out of the bottle, no one can put it back, and what it will do next is anyone's guess.

The efforts of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. pale beside what Lockheed may unwittingly accomplish. The disclosure of improper dealings with Lockheed helped undermine confidence in the Christian Democratic government in Italy, which resigned on Friday. If the new elections bring Communists into the government, will Lockheed share the blame? Will the stigma of Lockheed associations also undermine the government of Japan and the royal family of the Netherlands as well?

Arms and bribery have long been linked. The notoriety of Sir Basil Zaharoff and his wheeling and dealing for Vickers of Britain before World War I encouraged the phrase "merchants of death." Cynics have always assumed a certain amount of bribery in arms sales, and in this view the current disclosures simply confirm the obvious. It's nothing new. "Everybody" does it.

The arguments are that "if we don't sell them arms, someone else will," and that the spread of American arms and aircraft abroad is an instrument of national prestige and influence, making the buyer beholden to the technological largesse of the United States. The arms salesman is thus unleashed and encouraged by the Pentagon. Besides, it's good for the balance of payments and for employment in California.

Lockheed thus undertook such activity, along with others, on a worldwide basis. But, what Lockheed apparently failed to realize was that, while the world might wink indulgently at payoffs to the Hottentots — after all, bribery was thought to be a way of life in Asia, Latin America and the Middle East — it was quite another matter to make payoffs in Western societies, where standards of ethical behavior are avowed to be stricter. An outcry at public disclosure was inevitable.

Another matter that apparently confuses the arms seller, and in this case Lockheed, is the identity of the enemy. In Japan, the enemy seemed to be the Grumman Aircraft Corp. even more than the Russians. Testimony has shown that Lockheed bribery in Japan took an order away from Grumman. In effect, Burbank, Calif. (Lockheed), cheated at the expense of Bethpage, N.Y. (Grumman).

Foreign countries have expressed astonishment not so much at the bribery as at the American obsession for exposing it, and European sophisticates lament the trouble Americans have caused by their post-Watergate zeal for harsh disclosure. Anthony Sampson, the British author, wrote recently, "In the (view of) European societies, the coloration of mild traditional corruption is . . . a low price to pay for the continuation of the Italian Christian Democrats, the Dutch monarchy or the Atlantic Alliance itself."

'Slump erasing women's gains'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Lt. Gov. Mary Anne Krupsak of New York Saturday said the economy is wiping out women's economic gains and endangering the Equal Rights Amendment's chances for passage.

"The threat of women competing with men for scarce jobs" was the principle reason that voters in New York and New Jersey rejected state versions of the ERA last fall, she said.

The 44-year-old Democrat addressed more than 1,000 women at a conference on women and the economy, sponsored by California Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally. Other participants included actress Jane Fonda and Black Panther leader Elaine Brown.

Miss Krupsak said women "are actually losing ground" economically, citing statistics that the wage gap between men and women is widening.

At a news conference afterward, she said affirmative-action hiring and promotion of women and minorities should carry at least equal weight with the "last-hired, first-fired" principle of union seniority.

"WE HAVE HERE a competition between two equally cherished values," she said. "Affirmative action must not be thrown away to protect job security.

"We must work with our union brothers and sisters and make them understand the value of affirmative action."

Miss Krupsak said she was surprised and pleased by a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision awarding retroactive seniority to blacks who had been denied a job by a company's policy.

But she said it didn't go far enough, because many minorities have been discouraged from even applying for work by discriminatory policies.

"Our problem has always been dividing up a small pie when what we have needed is to make the pie large enough for all to share," she told the conference.

She called for more available child care, flexible working hours, changes in tax laws that hurt working women, and government action to increase the number of part-time jobs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Brings in a satisfying year of personal reorganization, and the establishment of a firm base of operations. Material progress overcomes obstacles, gradually improves. Relationships proliferate, involve more people at every turn. Today's natives have strong appetites, great energy, go in for vocations requiring skill to reach psychological underpinnings of human nature.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Freely accept volunteer help, but don't seek or ask for it. Group funds increase with sensible promotion. Home is the best place for main efforts.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Relatives demand attention: you can be of immense aid at little cost. Marital or partnership talks are varied, better if you pool your efforts.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Check details, reservations, appointments for any pending venture. Technical consultations are favored, but must be supported by further action on your part.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): If you're on the beam, plans advance. If they don't, do you really want items that seem beyond reach? Would you be able to cope with the consequences?

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Though inclined not to, you should get out of the public eye. Don't casually delegate serious matters to others. Attend to confidential features in person.

Virgo (Aug. 21-Sept. 22): Symbolically, this is a "clear" day for better vision and intuition. Keep your ears open for extra meaning in news from distant places.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Forget hypothetical or speculative gambits. Take a direct approach to the most important job at hand. Work at building your public image: be seen and heard.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put in overtime to end static ventures. Professional advice requires modification to fit other factors. New equipment can be acquired at a savings.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Exert personal leadership among those who will listen. Group ideas include a few that work splendidly. An evening journey has satisfying results.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Creativity is featured, ranges from simple projects to major city planning, in line with your position on the scene. Romance finds some response.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Show your wares: apply for jobs, raises. Seek simpler ways to get work done. Completely change pace tonight, and let your mind digest experience.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Buy clothing and furnishings within budgets. Social encounters include people who figure in your future. Emotions are fluent over a long past incident.

'75 Bruin hero comes up short — 3/4 of an inch

Banks wishes it had been horseshoes

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

If anyone personified the UCLA Bruin track team Saturday, it was Willie Banks.

A year ago as a freshman Banks catapulted 55 feet, 1 inch on the final triple jump of competition to not only win the event but win the meet over arch-rival USC.

As the Trojans, attired in their cardinal and gold "USC BUSH WHACKERS" T-shirts, completed their 83-62 trouncing of the Bruins Saturday, a dejected Banks sat alone.

There was no roaring crowd, no victory ride on the shoulders of his teammates this year. Banks had been defeated by Trojan Tom Cochee. The difference between victory and defeat was only a scant three-quarters of an inch (54-2¼ to 54-1½), someone mentioned.

"Yes, but this wasn't a horseshoe tournament and that's the only sports event where close counts," Willie answered. It mattered little to Banks that he extended his season best nor that Cochee was required to jump nearly two feet beyond his 1976 high.

"I'm not really disappointed, I'm just not happy. All I'll remember is choking my last jump. I should have gone all the way through the board instead of trying to keep under control."

Going all-out earlier had earned Willie a blue ribbon on his first long jump of the afternoon (25-8½).

"I thought to get the team up I'd have to get out there as far as I could. We just never got into this meet. I'm an enthusiastic jumper. When the crowd's yelling and my teammates are behind me, I get better. When there's no enthusiasm, my jumps don't improve."

It was an exhilarating moment for Cochee, who has lived with Banks' come-through performance for a year.

"This was long overdue," said the Trojan, "especially after last year. That day I went blank after Willie's jump. I felt handicapped because I had no chance for a comeback. The whole event flashed in my mind again today."

Cochee said he made up his mind that he—not Banks—would have the last jump in the finals. To earn that he knew he had to take the lead in the preliminaries.

"I also felt I owed the team something. We've lost the three years I've been here, and, being a senior, I wanted to go out on a winning note."

Another senior, shotputter Mike Budincich, echoed Cochee's statement. He used a lifetime best 63-5¾ to score the day's initial upset, defeating UCLA's Jim Neidhart (61-10¼).

"I didn't place as a freshman or sophomore and only took second as a junior, so I felt it was my duty as a senior to get us started," said the 6-3, 260-pounder. "In my mind we were like a string of dominoes and all we needed was my win to get us moving."

UCLA was carrying a 42-meet win streak—31 in a row at Drake Stadium. The national dual meet championship was on the line. The Bruins wouldn't go under without a fight, almost literally.

Sophomore Steve Beck won a shoving, elbowing-swinging duel with USC's Rayfield Beaton in the 1,500 meters, running a lifetime best 3:45.8 to Beaton's 3:46.2, also a career low.

Afterward the freckle-faced Beck called the race "every man for himself. It started as a tactical race with everyone wanting position.

"Rayfield veered out slightly beginning one turn and caught me with a spike. So I cut inside and put him in lane two. I've got no complaints at all."

Beaton did.

"He should have been disqualified," said the native of Guyana. "You're not allowed to pass on the inside and he did it."

UCLA's ploy was to force Beaton to run himself out in the 1,500 and have nothing left for the 800 later. It worked perfectly, one of the few strategical plusses on the Bruin ledger.

"They knew I was doubling, so they tried to get me in a box. To get out I'd have to run outside. Then my back started bothering me."

Beaton strained his lower back muscles by lengthening his stride and was staggering at the finish. With USC holding a 19-point advantage, he was scratched from the 800.

"If the meet had been closer, I would have run. I could have won and probably run 1:45; but there are more important meets ahead, like the Pacific-8, the NCAA and the Olympics."

With Beaton on the sidelines, the 800 appeared to be a shoo-in for UCLA's Jeff Haynes. Not so.

Unheralded teammate Conrad Suhr, overcoming a nagging cold, won with a lifetime best of 1:47.8, while Haynes suffered his first defeat of the season while posting a career best 1:48.9.

"It definitely wasn't a good race for me," Haynes remarked. "I tried something different by going out fast. It backfired. I didn't have anything at the end.

"I had to grin when Conrad went past me. I'm glad for him."

"We'll be competitive from now on," assured Suhr.

He caught and conquered SC's Lloyd Johnson with 80 yards to go in the 800, trimming the meet and school records to 1:47.8. Jeff Haynes of Long Beach and UCLA suffered his first defeat of the year, but fought off Johnson's late assault to take second in 1:48.9, a personal peak by 1.1 seconds.

The day's biggest surprise was the 1,500.

Steve Beck of UCLA and Rayfield Beaton of USC fought tooth and nail —and arm and elbow— around the track. Surprisingly, Beck won, 3:45.8 to 3:46.2, as Beaton flailed and stumbled through the final yards. Surprisingly, Beck was not disqualified for pushing, nor Beaton for cutting in.

Among the over-capacity crowd of 15,011 were former Trojan all-Americas O.J. Simpson and Lynn Swann, wearing T shirts emblazoned "USC Bush Whackers."

Bush should be able to survive the whacking. It's his first one in five years.

Watson upset by 'junior'

By DAVE FERRELL
Staff Writer

Brenda Winston, a 14-year-old runner from the Rialto Road Runners track club, upset Olympic medalist Martha Watson in the 100-meter finals Saturday to highlight the fourth Lakewood International Invitational women's track meet at Lakewood High.

Miss Watson, representing Lakewood International Track Club, finished third with a 12.2 clocking behind Miss Winston (11.8) and Lakewood's Penny Slaughter (12.2), after winning the long jump with a leap of 19 feet, 11¾ inches.

More than 650 athletes from Canada, Arizona and California competed on a slow track.

"I just need a lot of work," said Miss Watson, whose winning long jump was far off her best of 21-2.

"I'm too old to lose my form, but my timing's off," she said. "Usually when you're in top shape you just hum. But I could feel myself. I sound like a used car—just too many parts rattling," noted the 29-year-old, who is looking forward to her fourth Olympic Games.

A foursome of Canadian runners ran impressive times in the 200 and 400-meter sprints as Canada bested Lakewood International for the open team championship, 96-74.

Marjorie Bailey and Patty Loverock tied in 200 with times of 23.9 and Pam Medland of Canada won the 400 in 55.8, beating teammate Ann Mackie (56.5) and Jarvis Scott of the Premier Track Club (56.9).

Canadians also performed well in the field events, led by winners Louise Walker in the high jump (5-9) and Maureen Dowds in the shotput (50-½). Miss Dowds won her event by more than 12 feet.

Oh Canada

It was a big day for Canada in the Lakewood International track meet Saturday at Lakewood High. Pam Medland (of Canada despite her Florida shirt), far outdistancing teammate Ann Mackie. The Canadian girls went on to win team title.

The most Fiat we've ever brought to America.

A steel cage completely surrounds and protects the passenger compartment.
A 5-speed transmission. Only one of 6 sedans in the world with this as standard equipment.
The gas tank is tucked away behind the backseat.
A twin overhead cam engine. The same kind found on some of the finest sports cars in the world.
Impact-absorbing front and rear bumpers
Rack-and-pinion steering.
Unitized body.
One of the most advanced rustproofing systems in the world.
Safety anti-burst door locks (Child-proof rear door locks on the four-door model).
Dual braking system. Power-assisted front disc brakes.

And here are a few other things that come as standard equipment.
Carpeted trunk.
Rear window defroster.
Radial tires.
Tachometer.
Reclining bucket seats.
Fully carpeted.
Tilting steering wheel.
All-vinyl interior.
Mag wheels.
Quartz clock.
Tinted glass all around.

At Fiat, we've always held to one simple idea: the idea of a practical, sensible, intelligent car.
Well, we've taken that idea and made it somewhat bigger, and more powerful, and more luxurious. And we call it the Fiat 131.
If you've never considered a Fiat before, maybe it's time.

The new Fiat 131.

Badminton, net titles on the line

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Two conference tournaments are in progress this weekend and two more will be decided during the coming week as women's intercollegiate athletics moves into the final weeks of spring competition.

Two titles are on the line today. UC Irvine is hosting the SCWIAC tennis playoffs, and the SCCCIAC badminton champions will be decided at Cerritos College.

LBSU tennis coach Gloria Hendricks reported that during first day play

her team split 3-3 in singles and was 2-1 in doubles. USC, which won the team title at the recent Ojai tournament, should be a strong contender in the competition.

The finals in doubles may bring a rematch of LBSU's DeeDee Cronk and Penny Johnson against USC's Diane Desfor and Gretchen Galt. In the Ojai event, the Trojan pair won, 6-3, 6-3.

BIG WEEK ahead for the Long Beach City College volleyball team. A win this weekend in the semifinals of the San Bernardino Invitational Tournament, will mean a return trip for the finals Wednesday.

The following day, LBCC hosts the SCCCIAC tournament with play set at Orange Coast and Pierce Colleges.

Pool competition will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday (JVs) and Friday (varsity) at OCC. The top two teams from each grouping will participate in a double elimination playoff Saturday at Pierce.

LBCC clinched the league title last week, sailing by West L. A. College, 15-0, 15-2, and Golden West, 16-14, 15-13. The JVs took West L. A. easily, 15-8, 15-5, but were outpointed by Golden West 15-10, 15-11. Only one league match, Monday against Santa Ana College, remains on the schedule.

TWO ADDITIONAL school records fell to LBCC's Mary Hammond at Thursday's swimming meet with San Bernardino College. This was the final dual session before the SCCCIAC finals Thursday and Friday at East L. A. College.

Mary's new marks are in the 100 individual medley with 1:06.9 and the 50 butterfly with :28.9.

Other firsts were recorded by Janet Balter with 2:49 flat in the 200 individual medley and 1:18.5 in the 100 backstroke. Janis Cook took first and Jayne Stillwell second in the 100 breaststroke and 50 breaststroke. Their times were 1:19.7 and 1:30.4 and :41.1 and :36.7.

A victory in the final relay gave the meet to San Bernardino with a 70-60 score.

MARLENE SILCOCKS shot the best round of any woman this season in the Southern California Archery Conference to lead the Cerritos College archery team to a tri-meet sweep over L. A. Harbor and Mt. San Antonio Colleges.

Silcocks, who qualified earlier in the season for the 1976 U.S. Intercollegiate Archery Championships, shot a sizzling 805 in the meet. Her mark was better than any men's individual effort this season.

Janice Rockept shot a 709 in the meet for the third place in women's competition. Arlene Grace fired a 571 to finish fifth.

The victory for the men's team was led by national qualifier Mike Demming with 779 and Bill Silcocks, 750. Bill is the husband of Marlene and both are qualified for the nationals. Jeff Smoy finished fourth in the men's competition with a 739 round.

Cerritos will host the U.S. Intercollegiate Archery Championships May 13-15 on the Falcon field.

THREE RUNS in the bottom of the seventh inning gave the LBCC softball team a 5-4 win over Chaffey College Wednesday. With two outs in the bottom of the last inning, Barbara Fernau and Vicki Lewellyn both hit singles. Then Jane Baker singled for an RBI, Vicki scored on a passed ball to tie and Dawn Wiley singled to drive in the winning run.

Jeannine Maygren was the winning pitcher, and Kim Doyle hit a two-run homer.

The team, coached by Donna Prindle, also broke even for the week with a 5-3 loss to Mt. San Antonio College. High point of the game was a triple play executed by LBCC on a caught bunt that trapped runners on first and second.

Beth Tasker was two-for-four at the plate and Barbara Fernau had a triple and one RBI. Kim Doyle was on the mound.

Kim Maybee has sports future mapped out

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press

An uninhibited teenager will make women's boxing a part of many cards in California. She's also going to Hawaii and perhaps to ports more distant.

Kim Maybee, 18, who played basketball in high school, wants to be a wide receiver in women's professional football and does the Ali shuffle in the boxing ring, proved that gals are tough.

The 6-foot, 1½-inch high school graduate of 1975 stopped Pat Pineda in the second round at the Forum Wednesday in the first professional boxing match between women in California.

Ms. Maybee, who prefers that designation, bounced out of the ring with a youngster's enthusiasm and received a big ovation from the crowd of 7,758 at the Forum. Loser Pat Pineda said she planned to get married and would sack the boxing ring.

"I'll fight any contender among women," Ms. Maybee declared. "But I won't fight guys. They're different."

She's been offered a fight in Honolulu and apparently will accept although she wants to be on hand to try to become a wide receiver with the Los Angeles Dandelions of women's football.

"I learned to fight in the street. When somebody jumped me I'd jump back," Ms. Maybee told newsmen. "My Mom told me 'You get whipped and come home and you get whipped again.'"

Kim didn't get whipped and she had some "brothers" who helped her develop her skills.

"They really showed me what to do," the tall gal related. "I think I can beat any gal."

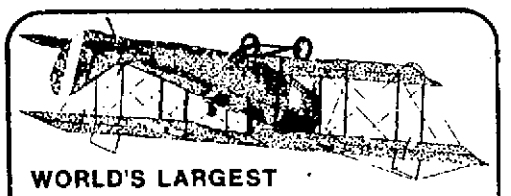

The Pineda bout at the Forum was her first professional outing and she collected $250 for the 2 minutes, 57 seconds of action. During that time she mimicked the Muhammad Ali shuffle and led first with her left, then with her right—completely befuddling her opponent and bringing smiles and applause from the crowd.

The only trouble for Ms. Maybee in California is that Ms. Pineda retired immediately after the beating and only two other women are licensed to box. Pat Syverson of Montebello and Janet Haffner of Los Angeles might provide opposition as both are in the gal's middleweight class.

Ms. Maybee weighed 165 when she stepped on the scales and had to lose five pounds to reach the stipulated weight for her initial bout.

"Those five pounds were easy to lose," she said. "I just sat in the sweat box and then ran. No problem."

Ms. Maybee will continue fighting. She has boyfriends — "they're all big fellows" — and she can cook and she can knit "but that's a waste of time."

BOLD FORBES WINS IT—

Baeza said he had no way of reacting to the smoke bomb tossed onto the track as the field passed in front of the grandstand.

"I still see the smoke when we get to the stretch," the jockey said. "My horse hesitated a little."

Baeza refused to second guess Jolley on orders to lay back for the early stages of the race.

Asked if he agreed with his trainer, he said: "Yes."

Baeza was asked if Jolley said anything to him after the race.

"Yes, he told me our horse tried hard but didn't have it," Baeza replied.

"Did he criticize you?" someone asked.

"He never told me anything," the rider said.

Baeza said Honest Pleasure was responsive to his every command but lacked the power to overtake the streaking pacesetter.

"I thought I had a shot at catching him when we moved into the stretch," he said. "He was too much horse for us today."

Asked if he saw the smoke bomb, Bold Forbes' jockey Angel Cordero said: "I missed the smoke and I'm glad I missed it."

Cordero, who will be 34 today, was asked if he expected to win the race wire-to-wire. "I don't make no plan of the race," he said. "I just waited to see what would happen after the break. I knew there was no plan. I was just hoping for a good break and everything worked good.

"I was not worried about how fast he was going because my trainer didn't give me any orders. He just told me to use my head and ride the way I wanted. I knew he was training very good for this race.

"I knew I'd get criticized if I didn't win so I just went ahead and rode my race."

Cordero then spoke to Baeza, a Panamanian, in Spanish, and gave him a rose to give to his wife.

Later, Cordero left the jockeys quarters and moved to the press box where he said, "We broke very good and I let him run. I relaxed on him. I kept talking to him. He was so relaxed I was afraid at one time of the other horses."

Cordero said he urged Bold Forbes in the last eighth of a mile when Honest Pleasure challenged.

Queried again about the smoke bomb, Cordero said with a smile. "I thought the smoke was coming from my own horse."

Time for the Derby was 2:01⅗ for the 1¼-mile, and the winner returned $8, $2.40 and $2.60. The Derby record of 1:59⅖ was set by Secretariat in 1973. Honest Pleasure, sent off as the first odds-on favorite in the Derby since Native Dancer in 1953, paid $2.40 and $2.20 when he finished second—just like Native Dancer. Elocutionist paid $2.60.

Dk B or Br C By Irish Castle—Comely Nell by Commodore M. Trainer L. S. Barrera. Bred by Eaton Farms- Red Bull Stable, Ky.

BOLD FORBES broke alertly to make the pace, raced slightly removed from inner railing, drew into a lengthy advantage round first turn, continued wide thereafter, rallied gamely when engaged by HONEST PLEASURE on final bend, drifted out a bit on entering stretch but responded to strong left handed whipping through the drive to prove best. HONEST PLEASURE also broke in stride to duel with BOLD FORBES through initial run through the stretch, was then taken back after three furlongs to be kept under snug restraint, commenced a rally from the outside on the second turn while under a hand ride to loom menacingly on final bend. Lost additional ground when the winner drifted out in upper stretch but continued gamely under a hand ride to midstretch while engaging the winner only to falter slightly through the closing strides. ELOCUTIONIST reserved off the pace while along the inside, continued to save ground to loom menacingly on stretch turn but could not sustain his rally. AMANO in hand early, advanced steadily along outside after a half mile to reach striking distance of the leaders a quarter mile away but had nothing left when the real test came. ON THE SLY was without early speed. COJAK closed some ground in his belated bid but could not menace. INCA ROCA bobbled slightly soon after the start and was outrun. PLAY THE RED raced wide throughout. Bidson was without speed.

Barrera, who left Cuba by way of Mexico, started training in California in 1959. Several of his brothers became trainers and his son, Albert, is training in New York.

It was Barrera's first trip to Churchill Downs and he spent considerable time studying past performances of previous Derbies. He found that the frontrunners won quite often.

Plans were to send Bold Forbes to the front at the start and hope he could hold off Honest Pleasure. It was just the way things turned out.

At Sportsman's Park, Life's Hope churned out of the far turn to take the lead and came home in front by four lengths in the $125,000-added Illinois Derby.

The winner, ridden by Sandy Hawley and owned by Harbor View Farms of Ocala, Fla., was timed in 1:51⅗ for the 1⅛-mile race.

Life's Hope, the heavy favorite, paid $4.60, $3 and $2.40.

Due Diligence again displayed his fondness for an off track by winning the $56,350 Carter Handicap at Aqueduct.

Due Diligence came from next-to-last with a stretch run to win by three-quarters of a length over Honorable Miss, another fast-closer.

Coronado 'Cap a lesson in history
Whittingham-Shoe clicks

Tabbing the winner of the $43,900 Coronado Handicap at Hollywood Park Saturday was a simple lesson in history.

Looking back at previous runnings of the Coronado, one would have discovered that jockey Bill Shoemaker had won it five times and that trainer Charlie Whittingham had scored three times.

That pairing of all-time Hollypark stakes leaders combined talents with Marje Everett's Bynoderm in Saturday's 19th renewal of the race and the result was a neck win for the three-year-old French-bred colt.

Shoemaker maneuvered Bynoderm to the inside midway through the stretch when pacesetting Sure Fire drifted out and carried favored Double Discount with him.

Sure Fire, after bumping Double Discount off stride, finished second but was disqualified and placed third.

Bynoderm's time for the mile on the turf was 1:36. As a well-backed second choice of the 36,205 Kentucky Derby Day crowd, he returned $6.60, $3.40 and $3.

"I started to go outside of the leaders but when Sure Fire started to get out I ducked to the inside and we just did get up," said Shoemaker.

Colombian-born Marcos Castaneda and female rider Robyn Smith also were saddle stars Saturday.

Castaneda, riding at the Inglewood track for the first time, booted home three winners, including longshot Morrion ($36.20), who triggered a "grinning bird" exacta ($747.50).

Ms. Smith, in action at Hollypark for the very first time, directed Austin Mittler's frontrunning victory in the fifth race to become the first female ever to win at the track.

Highlighting today's card is a clash of "horses for courses" in the first race; the debut of another female, Amy Rankin, in the fourth race, and the split of the featured Inglewood Handicap, to be run as the seventh and eighth races.

Willmar, Claiming Horse of the Meeting last year after winning four races, and Gum Four Me, who clicked at Hollypark three times last year and has two scores already this year, collide in the opener.

Ms. Rankin, 24, is scheduled to ride for trainer Henry Moreno aboard Consejo in the fourth race.

Butler did it at Alamitos

So Jo Butler, who became only the second horse to turn in three "magic miles" in a single season and who owned the two fastest pacing times of the 56-night spring harness schedule at Los Alamitos, has been chosen Horse of the Meeting, the Southern California Racing Association announced on closing night Saturday.

Trained by Dick McGregor, So Jo Butler paced a 1:58⅘ mile and a 1:58⅘ clocking early in the season and capped his sub-two-minute campaign with a 1:59⅘ mark.

BC Count also had three "magic miles" at the meeting but lost his only head-to-head confrontation with So Jo Butler.

Cuba King, a four-year-old who won four races in a row with a best of 2:01⅘, was honored as Trotter of the Meeting and V Time, also a winner of four races, was honored as Claiming Horse of the Meeting.

Gene Vallandingham, who established a single-season record with 54 victories and who has an outstanding Universal Driver Rating of .394, was chosen Driver of the Meeting.

UCLA captures NCAA volleyball

MUNCIE, Ind. (AP) — Defending champion UCLA beat Pepperdine 18-16, 15-9, 15-11 Saturday to take the NCAA volleyball championships for the third successive year.

Ohio State beat Springfield, Mass., 15-4, 15-5 in the consolation event of the finals held at Ball State University here.

Secret Witness case summaries

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 66 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $43,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

Rewards in all cases, whether or not previously published, will remain in effect until such cases are closed or until notification in these pages that the reward has been withdrawn.

Today's summaries follow:

— Rewards totaling $7,000, including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $5,000 pledged by the Long Beach Police Association, are offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Long Beach police officer Franke Neal Lewis, shot to death at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 14, 1975, when he approached a car parked in the 6300 block on Cantel Street to investigate a disturbance.

— Rewards totaling $2,500, including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by the Bellflower Education Association, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Joseph Clark Bott, 41-year-old Bellflower High School teacher, who was shot to death as he was returning to his home at 6054 Whitewood Ave. in Lakewood at 5:30 p.m. on Nov. 31, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Stephen Duane McCord, 28-year-old Mira Loma man found shot to death in an alley at the rear of 3033 E. Anaheim St. on the morning of April 1, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 16-year-old Wendy Blanchard, of Santa Monica, whose partly nude and bludgeoned body was found on the morning of Jan. 7, 1976, on a sidewalk near 172 W. Colden Ave. in South Los Angeles. She was last seen alive at 11:25 p.m. on Jan. 6 at the Greyhound bus station in Long Beach, where she was talking with a tall, thinly built young black man.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who fatally injured 87-year-old Laura McGill, of Long Beach, when he knocked her down and fled with her purse at Cedar Avenue and Seventh Street at 6:45 p.m. on Jan. 19, 1976.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of John Miner, 57, who died Nov. 13, 1975, of injuries suffered when he was struck on the head by a holdup man who forced his way into the victim's apartment at 1121 E. Third St. at 2:20 a.m. on Oct. 19, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Robert George Zeiger, 18-year-old clerk who was shot down and killed with a shotgun blast during a holdup at the Red Carpet Liquor Store, 85 Alamitos Ave., late on Oct. 13, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan. 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2299 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a neatly dressed man about 35. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is described as about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, with dark, curly hair. He speaks French as a second language and is believed to be from Canada.

—A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Marie Martha Guerra, 80, at Hawthorne Boulevard and 178th Street in Torrance at 2:50 a.m. on Oct. 2, 1975. The driver of the sports car, a Triumph with a yellow body and black convertible top, was described as a white man about 30, 5 feet 8, about 160 pounds, with short brown curly hair, a bushy mustache and wire-frame glasses.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of any of the youths responsible for two robbery attacks on Independent, Press-Telegram distributor Richard F. Broderick, both occurring at a newspaper rack at 20th Street and Atlantic Avenue, the first at 4:10 a.m. on May 29, 1975, and the second at 5:25 a.m. on June 11, 1975.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

$32,000 stolen at market

Two men escaped with more than $32,000 from a Compton grocery store Saturday after surprising an armored transport company employe who was making a cash delivery, sheriff's deputies reported.

Yoshi Sakamoto, manager of Ralph's Grocery, 4410 E. Compton Blvd., told deputies that two men, one armed with a pistol, entered the market shortly before 10 a.m. and escorted him to his office where they demanded he open a safe.

The safe couldn't be opened because of a time-lock device, Sakamoto said, so the robbers gathered $2,000 from the office. As they started outside, they surprised an unidentified transport company messenger carrying a sachel containing $30,000. He was forced at gunpoint to hand it over.

The bandits left with two other men in a getaway car described by witnesses as a bronze Pontiac.

Trucker in serious condition

A truck driver injured in a chain-reaction accident on the 605 Freeway in Pico Rivera was reported in serious condition Saturday after undergoing surgery at Beverly Hospital.

The eight-car pileup resulted in the death of a Long Beach man, Phillip Craig White, 26, of 391 Mira Mar Ave. Three others were injured.

Coroner's deputies said White was killed instantly when the car he was driving rammed an overturned tractor-trailer rig and spun across the freeway into a cement abutment at about 3:30 p.m. Friday.

The accident occurred on the freeway near the Beverly Boulevard offramp after truck driver Martin Freeman, 31, of Bakersfield, lost control of his rig and it overturned.

GG man killed in car crash

A 45-year-old Garden Grove man was killed when the car he was driving struck a bridge abutment on a winding, mountain road near Agua Dulce, Highway Patrolmen reported Saturday.

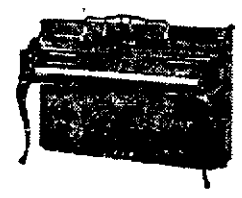

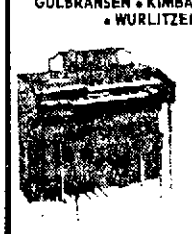

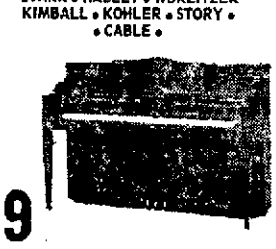

Officers said Everett D. Henson, of 10082 Flanner Ave., was westbound on Soledad Canyon Road just west of the Agua Dulce tunnel when he lost control of his car and rammed the abutment late Friday.

Henson was dead on arrival at Henry Mayo Hospital in Newhall, officers said.

Woman driver cracks mark

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Richard Childress led the final group of qualifiers Saturday for today's $216,325 Winston 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race, turning a top lap of 178.900 miles per hour around the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway trioval.

Meanwhile, drag racer Paula Murphy hiked her own women's closed course speed record to 172.336 mph, and Johnny Halford cruised to an easy victory after Lennie Pond dropped out in a 200-mile Automobile Racing Club of America stock car race.

The Grand National qualifying for positions 16 through 30 had been rained out Friday and combined with the scheduled time trials for the final 10 spots in the 40-car field. Pond topped the final 10 with a speed of 177.745 m.p.h.

Miss Murphy, who set the old women's record of 171.499 mph in 1971, said this was her first time in a stock car on an oval track since her earlier record run.

"I think the car is capable of more speed. I was hoping for 175," said Miss Murphy of her Richard Petty Dodge car. "But my legs were shaking so bad I couldn't hold the throttle down hard enough."

Her speed would have been fast enough for 36th starting position in Sunday's 500-miler, but Miss Murphy, who says she is not a women's libber, said, "I don't approve of women in Grand National or Indianapolis cars. It takes too much physical ability and it's too competitive."

Specifically Miss Murphy said she did not support the efforts of women like Janet Guthrie and Arlene Hiss, who are trying to break the sex barrier in the Indianapolis 500.

Miss Murphy said she did not plan any more oval track competition, but would come back if another woman broke her record.

At 68, Eddie Albert just keeps on starring

NEW YORK — Eddie Albert at 68 isn't letting the parade pass him by.

He's jogging a little ahead of it, worrying that the decline of agricultural soil might bring the end of the human race, and at the same time concerned because his son, actor Edward Albert, doesn't seem to believe in marriage.

"He's lived in some propinquity with several fine girls," Eddie said, frowning about it at lunch one day recently. "I think they're insane, to tie themselves to one and then to another and not have anything real. But he's 24, and I don't know what it's all about, so I keep my mouth shut. And that's probably a copout. I pretend to be a noble soul when I don't really know what the hell to do."

Eddie finds himself professionally on top at 68. He's star-billed in a new film, "Burch Interval" — and his TV series "Switch," with Robert Wagner, has been picked up for another season. He hasn't had top billing in a film for several years, and he finds it pleasant.

"Rip Torn played my son, and he really steals the picture," Eddie assured me. "In the film he loses his mind. I try to hold the family together.

"He was supposed to be dying, and he had a pot of pepper and sniffed from it, and his eyes were swollen and he really looked sick."

Was it fair for an actor to use artificialities?

"You do anything you can ... shove a hot poker up your behind ... sniff menthol to make you cry. The main thing is the performance."

They made the film 30 miles from Gettsburg. "I used to jog every morning on the battlefield. I got to be an expert on the Battle of Gettsburg. We were in the apple season with the Mennonites, and I learned to make apple butter!" Eddie's eyes lit up at that, because it fit in with his interest in ecology.

How many pictures had he done?

"I don't know. Fifty — 60 — 70. What the hell did I do with the money? First one was 'Brother Rat,' with Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman, Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane. I don't see many of them. To me it's a lousy way to spend an evening. I'd rather study or work."

He was nominated for Oscars for "Heartbreak Kid" and "Roman Holiday." He lost, placing himself in the company of Cary Grant, Greta Carbo and other nonwinners, and he admitted, "While that puts me in good company, I'd just as soon have the Oscar."

Eddie disclosed that he was once a circus trapeze flier in Mexico with the Flying Escalantes.

"I was no good; I could get up and down," he said. "I was in no danger ... not with a net!"

Eddie Heimberger, as he was born in Minnesota, recently legalized his name as Eddie Albert, so as not to have his son Edward be a Junior. Maria, 21, a Spanish orphan whom he and his wife, Margo, adopted, was just offered a movie role.

He got briefed here on the latest thing in ecology for speeches he makes around the country. The big thing, he says, is to make use of garbage, humus and manure.

He tells the story of Harry Truman saying, "We must put some manure on the lawn." Margaret spoke up, "Daddy, don't say 'manure'; say 'fertilizer.'" Bess Truman retorted: "Let it go. We had enough trouble getting him to say 'manure'."

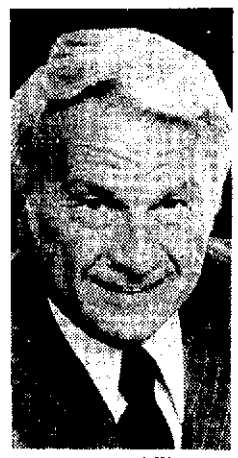

TODAY'S BEST laugh: Someone described an incompetent talent scout: "He would have discovered America in 1493."

Wish I'd said that: Some women will buy anything they think the store is losing money on.

Remembered quote: "Praise does wonders for the sense of hearing." — Dr. Herb True.

EARL'S PEARLS: The late Joe E. Lewis used to complain that stories about his drinking were exaggerated: "If I drink a quart they say it's a gallon, and if I drink a gallon they say I'm drunk."

There's a new diet that allows you to eat huge helpings of everything at breakfast, lunch and dinner. Breakfast's on Sunday, lunch on Wednesday and dinner on Friday. That's earl, brother.

House of Westmore: 59-year makeup job

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Dynasties don't last very long in Hollywood, as witness the fading of such names as Mayer, Cohn, Warner, Thalberg, Barrymore. The House of Westmore lasted longer than most — 59 years of makeup wizardry — and one remnant remains.

He is Frank Westmore, 53, still practicing the family trade on such films as "The Towering Inferno" and "Farewell, My Lovely." Now Frank with Muriel Davidson offers an unguarded and highly readable history of his clan in "The Westmores of Hollywood" (Lippincott, $8.95).

The book tells of the prodigious clan of wigmaker George Westmore, whose sons dominated the makeup salons of the Hollywood studios in the movies' golden age. Besides being department heads, they joined in the Sunset Boulevard house of Westmore, where Marlene Dietrich, Kay Francis (who loaned $25,000 to the brothers), Carole Lombard and Clara Bow came to be beautified.

Laurence Olivier also had his hair cut there, Milton Berle had his dyed, and Madame Chiang Kai-shek got the glamour treatment.

It all started with George Westmore, born on the Isle of Wight in 1879, who came to Hollywood in 1917 to supply wigs for movie stars. One of his earliest customers was America's Sweetheart, Mary Pickford, who didn't know that Westmore's wigs were made from prostitutes' hair.

George and sons Mont, Perc, Ern and Wally soon branched out to all categories of film beauty, male and female. Mont provided Rudolph Valentino with his famous Latin look, washing the actor's hair and slicking it down with Vaseline.

Frank writes that his brother also "modified the heavy penciling of Rudy's eyebrows, plucking them and reshaping them to an arch over his heavy eyelids, thereby making his eyes look larger. He lightly shadowed Rudy's jaw line, giving it a more defined, ascetic look." Mont reduced the heavy eye makeup, lightened the lip color and added Vaseline to make the lips shine. Result: instant sex symbol.

Buddy, longtime head of Universal's makeup department and husband of Martha Raye and Rosemary Lane, and Frank were the last of the clan. Predictably for men who dealt with beauty, the six brothers were a marrying bunch: the total, 18 wives.

"The Westmores of Hollywood" is a good, gossipy saga of a gifted but ill-starred family. No star can be a hero or heroine to his/her beautician, and Frank Westmore tells it all.

George Raft was one of Perc's "back-door clients" when Perc was makeup chief at Warner Brothers. When Raft agonized over his no-waistline figure, Perc devised a whalebone gadget that gave the actor "a waistline as tiny as Shirley Temple's." But Perc blabbed the secret to a magazine, and "Raft never spoke to my brother again."

Perc also transformed young Ronald Reagan, who in later years recalled Warners officials saying, "With his hair parted in the middle like that, he looks like Joe E. Brown with a small mouth." Perc cut and reshaped Reagan's hair, parting it on the left side.

Ern Westmore transformed Bette Davis in 1931 by drawing her mouth almost straight across instead of painting the cupid-bow lips of movie tradition. "I never considered myself any great beauty," said Davis, "except for my large eyes, which I knew were my best feature. Somehow the mouth Ern designed for me even made them look better."

Carole Lombard asked Perc to provide her with a bigger bosom for "Lady by Choice" in 1934. He was at first shocked, then offered the solution: highlight the upper breasts with lightweight, light-colored liquid foundation, applying flesh-colored powder; highlight with cold cream or Vaseline; run a thin line of dry rouge down the cleavage. The technique also worked for Kim Novak in "Vertigo."

When Paul Muni won his Oscar for "The Story of Louis Pasteur" he thanked Perc Westmore because "when I looked in the mirror I didn't see myself; I saw Louis Pasteur."

A PARTY AT LADY BIRD'S

Lady Bird Johnson is throwing another of her famous barbecue picnics today, this time for money.

Several hundred guests are expected at the LBJ Ranch on the Pedernales River, 65 miles west of Austin, with the proceeds going to the LBJ Memorial Grove in Washington, D.C. Guests were asked to donate $100 a couple with a select group making $1,000 "patron" contributions.

Main entertainment will be a performance of the Fort Griffin Fandangle, with a cast of more than 100 singers and dancers, a stage coach, a hack, a covered wagon, 28 horses and six mules. The barbecue, it is hoped, will raise the remaining $200,000 needed for the LBJ Memorial Grove to reach its $2 million goal. The grove is a 15-acre park of white pine trees, trails and flowering rhododendron and azaleas along the Potomac River.

World Series of Poker due

LAS VEGAS (Special) — Card-playing experts from all sections of the country are gathering for the seventh annual World Series of Poker, which begins Monday night at Binion's Horseshoe Club.

Brian (Sailor) Roberts will be on hand to defend his title after winning $115,000 on a pair of jacks in the final hand last year. Roberts, Bob Hooks and Crandall Addington — all Texans — were the survivors of a field of 21 gamblers who had put up $10,000 each to sit down in a winner-take-all game of "Hold 'Em."

Preliminary play in the world's richest card tournament in midtown Las Vegas concludes next weekend. When the $1,000 and $2,000 pot players are swept aside, the big stakes game begin May 10 and conclude May 16.

Widow moved by city's concern for a troubled senior

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

Rosalind Reimann tugged at her tousled hair and looked around the living room stacked high with boxes.

"You can't imagine how grateful I am to the National Guard and the Long Beach Housing Authority," she said, a smile forming on her weathered face.

"I knew I was going to have to move. I couldn't afford the rent anymore, you know. And I was worried plenty about it. I couldn't have done it alone."

Mrs. Reimann, a widow in her 70s, was taking a brief rest from moving chores at her new apartment in the 900 block of Dawson Avenue. Until Friday, she lived eight blocks away in an apartment on Gardenia Avenue.

But the increasing grip of inflation on her monthly Social Security check forced Mrs. Reimann, a 20-year resident of Long Beach, to seek lower-cost housing.

That's not easy when you're a senior citizen who's "outlived everybody" and has nowhere to turn, Mrs. Reimann said.

"I really didn't know what I would do. Those high rents, you know, people just can't afford them. And it's not easy to find someplace cheaper to live."

Mrs. Reimann, a frequent visitor to Bixby Park, said she had just about given up hope when she found help at the park from a worker for the city's Department of Senior Citizen Affairs.

"I had no idea the city could help," she said. "But Mr. (Joe) Anakin said he thought the city's Housing Authority would help me find another place to live.

"I can't say enough good things about him and the city," she added. "They found this apartment for me (the rent is less than half of what she had been paying) and got the National Guard to help me move.

"Mr. Anakin works with and for the senior citizens," she said. "And the four men from the National Guard were so polite and helpful. They moved everything this afternoon."

Mrs. Reimann said her new apartment is "more modern" than the one she just vacated after seven years.

"But it's also a lot smaller," she added, gesturing to stack after stack of cardboard boxes containing the accumulation of more than 70 years of living.

"I'll have to go through all this stuff and get rid of a lot of it, but I don't really mind. I think I'll be happy here."

As she spoke, the spring songs of birds filtered through the screen door, and the vibrant pink blossoms of a flowering peach swayed in a soft afternoon breeze just across the walk.

But flowers and birds do not make up for the loneliness of growing old, Mrs. Reimann said, noting that they're nice accompaniments, but she prefers the comfort of knowing that someone in the city cares.

"You know," she said, "a lot of people criticize the city for the things they say it doesn't do, or the things they say it does wrong. But I needed help, and they were here to help me. I appreciate that."

Doctors causing new pain for medical establishment

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

What is described by the head of the Long Beach Medical Association as a "crack in the walls of organized medicine" is occurring locally, spreading to the state level and is expected to be felt nationally within the next month or two.

The crack — a dramatic drop in membership in medical societies, long the security blankets of the medical establishment — has happened in Long Beach, in the Los Angeles County Medical Association and other county associations, and is being reflected in membership rolls of the California Medical Association.

It's certain to affect American Medical Association membership as well.

THE LONG Beach Medical Association, for the first time in its history, experienced a significant membership loss this year — 160 out of 727 doctors fell by the wayside.

The Los Angeles County Medical Association (LACMA), which had a 1975 membership of 10,017, lost about 1,000 members and may lose as many as 1,100, predicted Don Rosenthal, assistant executive director of the county group.

Les Carpenter, spokesman for the California Medical Association, said the trend is being noticed in CMA's San Francisco office although a final tally won't be available for a week or two when reports from all the county societies are in.

And at the AMA in Chicago, a spokesman said that group won't have a clear picture until mid-June, but since doctors who join the AMA normally do so through a county or state association, a national decline seems inevitable.

THERE are two major factors in the membership dip. Foremost is the medical malpractice insurance crisis, a nagging problem still unsettled despite a doctors' slowdown last January and February, which left many physicians frustrated because the medical establishment was unable to prescribe an immediate cure.

The second key issue driving doctors away from traditional affiliations is the mandatory membership required in the CMA and AMA if the doctors join county associations.

The issue has become so ticklish the CMA currently is mailing to its membership a referendum which, if enough doctors concur, would divorce AMA and CMA membership.

Separating CMA and county membership is another problem. CMA charters county societies, so without a CMA bylaw change, it is impossible to join county associations without joining the CMA.

"Many people see the AMA as a far-away thing," Rosenthal said. "They might like to join a county group but they balk at joining the AMA."

The issue of freedom of choice plays more of a part in doctors' not wanting to join the state and national groups than does dissatisfaction with the groups, several spokesmen for county societies said.

Bach, not rock

Her plants dig the sound of music

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

They may have laughed when college student Dorothy Retallack sat down to play music to potted plants for her biology class in 1968, but her experiment won worldwide recognition and made her an author.

Her book "The Sound of Music and Plants" is an expansion of data from experiments which led to an article in the Denver Post, a spot on the CBS Evening News and articles in European journals.

Plants come alive with the sound of music, she proved, but only if it's the right kind.

Speaking at Long Beach City College's Pacific Coast campus recently, the Denver grandmother of 17 detailed her original experiments at Colorado Women's College in which test plants thrived with Bach and died with rock.

She had no scientific conclusion about why plants subjected to acid rock wilted in her 1968 experiments, and said it was "not proven by any means" that rock harms humans.

However, Mrs. Retallack said, plants which leaned away by up to 70 degrees from speakers playing rock music "looked like they were trying to tell me something."

By contrast, plants subjected to Bach organ music "absolutely adored it," and plants given concerts of classical Indian sitar music by Ravi Shankar "almost embraced the speakers."

Test plants also did well with the type of bland, canned background music found in supermarkets and elevators, she said, and "they loved jazz."

Country-and-western music was played in "the only experiment I've ever done in which nothing hap-

Chief, aide out after school audit

Superintendent Stanley Ross has been removed from command of the North Orange County Regional Occupational Program after an audit disclosed "some irregularities," it was learned Saturday.

Ross was reassigned to a post as special consultant, which the program's trustees created for him. They said he will be paid his $30,000 annual salary at least until the term of his former position expires June 30.

The trustees named John Dewey, program coordinator, to be acting chief administrator of the vocational training program, which since 1972 has been sponsored jointly by Anaheim and Fullerton union high-school districts and Placentia and Brea-Olinda unified school districts.

The program operates on an annual budget of $6.5 million and is the largest such setup in the county. It has an enrollment of almost 12,000 and has classes in schools, store buildings and other places of business.

Board President William Yeats said John Bremer, former teacher in the program's nursery department, resigned after the audit showed the need for corrections of procedures.

The audit presented a long list of "minor" discrepancies, stressed the need for better business practices and questioned a system of "virtually no internal control. . .in the handling of cash receipts and sales."

The auditing firm of Holmgren and Sawyer of Newport Beach noted a shortage of $400 in nursery-plant sales records and complained of inadequate accounting methods and internal control.

Sheldon Houts, who preceded Yeats as president of the trustees, disclosed that the audit was requested in February because it was determined that many procedural changes were necessary.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

SOMETIMES we tend to take a community resource for granted. A case in point is Frances Bond, a quiet, modest heroine in the Long Beach war against poverty.

Frances is past retirement age, and she could be taking life easy, knitting, basking in the sun and trading stories about and pictures of her three grandchildren. Instead, she is out in the community 10 to 12 hours a day (many times on weekends), busy with camera and notebook recording the story of the poor and the agencies that help them.

Frances is director of community relations, Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities. Her news beat is hunger, loneliness, discouragement, hope, opportunity, old age, youth, the charity that looks beyond today and touches brighter tomorrows.

Poverty programs mean money spent, personnel employed, statistics, projections and talk—at least the poverty war is seen in such terms by its critics. But the poverty war has a human face, a soul, a vitality that is generated by people like Frances Bond.

Frances doesn't see a statistic—she sees a human being in need. She sees a father or mother who needs a job to support a family. She sees a youngster who needs an off-the-street interest as an alternative to delinquency. She sees a senior citizen in need of proper nutrition. She sees an elderly shut-in to be visited and comforted.

THERE ARE 20-odd programs under the tent of the LBCEO, and the stewardship of those programs is reported to the public through the camera and typewriter of Frances Bond. If you are a reader of "Action Forum," the publication of the LBCEO, you already know the work of Frances Bond, although you probably don't know her personally.

The poor of Long Beach know Frances. She's their friend, their confidante, their morale booster, their counselor, their listener. She's the "lady who always has time," as one woman client of the Downtown Neighborhood Center put it.

The third annual California-Nevada Community Action conference was held at the Edgewater Hyatt House Hotel April 22-25 Opening day was typical of the schedule Frances Bond keeps. She was on the job at 6:30 a.m., setting up media exhibits, making notes, telephone calls, arrangements. She was still on the job at 11 p.m., bone tired but still smiling.

She had time to talk to the 15-year-old Chicano lad from Delano, whose Nairobi communal farm project photographs incisively portrayed the vigor of boot-strap economics. She gave the youngster advice, and she in turn learned from him.

I kidded her about clock-watching. "I never seem to have time to watch a clock," she said.

Clocks watching Frances Bond in action would soon grow weary and ask for time out.

Prior to going to work for the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities in 1967, Frances had been employed in private industry. Successfully, too. Her last stop before coming to the West Coast was the editorship of the Marshall Field department store house organ in Chicago. That position had been preceded by newspaper work in Chicago, and in Rochester, Ind., her home town.

WHEN ONE is born in Rochester, Ind., the work ethic comes with baptism. Frances doesn't know what it is to be idle, as the journalism department at the University of Missouri discovered to its delight. She was one of the department's star graduates in 1932.

Frances is a true journalist. News is people to her. News is what people do to and for each other. She concentrates on what people do for each other—that's what the LBCEO's prize-winning "Action Forum" is all about.

Frances is a friend of mine. But, then, that's not exceptional. She has nothing but friends. And the circle of her friendships now includes a little girl on a poverty war poster, a child of farm workers who does not know Frances but has become an important part of her thoughts.

The child has dark, saucer eyes, eyes that follow one around an exhibit room and ask this question: "Will you make my life better? Will you tell them about me and my life, or must I stand here at my glassless window with nothing to hang on to but a ragged burlap curtain and a poverty that sets me apart?"

I heard those questions asked by a silent child as I stood with Frances Bond before a poster on the wall. I listened with my eyes, Frances with her heart. And having heard the questions, Frances went back to work to find the answers.

Editorials

Sensible, and unusual

Once a politician begins to think about being president, it becomes very hard for him to be objective about the quest.

Harold Stassen, Wilbur Mills, Richard Nixon and many others persisted in the quest long after it became obvious to everyone else they hadn't a chance. In the case of Richard Nixon, everyone else was wrong. That case was an anomaly. This year everyone else knows that Frank Church and Mo Udall don't have a chance. But Church and Udall are still in there fighting.

HUBERT HUMPHREY did have a chance, although not much of one. He thus deserves all the more credit for bowing out of the race gracefully and with a sense of humor.

It must have been harder for Humphrey than for a man who had only recently contracted the disease. Humphrey was bitten long ago. He hoped to be his party's vice presidential nominee in 1956, but Adlai Stevenson left the question to Democratic convention delegates and Estes Kefauver got the nod. In 1960, Humphrey sought his party's presidential nomination but fared badly in the primaries against the money and charm of John Kennedy. Four years later, Humphrey was elected vice president. In 1968 he got the presidential nomination but lost the election by a narrow margin. His effort to get the 1972 nomination collapsed when he lost the California primary by a close vote to George McGovern.

So Humphrey's decision not to fight for the nomination this year came against the background of two decades of desire, of hard work, and of near misses.

THE FACT THAT Humphrey's decision was sensible does not make it any less unusual.

Hubert Humphrey has never been a man to succumb to bitterness or futile regret. He is, as he said the other day, "a good senator." Given the feelings of Minnesotans, his re-election is as likely as anything in the uncertain world of politics.

We don't always agree with Senator Humphrey's proposals he is sometimes as generous with the taxpayers' money as he is with his own words — but we admire his energy and legislative imagination, and we applaud his constructive spirit. We wish him continued success as a senator and as the Democrats' floor leader if his colleagues choose to make him Mike Mansfield's successor in that important post.

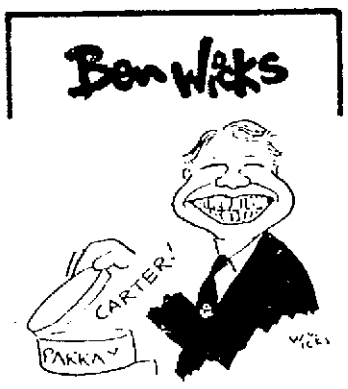

Closing a freeway gap

The California Highway Commission has agreed to advance $1.2 million from reserve funds to start work on completing the 14.5-mile gap in Interstate 5 that slows traffic between Stockton and Sacramento.

That will bring $9 million in federal funds, and the work should be completed in 2½ years. When it's done, the 1,400-mile freeway will stretch uninterrupted from Canada to Mexico.

The commission deserves credit. So do the citizens and newspapers throughout California who responded to pleas from Stockton for help in getting the job done. We're glad to have played a small part in the campaign.

As we suggested the other day, we hope that such campaigns — or special legislative action — won't be necessary in the future. It's important that a sensible program of priorities be established to enable reasonably swift completion of all the California freeways that still have dangerous and costly gaps.

'Jerry Brown: a turn-on guy'

BALTIMORE — Politics has been called the art of compromise, but that hopeful metaphor can be used only for officeholders, really.

For candidates, politics is the harsh reality of numbers, of votes.

California Gov. Jerry Brown has elected to be a candidate for the presidency, and, for him, politics is the harsh reality of the number 1,504.

DURING THE next 80 days or so, he must help give at least that many of the 3,008 delegates to the Democratic Party's national convention reason to vote for someone other than Jimmy Carter on the convention's first ballot, and then the second.

After that, it is believed, the chances of some candidate other than Carter receiving the 50 per cent plus one needed to win the party's nomination figure to improve. Jerry Brown, one must now be convinced, sincerely wants to be that candidate.

Jerry Brown, age 38, governor of California for only 16 months, the Democratic Party nominee for President of the United States?

It is, at best, highly unlikely.

BROWN ANNOUNCED his candidacy just seven weeks ago, then, characteristically, did virtually nothing to advance that candidacy. The Maryland, Nevada, and California secretaries of state decided to put his name on the Democratic primary ballots in their states, and last Sunday, Brown says, he decided to campaign actively in Maryland.

A half-dozen California reporters trailed along, curious to see what other folks might think of the governor and his celebrated Spartan life style. What other folks think is startling, to say the least.

"Jerry Brown is a turn-on guy," wrote Baltimore Evening Sun columnist Lou Panos, "the first politician since Kennedy to hit Maryland with a poetic appeal to our nobler instincts."

BROWN, IN Maryland, "played crowds with the skill of a stump preacher," noted the Washington Post in a story

Bob Schmidt

He is, wrote Peter A. Jay, a Morning Sun columnist, a "spiritual descendant" of William Jennings Bryan, "preaching a new kind of ascetic evangelism that captures 16-year-old imaginations today as magically as did Bryan 80 years and 20 campaigns ago."

The Baltimore News American commented approvingly that Brown "is often a living paradox of what a candidate should be," whatever that means, and also that he has "substantiated his image as a person with more questions than answers and as one with a flair for the unexpected."

But while the three Baltimore papers and the Post agreed that the Californian was an exciting new face in national politics, there was also some amusing disagreement.

THE EVENING SUN'S Panos, after about 12 paragraphs of lyrical comparisons between Brown and John F. Kennedy, apparently pinched himself and cautioned: "There seems to be more example of the Kennedy cool here, less of the light, self-deprecating, warm wit."

While an editorial in the morning Sun called particular attention to "Mr. Brown's sense of irony and capacity for self-mockery."

Panos was not the only observer to invoke the memory of Kennedy.

Maryland Lt. Gov. Blair Lee III described Brown to the Washington Post as "a West Coast Jack Kennedy."

"I like him," Lee said, "and it looks like a lot of other people do, too."

"He definitely made points here, there's no question about it," said Baltimore City Council President Walter Orlinsky.

"We're getting a media star here. Everyone wants to see him. The question is, will he wear?"

THAT IS A question only time can answer. And only time will tell whether Brown can overcome the handicap of his youth, his inexperience, and his late entry into the race to coalesce those Democrats who, for various reasons, are opposed to the front-running Jimmy Carter.

For those curious California reporters, though, a few things are no longer in doubt. If Jerry Brown is right and "the people in Maryland are just like the people anywhere else," than the governor of California has a national image, thanks to his appearances on television, particularly on CBS's "60 Minutes," and thanks to lengthy pieces in Playboy, Reader's Digest, and other magazines.

People know Jerry Brown refuses to live in California's $1.5 million governor's mansion, they know he works long hours, they know he prefers a Plymouth to a Cadillac, and they know he stands for fiscal conservatism. And they like him.

What does Carter believe?

FIERY RUN, Va. — With Hubert Humphrey and now Scoop Jackson on the sidelines, the attention of the nation is turning to Governor Carter.

Carter's success has been a triumph of hard work and tough political organization in the primary states, but probably more important, it has been the result of something personal, something new but very old: something quiet, courteous and philosophical in a noisy, unmannerly and cynical age.

James Reston

New York Times News Service

THIS HAS changed the attitudes and votes of a lot of people. Politically, Virginia is not typical of the nation, but here in the foothills of the Blue Ridge, he has transformed the attitudes of the voters along our lonely and winding roads.

Fauquier County, Va., is conservative Harry Byrd country. Once solidly Democratic, it has been sliding toward the Republicans for a generation, but Carter seems to be swinging it back. The fact that he has prevailed in the primaries against the Democratic Party and labor organizations has changed the mood of voters along these roads. They like his independence. They say that maybe a Southerner is finally going to have an honest shot at the presidency, and they are impressed by his religious faith.

Accordingly, this little community may help explain one aspect of Carter's success. It is divided on political issues, but it pays attention to its churches -- of whatever denomination. The churches are not only the philosophical but the social centers of this country. People talk here, as in Louisiana, about how the people of the "parish" voted.

ONLY TWICE in the last 50 years has the "religious issue" been important in our presidential election. The Democratic Party's national convention in 1924 at Madison Square Garden in New York, where the Democrats will meet again in July, was hopelessly divided, with urban Catholics and Jews favoring Alfred E. Smith and rural Protestants voting for William Gibbs McAdoo — and John W. Davis emerging as the compromise candidate after 103 ballots.

The issue came up again in 1960 when Jack Kennedy, a Roman Catholic, finally won the nomination and the presidency after proclaiming: "I do not speak for my church on public matters, and the church does not speak for me." The issue is not so prominent now, but it has been raised, not by Carter but by the questions of the press, and Carter has not hesitated to give witness to a deep religious faith.

This has encouraged many voters and troubled many others. Carter, unlike Kennedy, is a "true believer," and for the rest of the campaign, many voters will undoubtedly be asking what he truly believes.

IT IS A fair enough question. Already some of his opponents are suggesting privately that he is a "religious fanatic" who thinks he is an important instrument of "the Lord's work," but there is no evidence to support this thesis.

He is said to be a great admirer of the late Reinhold Niebuhr, former professor of Christian ethics at the Union Theological Seminary of New York. Niebuhr, far from being a "religious fanatic," was one of the most eloquent critics both of American theology and politics, and of the challenge of Communist ideology.

Few Americans of the postwar world have kept a better balance between our ethical and political dilemmas than Niebuhr, or been more aware of the irony of American history.

IN A BOOK on that irony, Niebuhr stated his philosophy in two revealing statements:

First, he said: "Our idealists are divided between those who would renounce the responsibilities of power for the sake of preserving the purity of our soul and those who are ready to cover every ambiguity of good and evil in our actions by the frantic insistence that any measure taken in a good cause must be unequivocally virtuous. We take, and must continue to take, morally hazardous actions to preserve our civilization. We must exercise our power. But we ought (not) believe that a nation is capable of perfect disinterestedness in its exercise. . . . Communism is a vivid object lesson in the monstrous consequences of moral complacency about the relation of dubious means to supposedly good ends."

Second, Niebuhr observed: "Nothing that is worth doing can be achieved in our lifetime; therefore we must be saved by hope. Nothing which is true or beautiful or good makes complete sense in any immediate context of history; therefore we must be saved by faith. Nothing we do, however virtuous, can be accomplished alone; therefore we are saved by love. No virtuous act is quite as virtuous from the standpoint of our friend or foe as it is from our standpoint. Therefore we must be saved by the final form of love which is forgiveness."

IF THIS ALSO represents Carter's connection between his ethical and political philosophy, the chances are that he will gain more support by his faith than he will lose; but of course, we still do not know. He will be questioned on this in the coming months, quite fairly too, and there will be time to find out more about what he really believes.

Meanwhile, we will probably hear a lot of doubt about a man who claims to have a "pipeline to God," which is odd, first, because Carter has never claimed he had, and second, because we've had a pipeline to almost everywhere else lately, and it hasn't been a spectacular success.

The Senate's sunshine addicts

WASHINGTON -- The Senate Intelligence Committee disgorged its 651-page report on Monday. By Tuesday night, we may be certain, the report was being gleefully dissected in the Kremlin. In the annals of stupid congressional stunts, this massive piece of folly will rank exceedingly high.

Yes, the report does contain some thoughtful observations. Yes, it gives lip service to the idea that our nation needs a foreign intelligence service. Yes, the report calls attention to the dangers of Soviet espionage. The principal authors stoutly insist that their publication will not weaken, but rather will strenghten the Central Intelligence Agency.

WHEN THESE perfunctory pieties have been acknowledged, little of value remains. The committee has raised a banner with a strange device: "Let It All Hang Out." The majority members seem genuinely to be wedded to the naive notion that an agency whose function is to deal in secrets must have no secrets — it must shed itself of "secret practices that have eroded the processes of open democratic government."

What is the first accomplishment of the committee's long investigation and report? It is to belittle the CIA, to stigmatize the honorable men who have served it, and to make the agency's successful performance vastly more difficult. The committee's disclosures "blow the cover" on sensitive operations; many of the committee's recommendations would treat the agency as if it were merely another government bureau — a crop-reporting service, or a bureau of labor statistics.

Consider, if you please, one legislative recommendation that provides an accurate indication of the tone and approach of the sunshine addicts in the Senate. Their idea is to prohibit virtually all covert actions; only in "extraordinary circumstances involving grave threats to the U.S. national security" would they tolerate a secret operation. And then, mind you, the committee's proposed statute would require prior disclosure to a congressional oversight committee before any funding could be provided.

THAT IS marvelous, is it not? The director of the CIA would be required to travel to Capitol Hill, hat in hand, and spell out his most sensitive recommendations before a gaggle of loose-jawed senators or congressmen. Why not, one wonders, require the director to hire a sky-writing airplane and spell his plans out in mile-high letters over Washington?

Over the past two years, the Congress has forfeited whatever confidence one might have had in its discretion. How long will it be before the "unexpurgated edition" of the committee report is leaked to Jack Anderson?

Hitchcock not about to direct a musical

By BOB TALBERT
Knight News Service

A Quotebag Fule:

ALFRED HITCHCOCK, on living up to his image as a maker of suspense films: "For example, I couldn't make a musical, because as the camera shot along a line of Rockettes people would be wondering which of the girls was going to be shot.

"They would always be looking for a crime. And quite rightly. The shot girl would be the one whose leg stayed up when all the other legs came down.

"But this also gives me an edge, too. Because the audience knows what it is going to get. My name is a label, just as Agatha Christie's name is a label. My subject matter has remained constant."

ALFRED HITCHCOCK

PETER LAWFORD, on Frank Sinatra: "To know Sinatra is to go through many emotions. When Frank wants to be charming, I don't think there is a human on earth who can resist him. But to be close to him is like being close to a keg of dynamite with a half-inch fuse burning. He can be a selfish, childish little tyrant."

JOHN WAYNE: "Not only are the stars fussed over and heavily insured today, but so is the entire cast. That's because the heavy cost of pictures makes it 'financially essential' that nothing happens to the performance because of accident or sickness."

VALERIE PERRINE: "I have a lot of freedom with this new contract at Universal. I have approval over what I do, and I can work for other studios. They will also give me the opportunity to produce films with other actresses starring, when I know more about the business and can develop properties.

"I'm still new in Hollywood, and producers are changing their minds about what I can do. They're beginning to see me as something more than a sex object for male leads; they're discovering that I have talent, that I can do character roles. I wanted to play the part of Nurse Ratched, the heavy in 'One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest,' but I was told I was too young, which is bull. An actress can be any part, and I'm not that young, really."

DICK GREGORY: "The CIA is the sickest, freakiest, most insane, degenerate thing ever devised in this world. Anyone in their right mind knew they overthrew Allende, but here we have President Ford saying they only 'neutralized the Chilean press.' This is like a foreign country swarming in on us with dogs during our civil-rights movement.

"If Ford and Rockefeller, both unelected leaders, took over any other country, you'd call it a coup. But don't be fooled. Ford's just a stand-in for Rockefeller, who is going to run everything.

"The conflict in the Middle East has nothing to do with Israel and the Arabs. It's got nothing to do with human rights. It's between Russia and the U.S. over that oil. Ford complains about that high-priced oil but hasn't said a word to the American oil companies."

Smoke signals in bridge?

ROME (AP) — Italy's world-championship bridge team, accused last year of using foot signals under the table, is being charged with a new bit of chicanery this year: smoke signals. The case has mushroomed into a nationwide scandal.

The man leveling the charges, a leading Italian player who failed to make the famed Blue Team, says there's a tape recording to back up the allegations. But those accused of misusing their cigarette smoke say their accuser is jealous, that the tape has been manipulated and that the case is going to end up in court.

The controversy has rocked the team on the eve of its title defense in Monte Carlo starting today.

The charges are that Benito Bianchi, now retired from the team, and Piero Forquet exchanged messages with smoke signals from cigarettes they were smoking during a championship game. Where and when the game was played is not known.

Members of the Blue Team are used to similar accusations, which have filled their scrapbooks as much as the string of successes they have put together in the past two decades.

This time, however, there are two new and important factors. The charges do not come from abroad, but from a leading Italian player — Leandro Burgay — and he has produced an alleged taped phone conversation with Bianchi to support his claims.

Burgay said Bianchi confessed his tricks during a conversation which was taped and sent to the Italian Bridge Federation. Burgay also produced the testimony of an expert that the tape had not been manipulated.

The federation, however, said that no matter who was right, Burgay acted improperly in taping the phone call and handed him an immediate six-month suspension.

'Showboat' a classy classic at LBSU

By JOHN SPEAR

Has it really been almost 50 years since Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II wrote Showboat? After half a century, does it deserve the designation of "classic of the American musical theater"?

If a musical classic can be loosely defined as a piece with the power to move an audience, the current production at Long Beach State University gives a positive answer. It is definitely not just another saccharine entry from the golden age of musicals.

The vocal demands of Showboat vary from a high soprano to one of the most famous bass roles in the theater. The acting demands range from the riverboat gambler who goes wrong to the simpering Southern belle who develops backbone under adversity, to the philosophical black roustabout, to a fallen woman. Who could ask for more?

Gaylord Ravenal is usually played as a Rhett Butler type. On Friday night, William Wenger made him look a bit more like Ashley Wilkes. It was hard to believe that Wenger's Ravenal was ever a successful riverboat gambler.

His baritone voice has fine middle range, but the high notes in "You Are Love" and "Why Do I Love You?" stretched it beyond its limits.

The Magnolia of Christina Marie Augspurger was sweet and pure (with a shade too much vibrato) and visually delightful.

Showboat has so many characters (over 40 in this production) that any one of them can steal some applause with a good performance. Friday night's was no exception.

Julie is a part made for scene stealers (who can forget Ava Gardner in the movie version?), and Long Beach State had a fine performer in Elizabeth Savage. Not only is she the best female vocalist in the cast, but she is a very effective actress. The most moving movement of the show was when she and Steve left the showboat.

What can I say about Dan Tullis Jr. as Joe? Only that you should see him for yourself. He has the physical properties for the role, he ages over the 40 years of the play more convincingly than anyone else, and (wonder of wonders) he actually can sing those low notes in "Ol' Man River." This young man should have an excellent future, and it is worth the modest price of admission just to hear him sing "Ol' Man River" four times.

The remainder of the cast was of good quality, especially Jerry Siggins as Capt. Andy (a real show stopper in the Parson's Bride scene).

Letters to the editor

Readers comment on police, officials, I, P-T

It is unfortunate for the police officers of Long Beach that your newspaper is one-sided. It is more unfortunate for the three officers who have been dismissed.

I cannot speak for two of the officers, but I can for one, Paul Steed.

Paul's life was the police department. He was one of the most dedicated. I know this because when he first was hired he told me that if he ever had to choose between the department and me, he would have to choose the department. I didn't mind because being a policeman was what he truly wanted to do, and I respected this. There are few men that are able to do what they want to do.

Now, thanks to the public pressure created by your constant articles, Paul no longer has his job. His actions at his party may not have been becoming to his profession, but there were justifications for his actions. The paper has not printed the whole storyy of the evening of March 10 or those justifications.

Police Chief Kortz felt that a 10-day suspension was proper and sufficient punishment, and I respected his decision. But City Manager John Mansell (who is not one to judge proper conduct for a city official) overruled Kortz's decisions because of what the I, P-T called "public pressure."

The newspaper has blown this incident way out of proportion and it's tragic that my husband's job was sacrificed to satisfy the public.

I applaud Mayor Clark for his comment that this "is a departmental investigation and should be kept within the department."

It is regrettable that it was not.

NELA WILKINSON STEED

How sweet it is to read the "good" articles about those wonderful, courageous boys in blue!

My experience with the police force in Long Beach has, in general, been a good one. I find myself identifying with the conscientious officers I have met. The frustration they must feel at this time must be incredible. What glory can be found in attempting to live up to the ideals of the police force if only minor reprimands are given to those accused in a bar-hopping spreed of violence and brutality? I would request that each of the accused, upon proof of guilt, be dismissed from our police force.

These offenders should be criminally charged. City Manager John Mansell obviously wants to minimize these actions. He should be fired for not demanding full prosecution of those guilty.

The great majority of our police are fine officers, and I am certain they are mightily angered and embarrassed by this situation. They undoubtedly hope for severe treatment of these hoodlums.

By not revealing the incident promptly, by recommending light penalties and no criminal charges, by not disciplining the vice squad officers who tolerated this behavior, Police Chief Ralph Kortz showed that he is more concerned with protecting his reputation than protecting the public. If he is this soft on crime, he should not be in police work.

I was pleased to read someone speak up in defense of the officers accused of wild misconduct. It seems to me these 13 men were found guilty without even the benefit provided the toughest of hoods.

I know one of these young men personally. I know he was left an orphan as a high school student along with several younger brothers and sisters. He worked to help provide for his family after his parents' death while still managing not only to complete high school but to hold a fulltime job nights and complete over two years of police science in college in preparation for his dream of being a police officer.

He is a clean-cut, honest, kind young man, father and husband. He did atttend a bachelor party for a fellow officer who was about to be married. They probably did go to the bars mentioned, but I'm not sure the whole story was really told. I'm not saying the officers were justified. I'm only saying I could see how it could happen to almost any young man. Only another police officer knows the pressures a police officer must deal with day in and day out.

The young officer I know does not know I am writing this letter. I just know how sick he and his family are of having him hanged without a trial.

Police Sergeant P. E. P. expressed his emotional distaste with letters from upset citizens concerned with the 13 off-duty officers who, according to the news media, ran rampant in the streets attacking citizens and violating other laws.

These public servants are expected to demonstrate the conduct of a model citizen, on duty or off duty. If a person cannot expect to be safe from the police, what is left?

Therefore, Police Sergeant P. E. P., I do not share a mildly upset view of the letters the police department has been receiving. Rather, I am outraged.

STERLING S. SHARRAR JR.

I do not believe that I am without fault, but I do believe I can toss a pebble or two at Police Sergeant P. E. P.

I think he resorted to a rather poor choice of words when he referred to his fellow Long Beach citizens' statements as idiotic. Perhaps it was because their opinions differed from his, but does this give him the right to refer to them as idiots?

He compares this group of police officers to teachers, plumbers and aircraft workers. I find this just a bit unfair. Has he lost sight of the fact that police officers fall into the select group of people known as public servants? As do teachers. The clergyman, the politician, the teacher and most certainly the law enforcement officers carry very heavy responsibilities in addition to their normal eight hours of work. When a man chooses his occupation, he should take into consideration the added responsibilities he accepts when he enters his chosen field.

So far as the newspaper publicity is concerned, I find it impossible to believe that a wild pack of 13 people (regardless of their occupations) could terrorize the streets and bars of our city without our alert I, P-T being aware of it and reporting it to its fullest detail. And I would stake my life on the fact that it would be reported within a day or two at the most, not a month later.

What has happened to reason, responsibility and accountability? Must we be for or against? Why must lines be drawn by labeling statements and comments idiotic?

The "people of Long Beach" include many who are parents. Should we as parents say to our children "You misbehaved today but since you were good in the past we will forget about our rules and penalties"? Or perhaps, "You misbehaved but your brothers were good, so you will not be punished"?

The real point is that most people want dependable policemen, policewomen, teachers, plumbers, workers, mechanics, gardeners, secretaries or whatever. And most people want to support those who are dependable.

MRS. ECCO S. OCHOA

How often do our police officers — paid to protect people, not to destroy them — act like beasts, or like the Nazi storm troopers who sadistically beat innocent people? I believe a grand jury investigation is indicated. Let the "bad apple" officers be fingered, and fired from our "protective" services.

One letter writer appeared to be of the opinion that nothing should have been publicized pertaining to the charged wrongdoing of up to 13 of our Long Beach policemen and made reference to "all this trash you keep writing in your newspaper."

It appears that our city fathers, or at least our police department, attempted to suppress the story about these police officers — until this somehow leaked out and became published in the newspapers.

The Watergate exposure began in much the same way.

GERALD HARTPENCE

In my opinion your articles were both distorted and biased.

While the conduct of the officers cannot be condoned, the facts were that the officers were off duty and were celebrating a bachelor party. No one was hurt. Hardly what you would call a crime spree. The whole affair was not as one-sided as you made it appear.

I saw very little mention made of one civilian attacking an officer with a pool cue, and a woman throwing a glass of beer in an officer's face.

Amen to the letters by P. E. P. and Ralph White. The officers were wrong, but why condemn them and the whole department for one foolish evening? If they had been executives or politicians, the whole incident could have been buried.

The Long Beach Police Department is no prize package, and I have my own personal gripe.

One time I got a ticket for parking in front of 1540 E. Fourth St. I checked and found there is no such address. I was charged $5 for parking in front of an address that doesn't exist.

Can anything be done about this kind of police harassment?

M. CLARK

When a cop stops people now, they will think he is one of the bums.

After a great deal of public outrage, the department has decided to patronize the citizens of Long Beach by firing three officers instead of one. How many more letters of outrage will be required until all the officers, as well as those conspiring to cover up the scandal, are dismissed from their public service positions?

An answer to Patrol Sergeant P. E. P.:

You say that if a group of teachers or plumbers did what your group of fine police officers did, they would not have their names written up in the paper. Right! They instead might have been shot for resisting arrest. If not, then surely handcuffed, beaten, thrown face down on the pavement with hands cuffed behind them, then taken to jail, left in a holding cell for three to six hours, then booked, given showers to cleanse them of any body filth, and yet another holding cell until the next day between 10 and 5 o'clock to face a judge to make arrangements for bail. Or, if you are lucky enough to own property, you may be released on your own recognizance.

This person is not just suspended three days from work for his behavior. He will probably be fired if he can't get out of jail to get to work.

I was beginning to believe that the Long Beach citizenry and our I, P-T resembled vultures ready for the kill. Thank you, Patrol Sergeant P. E. P. and the other defenders of our police department for dispelling some of this belief.

The I, P-T has always buried the good acts in the back or middle pages, but this affair was plastered on the front.

A. M. C.

If these men had been working in any other occupation, I wonder if all this publicity would have been warranted.

I have been associated actively in law enforcement for over 25 years and still am actively engaged in criminal and civil investigations. I have never seen such a display of the public's animosity toward those who are "life on the line" employed for the preservation of life, limb and property of the citizenry. The taxpayers and hangers-on are the first to jump on the backs of those so engaged. Yet let them get themselves into a position of jeopardy and who are the people they first call upon for protection?

I am sick of reading the gripes from all these individuals pertaining to the few police officers who threw a bash one night.

My husband lost his voice box May 4, 1966, and many times I have had to call the police and fire department to rush him to a hospital. He died March 27, 1965. When I needed their help, you can rest assured I didn't specify that I wanted someone that had not had a drink the night before. This whole thing is perfectly ridiculous.

Regardless of whether these men have families or not, I believe they have more than paid for their conduct many ways. Forgive them for their human ways as you would want them to forgive you.

It seems to me that the Independent, Press-Telegram has now taken it into their power to assume all responsibilities for the criminal justice system in the city of Long Beach.

Since they have already tried and convicted the officers involved in this alleged incident on March 10, only one question is left: Can the citizens of downtown Long Beach be brutalized and harassed?

Since the downtown area has been infested with porno bookstores and nude movie houses along with the low-level life that frequents these establishments, it is my opinion that your newspaper fits well in this area. But don't subject the rest of us to your trash.

To the Long Beach Police Department, I say: Roll on.

I read the letters castigating the officials of Long Beach, running down the personnel of Long Beach, saying how lousy the events are. Even national figures come in for nasty remarks, with a very few exceptions.

All I've got to say is, there are buses and ships leaving every day. So long to you!

I was aghast at all the letters you got from incipient Nazis and bleeding hearts about the "poor policemen" who went on a tear and beat up on the citizenry.

Two key points have been overlooked in this whole mess:

1. Policemen swear a solemn oath to uphold the law. In exchange for this, the people trust them and pay them. They are supposed to be the friends of the people who hire them.

2. This bunch of renegades broke the law they had sworn and were being paid to uphold, thus betraying a solemn public trust.

President Nixon violated the public trust and had to resign. Why should it be any different for a gang of would-be storm troopers?

An editorial attacking Police Chief Ralph Kortz accused him of being a poor administrator and causing poor discipline, and suggested that the members of the police department are running rampant about the town. The I, P-T evidently has forgotten that the officers involved were off duty. The chief cannot hold their hands to insure that the officers would do nothing wrong during their off-duty hours.

While reporting the incident, the I, P-T seems to delight in trying these officers not in the courts but in the pages of your newspaper. Even the lowliest criminal is afforded certain rights regarding pretrial publicity. The I, P-T is ignoring the fact that police officers have the same rights as anyone else who has been accused of wrongdoing.

Three Long Beach police officers gave their lives and all the happiness that goes with living while in the performance of their duties, within a period of 100 days. During the investigation of the police officers' murders, the rights of the accused were closely observed by the I, P-T; however, while the investigation of the murder of Officer G. O. Elkins was being conducted, the I, P-T was "reporting" their version by interviewing unnamed "people on the street," members of antipolice groups or anyone else who had a rumor believable enough to cause the public to purchase a newspaper.

While the Long Beach Police Department was trying to compile the reports regarding the murder of Officer Elkins, the I, P-T raised the question of whether the department was covering up some parts of the investigation.

After the facts were presented to the I, P-T regarding the murder, the I, P-T continued to "report" and to "wonder" regarding the cause of the murder. One of the last articles attempted to raise doubt in the mind of the reader that perhaps Officer Elkins' murderer mistook Elkins for a prowler instead of a police officer in full uniform, responding to a plea for help from the very person who fired the gun which killed Officer Elkins.

Sergeant P. E. P. seems to feel that the officers involved are being discriminated against because their names and involvement have received newspaper publicity.

Sergeant P. E. P. fails to remember that a police force is supposed to be composed of the finest of the community they serve. When it turns out that a few members of a police force become the very ones they have sworn to protect the community against, I say the aforementioned publicity is fully justified.

To Sergeant P. E. P.:

You knew the hazards when you volunteered to be a policeman. So did these men. Being a cop is a 24-hour-a-day, 365-day-a-year job. You and these men knew that when you violate the oath you took to uphold the laws of this state and to protect its people, public and private chastisement would and should happen.

Sergeant P. E. P. says the worst offense committed by the speed-run officers is battery. I say they committed two worse offenses. They forcibly removed a prisoner from custody. They destroyed evidence: a bag of marijuana.

Sergeant P. E. P., the situation of these men is not identical to that of a drunken teacher. It is more like a teacher drunk and assaulting his students in the classroom, or an aircraft worker drunk and sabotaging an airplane.

I feel certain that when a man trains to become a police officer he is told that his behavior must be above reproach at all times.

These men demonstrated contempt for the "citizens," their fellow officers and the law.

You should not defend them.

I have met many Long Beach police officers. I was at one period of my life a regular inmate of the jail. I am a recovered alcoholic and have been sober about six years. Before I was able to regain my sobriety I at one time or another met almost every officer on the force.

A few of them were brutal and sadistic, but the majority were nice guys.

On three separate occasions I was beaten by police officers while I was too drunk even to stand alone. Once, I was battered in the ribs and stomach by two officers while my hands were cuffed behind me. I suffered a fractured rib. During another arrest, while spread for the frisk, an officer kicked my feet from beneath me and my chin struck the edge of a counter upon which I was leaning. Result: five stitches. The latter was witnessed by a sergeant who said nothing. Another officer protested mildly, but was told, "He's just a —— wino."

On the other side of the coin: After maintaining my sobriety for five years, I did some volunteer work with the Long Beach Alcoholism Diversion Project. Twice weekly, I would go to the jail and talk with the men who had been arrested for public intoxication. If I felt any of them wanted to try to do something about his drinking, I could have him released to the diversion project. During this time, I found the officers I met extremely interested and helpful.

I abhor the type of policeman who mistreats helpless drunks, but I have found that this type is in the minority.

The officers who participated in the recent drunken caper should be disciplined, but not dismissed. Where would I be if I wasn't given a second chance by the Alcoholism Rehabilitation Center? Unless the involved officers are alcoholic (it happens), I doubt if they will ever become involved in such an incident again.

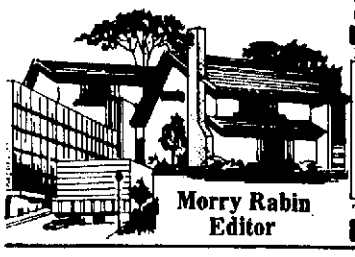

When I first read the article I became angry, but my experiences have served to make me more tolerant. I doubt that there are many among us who haven't at one time or another let alcohol take over our better judgment. I would suggest that the officers involved go to a couple of meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous. They might find out something about themselves.

UPPER LEVEL OF SHADOW RUN HOME ACCENTED IN ARTIST'S RENDERING

Designed for family activity

Two-story homes at Shadow Run

At Shadow Run in La Palma, Warmington Development presents a large two-story home designed for family activities and offering 2,304 square feet of luxurious living space priced from $74,990.

Highlight of the Plan 4 is a huge upper level bonus room that may be used as an extra bedroom or family playroom.

There are three additional bedrooms and two full baths, including a privately situated master suite with dressing room-bath and oversized walk-in closet.

ON THE lower level is a big family room with fireplace, wet bar and sliding glass doors, a formal living room with two-story high ceiling and open hallway above, and a garden-view dining room.

A first floor powder room adds special convenience and the contemporary, openstyled kitchen is complete with built-in range, continuous-cleaning double oven, dishwasher, disposal and luminous ceiling.

Plan 4 is offered in a variety of individualized exteriors and features a double garage with laundry area and block wall fencing.

Other price-included extras are carpeting throughout, ceramic tiling and custom cabinetry.

Other Shadow Run homes are offered in one and two-story plans with three or four bedrooms priced from $58,950. The homes are available in 12 unique exterior stylings and five distinctive floor plans, all with a long list of custom-quality appointments.

WARMINGTON'S exclusive "three-homes-in-one" concept provides separate family, formal and private sectors in each home and the modern features are a popular part of the Shadow Run lifestyle, according to the builder.

The Shadow Run community is close to major freeways for commuting to Los Angeles and Orange County employment and metropolitan centers and the new Los Cerritos Mall is also nearby.

The homes are within walking distance of schools at every grade level and minutes from neighborhood shopping, entertainment, recreational and medical facilities.

Sales have been excellent, averaging two homes per week, since the recent opening of the final unit of the single-family residences, the builder noted.

The new homes are scheduled for mid-summer occupancy at the development, at the northeast corner of Moody and La Palma avenues.

Four decorator furnished Shadow Run model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk at 7012 Somerset Circle in La Palma.

The sales facility may be reached by taking Freeway 91 to the Carmenita exit, then south on Carmenita to Orangethorpe (South Street) and left one block to the Shadow Run models.

Fourth phase open at Sundance homes

Ponderosa Homes, Irvine-based developer/builder, has opened for sale the fourth phase of Sundance Townhomes, a recreation-oriented community in Cerritos. Thirty-six new two-, three- and four-bedroom floor plans are available in Phase IV. Prices will begin as low as $45,990.

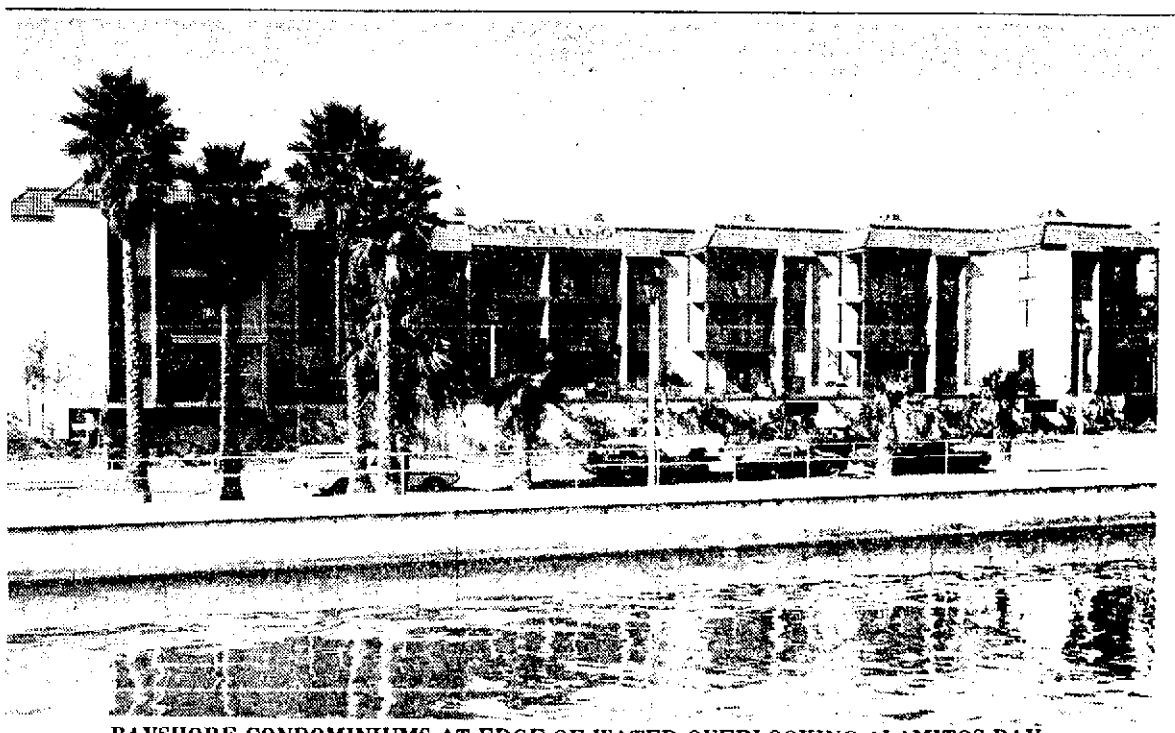

The one- and two-story homes offer residents a recreation-oriented atmosphere the entire family may enjoy. The main recreation facility has a large swimming pool (junior Olympic size), plus wading pool.

The townhome clubhouse, with billiards upstairs and a cozy fireplace downstairs in a sunken lounge, provides a place to entertain outside.

Volleyball and basketball courts and "tot-lots" are strategically located throughout the complex. An "adults only" recreation area, currently under construction, will offer a sundeck and cabana with pool and jacuzzi.

Each kitchen at Sundance features color co-ordinated Gaffers & Sattler appliances, ceramic tile counter tops, luminous ceilings, stainless steel sinks and decorator butcher-block cabinetry. Deluxe baths feature plate glass mirrors, Corian marble pullman tops, cast iron tubs and showers.

The model complex is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk. Offering excellent conventional financing, Sundance may be reached by taking the Artesia Freeway to the Bloomfield turnoff, then north to 166th Street and left.

BAYSHORE CONDOMINIUMS AT EDGE OF WATER OVERLOOKING ALAMITOS BAY

But chilly Hideaway home can be yours

The City of Whittier has something new in the way of a home for that person you would like privacy.

How about a jail?!

The city is selling condominium apartments in the Begich Towers complex on May 23, one of which is the old jail on the fourth floor.

It is being advertised as "apartment #411, the old jail, complete with bars on both bedroom doors, steel bunks hanging from the wall.

It's Whittier, Alaska, by the way, not California.

Townhomes unveiled in Big Canyon

The grand opening of the $15 million Big Canyon Townhomes, in the Big Canyon community near Newport Center in Newport Beach, is being held today.

Conceived and built by McLain Realty and Development, with the Irvine Co. as master developer, Big Canyon Townhomes combine the charm of a 19th century European village with rustic, contemporary architecture. It also provides private recreation, comprised of a tennis court, swimming pool, therapy pool and sundeck.

Its 144 homes, most of which will overlook the lush fairways of the Big Canyon golf course, with its $2 million clubhouse, are nestled on knolls of varying levels. Almost all are provided with subterranean parking, which takes cars off the streets and allows more greenery.

More than $500,000 is being expended for landscaping alone.

"The families for whom this community has been designed," according to developer Robert McLain, "will mainly comprise those established citizens who no longer see the necessity of a large home since their children are grown, affluent young marrieds and older couples who desire elegant lifestyles without the traditional encumbrances of a single family home."

Harry Babbitt, sales director, who has been associated with Big Canyon since its inception, adds this note: "In the 20 years in which I have been in real estate in Orange County, I've never seen as much advance interest in a luxury community as this one."

"Some 24 units have already been sold," he added.

Prices range from $94,350-$210,000 in the first phase. Homeowner Association monthly fee is $69.85.

Designed by Morris, Lohrbach & Associates, Newport Beach, the 13-acre community is comprised of several small enclaves of homes, each with its own courtyard, the dramatic centerpiece of which is a fountain. Lamp-lighted walkways are attended by magnificent specimen trees which ideally harmonize with the heavily shingled exteriors and roofs of the homes.

The concern for privacy is readily evidenced by the height of patio walls, dimensions of planter boxes and lavish use of shrubbery as screens.

Inside the two, three and three-bedroom-den homes, which range from 1,264 to 1986 square feet, a sense of light and spaciousness is created by clerestory windows and skylights. Sunken living rooms, with vaulted ceilings, supplemented by patios and/or decks, add to this atmosphere.

There are also sound-treated walls, which are double-insulated with double-staggered studs, smoke detectors and underground utilities. Kitchens include self-cleaning oven, dishwasher, range, hood, fan, trash compactor, disposal and Oriental Ash cabinetry. Master baths offer Roman tub, built-in planting areas, indirect lighting and Corian marble vanity tops. And fireplaces and wet bars are in all living rooms.

The five floor plans are designed in single and double-story plans. The Pinehurst, two-bedroom and den plan, with two and one-half baths, innovatively creates the feeling of a home twice its size by providing a den and dining area on one level with the living room sunken. The two bedrooms and two baths are on the upper level, with a clerestory window in the master suite.

Another two-story model, the two-bedroom, two-bath Greenbrier, features a dining area with cathedral ceiling; the adjoining sunken living room opens onto an outdoor deck or garden patio.

The three-bedroom, 2½-bath Eldorado, with 1764 square feet on two levels, is highlighted by a large entry foyer, which leads to a sunken living room, also opening onto an outdoor deck or patio. A formal dining room on the entry level and the living room both provide views.

Biggest floor plan is The Augusta, with three bedrooms, den, 2½ baths. Its two-story living room, with floor-to-ceiling fireplace, overlooked by an upper level galleria, creates the feeling of an elegant chateau rather than a 1986 sq. ft. house.

A single-story plan, The Oakcrest, is available with two bedrooms and two baths. One version provides a living room with cathedral ceiling, the other a sunken living room.

First occupancy is slated for June.

The model homes, open 10 a.m. to dusk, are on Ford Road between MacArthur Boulevard and Jamboree Road.

Bayshore homes 90 pct. sold out

The Bayshore, luxury condominium community in Belmont Shore, is 90 per cent sold out following its grand opening seven months ago.

Michael Engle, vice president of C. Robert Langslet & Son, the builder, said:

"The response to and enthusiasm for The Bayshore has been extremely gratifying, and we find ourselves with a very few of the most choice homes available for sale before the project is 100 per cent sold out."

Engle said there are two-bedroom, two-bath homes available, with prices that start at $88,900 with 5 per cent down.

"Very importantly," he stressed, "these last few homes offer exceptional Alamitos Bay views, and buyers can move in just in time to enjoy the pleasures of a terrific summer at the shore."

Located at 201 Bayshore Avenue, the 30-home community is directly on Alamitos Bay, across from Naples, and in addition to bay views, the three-story structure is built around an airy, landscaped interior courtyard.

Each home offers its own private entry and large exterior balcony, and each features extensive use of glass to take advantage of the views.

YEAR-ROUND recreation abounds in the area, and at The Bayshore, residents have a landscaped recreation area with a swimming pool, jacuzzi, gas barbecues, sink and eating facilities; a first-floor sun deck area overlooking the Bay and accented by a large reflecting pool and fountain; and adjacent boat slips which may be leased by Bayshore residents.

The homes feature deluxe General Electric appliances, including self-cleaning double oven and range, dishwasher, trash compactor, and garbage disposal. Westinghouse full-size stacked washers and gas dryers are included, as well as central air conditioning and heating.

Other features are wet bars, wood-burning fireplaces with gas lighters, ceramic tile in kitchens and baths, large kitchen pantries, mirrored wardrobe closets, and much storage.

To reach The Bayshore from Orange County, take the San Diego Freeway north to Seventh Street, proceed west on Seventh to Studebaker Road, turn south on Studebaker, and continue to Westminster Avenue. Turn right (west) on Westminster, which becomes Second Street, and proceed to The Bayshore, on the corner of Bayshore Avenue, Second Street and The Toledo.

From Los Angeles, take the San Diego Freeway south to Studebaker Road, then south on Studebaker to Westminster Avenue, and proceed as directed above.

C. Robert Langslet & Son has been building quality homes in the Long Beach area more than 25 years. In addition to The Bayshore, the company has announced plans to begin sales soon on its newest Long Beach condominium community, Parkview Terrace, across from Recreation Park golf course.

Shopping complex leasing

Anaheim's newest community shopping complex, Pear Tree Center, is nearing completion and is scheduled for opening June 1.

Jim Shimozono, principal of the Developer partnership, said a majority of the center's available spaces have been leased to a "balanced variety" of tenant categories.

Spaces assigned include a mini-market and liquor store, a family-type Japanese restaurant, a Hawaiian delicatessen, a facial and skin-care salon featuring Japanese cosmetics.

'Crack' in medical groups may be spreading

malpractice insurance, also figure.

Still another factor is the growing militancy of some younger doctors who are joining unions because they think the unions have more muscle than conventional medical groups.

In Long Beach, Dr. William Hyman, president of the local medical association, said the membership decrease here would have been even greater if it had not been for "some last-minute pleading by many of us in the establishment."

Hyman said disenchantment with organized medicine goes beyond the medical malpractice crisis and the mandatory membership question.

He said it also comes from "a feeling of futility, a feeling of despair that our profession is to be made a scapegoat for a country that has lost its work ethic, its idealism, its pioneer spirit, its dedication to freedom and individualism, all those things that the 'guys' talked about 200 years ago."

What he means, Hyman explained, is that the modern doctor is caught in the midst of a social evolution that has been occurring in the country but which has passed some doctors by.

Suddenly, in the wake of growing demands for better and cheaper medical care, especially for the disadvantaged, the doctor is faced with what seems to be the imminent takeover of medicine by government and he doesn't like it.

He sees his freedom in jeopardy and he rebels, and part of this rebellion is reflected in his disillusionment with organized medicine.

At the same time, Hyman continues, doctors are becoming aware there has to be better public access to the nation's system of medical care. They also are aware of the skyrocketing costs of that care.

Hyman said that, while there are some doctors who still see medical care as a privilege instead of the right of every citizen, most have moved from this position.

Still, a complete government takeover of medicine, something Hyman himself feels may be inevitable, depresses doctors. Hyman, describing the sadness he feels at this prospect, says, "I would not want my sons to go into medicine."

A self-described middle-of-the-roader, Hyman thinks government control of medicine would be "bad for the soul of the nation. . . We need some free enterprise, some creativeness with new ideas and a rededication to the doctor-patient relationship that is private and personal and warm and real.

"But by the year 2000, medical practice as we know it will be gone. You will see an entirely different thing."

Hyman also mentioned an unhappiness some doctors feel about "the lack of appreciation by some patients for the good that many of us doctors do for them. Certainly, there are many who appreciate us and respect us for trying to help them, but there are enough who hate the doctor and who make the doctor the scapegoat for every miserable thing that has happened in their miserable lives, and some of them have bad miserable lives."

What are the answers to organized medicine's dilemma?

—Better leadership: "Just like the country at large, we have to find leaders we can trust and believe in and respect," Hyman says.

—Improved image: "Our future depends in part on the public image we project. A little more honesty and earthiness will counteract more of the demigod and pompous attitudes of a few doctors."

—A compromise on the question of government control: "The future looks bleak for free enterprise in medicine. There will be more and more governmental control and the best we can hope for is a compromise that helps reduce the cost of medical care, but allows us enough freedom of thought and ideas to make it rewarding and satifying for boys and girls to still want to study medicine."

(If doctors had become involved in such things as private medical insurance plans in the '30s and Medicare in the '50s, instead of fighting them, they would have been better off, Hyman thinks.)

"If becoming a doctor becomes a second-rate type of job, you are going to find second-rate applicants applying for it. The cream of the crop will go into other fields."

—More unity among doctors who are traditionally individualistic: "There has to be some kind of raft to cling to....This is not to say that by sticking with organized medicine, (doctors) won't drown. But we have a better chance of surviving in private practice if we stay on the raft and try to build it into a battleship."

Chicanos urged to try harder to reach goals

By JOE SEGURA
Staff Writer

Declaring that they had a "tremendous future," Mario Obledo, California's health and welfare secretary, called on Long Beach Chicanos to unite to achieve their social objectives.

"We're just really starting," Obledo told more than 200 Long Beach Council of Raza Organization (CORO) members at the group's second annual banquet Saturday.

"Considering our 200 years of history, we have made tremendous strides, but not nearly enough."

OBLEDO cautioned the audience against despairing about economic and social setbacks and said Chicanos must "work harder" to achieve their goals at the community and state levels.

"Our commitment," he said, "is not of the same intensity as in the late '60s. It is therefore incumbent upon our Chicano community leaders to be diligent in confronting institutions that do not meet their responsibilities."

CORO is an umbrella organization of Long Beach Chicano groups involved in education, health and welfare.

Earlier Saturday, those attending the conference, entitled "Issues and Actions," adopted more than two dozen resolutions aimed at battling what they termed the dwindling Chicano status in Long Beach.

THE resolutions, dealing with affirmative action, women's rights, education and community affairs, were hammered out during day-long workshops.

Reports presented to the workshops painted a bleak general outlook for Chicanos.

Professional jobs in education and the civil service are limited, educational scholarships and grants have evaporated, school enrollment at all levels is falling and the cycle of opportunities is shrinking, the workshops concluded.

"Many people think that because of the Chicano movement, things are getting better," said Dr. Joseph Rocha, a University of California instructor. "But there's been a peaking and leveling off, and there are fewer and fewer students in upper education."

RESOLUTIONS adopted by the education workshop dealt mainly with what was described as the inability of elementary and secondary education systems to properly prepare students for college, the failure of colleges to provide adequate tutoring and counseling and the prohibitive expenses of college.

Of the resolutions drafted by the community affairs workshop and approved by CORO, only two —support of gun-control legislation and legislation giving legal aliens the right to vote after three years' residency—provoked extended debate.

One major proposal hammered out by the women's rights workshop called for better female representation on the academic staff at Long Beach State University, which now has only four Chicana instructors.

Another called on the City of Long Beach to develop a program to prepare for promotion Chicanas working in low-paying positions.

"I have trouble supporting the women's lib movement when it's already moving on from points we (the Chicanas) haven't reached yet," said Ann Ramirez, a member of the city Fair Employment Practice Commission.

BECAUSE the conference centered on local issues, CORO didn't move to support legislation that would fund the now inoperative Agriculture Labor Relations Board.

However, the luncheon speaker, Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, discussed the ongoing battle between Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers union, the Teamsters and growers.

"If we allow racism and destruction in the field, then we're allowing racism and discrimination in the urban area.

"You (CORO members) have been important in the past and will be in the future, not only politically but economically. Long Beach has not always been progressive, but we're going to change that."

Rally in South Gate marks International Worker Day

About 150 persons celebrated International Workers' Day with a peaceful but somewhat edgy rally in South Gate Park Saturday afternoon.

The rally, sponsored by the United May Day Committee, had been planned for some time, but a tiff with the South Gate City Council early last week left sponsors without a permit for reserved space in the park.

The council voted unanimously Monday to revoke a reserved-space permit for the rally on grounds that a city ordinance prohibits use of municipal facilities for religious, labor or political organizations.

Committee spokesman Al Adams of Cudahy and other committee members vowed to hold the event anyway.

On Wednesday, the city attorney told the group they could have the rally but could not reserve any special place in the park.

On Saturday members of the crowd—composed mostly of blue-collar and unemployed workers—were reluctant to speak with the press. Many cited the group's encounter with the city and said they didn't want to talk about the rally for fear of "retribution by the establishment."

When the rally began, several young workers formed a loose circle around the crowd, while plainclothes police officers and city officials watched from a distance.

A team of policemen took movies of the rally "at the request of the City Council so we will have a record of the size of the crowd and its behavior," said Mayor John Murdock.

Adams said the rally, conducted simultaneously with similar events in 20 other cities across the country, was staged "to let the members of the rich, profit-making classes know that we want better wages, and jobs for everyone.

"We are facing higher unemployment rates, wages that don't keep up with the cost of living and reductions in social services," Adams told the crowd.

"They used to say 3 per cent unemployment was acceptable. Now they say 6 per cent is acceptable, and by 1980 they say a 10 per cent unemployment rate will be acceptable. Well, behind every one of those percentage points stands 1 million unemployed workers, and that's not acceptable."

Teamsters picketing Cal's place

An attempt to unionize 45 garage workers at Cal Worthington Ford, 2850 Bellflower Blvd., moved into its sixth day Saturday as pickets continued to walk in front of the agency.

Spokesman Gregory Roth of Teamster Local 208 said the union is seeking recognition as bargaining agent for mechanics, porters, parts department workers and detail men.

Worthington was reportedly out of town and unavailable for comment Saturday.

Neighborhood sealed off; man, 78, held in shooting

A downtown neighborhood was sealed off by Long Beach police Saturday after a bullet whistled by two officers answering a complaint.

The incident ended with the arrest of a 78-year-old man on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon.

It erupted about 7:20 a.m. when officers, called by neighbors, heard a shot as they tried to talk to a man inside an apartment on West Fourth Street.

Patrolmen Mural Asbill and Marc Platt reported they had been speaking with the occupant, later identified as Bailey Stone, of 323 W. Fourth St., when the shot whizzed through the front door, spraying them with splinters.

They had earlier knocked on the door, asking the occupant to come out and talk to them, but were answered with "I don't care who you are—I'm not talking to nobody," according to their report.

After the shot they radioed for assistance and the area was barricaded.

When the occupant continued to refuse to come out, Asbill kicked open the door and disarmed Stone, who was loading a .32-caliber revolver, according to police reports.

Neighbors earlier told the officers Stone had been "making noise all night." Police said they were unable to determine the reason for the disturbance other than that Stone appeared to have been drinking.

Sierra Club's initiative view

Doug DeNike will present the Sierra Club's position favoring the Nuclear Initiative at a meeting of the Rancho Cerritos Chapter of the Sierra Club at 7:30 p.m. May 11.

The measure, which would limit the use of nuclear power in California unless stronger safeguards were imposed, will be on the June ballot.

The public is invited to the meeting at the Liberty Park recreation building, 19500 Studebaker Road, Cerritos.

pened," she added. The plants were either in "extreme harmony" with this "very earthy type music" or "so bored with it they didn't hear."

Mrs. Retallack, the wife of a doctor, didn't exactly set out to be a botanical luminary. In fact, she told the LBCC audience, she begged her dean to let her skip the biology class required for graduation.

Her begging was futile, and she found herself in a class for which she was told she'd have to perform an original experiment. "I wilted," she said.

The professor suggested using her major field of music for the experiment, however, and she remembered reading about some uses of sound with plants.

In one experiment, plants which had been prayed over grew better than those which were ignored. Also, in a yoga book on the use of music for health, she had read that African violets responded well to the notes B and D.

In an experiment with another student, she raised corn, radishes, philodendrons, geraniums and "six of the droopingest African violets you've ever seen" under grow-lights in a basement.

The plants were subjected to a self-rewinding 15-minute tape which played five minutes of the note B being struck on a piano keyboard, five minutes of D and five minutes of silence.

The African violets revived, but the other plants died.

Experiments with different styles of music followed, and the effects of the Led Zeppelin, Vanilla Fudge and Jimi Hendrix were deadly.

By contrast, plants leaned only five degrees away from modern, dissonant concert music, about the same reaction they showed to the dissonant compositions of Claude Debussy.

While she had no experimental evidence to explain the plants' pronounced likes and dislikes in music, Mrs. Retallack said the experiments were rigorously controlled, and she had some ideas for possible explanations.

While the effects of different types of music on plants could be explained by different effects of high or low frequencies, by heat energy or by some other physical factor, Mrs. Retallack is fascinated by the "theory of intent."

She says Ravi Shankar and rock musicians use "essentially the same kinds of instruments," but with vastly different intentions.

Shankar's music has a religious objective, she said, while the "intent of the acid rock was entirely different."

Acid rock "simulates drug trips" and has a "definite message referring to the possible effects of drug use, body eroticism and the dropout culture," she declared. It's a matter of the "highest spiritual nature" versus the "lowest animal nature."

Cross burned at residence

A cross was burned Ku Klux Klan-style on the lawn outside the home of a black Redondo Beach family early Saturday in the second such incident in the city within three weeks.

Investigators said the wooden, 36-by-32-inch cross was placed on the lawn in the Redondo Hills area between 1 and 6 a.m. It was discovered during the night by the house's residents—a mother and her three children—when a piece of wood was thrown through a window. The family notified police at about 6 a.m.

A similar incident occurred April 13 in the front yard of a home about a half-mile away.

Public asked 'Is sludge waste or resource?'

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

Sludge.

Is it a waste or a resource? Can it be processed for reuse? And, if processed, is it marketable?

These are the multimillion-dollar questions sanitation experts are currently trying to solve.

Five government agencies working together on the problem don't have the answers yet, but they hope to start off on the right foot by seeking public input.

The Regional Wastewater Solids Management Program for Los Angeles and the Orange County Metropolitan Area (LA/OMA Project) will hold an introductory public hearing Monday, starting at 7 a.m., in the auditorium of the Los Angeles County Health Services building, 313 N. Figueroa St., Los Angeles.

"It is not yet clear what reuse or disposal methods will be environmentally, socially and economically acceptable," said Bill B. Dendy, executive officer of the State Water Resources Control Board and chairman of the LA/OMA Project Policy Board.

"However, it is imperative that long-term, cost-effective solutions for handling these large quantities of wastewater solids be found. We plan to encourage public participation in each phase of the planning."

He said more than 600 dry tons of sludge were generated each day in Los Angeles and Orange counties during 1975.

To further compound the problem, it is anticipated that, by the year 2000, this amount may reach 1,200 tons a day. And that's no small problem.

Sanitation officials say there are two ways to go: We can consider the sludge as a waste product...and dispose of it somewhere. Or we can consider it a resource...and reuse it, somehow.

What is sludge?

Sewage — from where you live, work, play and shop — contains solid particles, most of which are removed as a slurry, or sludge, from tanks at sewage treatment plants.

This sludge must be processed to decompose organic matter and destroy harmful organisms and to remove as much water as necessary to make it suitable for disposal or recycling.

Dendy said sludge processing and disposal account for up to 50 per cent of the operating costs for a typical sewage treatment plant.

Some of the reuse and disposal alternatives to be studied and evaluated during the LA/OMA Project study, due for completion in 1979, include:

— Recycling...as soil nutrients and humus, natural gas, crude oil and thermal energy, charcoal and organic compounds and, possibly, some valuable metals and gases;

— Land disposal...sanitary landfills, remote drying basins and spreading on land set aside for sludge disposal;

— Air disposal...incineration and pyrolysis.

"Each of the alternatives has important environmental, social and economic issues that must be resolved," Dendy said.

He acknowledged that products derived from sludge are useful. But are they marketable? Would their value really offset processing costs, energy needs and use of natural resources?

He noted that an inexpensive alternative, such as ocean disposal, would cost about $7 million annually. Other alternatives, which involve sophisticated or remote processing, could range as high as $70 million annually.

The three-year planning program will cost $2 million, according to David Burack, project manager.

It is being sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the California Water Resources Control Board, the City of Los Angeles and Los Angeles and Orange counties' sanitation districts.

Groups and individuals who have questions on public meetings or wish to receive materials may contact LA/OMA Project officials at the Sanitation Districts of Los Angeles County offices in Whittier.

Services held for longtime L.B. educator

Funeral services were held Saturday morning for Thelma Barnes, longtime Southland educator, at the First United Methodist Church in Long Beach. Miss Barnes died Monday at age 70.

Born in Nebraska, Miss Barnes lived 53 years in Long Beach. She received her doctorate from USC and taught for 43 years in Los Angeles schools, including Hollenbeck Junior High, San Pedro High and Wilmington Junior High. She also had been president of the Los Angeles Junior High School Principals Association.

She was active in the YWCA, American Association of University Women, Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, the Eastern Star, the PEO, Delta Kappa Gamma, Phi Lambda Theta and Educare.

Miss Barnes is survived by a brother, Burt of Riverside; sisters, Mrs. Orpha Mae Brauti of Riverside and Mrs. LaVerne Bever of Pauma Valley; and ten nieces and nephews.

Bids set for Artesia Blvd. improvements

Bids on a contract to beautify the center dividing island of Artesia Boulevard from the east to the west city limits will be opened by the Long Beach city manager's office May 12.

Plans for the project, prepared by the Engineering Department in cooperation with the Park Department, were approved last Tuesday by the City Council.

The plans include installation of an automatic irrigation system, the planting of trees, shrubs and ground cover and construction of decorative rock pavement.

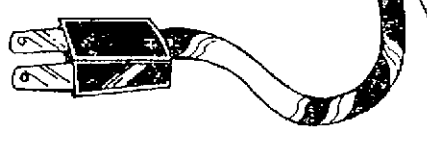

City Engineer Tom Marchese said the project should start in mid-June and be completed by October. The cost is estimated at $150,000, which will come from gasoline-tax funds.

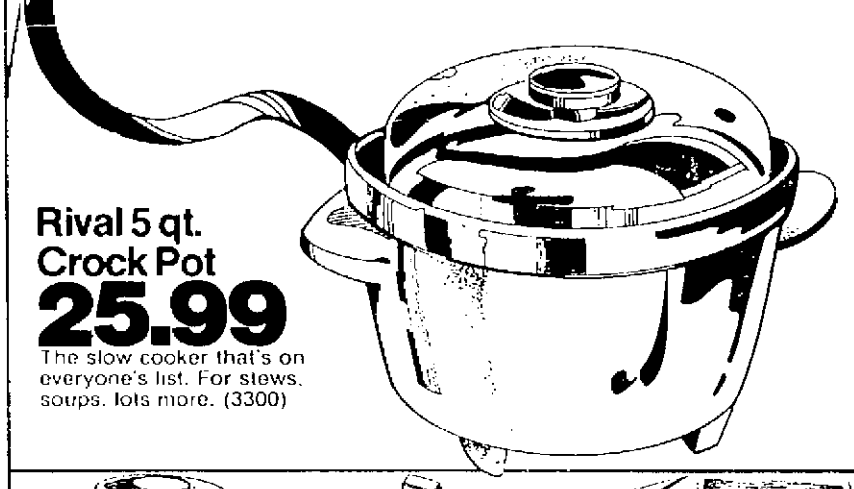

Mayor seeks nominees for advisory unit

Because Helen Wakefield has been appointed to the Long Beach Manpower Advisory Council, a vacancy now exists on the city's Community Development Advisory Commission and the mayor's office is inviting suggestions for an appointee.

Mrs. Wakefield represented the social services category on the commission, and candidates also must represent that category.

For new townhomes

Harbor View Knoll construction begun

Construction has begun for Harbor View Knoll, an adult townhome community designed to bring the charm of old Corona del Mar to the hills of The Irvine Co. Village of Harbor View in Newport Beach.

Built by Irvine Pacific Development Co., the homes are specifically designed to suit the needs and tastes of young, professional couples and active, retired couples whose children are grown, according to Frank E. Hughes, president of Irvine Pacific.

"HARBOR VIEW KNOLL will enrich the Village of Harbor View by offering a third lifestyle alternative," said Hughes. Currently there are large, detached family homes and apartments.

"Harbor View enjoys one of Southern California's most desirable locations with the beach, Fashion Island and Newport Center less than a mile away," he added.

The new community will be located adjacent to the Newport Hills Shopping Center at Ford Road and San Miguel Drive (formerly New MacArthur). It will consist of three and four home clusters arranged along curving streets and cul de sacs.

Many homes will enjoy excellent views looking from the hillside slope into Bonita Canyon, much of which preserved in the city plan as permanent open space.

"Architects Lee & Klages, whose credits include Foodpark and the Parkview Shopping Center in Irvine, have successfully captured the old-fashioned flavor of such distinctive coastal communities as Cape Cod and Corona del Mar," Hughes said.

Design techniques include the use of horizontal cedar wood siding with a natural stain, steeply pitched gable roofs, clean white trim, and even a white picket fence.

The cottage-like homes will have touches of brick and stonework as well as planters and private entries. Each home also will feature attached, two-car garages and either an enclosed patio or cantilevered wooden sundeck.

THE TWO-STORY, split-level homes will offer two and three bedrooms. "The floor movement is especially exciting with its many levels," Hughes noted. Special features include oak stairways with old-world, turned wood banisters, bay windows with window seats, arched openings and elegant master bedroom suites.

Interiors will be interpreted by designer Beverly Trupp of Santa Monica.

Sales for Harbor View Knoll are scheduled to begin in July. For additional information, contact Irvine Pacific.

Sellout near at Cameron Park

Sales are averaging six per week following the recent opening of the second and final unit at Cameron Park townhomes in Buena Park, according to the builder, Beard Development Co.

Only 10 of the 106 luxury residences remain in the low density community. There are fewer than nine units per acre and 48 per cent of the development is devoted to landscaped greenbelt areas.

Cameron Park offers five distinctive townhome plans priced from $37,950 to $48,750, with financing at 8 per cent interest (8¼ annual percentage rate).

The spacious one- and two-story designs feature up to 1630 square feet of living area with two, three or four bedrooms and 1½ and 2½ baths. Two-story plans include powder rooms and most master suites have private baths.

THE GARDEN residences offer such custom-quality appointments as stairways with wrought-iron railings, cathedral ceilings and fireplaces in various plans.

Convenience-oriented country kitchens include built-in range, oven, dishwasher, luminous ceiling and ceramic tile counter tops.

Additional price-included features are gas forced-air heating prepared for air conditioning, smoke detector system, complete exterior wall insulation, copper plumbing and pre-wiring for TV and telephone.

Extensive wood detailing, shingled siding and wood shake roofs highlight the homes exteriors. All homes have private patios with masonary fencing and oversized double garages with abundant storage space.

Within the lush landscaping of Cameron Park, residents can enjoy a swimming pool, recreation building and gazebo in attractive garden settings.

The maintenance-free community is located next to Smith-Murphy Park with six acres of rolling lawns, play and picnic areas. The private Los Coyotes Country Club and the exclusive Bellehurst area are within a few blocks of the development.

THE HOMES are close to schools of all grade levels, including the outstanding Sunny Hills High School, which serves the residents of Cameron Park.

The Cameron Park sales office and furnished model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 5400 Cameron Drive.

The development may be reached by taking the Santa Ana Freeway to Beach Boulevard in Buena Park, then north on Beach to Cameron Drive, just beyond Malvern Avenue (La Mirada Boulevard) and right (east) to Cameron Park.

A casual groundbreaking suggests the casual living at Lake Terrace II, a new lake-front residential development under construction by Biddle Development in Lake Forest. From the left, W. Scott Biddle, company president; Marshall Fant, executive vice president, and Ron Bannister, project manager. One participant arrived late. The homes, priced from $60,000, are at Lake Forest Drive and Muirlands Boulevard. Opening is scheduled in August.

'Terrace' location praised

A prestige location will be a major advantage for buyers of townhomes of Sea Terrace, Avco Community Developers' community overlooking the ocean in Laguna Niguel.

Priced from $59,900 to $65,900, the two- and three-bedroom townhomes are located above the Pacific Coast Highway in an area noted for its expensive custom homes, points out Joseph W. Smith, Avco sales director.

"Near Sea Terrace is the Sea Gate, with custom-built single-family homes priced from $230,000," he notes. "Just across the highway are the well known communities of Monarch Bay and Monarch Bay Terraces, with homes averaging $150,000."

The townhomes for sale in Sea Terrace are ready for move-in and are located in a community of 316 homes. Landscaping, street improvements, and all community facilities are complete, Smith observed.

"SEA TERRACE townhomes appear, because of their architectural design, to be separate homes," he said. "Each has an individual cement driveway, private enclosed patio and completely fenced yard."

Residents of Sea Terrace have private parking space at Niguel Beach Park nearby, as well as their own three-acre recreation center, including a small park, pool, jacuzzi, tennis courts and volleyball courts.

Sea Terrace is a private, guard-gated community, with access only by residents or guests.

New Lake Forest project

The Woods breaks ground

Another new entry into Orange County's fast-selling Lake Forest community got under way the past week when ground was broken for The Woods by The Baldwin Co., Irvine developer.

Set in a dense forest of eucalyptus trees, south of Toledo Drive, the 67-acre project will have 196 single-family detached homes featuring some of the most contemporary exteriors ever offered single-family home buyers in Orange County, according to James Baldwin, principal.

"The forest portion of Lake Forest is a world apart from the typical Southern California home development. Entering The Woods will be like entering a mountain village surrounded by mature trees," Baldwin said.

"In addition, families benefit from the many recreation opportunities that living in Lake Forest offers."

SIX PLANS will be available. The homes will range from two bedrooms and den to five bedrooms, one a loft bedroom/den. The plans incorporate large living rooms, formal dining rooms, family rooms, nook areas in the kitchens, and spacious master suites with luxurious dressing rooms.

Architectural high lights will include clerestory windows and high vaulted ceilings in living rooms, master bedrooms, and some kitchens; brick, siding, or shingle fireplace treatments; plant areas in master suite baths and entries; and rooftop sun decks.

"The single- and split-level homes have been designed to blend with the rolling, tree-studded terrain. The exteriors stress natural materials, using natural finish wood siding, shingles and brick," Baldwin noted. "Clipped eaves, shedroofs, and multiple roof planes will give the project an interesting and varied look."

The majority of homes at The Woods will overlook natural wooded areas, a part of Lake Forest's equestrian and pedestrian trail system which follows stream beds, across small meadows, and through the densely forested woods. Lake Forest, with its clubhouses and lakes, also offers a variety of recreation facilities including tennis, swimming, and horseback riding.

Ranging in size from 1,903 to 2,757 square feet, the homes at The Woods are expected to be priced in the low-$70,000 to the high-$80,000 bracket.

The project is scheduled to hold its grand opening in late July, while first move-ins are expected to begin in January.

A salesperson is at an on-site trailer, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday through Wednesday, to answer any questions and show blueprints of the homes.

The on-site office may be reached by taking the San Diego (5) Freeway to Lake Forest Drive, then proceeding north on Lake Forest to Toledo Way, and turning right.

Lido condominiums selling

A sales rate of almost one condominium sold per week since Jan. 1 is reported by 601 Lido Condominiums management.

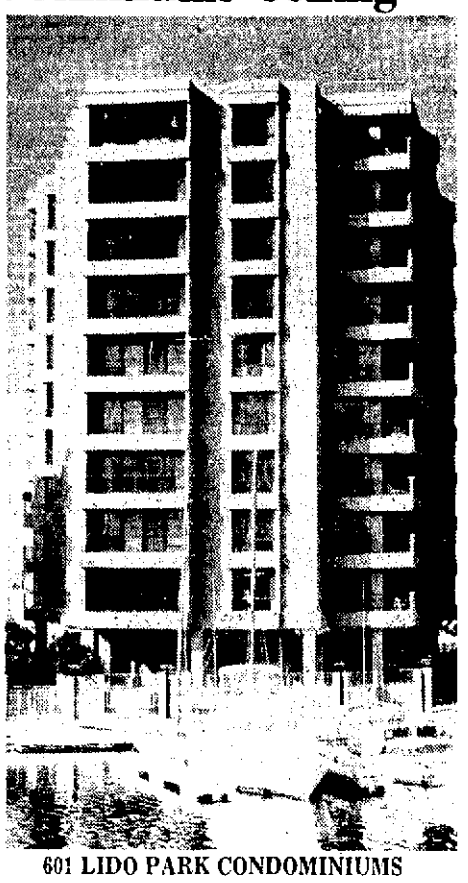

The super-luxury highrise condominiums located at the entrance of Lido Isle in Newport Beach began its fast-paced sales in January and to date the complex is at the half-way mark, with only 27 units remaining.

The management attributes the stepped-up pace not only to the acceleration in the economy but to the fact that 601 Lido is the only highrise in that area and no future highrises are planned.

The new model condominiums offer a view of the harbor area from their penthouse vantage point. The 601 Lido management predicts the complex will be sold out before the end of 1976. One model, Model C, is sold out on all nine floors.

The condominiums feature two bedrooms, 2 or 2½ baths, wet bar, private balcony, some with private sauna, master bath with private dressing room, air-conditioning individually controlled and anti-glare glass.

An added feature of 601 Lido Condominiums is its 24-hour guard and closed-circuit television surveillance service of all entraces, hallways and common areas with a call system in each residence.

WELLINGTON CHILDREN AND SISTERS VISIT ICEBREAKER

Icebreaker's crew gives, gets a day to remember

The 199 officers and crew of the Coast Guard icebreaker Burton Island —based in Long Beach — aren't likely to forget two recent calls to Wellington, New Zealand.

The first stop, en route to Antarctica, was during Christmas last year. The ship was delayed in port three days while repairs were made on a helicopter, and the city's newspapers, television and radio stations urged local residents to invite the Americans to their homes for Christmas. The offers from Wellington's citizens poured in.

"We had more invitations than we could fill," noted the ship's commanding officer, Capt. James Fournier of Fountain Valley

DURING the next two months, while the Burton Island participated in Operation Deepfreeze 1976, the crew recalled the warm Wellington hospitality and decided to do something in return.

They held auctions, staged Reno nights and sold popcorn during their evening movies, raising $1,741 for the Wellington Home of Compassion, a home for deaf, retarded and crippled children. And as a salute to the U.S. Bicentennial, the ship's petty officers first class donated an extra $35 to boost the contribution to $1,776.

By radio, the Burton Island sent out an invitation for some of the home's children to come aboard when the ship returned to New Zealand Feb. 23.

With newsmen from the city's two TV stations and its newspaper on hand, 24 children aged 4 to 12 and six sisters from the home boarded the icebreaker. They were fed fried chicken with all the trimmings prepared and served by Mario Janajabab, Victor Santos, Danny Ray, Richard Sanchez, Tom Farrell and Merle Shiltz.

THEN followed a stem-to-stern ship's tour and a request from the children to see "where the captain lives." After a visit to the captain's quarters, they were taken to the flight deck and hoisted aboard a helicopter, where PO Dave LaGrange explained the complicated equipment.

"A few sisters were a mite apprehensive about leaving the children with the crewmen. But when they saw the children, their tummies full, cradled in crewmen's arms and sound asleep, they relaxed, convinced their charges were in good arms," Fournier said.

"One little girl—Julie—was particularly looked after by several big brothers. Soft brown eyes, pixie hair, dimples and a delightful smile. Julie is missing two arms and a leg, but she had what it took to win a sailor's heart," said the Burton Island's skipper.

After the tour the youngsters and sisters were taken back to the mess deck for a treat of ice cream and soft drinks.

"THE ENTIRE event, the fund-raising, the tour, the meal, everything, was handled by the enlisted personnel. It was their show from start to finish," Fournier said.

The day ended with the crewmen carrying the youngsters down the gangway to the waiting bus for home.

"There must have been an eye irritant in the air because some of the crew were pretty misty-eyed as the bus pulled out," said Fournier. "That was a day the Burton Island's entire crew will remember for a long, long time."

It's a relatively safe bet that the children will remember the day even longer.

La Jolla pair rescued from Baja beach

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A La Jolla couple was rescued from a narrow Baja California beach Saturday by a Coast Guard helicopter after their 45-foot ketch ran aground in stormy seas and heavy fog.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnson were picked up shortly after 7 a.m. on the rocky beach near Punta San Fernando, about 125 miles south of Ensenada.

The couple said they spent most of the night aboard the boat Summer Wind after it was washed onto the rocks.

Johnson, 56, a retired Navy warrant officer, said he had a few broken ribs and his wife had a sprained ankle and wrenched knee.

He said they were on their way home from a four-month cruise in Mexican waters.

A radio operator on a passing merchant ship heard their distress call and passed it on to the Coast Guard.

Johnson said he would attempt to salvage the boat, valued at $85,000.

LB.-L.A. harbors 2nd in nation in arrivals

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

The Long Beach-Los Angeles port complex was second only to New York in the nation in the number of vessels arriving last year, according to the New York Maritime Association.

The two Southland back-to-back ports (considered by the U.S. Customs Service as a single port) counted 4,804 ship arrivals, while New York, which includes the ports in New Jersey, tallied 7,832 arrivals, accounting for 17.4 per cent of the national total.

The Long Beach-Los Angeles count was 10.8 per cent of the nation's total ship arrivals during 1975.

New Orleans was in third place with 4,700 arrivals, or 10.4 per cent.

Whirlybirds

Catalina Airlines, which operates seaplanes between Long Beach Airport and Avalon on Catalina Island, wants to fly two helicopters on a daily basis between the Catalina Terminal in San Pedro and the island.

Randy Bombard, 27-year-old general manager of the airline, who was born and raised on Catalina (as was his father, Doug), wants to fly the two whirlybirds from a landing pad in the San Pedro terminal parking lot to another landing pad near Pebbly Beach, a short distance from Avalon's city limits.

Bombard tells the Waterfront that the helicopters, unlike the seaplanes of Catalina Airlines and a competitive airline, Air Catalina, will be able to make night flights to and from the island.

Proposed fare for the 12-passenger helicopters would be $13.50 one way for an adult. Flight time would be 12 minutes, about the same as the fixed-wing seaplanes.

CATALINA AIRLINES was recently purchased by the Paul R. Bryles Wing and Helicopters Co., an international company operating both fixed and rotary-wing aircraft throughout the world.

Catalina Airlines apparently does not need approval of the California Public Utilities Commission to operate the helicopter service—something to do with flights over international waters over which the state has no jurisdiction.

But Long Beach/Catalina Cruises, which operates three 700-passenger vessels out of Long Beach and Avalon, wants to operate also out of the Catalina Terminal in Los Angeles Harbor. That company must obtain permission of the PUC because of a section in the state code relating to "vessels." The shipping lines operating boats between the mainland and the island and passing through international waters—those beyond the three-mile limit—must have PUC approval, but airlines flying over international waters do not.

HOW COME?

And what is a "vessel?"

If a seaplane takes off from land (Long Beach Airport) but lands on water (at Catalina), when does it become an aircraft and/or a vessel?

And if a seaplane takes off from the water and lands on water, as does Air Catalina operating out of the San Pedro Catalina Terminal and the island, when does it become a vessel or an aircraft, and are the operators subject to PUC regulation?

The PUC doesn't have a firm answer.

Mention of Randy Bombard brings to mind another related matter. His father, who for many years managed the Cove and Camp Agency for the Santa Catalina Island Co. and who is known to thousands of Southland pleasure boaters who visit the Two Harbors area at the Isthmus on Catalina, has purchased the agency from the island company.

Profits up

Pacific Far East Line, Inc., which last year was foundering in financially troubled seas, has reported a profit for the first quarter of this year in excess of $10 million.

During the same period a year ago the company, which recently shifted its Southland base of operations from Los Angeles to Long Beach, reported a loss of $1.3 million or about $1.46 per share. The profit during the 1976 first quarter is about $11.22 per share.

Most of the profit resulted from a capital gain of $9 million from the sale last year of four PFEL ships in the Australian-U.S. West Coast trade to Farrell Line.

Lockheed troubles: news for 20 years

By JOHN M. LEE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — For two decades Lockheed Aircraft Corp. has been at the center of assorted corporate dramas.

There were the failures with the Electra turboprop in the 1950s, the Central Intelligence Agency links with the U2 spy plane, the huge cost overruns on the C5A military transport, the crash-prone F104s in West Germany, the cliff-hanger on marketing the wide-bodied L1011 jetliner with Rolls-Royce engines, the extraordinary government-guaranteed loan in 1971 to avert bankruptcy, and the continuing battle to achieve financial viability, given a grotesque burden of debt.

FEW corporations have so preoccupied public attention. But then Lockheed is something special — a key link in the military-industrial complex, with close ties to the Pentagon and CIA; a provider of advanced technology; arms-seller to the Western alliance and instrument of national policy in the confrontation with communism. Clearly, Lockheed's survival and even its prosperity have been deemed vital to the national interest.

Now, Lockheed finds itself at the center of the most far-reaching controversy of its crisis-prone history — namely, the payment of some $24 million in bribes and kickbacks over a number of years to promote the sale of both military and commercial aircraft abroad. In its zeal for selling, Lockheed overstepped the bounds of what many consider proper corporate conduct.

OF COURSE Lockheed is but one of some 100 major U.S. corporations that have admitted, under pressure from the Securities and Exchange Commission, improper payments.

But here again Lockheed is something special. Although the machinations of the Gulf Oil Corp., Northrop Corp. and United Brands are startling enough, Lockheed has admitted payments to pro-Western government figures in Italy and Japan, as well as to Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands. It has thereby provided devastating political ammunition to opposition elements in those countries.

Indeed, business-government efforts in arms sales or other exports are more coordinated abroad. It is almost inconceivable that the French or Japanese governments would accuse their own businessmen of bribery. Japanese officials have been notably slow in pursuing their Lockheed bribery probe lest confidence in the long-standing Liberal Democratic government be undermined.

In the United States, life is more pluralistic and interests more diverse.

President Ford belatedly recognized the spreading scandal by appointing a panel of Cabinet members to come up with recommendations. But little is expected until after the November election, and by then whatever public anxiety exists may have subsided.

The thrust for disclosure thus seems to rest with the SEC, senators like Frank Church, D-Idaho, and William Proxmire, D-Wis., and some of the news media.

Some people like SEC Chairman Roderick M. Hills assert that much progress has already been made in cleaning up U.S. business methods. Many corporations have set up special audit committees, strengthened the role of their outside (nonexecutive) directors and established new codes of conduct or reaffirmed old ones. Auditors are more vigilant, and a couple of the most conspicuously involved executives — Daniel J. Haughton at Lockheed and Bob R. Dorsey at Gulf — have been ousted.

In the view of many, the massive disclosures of improper corporate conduct by Lockheed and others have a uniquely American flavor. There stands the moralistic Church lecturing the cynical Europeans. Shades of Woodrow Wilson! But the genie is out of the bottle, no one can put it back, and what it will do next is anyone's guess.

The efforts of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. pale beside what Lockheed may unwittingly accomplish. The disclosure of improper dealings with Lockheed helped undermine confidence in the Christian Democratic government in Italy, which resigned on Friday. If the new elections bring Communists into the government, will Lockheed share the blame? Will the stigma of Lockheed associations also undermine the government of Japan and the royal family of the Netherlands as well?

Arms and bribery have long been linked. The notoriety of Sir Basil Zaharoff and his wheeling and dealing for Vickers of Britain before World War I encouraged the phrase "merchants of death." Cynics have always assumed a certain amount of bribery in arms sales, and in this view the current disclosures simply confirm the obvious. It's nothing new. "Everybody" does it.

The arguments are that "If we don't sell them arms, someone else will," and that the spread of American arms and aircraft abroad is an instrument of national prestige and influence, making the buyer beholden to the technological largesse of the United States. The arms salesman is thus unleashed and encouraged by the Pentagon. Besides, it's good for the balance of payments and for employment in California.

Lockheed thus undertook such activity, along with others, on a worldwide basis. But, what Lockheed apparently failed to realize was that, while the world might wink indulgently at payoffs to the Hottentots — after all, bribery was thought to be a way of life in Asia, Latin America and the Middle East — it was quite another matter to make payoffs in Western societies, where standards of ethical behavior are avowed to be stricter. An outcry at public disclosure was inevitable.

Another matter that apparently confuses the arms seller, and in this case Lockheed, is the identity of the enemy. In Japan, the enemy seemed to be the Grumman Aircraft Corp. even more than the Russians. Testimony has shown that Lockheed bribery in Japan took an order away from Grumman. In effect, Burbank, Calif. (Lockheed), cheated at the expense of Bethpage, N.Y. (Grumman).

Foreign countries have expressed astonishment not so much at the bribery as at the American obsession for exposing it, and European sophisticates lament the trouble Americans have caused by their post-Watergate zeal for harsh disclosure. Anthony Sampson, the British author, wrote recently, "In the (view of) European societies, the coloration of mild traditional corruption is...a low price to pay for the continuation of the Italian Christian Democrats, the Dutch monarchy or the Atlantic Alliance itself."

'Slump erasing women's gains'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Lt. Gov. Mary Anne Krupsak of New York Saturday said the economy is wiping out women's economic gains and endangering the Equal Rights Amendment's chances for passage.

"The threat of women competing with men for scarce jobs" was the principle reason that voters in New York and New Jersey rejected state versions of the ERA last fall, she said.

The 44-year-old Democrat addressed more than 1,000 women at a conference on women and the economy, sponsored by California Lt. Gov. Mervyn Dymally. Other participants included actress Jane Fonda and Black Panther leader Elaine Brown.

Miss Krupsak said women "are actually losing ground" economically, citing statistics that the wage gap between men and women is widening.

At a news conference afterward, she said affirmative-action hiring and promotion of women and minorities should carry at least equal weight with the "last-hired, first-fired" principle of union seniority.

"WE HAVE HERE a competition between two equally cherished values," she said. "Affirmative action must not be thrown away to protect job security.

"We must work with our union brothers and sisters and make them understand the value of affirmative action."

Miss Krupsak said she was surprised and pleased by a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision awarding retroactive seniority to blacks who had been denied a job by a company's policy.

But she said it didn't go far enough, because many minorities have been discouraged from even applying for work by discriminatory policies.

"Our problem has always been dividing up a small pie when what we have needed is to make the pie large enough for all to share," she told the conference.

She called for more available child care, flexible working hours, changes in tax laws that hurt working women, and government action to increase the number of part-time jobs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Brings in a satisfying year of personal reorganization, and the establishment of a firm base of operations. Material progress overcomes obstacles, gradually improves. Relationships proliferate, involve more people at every turn. Today's natives have strong appetites, great energy, go in for vocations requiring skill to reach psychological underpinnings of human nature.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Freely accept volunteer help, but don't seek or ask for it. Group funds increase with sensible promotion. Home is the best place for main efforts.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Relatives demand attention; you can be of immense aid at little cost. Marital or partnership talks are varied, better if you pool your efforts.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Check details, reservations, appointments for any pending venture. Technical consultations are favored, but must be supported by further action on your part.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): If you're on the beam, plans advance. If they don't, do you really want items that seem beyond reach? Would you be able to cope with the consequences?

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Though inclined not to, you should get out of the public eye. Don't casually delegate serious matters to others. Attend to confidential features in person.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Symbolically, this is a "clear" day for better vision and intuition. Keep your ears open for extra meaning in news from distant places.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Forget hypothetical or speculative gambits. Take a direct approach to the most important job at hand. Work at building your public image: be seen and heard.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put in overtime to end static ventures. Professional advice requires modification to fit other factors. New equipment can be acquired at a savings.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Exert personal leadership among those who will listen. Group ideas include a few that work splendidly. An evening journey has satisfying results.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Creativity is featured, ranges from simple projects to major city planning, in line with your position on the scene. Romance finds some response.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Show your wares: apply for jobs, raises. Seek simpler ways to get work done. Completely change pace tonight, and let your mind digest experience.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Buy clothing and furnishings within budgets. Social encounters include people who figure in your future. Emotions are fluent over a long-past incident.

THE WILDERNESS DESIGNED FOR LOVERS OF HORSES

The Wilderness a rider's haven

Horses as welcome as people

The Wilderness, designed for families who love horses, is a $3 million residential community offering ranch-like living amid the foothills of the Santa Ana Mountains.

Created by Pacesetter Homes, in Orange, The Wilderness is a "delightfully relaxing place for horses and humans," noted Landon M. Exley, vice president and general manager of the company.

"Unlike most residential developments where horses must be kept in the back yard, The Wilderness is designed so that horses are easily accessible to owners without destroying the California lifestyle of backyard living."

Managed by The Wilderness Homeowners Association, a complete equestrian center operates daily. Included within the center is a fenced riding ring, covered stables with pipe stalls, tack boxes, automatic water cups, a horse washing rack, an electric hot walker, covered hay storage and a private bridle trail.

THERE IS ALSO a paved, fenced storage area for trailers and recreational vehicles.

"Plus, additional riding trails criss-cross the area from The Wilderness into Irvine Park several miles away," Exley said.

"It required months of research and planning, but what we have achieved at The Wilderness," Exley continued, "is a community that is appealing to those people who enjoy the feel of open space, and particularly those who own horses."

Grouped in clusters of two on very large lots, a total of 48 homes are scattered about the 24-acre site. More than 15 acres of fully landscaped open space winds throughout the site, which is completely enclosed by a rustic, open fence.

Homes are located on cul-de-sac streets. The one through street, designed for the semi-private use of residents and their guests, has minimal through traffic.

Located on Santiago Canyon Road near Irvine Park and Irvine Lake, The Wilderness homes offer three floor plans from 1,780 to 2,151 square feet.

There are two, two-story models — The Appaloosa and The Cascade — and one, single-story home — The Cheyenne. All three have extensive wood siding and rustic cedar shake roofs that add to the country atmosphere.

Homes have three and four bedrooms, and two and 2½ baths.

Desirable features include wood-burning fireplace, cathedral ceilings, stained rough ceiling beams, shag carpets throughout, vinyl asbestos floor tile, designer-selected hardware and lighting fixtures and energy-saving gas forced-air heating.

ALL-GAS KITCHENS with built-in oven and range, dishwasher, formica countertops and hand-finished cabinetry are other features.

"Common area maintenance, supported by the homeowners association, includes the upkeep of the grounds, landscaping and even the exteriors of the homes," said Exley.

"This means homeowners are free to spend more time enjoying their horses, or whatever."

Homes are priced from $63,950 to $73,950.

New elementary and intermediate schools are within a five-minute walk for children. Several neighborhood centers are less than 10 minutes drive, and the Mall of Orange is about 15 minutes away.

The Wilderness was designed by Frank Leslie Spangler Associates, Newport Beach.

To reach the sales office, which is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk, follow the Newport Freeway to Katella Avenue. Go east about 2½ miles — Katella becomes Santiago Canyon Road — to Meads Avenue.

Country Club Gardens

Recreation facilities of townhomes noted

Adult-oriented recreational facilities have contributed to the sales at Country Club Gardens townhomes, an exclusive new residential community in Long Beach, spokesmen report.

Recreation high lights include a large free-form swimming pool, jacuzzi and night-lighted paddle tennis courts. Quiet residential streets provide an area for bicycle riding.

The homes are also convenient to Los Cerritos Park and tennis courts, Lakewood Golf and Tennis Club and Long Beach's world-famous beaches and marinas.

Prices range from $52,950 to $54,950 with excellent conventional financing.

All are in rustic contemporary exterior styling designed in keeping with the area's exquisite custom homes.

Architectural detailing includes roofs of cedar shake, trellised entries and beautiful private garden patios.

Spacious master suites and convenience-planned kitchens with deluxe Tappan appliances, pantries and luminous ceilings are in each home.

Ceramic tiling and plush wall-to-wall carpeting are additional price-included features.

Surrounding the townhomes are extensive greenbelt areas with waterfalls, streams, bridges and reflection lakes and winding, lighted, tree-lined walkways and drives.

The park-like grounds, facilities and exteriors of the residences are professionally maintained through the homeowners association.

Immediate occupancy is available at this community of 72 townhomes. The sales office and model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. at 3655 Country Club Drive and Cedar Avenue for selection in the final group of homes.

Country Club Gardens may be reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to the Long Beach Boulevard exit, then north on Long Beach Boulevard to 36th Street and west on 36th (which becomes Country Club Drive) for one-quarter mile to Cedar Avenue.

Secret Witness case summaries

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 66 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $43,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

Rewards in all cases, whether or not previously published, will remain in effect until such cases are closed or until notification in these pages that the reward has been withdrawn.

To ensure eligibility for rewards, informants must channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness number or by writing in care of the special Secret Witness post-office box.

Today's summaries follow:

— Rewards totaling $7,000, including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $5,000 pledged by the Long Beach Police Association, are offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Long Beach police officer Franke Neal Lewis, shot to death at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 14, 1975, when he approached a car parked in the 6300 block on Cantel Street to investigate a disturbance.

— Rewards totaling $2,500, including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by the Bellflower Education Association, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Joseph Clark Bott, 41-year-old Bellflower High School teacher, who was shot to death as he was returning to his home at 6054 Whitewood Ave. in Lakewood at 5:30 p.m. on Nov. 31, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Stephen Duane McCord, 28-year-old Mira Loma man found shot to death in an alley at the rear of 3033 E. Anaheim St. on the morning of April 1, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 16-year-old Wendy Blanchard, of Santa Monica, whose partly nude and bludgeoned body was found on the morning of Jan. 7, 1976, on a sidewalk near 172 W. Colden Ave. in South Los Angeles. She was last seen alive at 11:25 p.m. on Jan. 6 at the Greyhound bus station in Long Beach, where she was talking with a tall, thinly built young black man.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who fatally injured 87-year-old Laura McGill, of Long Beach, when he knocked her down and fled with her purse at Cedar Avenue and Seventh Street at 6:45 p.m. on Jan. 19, 1976.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of John Miner, 57, who died Nov. 13, 1975, of injuries suffered when he was struck on the head by a holdup man who forced his way into the victim's apartment at 1121 E. Third St. at 2:20 a.m. on Oct. 19, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Robert George Zeiger, 18-year-old clerk who was shot down and killed with a shotgun blast during a holdup at the Red Carpet Liquor Store, 85 Alamitos Ave., late on Oct. 13, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan. 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2299 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a neatly dressed man about 35. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is described as about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, with dark, curly hair. He speaks French as a second language and is believed to be from Canada.

—A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Marie Martha Guerra, 80, at Hawthorne Boulevard and 178th Street in Torrance at 2:50 a.m. on Oct. 2, 1975. The driver of the sports car, a Triumph with a yellow body and black convertible top, was described as a white man about 30, 5 feet 8, about 160 pounds, with short brown curly hair, a bushy mustache and wire-frame glasses.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of any of the youths responsible for two robbery attacks on Independent, Press-Telegram distributor Richard F. Broderick, both occurring at a newspaper rack at 20th Street and Atlantic Avenue, the first at 4:10 a.m. on May 29, 1975, and the second at 5:25 a.m. on June 11, 1975.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself . . . any name, as long as it's not your own . . . and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, 90801.

$32,000 stolen at market

Two men escaped with more than $32,000 from a Compton grocery store Saturday after surprising an armored transport company employe who was making a cash delivery, sheriff's deputies reported.

Yoshi Sakamoto, manager of Ralph's Grocery, 4410 E. Compton Blvd., told deputies that two men, one armed with a pistol, entered the market shortly before 10 a.m. and escorted him to his office where they demanded he open a safe.

The safe couldn't be opened because of a time-lock device, Sakamoto said, so the robbers gathered $2,000 from the office. As they started outside, they surprised an unidentified transport company messenger carrying a sachel containing $30,000. He was forced at gunpoint to hand it over.

The bandits left with two other men in a getaway car described by witnesses as a bronze Pontiac.

Trucker in serious condition

A truck driver injured in a chain-reaction accident on the 605 Freeway in Pico Rivera was reported in serious condition Saturday after undergoing surgery at Beverly Hospital.

The eight-car pileup resulted in the death of a Long Beach man, Phillip Craig White, 26, of 391 Mira Mar Ave. Three others were injured.

Coroner's deputies said White was killed instantly when the car he was driving rammed an overturned tractor-trailer rig and spun across the freeway into a cement abutment at about 3:30 p.m. Friday.

The accident occurred on the freeway near the Beverly Boulevard offramp after truck driver Martin Freeman, 31, of Bakersfield, lost control of his rig and it overturned.

GG man killed in car crash

A 45-year-old Garden Grove man was killed when the car he was driving struck a bridge abutment on a winding, mountain road near Agua Dulce, Highway Patrolmen reported Saturday.

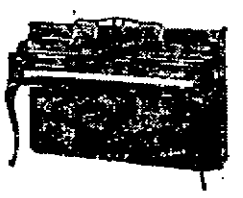

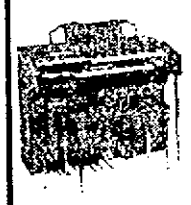

Officers said Everett D. Henson, of 10082 Flanner Ave., was westbound on Soledad Canyon Road just west of the Agua Dulce tunnel when he lost control of his car and rammed the abutment late Friday.

Henson was dead on arrival at Henry Mayo Hospital in Newhall, officers said.

25 Showcase homes sold

Sales are fast paced at Lake Forest's single-family community, Showcase On The Lake, where 25 homes have been sold in the last three weeks.

Sparking buyer enthusiasm in the Showcase Homes community is the unique "custom completion plan" that allows early-selection homebuyers to choose door positions, window placement, put in or remove interior walls (except load bearing walls), and add individual features depending upon the stage of construction.

Priced from $50,000 to $72,950 with 8¾ per cent interest (9 per cent annual percentage rate) on conventional financing, the homes offer up to 1,806 square feet of living space with three and four bedrooms and up to three baths in one- and two-story concepts.

TYPICAL KITCHEN AREA OF A SHOWCASE HOME

EACH OF the six innovative floor plans is available in three distinctive exterior stylings. Broad expanses of shingle, rich wood and stucco siding topped by shake roofs with wide overhangs compliment the Showcase community.

Living areas are enhanced by vaulted and elevated ceilings, wall-to-wall shag carpeting and draperies. A wet bar and brick, wood-burning fireplace with convenient loglighter are delightful living-room features.

Other luxury features include master suite with private bath, walk-in closets or oversized wardrobes and Dupont Corian marble and Armstrong vinyl flooring in baths. Each plan has a private patio, and attached two-car garage. Lakefront plans have docking space.

PLANNED for convenience and easy care, Showcase kitchens include built-in eye-level double oven, dishwasher and disposal, luminous ceiling, custom hardwood cabinetry and large dining space. All homes have inside laundry areas.

Residents are within walking distance of the Sun and Sail Club.

To see the furnished models at 24342 Toledo Lane, decorated by Vickie Welsh of Modern Interiors, take the San Diego Freeway to the Lake Forest Drive off-ramp in Lake Forest. Turn left on Lake Forest to Toledo, and left one-half mile on Toledo to the models and sales information center, open from 10 a.m. to dusk.

Refinancing home may help your chances of selling it

By DON CAMPBELL

The reasons for refinancing a home can run from absolute necessity (putting the monthly mortgage payments back down at a level you can afford) to simply making the house more attractive to a potential buyer.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

We have a mortgage balance of $7,500 on our home on which we pay 5¾ per cent interest. It has been appraised at $38,000. We would like to sell it since we do not want to continue maintenance of our swimming pool.

The house we would like to buy is $33,500 and will need some work, which we can do ourselves. It has a mortgage balance of $16,400 at 6¾ per cent.

The majority of our savings is in Series E bonds, which we would like to keep secure and not cash in until we retire in about 15 years. Would we be better off to pay off our mortgage of $7,500, thus making it easier for someone to buy our home and assume the new mortgage?

Also, we would have the available money to assume the mortgage of the new house and have an interest rate of only 6¾ per cent. Is it, in your opinion, sound for us to do this, and would a bank go along with this? — Mrs. C. R., Phoenix, Ariz.

ANSWER: I don't see anything wrong with it, and — all other things being equal — I don't know why a lender wouldn't go along with it.

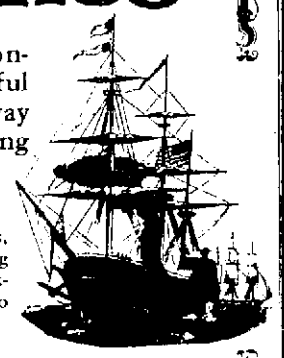

In order to get the mortgage on your present home down (or, looking at it the other way — "up") to a level where a prospective buyer could assume it, you'd have to refinance it for $30,000 or $33,000. Whether, in today's money market, a lender would find this acceptable or not is a matter that only investigation can determine.

It would certainly make your present home pretty attractive — requiring only a buyer capable of putting $5,000 down in cash and assuming a monthly mortgage payment of $272 (principal and interest for 30 years at 9¼ per cent). Or perhaps, the buyer could put down $8,000 in cash and take on mortgage payments of about $247.

At 68, Eddie Albert just keeps on starring

NEW YORK — Eddie Albert at 68 isn't letting the parade pass him by.

He's jogging a little ahead of it, worrying that the decline of agricultural soil might bring the end of the human race, and at the same time concerned because his son, actor Edward Albert, doesn't seem to believe in marriage.

"He's lived in some propinquity with several fine girls," Eddie said, frowning about it at lunch one day recently. "I think they're insane, to tie themselves to one and then to another and not have anything real. But he's 24, and I don't know what it's all about, so I keep my mouth shut. And that's probably a copout. I pretend to be a noble soul when I don't really know what the hell to do."

Eddie finds himself professionally on top at 68. He's star-billed in a new film, "Burch Interval" — and his TV series "Switch," with Robert Wagner, has been picked up for another season. He hasn't had top billing in a film for several years, and he finds it pleasant.

"Rip Torn played my son, and he really steals the picture," Eddie assured me. "In the film he loses his mind. I try to hold the family together.

"He was supposed to be dying, and he had a pot of pepper and sniffed from it, and his eyes were swollen and he really looked sick."

Was it fair for an actor to use artificialities?

"You do anything you can ... shove a hot poker up your behind ... sniff menthol to make you cry. The main thing is the performance."

They made the film 30 miles from Gettsburg. "I used to jog every morning on the battlefield. I got to be an expert on the Battle of Gettsburg. We were in the apple season with the Mennonites, and I learned to make apple butter!" Eddie's eyes lit up at that, because it fit in with his interest in ecology.

How many pictures had he done?

"I don't know. Fifty — 60 — 70. What the hell did I do with the money? First one was 'Brother Rat,' with Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman, Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane. I don't see many of them. To me it's a lousy way to spend an evening. I'd rather study or work."

He was nominated for Oscars for "Heartbreak Kid" and "Roman Holiday." He lost, placing himself in the company of Cary Grant, Greta Carbo and other nonwinners, and he admitted, "While that puts me in good company, I'd just as soon have the Oscar."

Eddie disclosed that he was once a circus trapeze flier in Mexico with the Flying Escalantes.

"I was no good; I could get up and down," he said. "I was in no danger ... not with a net!"

Eddie Heimberger, as he was born in Minnesota, recently legalized his name as Eddie Albert, so as not to have his son Edward be a Junior. Maria, 21, a Spanish orphan whom he and his wife, Margo, adopted, was just offered a movie role.

He got briefed here on the latest thing in ecology for speeches he makes around the country. The big thing, he says, is to make use of garbage, humus and manure.

He tells the story of Harry Truman saying, "We must put some manure on the lawn." Margaret spoke up, "Daddy, don't say 'manure'; say 'fertilizer.'" Bess Truman retorted: "Let it go. We had enough trouble getting him to say 'manure'."

TODAY'S BEST laugh: Someone described an incompetent talent scout: "He would have discovered America in 1493."

Wish I'd said that: Some women will buy anything they think the store is losing money on.

Remembered quote: "Praise does wonders for the sense of hearing." — Dr. Herb True.

EARL'S PEARLS: The late Joe E. Lewis used to complain that stories about his drinking were exaggerated: "If I drink a quart they say it's a gallon, and if I drink a gallon they say I'm drunk."

There's a new diet that allows you to eat huge helpings of everything at breakfast, lunch and dinner. Breakfast's on Sunday, lunch on Wednesday and dinner on Friday. That's earl, brother.

House of Westmore: 59-year makeup job

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Dynasties don't last very long in Hollywood, as witness the fading of such names as Mayer, Cohn, Warner, Thalberg, Barrymore. The House of Westmore lasted longer than most — 59 years of makeup wizardry — and one remnant remains.

He is Frank Westmore, 53, still practicing the family trade on such films as "The Towering Inferno" and "Farewell, My Lovely." Now Frank with Muriel Davidson offers an unguarded and highly readable history of his clan in "The Westmores of Hollywood" (Lippincott, $8.95).

The book tells of the prodigious clan of wigmaker George Westmore, whose sons dominated the makeup salons of the Hollywood studios in the movies' golden age. Besides being department heads, they joined in the Sunset Boulevard house of Westmore, where Marlene Dietrich, Kay Francis (who loaned $25,000 to the brothers), Carole Lombard and Clara Bow came to be beautified.

Laurence Olivier also had his hair cut there, Milton Berle had his dyed, and Madame Chiang Kai-shek got the glamour treatment.

It all started with George Westmore, born on the Isle of Wight in 1879, who came to Hollywood in 1917 to supply wigs for movie stars. One of his earliest customers was America's Sweetheart, Mary Pickford, who didn't know that Westmore's wigs were made from prostitutes' hair.

George and sons Mont, Perc, Ern and Wally soon branched out to all categories of film beauty, male and female. Mont provided Rudolph Valentino with his famous Latin look, washing the actor's hair and slicking it down with Vaseline.

Frank writes that his brother also "modified the heavy penciling of Rudy's eyebrows, plucking them and reshaping them to an arch over his heavy eyelids, thereby making his eyes look larger. He lightly shadowed Rudy's jaw line, giving it a more defined, ascetic look." Mont reduced the heavy eye makeup, lightened the lip color and added Vaseline to make the lips shine. Result: instant sex symbol.

Buddy, longtime head of Universal's makeup department and husband of Martha Raye and Rosemary Lane, and Frank were the last of the clan. Predictably for men who dealt with beauty, the six brothers were a marrying bunch: the total, 18 wives.

"The Westmores of Hollywood" is a good, gossipy saga of a gifted but ill-starred family. No star can be a hero or heroine to his/her beautician, and Frank Westmore tells it all.

George Raft was one of Perc's "back-door clients" when Perc was makeup chief at Warner Brothers. When Raft agonized over his no-waistline figure, Perc devised a whalebone gadget that gave the actor "a waistline as tiny as Shirley Temple's." But Perc blabbed the secret to a magazine, and "Raft never spoke to my brother again."

Perc also transformed young Ronald Reagan, who in later years recalled Warners officials saying "With his hair parted in the middle like that, he looks like Joe E. Brown with a small mouth." Perc cut and reshaped Reagan's hair, parting it on the left side.

Ern Westmore transformed Bette Davis in 1931 by drawing her mouth almost straight across instead of painting the cupid-bow lips of movie tradition. "I never considered myself any great beauty," said Davis, "except for my large eyes, which I knew were my best feature. Somehow the mouth Ern designed for me even made them look better."

Carole Lombard asked Perc to provide her with a bigger bosom for "Lady by Choice" in 1934. He was at first shocked, then offered the solution: highlight the upper breasts with lightweight, light-colored liquid foundation, applying flesh-colored powder; highlight with cold cream or Vaseline; run a thin line of dry rouge down the cleavage. The technique also worked for Kim Novak in "Vertigo."

When Paul Muni won his Oscar for "The Story of Louis Pasteur" he thanked Perc Westmore because "when I looked in the mirror I didn't see myself; I saw Louis Pasteur."

A PARTY AT LADY BIRD'S

Lady Bird Johnson is throwing another of her famous barbecue picnics today, this time for money.

Several hundred guests are expected at the LBJ Ranch on the Pedernales River, 65 miles west of Austin, with the proceeds going to the LBJ Memorial Grove in Washington, D.C. Guests were asked to donate $100 a couple with a select group making $1,000 "patron" contributions.

Main entertainment will be a performance of the Fort Griffin Fandangle, with a cast of more than 100 singers and dancers, a stage coach, a hack, a covered wagon, 28 horses and six mules. The barbecue, it is hoped, will raise the remaining $200,000 needed for the LBJ Memorial Grove to reach its $2 million goal. The grove is a 15-acre park of white pine trees, trails and flowering rhododendron and azaleas along the Potomac River.

World Series of Poker due

LAS VEGAS (Special) — Card-playing experts from all sections of the country are gathering for the seventh annual World Series of Poker, which begins Monday night at Binion's Horseshoe Club.

Brian (Sailor) Roberts will be on hand to defend his title after winning $115,000 on a pair of jacks in the final hand last year. Roberts, Bob Brooks and Crandall Addington — all Texans — were the survivors of a field of 21 gamblers who had put up $10,000 each to sit down in a winner-take-all game of "Hold 'Em."

Preliminary play in the world's richest card tournament in midtown Las Vegas concludes next weekend. When the $1,000 and $2,000 pot players are swept aside, the big stakes game begin May 10 and conclude May 16.

Hitchcock not about to direct a musical

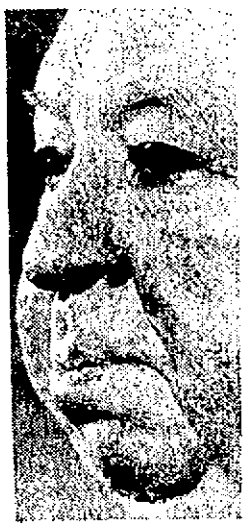

By ROB TALBERT
Knight News Service

A Quotebag Fule:

ALFRED HITCHCOCK, on living up to his image as a maker of suspense films: "For example, I couldn't make a musical, because as the camera shot along a line of Rockettes people would be wondering which of the girls was going to be shot.

"They would always be looking for a crime. And quite rightly. The shot girl would be the one whose leg stayed up when all the other legs came down.

"But this also gives me an edge, too. Because the audience knows what it is going to get. My name is a label, just as Agatha Christie's name is a label. My subject matter has remained constant."

ALFRED HITCHCOCK

PETER LAWFORD, on Frank Sinatra: "To know Sinatra is to go through many emotions. When Frank wants to be charming, I don't think there is a human on earth who can resist him. But to be close to him is like being close to a keg of dynamite with a half-inch fuse burning. He can be a selfish, childish little tyrant."

JOHN WAYNE: "Not only are the stars fussed over and heavily insured today, but so is the entire cast. That's because the heavy cost of pictures makes it 'financially essential' that nothing happens to the performance because of accident or sickness."

VALERIE PERRINE: "I have a lot of freedom with this new contract at Universal. I have approval over what I do, and I can work for other studios. They will also give me the opportunity to produce films with other actresses starring, when I know more about the business and can develop properties.

"I'm still new in Hollywood, and producers are changing their minds about what I can do. They're beginning to see me as something more than a sex object for male leads; they're discovering that I have talent, that I can do character roles. I wanted to play the part of Nurse Ratched, the heavy in 'One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest,' but I was told I was too young, which is bull. An actress can be any part, and I'm not that young, really."

DICK GREGORY: "The CIA is the sickest, freakiest, most insane, degenerate thing ever devised in this world. Anyone in their right mind knew they overthrew Allende, but here we have President Ford saying they only 'neutralized the Chilean press.' This is like a foreign country swarming in on us with dogs during our civil-rights movement.

"If Ford and Rockefeller, both unelected leaders, took over any other country, you'd call it a coup. But don't be fooled. Ford's just a stand-in for Rockefeller, who is going to run everything.

"The conflict in the Middle East has nothing to do with Israel and the Arabs. It's got nothing to do with human rights. It's between Russia and the U.S. over that oil. Ford complains about that high-priced oil but hasn't said a word to the American oil companies."

Smoke signals in bridge?

ROME (AP) — Italy's world-championship bridge team, accused last year of using foot signals under the table, is being charged with a new bit of chicanery this year: smoke signals. The case has mushroomed into a nationwide scandal.

The man leveling the charges, a leading Italian player who failed to make the famed Blue Team, says there's a tape recording to back up the allegations. But those accused of misusing their cigarette smoke say their accuser is jealous, that the tape has been manipulated and that the case is going to end up in court.

The controversy has rocked the team on the eve of its title defense in Monte Carlo starting today.

The charges are that Benito Bianchi, now retired from the team, and Piero Forquet exchanged messages with smoke signals from cigarettes they were smoking during a championship game. Where and when the game was played is not known.

Members of the Blue Team are used to similar accusations, which have filled their scrapbooks as much as the string of successes they have put together in the past two decades.

This time, however, there are two new and important factors. The charges do not come from abroad, but from a leading Italian player — Leandro Burgay — and he has produced an alleged taped phone conversation with Bianchi to support his claims.

Burgay said Bianchi confessed his tricks during a conversation which was taped and sent to the Italian Bridge Federation. Burgay also produced the testimony of an expert that the tape had not been manipulated.

The federation, however, said that no matter who was right, Burgay acted improperly in taping the phone call and handed him an immediate six-month suspension.

Keeps on rolling at age 50

'Showboat' a classy classic at LBSU

By JOHN SPEAR

Has it really been almost 50 years since Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II wrote Showboat? After half a century, does it deserve the designation of "classic of the American musical theater"?

If a musical classic can be loosely defined as a piece with the power to move an audience, the current production at Long Beach State University gives a positive answer. It is definitely not just another saccharine entry from the golden age of musicals.

The vocal demands of Showboat vary from a high soprano to one of the most famous bass roles in the theater. The acting demands range from the riverboat gambler who goes wrong to the simpering Southern belle who develops backbone under adversity, to the philosophical black roustabout, to a fallen woman. Who could ask for more?

Gaylord Ravenal is usually played as a Rhett Butler type. On Friday night, William Wenger made him look a bit more like Ashley Wilkes. It was hard to believe that Wenger's Ravenal was ever a successful riverboat gambler.

His baritone voice has fine middle range, but the high notes in "You Are Love" and "Why Do I Love You?" stretched it beyond its limits.

The Magnolia of Christina Marie Augspurger was sweet and pure (with a shade too much vibrato) and visually delightful.

Showboat has so many characters (over 40 in this production) that any one of them can steal some applause with a good performance. Friday night's was no exception.

Julie is a part made for scene stealers (who can forget Ava Gardner in the movie version?), and Long Beach State had a fine performer in Elizabeth Savage. Not only is she the best female vocalist in the cast, but she is a very effective actress. The most moving movement of the show was when she and Steve left the showboat.

What can I say about Dan Tullis Jr. as Joe? Only that you should see him for yourself. He has the physical properties for the role, he ages over the 40 years of the play more convincingly than anyone else, and (wonder of wonders) he actually can sing those low notes in "Ol' Man River." This young man should have an excellent future, and it is worth the modest price of admission just to hear him sing "Ol' Man River" four times.

The remainder of the cast was of good quality, especially Jerry Siggins as Capt. Andy (a real show stopper in the Parson's Bride scene).

Two-story homes at Shadow Run

At Shadow Run in La Palma, Warmington Development presents a large two-story home designed for family activities and offering 2,304 square feet of luxurious living space priced from $74,990.

Highlight of the Plan 1 is a huge upper level bonus room that may be used as an extra bedroom or family playroom.

There are three additional bedrooms and two full baths, including a privately situated master suite with dressing room-bath and oversized walk-in closet.

ON THE lower level is a big family room with fireplace, wet bar and sliding glass doors, a formal living room with two-story high ceiling and open hallway above, and a garden-view dining room.

A first floor powder room adds special convenience and the contemporary, openstyled kitchen is complete with built-in range, continuous-cleaning double oven, dishwasher, disposal and luminous ceiling.

Plan 4 is offered in a variety of individualized exteriors and features a double garage with laundry area and block wall fencing.

Other price-included extras are carpeting throughout, ceramic tiling and custom cabinetry.

Other Shadow Run homes are offered in one and two-story plans with three or four bedrooms priced from $58,950. The homes are available in 12 unique exterior stylings and five distinctive floor plans, all with a long list of custom-quality appointments.

WARMINGTON'S exclusive "three-homes-in-one" concept provides separate family, formal and private sectors in each home and the modern features are a popular part of the Shadow Run lifestyle, according to the builder.

The Shadow Run community is close to major freeways for commuting to Los Angeles and Orange County employment and metropolitan centers and the new Los Cerritos Mall is also nearby.

The homes are within walking distance of schools at every grade level and minutes from neighborhood shopping, entertainment, recreational and medical facilities.

Sales have been excellent, averaging two homes per week, since the recent opening of the final unit of the single-family residences, the builder noted.

The new homes are scheduled for mid-summer occupancy at the development, at the northeast corner of Moody and La Palma avenues.

Four decorator furnished Shadow Run model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk at 7012 Somerset Circle in La Palma.

The sales facility may be reached by taking Freeway 91 to the Carmenita exit, then south on Carmenita to Orangethorpe (South Street) and left one block to the Shadow Run models.

Fourth phase open at Sundance homes

Ponderosa Homes, Irvine-based developer/builder, has opened for sale the fourth phase of Sundance Townhomes, a recreation-oriented community in Cerritos. Thirty-six new two-, three- and four-bedroom floor plans are available in Phase IV. Prices will begin as low as $45,990.

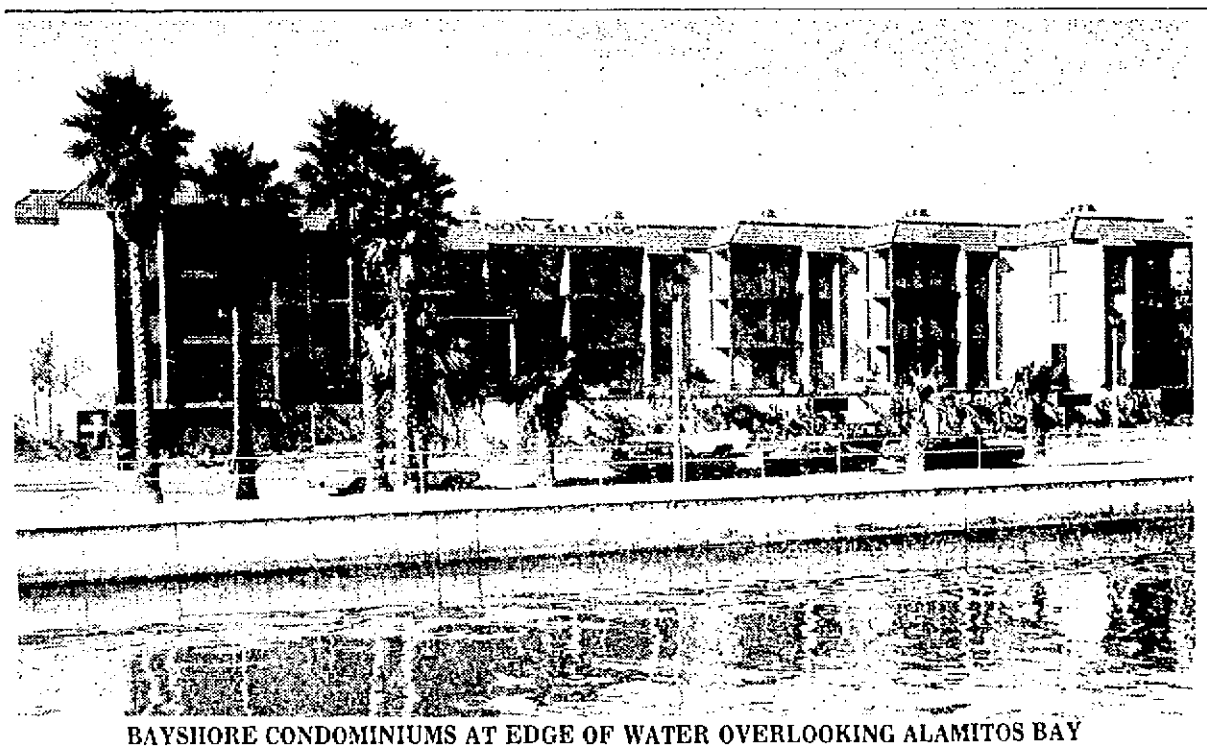

The one- and two-story homes offer residents a recreation-oriented atmosphere the entire family may enjoy. The main recreation facility has a large swimming pool (junior Olympic size), plus wading pool.

The townhome clubhouse, with billiards upstairs and a cozy fireplace downstairs in a sunken lounge, provides a place to entertain outside.

Volleyball and basketball courts and "tot-lots" are strategically located throughout the complex. An "adults only" recreation area, currently under construction, will offer a sundeck and cabana with pool and jacuzzi.

Each kitchen at Sundance features color co-ordinated Gaffers & Sattler appliances, ceramic tile counter tops, luminous ceilings, stainless steel sinks and decorator butcher-block cabinetry. Deluxe baths feature plate glass mirrors, Corian marble pullman tops, cast iron tubs and showers.

The model complex is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk. Offering excellent conventional financing, Sundance may be reached by taking the Artesia Freeway to the Bloomfield turnoff, then north to 166th Street and left.

The City of Whittier has something new in the way of a home for that person you would like privacy.

How about a jail?!

The city is selling condominium apartments in the Begich Towers complex on May 23, one of which is the old jail on the fourth floor.

It is being advertised as "apartment #411, the old jail, complete with bars on both bedroom doors, steel bunks hanging from the wall.

It's Whittier, Alaska, by the way, not California.

Townhomes unveiled in Big Canyon

The grand opening of the $15 million Big Canyon Townhomes, in the Big Canyon community near Newport Center in Newport Beach, is being held today.

Conceived and built by McLain Realty and Development, with the Irvine Co. as master developer, Big Canyon Townhomes combine the charm of a 19th century European village with rustic, contemporary architecture. It also provides private recreation, comprised of a tennis court, swimming pool, therapy pool and sundeck.

Its 144 homes, most of which will overlook the lush fairways of the Big Canyon golf course, with its $2 million clubhouse, are nestled on knolls of varying levels. Almost all are provided with subterranean parking, which takes cars off the streets and allows more greenery.

More than $500,000 is being expended for landscaping alone.

"The families for whom this community has been designed," according to developer Robert McLain, "will mainly comprise those established citizens who no longer see the necessity of a large home since their children are grown, affluent young marrieds and older couples who desire elegant lifestyles without the traditional encumbrances of a single family home."

Harry Babbitt, sales director, who has been associated with Big Canyon since its inception, adds this note: "In the 20 years in which I have been in real estate in Orange County, I've never seen as much advance interest in a luxury community as this one."

"Some 21 units have already been sold," he added.

Prices range from $94,350-$210,000 in the first phase. Homeowner Association monthly fee is $69.85.

Designed by Morris, Lohrbach & Associates, Newport Beach, the 13-acre community is comprised of several small enclaves of homes, each with its own courtyard, the dramatic centerpiece of which is a fountain. Lamp-lighted walkways are attended by magnificent specimen trees which ideally harmonize with the heavily shingled exteriors and roofs of the homes.

The concern for privacy is readily evidenced by the height of patio walls, dimensions of planter boxes and lavish use of shrubbery as screens.

Inside the two, three and three-bedroom-den homes, which range from 1,264 to 1986 square feet, a sense of light and spaciousness is created by clerestory windows and skylights. Sunken living rooms, with vaulted ceilings, supplemented by patios and/or decks, add to this atmosphere.

There are also sound-treated walls, which are double-insulated with double-staggered studs, smoke detectors and underground utilities. Kitchens include self-cleaning oven, dishwasher, range, hood, fan, trash compactor, disposal and Oriental Ash cabinetry. Master baths offer Roman tub, built-in planting areas, indirect lighting and Corian marble vanity tops. And fireplaces and wet bars are in all living rooms.

The five floor plans are designed in single and double-story plans. The Pinehurst, two-bedroom and den plan, with two and one-half baths, innovatively creates the feeling of a home twice its size by providing a den and dining area on one level with the living room sunken. The two bedrooms and two baths are on the upper level, with a clerestory window in the master suite.

Another two-story model, the two-bedroom, two-bath Greenbrier, features a dining area with cathedral ceiling; the adjoining sunken living room opens onto an outdoor deck or garden patio.

The three-bedroom, 2½-bath Eldorado, with 1761 square feet on two levels, is highlighted by a large entry foyer, which leads to a sunken living room, also opening onto an outdoor deck or patio. A formal dining room on the entry level and the living room both provide views.

Biggest floor plan is The Augusta, with three bedrooms, den, 2¼ baths. Its two-story living room, with floor-to-ceiling fireplace, overlooked by an upper level galleria, creates the feeling of an elegant chateau rather than a 1986 sq. ft. house.

A single-story plan, The Oakcrest, is available with two bedrooms and two baths. One version provides a living room with cathedral ceiling, the other a sunken living room.

First occupancy is slated for June.

The model homes, open 10 a.m. to dusk, are on Ford Road between MacArthur Boulevard and Jamboree Road.

Bayshore homes 90 pct. sold out

The Bayshore, luxury condominium community in Belmont Shore, is 90 per cent sold out following its grand opening seven months ago.

Michael Engle, vice president of C. Robert Langslet & Son, the builder, said:

"The response to and enthusiasm for The Bayshore has been extremely gratifying, and we find ourselves with a very few of the most choice homes available for sale before the project is 100 per cent sold out."

Engle said there are two-bedroom, two-bath homes available, with prices that start at $88,900 with 5 per cent down.

"Very importantly," he stressed, "these last few homes offer exceptional Alamitos Bay views, and buyers can move in just in time to enjoy the pleasures of a terrific summer at the shore."

Located at 201 Bayshore Avenue, the 30-home community is directly on Alamitos Bay, across from Naples, and in addition to bay views, the three-story structure is built around an airy, landscaped interior courtyard.

Each home offers its own private entry and large exterior balcony, and each features extensive use of glass to take advantage of the views.

YEAR-ROUND recreation abounds in the area, and at The Bayshore, residents have a landscaped recreation area with a swimming pool, jacuzzi, gas barbecues, sink and eating facilities; a first-floor sun deck area overlooking the Bay and accented by a large reflecting pool and fountain; and adjacent boat slips which may be leased by Bayshore residents.

The homes feature deluxe General Electric appliances, including self-cleaning double oven and range, dishwasher, trash compactor, and garbage disposal. Westinghouse full-size stacked washers and gas dryers are included, as well as central air conditioning and heating.

Other features are wet bars, wood-burning fireplaces with gas lighters, ceramic tile in kitchens and baths, large kitchen pantries, mirrored wardrobe closets, and much storage.

To reach The Bayshore from Orange County, take the San Diego Freeway north to Seventh Street, proceed west on Seventh to Studebaker Road, turn south on Studebaker, and continue to Westminster Avenue. Turn right (west) on Westminster, which becomes Second Street, and proceed to The Bayshore, on the corner of Bayshore Avenue, Second Street and The Toledo.

From Los Angeles, take the San Diego Freeway south to Studebaker Road, then south on Studebaker to Westminster Avenue, and proceed as directed above.

C. Robert Langslet & Son has been building quality homes in the Long Beach area more than 25 years. In addition to The Bayshore, the company has announced plans to begin sales soon on its newest Long Beach condominium community, Parkview Terrace, across from Recreation Park golf course.

Shopping complex leasing

Anaheim's newest community shopping complex, Pear Tree Center, is nearing completion and is scheduled for opening June 1.

Jim Shimozono, principal of the Developer partnership, said a majority of the center's available spaces have been leased to a "balanced variety" of tenant categories.

Spaces assigned include a mini-market and liquor store, a family-type Japanese restaurant, a Hawaiian delicatessen, a facial and skin-care salon featuring Japanese cosmetics.

Activities brighten dull days

Long Beach, with a population of 72,000 people over age 60 and a variety of facilities to meet their needs, now has something new — a day care center at Palmcrest House.

Day care centers in general are designed to keep older members of society out of institutions until the last possible moment. They have been used in Great Britain as part of a network of services keeping all but two per cent of their elderly out of nursing homes, but in this country their use is just beginning.

Nationally, there are 30 such day care centers, with 16 of these in the West — two dissimilar ones locally. A program set up under the auspices of the National Institute of Mental Health on the East Coast has been used as a fairly common model for most. But each takes its own special twists.

The way Nancy Knapp, director for the Palmcrest center, sees day care, is to make the real world as stimulating as possible, so that an older person may maintain his or her independence in that world. It holds a middle ground between one-to-one babysitting and a senior citizen's social get-together.

The way Rachel Downing, director of the part-time Senior Day Center at El Cerrito County Health Center, sees day care, it serves as crisis intervention for elderly on the very brink of being placed in a nursing home. This day center has provided two-day a week emergency intercedence and follow-up activities for almost three years. As a government project it is seeking to be refunded.

Nancy Knapp, who ran a program for older people in Washington State, says the Palmcrest center will form flexible lines along the particular needs of the 24 people who can use that center at any one time.

"A lot of people are natural loners. They are off by themselves to the mountains at age 20 and they remain the same at 90," she says. These are not the people who would be interested in what is officially called the day activities center, a facet of the Palmcrest House senior citizen residence on Cedar Avenue.

But for others, older people who face involuntary isolation, who sit at home alone for want of means or opportunity for socializing, who wave goodby to spouse or offspring in the morning and do nothing all day but await that person's return, who want to develop new interests or who simply want to mill around in a crowd, the day center can be as individual as each person's desires.

"When a person becomes disengaged from society, the fantasy world seems much better than reality." Thus her role, she says, is to bring the real world to each of those involved, and on each person's own terms.

AT PALMCREST HOUSE, the facilities offered to full-time residents also are available for day participants, including physical and occupational therapy rooms, health care, beauty parlor, movie theater, green house, piano, kitchen area, and separate sitting rooms.

The activities center, (Mrs. Knapp objects to the nationally used term 'day care' as demeaning) would be open from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. five days a week for a sliding fee of from $1 to $10 a day.

"This is an exciting field," says Dr. Julian Feingold, a rabbi who founded the four-year-old Palmcrest complex of proprietary care center and convalescent hospital. "Day care enables the elderly to stay at home as long as possible.

"Too many people," he says, "are institutionalized prematurely." Day care centers, he hopes, will forestall this. "This is a whole new field; there are very few specialists."

Mrs. Knapp sees day care as a way to cut down on approaching senility, a way to rehabilitate stroke patients, a way to evoke stories or memories, to stimulate an older person's mind on various levels, and, no less valid she says, as a means of providing relief for the family of the older person.

"Too much can happen to families as a person grows older. Sometimes the reaction is desperate and families break up when a little guidance could have helped."

Fifty years ago gerontology was not a popular field. "Few people wanted to get involved — it seemed too depressing," she points out, "because there is no cure for old age. The only alternative for growing old is dying."

But as the quantity of life improves, the quality of that life must improve, she maintains.

ONE OF THE FIRST things on her agenda in that regard is to "shave away the baby talk" used with older people. "It is important not to be demeaning. The parallel with children is very demeaning."

She favors using Audubon prints and various bird feathers to stimulate conversation and learning on a variety of levels, to using egg cartons for arts and crafts. "Many of the participants were bird watchers or want to learn about birds," she says. "Others just want to play with the feathers and some are stimulated by seeing the feathers and recall having chickens as growing youngsters.

Everything must therefore be individual," Mrs. Knapp says. "We have to remember that we come with an agenda of things for them to do, but their agenda is what really counts. The people will shape the program.

Hitting somewhere between senior citizen centers where everyone plays bridge and centers which are primarily babysitting arrangements, she says, the Palmcrest center will also be able to offer some individual therapy for stroke patients.

"We'll roll bandages, which is really not a Mickey Mouse activity. Many of these people remember rolling bandages during the war and feel they are performing a useful function. It doesn't cost much and is not like something for a Cub Scout troop.

"The motion improves their eye-hand coordination and the work is important in the community."

Joan Kennedy's father takes issue with stories

By MALVINA STEPHENSON
Women's News Service

WASHINGTON — Beautiful, blonde Joan Bennett Kennedy has emerged as the most attractive and sensitive of all the Kennedy women. She has been vulnerable to mounting family pressures.

JOAN KENNEDY is defended by her father, who says she has drinking problem under control and was never institutionalized for treatment.

Although Joan's father says her drinking problem is "under control," she has become almost a stranger on the Washington scene. Her absence was conspicuous on at least two recent occasions.

The wife of the Massachusetts senator skipped a White House state dinner, which he attended with their 16-year-old daughter. Then, the annual Senate wives' luncheon for the First Lady packed in former and current members from everywhere — but not Joan.

About the same time, Joan was reported participating in suburban meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous. She was accompanied by an unidentified woman friend.

Now, Harry W. Bennett contends that his daughter Joan did not enter Smithers Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center in New York "for personal treatment," as recently reported.

"Joan went there to learn about the institution and how they treat alcoholics," Bennett said in a telephone interview from his home near New Orleans. "She has a tremendous sympathy for people with that problem because she was almost facing it herself."

And then he adds with an edge of bitterness, "She was no more there for care than the man in the moon."

BENNETT IS IRATE over two National Enquirer articles that purported to reveal Joan's confidences while at the institution. Two patients there quoted her alleged complaints about her Kennedy in-laws and doubts from the Chappaquiddick accident in which a Kennedy secretary died.

While Eunice Kennedy Shriver publicly expressed outrage over the Enquirer articles, she did refer to the two controversial sources as "fellow patients" of Joan. She complained about the "invasion of Joan's privacy" and asserted that Ted's wife is on good terms with his family.

Joan's father, however, rejected the entire account as pure fabrication. "There wasn't one word of truth about it," he declared.

These gossipy, embarrassing stories about Joan have left her father in a sour mood toward all the news media. Add to this the published reports about the late President Kennedy and his girl friend with Mafia connections.

"They are all looking for scare headlines," Bennett declared. "They want to talk about the bad part of anything rather than the good. This is what gets you upset. Poor Joan has been so harassed by this for so long."

Asked what his daughter is really like, Bennett said, "She is lovely and beautiful, with the kindest heart you have ever seen in your life. The trouble is, she has been so outgoing and trustful, she has been hurt often."

BENNETT DESCRIBED his daughter as "a housewife first, and a loving mother, more concerned with her children. She is trying to raise them as good Americans. She is trying to protect them from all the publicity and everything else that goes on."

In a candid interview last year, Bennett discussed some of the pressures that sent Joan to clinics and the brink of alcoholism. He spoke of fear of her husband's assassination if he ran for president, and cited the difficulty of a shy, unathletic Joan trying to cope with the boisterous, competitive Kennedys.

"A lot of her personal interests had to be put aside to keep up with the affairs of the Kennedy family," he said. "She's artistic, loves music, and is not an outgoing girl when it comes to sports, except skiing. She has to conform to the Kennedy image, and that is always a battle she carries on within herself."

At that time, Bennett revealed for the first time, "I think she may have been close to being an alcoholic. She indicated to me that she might be, and it scared her." (It was six months later that Joan was at the New York AA Center.)

Another burden that still weighs on Joan is the shock of son Teddy's illness. Although cancer forced the amputation of the boy's leg above the knee, he appears to have won his battle and no longer is required to take treatment, according to the senator's office. Earlier this year, he accompanied his parents on a ski trip to Vermont.

Joan's parents were separated, and her mother was recently found dead in her Florida apartment. Joan will be 40 in September, the elder of two daughters, and has always been close to her father. He said they frequently exchange letters and telephone each other.

THERE IS A biographical chapter on Joan in a new book on "Kennedy Wives, Kennedy Women," by Nancy Gager. While written from the viewpoint of women's liberation, critical of the Kennedy concept of the female role, it does highlight Joan's life story with insight into the background of her personal struggle.

After Bobby Kennedy's assassination, Gager reports, "Journalists began noticing an increase in Ted's drinking, careless driving, and an ever-ready eye for a pretty woman."

Joan reacted with physical flamboyance.

Four months before Chappaquiddick, in March of 1969, Gager writes, "Joan shocked Washington society — and the Nixons — by appearing at the White House annual congressional reception wearing a glittering low-cut mini dress. The First Lady was clearly startled out of her usual self-control and stared at Joan's legs."

The public is all too familiar with the image of "loyal Joan" during the Chappaquiddick period. In the years that followed, Joan admitted to consulting psychiatrists, and by 1973, she was tripping to Europe alone and getting therapy at clinics.

Her drinking problem was brought out in the open in a minor car accident in the fall of 1974. She was fined $200 and had her driver's license suspended for six months.

Joan shows no signs of wanting to end her marriage, according to Gager, who describes her as "the classic version of the conventional put-up-with-almost-anything wife, the antithesis of today's liberated woman."

Although Joan has made efforts to have more individuality, she apparently has little taste for Gager's version of the "liberated woman."

For new townhomes

Harbor View Knoll construction begun

Construction has begun for Harbor View Knoll, an adult townhome community designed to bring the charm of old Corona del Mar to the hills of The Irvine Co. Village of Harbor View in Newport Beach.

Built by Irvine Pacific Development Co., the homes are specifically designed to suit the needs and tastes of young, professional couples and active, retired couples whose children are grown, according to Frank E. Hughes, president of Irvine Pacific.

"HARBOR VIEW KNOLL will enrich the Village of Harbor View by offering a third lifestyle alternative," said Hughes. Currently there are large, detached family homes and apartments.

"Harbor View enjoys one of Southern California's most desirable locations with the beach, Fashion Island and Newport Center less than a mile away," he added.

The new community will be located adjacent to the Newport Hills Shopping Center at Ford Road and San Miguel Drive (formerly New MacArthur). It will consist of three and four home clusters arranged along curving streets and cul de sacs.

Many homes will enjoy excellent views looking from the hillside slope into Bonita Canyon, much of which preserved in the city plan as permanent open space.

"Architects Lee & Klages, whose credits include Foodpark and the Parkview Shopping Center in Irvine, have successfully captured the old-fashioned flavor of such distinctive coastal communities as Cape Cod and Corona del Mar," Hughes said.

Design techniques include the use of horizontal cedar wood siding with a natural stain, steeply pitched gable roofs, clean white trim, and even a white picket fence.

The cottage-like homes will have touches of brick and stonework as well as planters and private entries. Each home also will feature attached, two-car garages and either an enclosed patio or cantilevered wooden sundeck.

THE TWO-STORY, split-level homes will offer two and three bedrooms. "The floor movement is especially exciting with its many levels," Hughes noted. Special features include oak stairways with old-world, turned wood banisters, bay windows with window seats, arched openings and elegant master bedroom suites.

Interiors will be interpreted by designer Beverly Trupp of Santa Monica.

Sales for Harbor View Knoll are scheduled to begin in July. For additional information, contact Irvine Pacific.

Sellout near at Cameron Park

Sales are averaging six per week following the recent opening of the second and final unit at Cameron Park townhomes in Buena Park, according to the builder, Beard Development Co.

Only 10 of the 106 luxury residences remain in the low density community. There are fewer than nine units per acre and 48 per cent of the development is devoted to landscaped greenbelt areas.

Cameron Park offers five distinctive townhome plans priced from $37,950 to $48,750, with financing at 8 per cent interest (8¼ annual percentage rate).

The spacious one- and two-story designs feature up to 1630 square feet of living area with two, three or four bedrooms and 1½ and 2½ baths. Two-story plans include powder rooms and most master suites have private baths.

THE GARDEN residences offer such custom-quality appointments as stairways with wrought-iron railings, cathedral ceilings and fireplaces in various plans.

Convenience-oriented country kitchens include built-in range, oven, dishwasher, luminous ceiling and ceramic tile counter tops.

Additional price-included features are gas forced-air heating prepared for air conditioning, smoke detector system, complete exterior wall insulation, copper plumbing and pre-wiring for TV and telephone.

Extensive wood detailing, shingled siding and wood shake roofs highlight the homes exteriors. All homes have private patios with masonary fencing and oversized double garages with abundant storage space.

Within the lush landscaping of Cameron Park, residents can enjoy a swimming pool, recreation building and gazebo in attractive garden settings.

The maintenance-free community is located next to Smith-Murphy Park with six acres of rolling lawns, play and picnic areas. The private Los Coyotes Country Club and the exclusive Bellehurst area are within a few blocks of the development.

THE HOMES are close to schools of all grade levels, including the outstanding Sunny Hills High School, which serves the residents of Cameron Park.

The Cameron Park sales office and furnished model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 5400 Cameron Drive.

The development may be reached by taking the Santa Ana Freeway to Beach Boulevard in Buena Park, then north on Beach to Cameron Drive, just beyond Malvern Avenue (La Mirada Boulevard) and right (east) to Cameron Park.

Glad you asked that!

Q: I read where James Dougherty, a former Los Angeles police officer and Marilyn Monroe's first husband, is the latest to write a Marilyn book. Has he anything to say in it that hasn't been said many times before? — Bernice and Barbara Brown, Milwaukee.

A: We think so. For one, he doesn't agree with the conclusions of the Los Angeles police team that investigated her death, that it was a "probable suicide." "I'm positive in my own mind," he writes, "that her death was an accident. She had overdosed one time too many and there was no one to save her ... I'm equally positive that Norma Jean would have written a short note, telling the world good-bye, if nothing else."

Jim also makes reference to her friendship with the Kennedys. "Probably she did know the Kennedy brothers well," he concedes. "And I understand that the computer record of Norma Jean's telephone calls for that week in August disappeared from the telephone company's files. As a former policeman, I happen to know that such a removal can only be achieved through a federal subpoena, so perhaps someone very high in Washington wanted that evidence out of the way."

Dougherty, who took Norma Jean Baker for his wife on June 19, 1942, when she was a pretty teen-age brunette, not a blonde sex symbol, has no doubt that she found love again after their divorce. "Joe DiMaggio loved her tremendously," he says. "And Arthur Miller must have loved her because he stood by her at the time that the strain was beginning to show and she needed more support than ever. He was always there until the very last, when I guess he tossed in the towel."

Jim, who's been married twice since divorcing Marilyn, is living happily with his present wife, Rita, in a quiet valley in the Arizona desert.

Q: When Sally Quinn found she wouldn't make any rating inroads against Barbara Walters on TV — and was fired by CBS — I understand she was a very sick girl. What happened? — Mrs. L.D. Cinder, Pittsburgh.

A: As a result of the tension and then deep depression, Sally came down with acne, diabetes and ulcers. Miss Quinn caustically castigated her "CBS Morning News" executive producer declaring: "He never produced anything in his life." And complained that her co-host, newsman Hughes Rudd, had never been an anchorman.

Ms. Quinn's a lot happier now back in her cozy niche at the Washington Post. She will cover the upcoming summer Olympics and presidential campaigns.

Q: Where could I have seen Barry Morse (who plays Prof. Bergman on TV's "Space: 1999") before? — Grace F., Floral Park, N.Y.

A: On "The Fugitive," Morse played police Lt. Gerard who relentlessly pursued David Janssen week after week. You may also have seen the talented actor on "Wagon Train," "Dr. Kildare" and "The Saint."

Last summer he, Lilli Palmer, Brian Keith and John Mills were in "The Zoo Gang," a mini-series about former World War II fighters who banded together after the war to protect "law and order." Former Beatle Paul McCartney and his wife Linda wrote the scripts, produced and then performed the music they penned for the series.

Q: With all the money he had, I understand Howard Hughes carefully examined every check he ever signed. Is this true? — E. Kehoe, Richmond, Ca.

A: There was one incident we heard about. Shortly after Hughes bought the RKO Studios, Steve White (who wrote a series on Hughes for Look magazine), saw him write out a check for $23,000,000.00. Noticing that he studied the check carefully before signing it, Steve asked: "Is something wrong?" "No," replied Hughes. "I'm just busy counting the zeros!"

Q: "The First Time," the book that reveals the details of the first sexual experiences of many famous people — is it true it's going to be made into a movie? And that some of the celebrities mentioned will play themselves on the screen? — Mrs. Oscar S., Minneapolis.

A: Yes — it will be filmed. But no the celebs (such as Burt Reynolds, Liberace, Joan Rivers, Dyan Cannon, Mae West, Jack Lemmon, Debbie Reynolds, Sally Kellerman and Joseph Cotten) want nothing to do with it. They've even forbidden the mention of their names in the movie. So the producers will have to substitute fictitious names — with any resemblance to people living or dead purely coincidental.

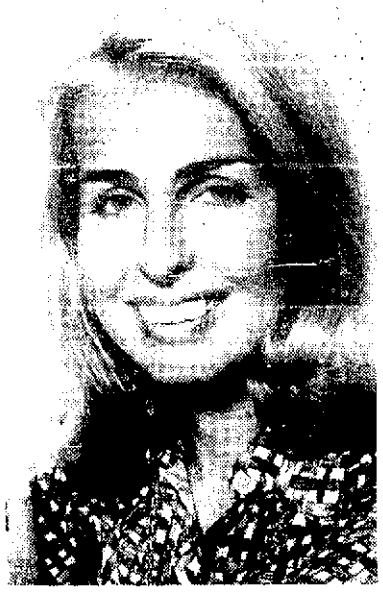

Comments actress Cannon about the book: "It's one of those pimples that keeps coming back."

Q: Is it true that French Gen. Lafayette, our great friend in the American Revolution, is buried in American soil? — Arnold Smythe, Philadelphia.

A: Yes. The tomb of Gen. Lafayette, although it is located in the Picpus Cemetery in France, is buried in earth brought from Virginia — with an American flag flying on the site since the burial date, May 22, 1834. Little known is the fact that Lafayette was made an American citizen by the U.S. Congress.

Goldie Hawn doesn't fit 'dumb blonde' mold

HOLLYWOOD — Goldie Hawn stepped out of her silver sportscar, bright as a yellow tulip, full-blossomed and fully pregnant, adjusted the skirt of her maternity smock, ignored the buzzing gossip of the sidewalk cafe, spied the lunchtime Bloody Mary I was having with envy, gritted her teeth and ordered a glass of milk.

"I'm in my fifth month," she chirped cheerfully, "and I have to drink four glasses of milk a day. I hate it. The baby is moving around inside me quite a bit now. Every now and then he pinches me real good. But I'm happy. It's something I've wanted for a long time. I just had to be sure the Daddy would be the right person."

The Daddy is Bill Hudson, a member of the Hudson Brothers rock group. Goldie's husband is Gus Trikonis, a fledgling director, whom she is divorcing. In the days of Hedda and Louella, you couldn't be one man's wife, have another man's child and still call yourself a movie star. Ingrid Bergman tried it, and they destroyed her. But in the post-Watergate reality of now, it is all too evident that nobody's pinning any scarlet letters on Goldie. She even showed up on the Academy Awards for all the world to see.

"Fortunately," she said, attacking her omelet, "times have changed. Rona Barrett even called to ask my permission before she announced it. I am not having this baby in a closet. It's no secret. Gus and I will be divorced before the baby is born, so it'll work out all right. One of the reasons we never had children was that he just wasn't ready. It's not fair to any baby to come into a world that doesn't want him. The baby didn't ask to be born.

"Before I met Bill, I felt I had given up all hope. Now I'm happy I waited because I can really appreciate this baby and everything he means to me and to Bill. The past three years have changed my life and given me time to rethink a lot of my values.

"I got married in 1968, right after 'Cactus Flower.' We've been separated three years. I had a lot of success all at once, and my husband worked too hard to equal it. He never made it. He's Greek, and it's very important to Greek men to bring home the bread and butter. He wouldn't let me give him anything. We had no luxuries. He was always talking about his pride, about his pride was too big to allow his wife to pay for anything.

"Now he is demanding $75,000 of my money to free me so I can marry Bill. I figure it's worth it to buy a new life, but what happened to the pride?"

EVERY AGE HAS its dumb blonde, but if that's what Goldie's screen image has been, she's not living up to it in person. She's about as dumb as a fox. She's more Judy Holliday than Marilyn Monroe. Offscreen, she looks nothing like the Tweety Pie saloon singer she plays in her new movie, "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox." She wears no make-up, her golden hair is long, straight and silky as meadow pollen, and with the extra weight she's gained, her wide blue eyes disappear into a soft, round face white and puffy as an unbaked angel food cake. When she talks, she loses the dumb-dodo voice she made famous on "Laugh-In," and she sounds like the mature, sensitive woman she really is.

What Hollywood does to these people is mystifying. Famous for her blank, wide-eyed "born yesterday" stares, Goldie makes people laugh. But she wasn't born yesterday. She's done it the hard way and, through an accumulation of ideas and experience, has developed into an important actress of surprising depth, which she proved in "The Sugarland Express" and "The Girl from Petrovka."

"My greatest regret is that I won the Oscar for 'Cactus Flower' too early. I wasn't even there to accept it. I was in London doing a film, and when I got back, nobody cared. I didn't even like myself in that film. I've learned so much about life and acting

rex reed

since then. I'd like to have another crack at it now, but I think they've cemented me in comedy roles. I think most people have even forgotten that I started out as a dancer."

She grew up in Takoma Park, Md., and was a very average student with no aspirations to go on to college. All she wanted to do was dance. Her father was a violinist. He plays one of the musicians in the dance hall in "Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox." He lives in Las Vegas. Her mother ran a dancing school and owned a gift shop.

"She was a pragmatic, strong, extremely self-disciplined woman. You could never call her an ordinary housewife. Both parents were and still are extremely supportive of my gifts. I taught dancing for a while after high school, then went to Williamsburg and acted in passion plays in a 3000-seat amphitheater. Then I got a job in the World's Fair and moved to New York.

"I roomed with a girl on West 70th St., then moved to a building on Eighth Avenue that is now overrun with hookers. I auditioned for everything, got turned down by Herbert Ross and shown the door by the Copacabana. Those were dog days."

SHE REMEMBERS them with humor, but there were times when Goldie was so weary and so blue, both from loneliness and from being pinched by every guy who thought she was another stereotyped blonde pushover, that she almost gave up show business. "I had a go-go agent at one low point. One night he booked me in a strip joint in Jersey. I made $20 for dancing my buns off, he got $5 of that, and I danced in sequin pasties on tabletops with guys exposing themselves and ended up hitching a ride back to New York in a Mack truck. I really don't believe the things I went through, but I wanted to be in show business so desperately. I went to Puerto Rico once where I worked with a rock band. Then I found myself with $200 in my pocket, and I bought a dog for $175. I called him Lamb Chop. It was my rent money, but I guess I needed a friend.

"I was ready to throw in the towel when a choreographer friend called and asked me to go to California. I left my four roommates, my furniture, said goodbye to my boyfriend, packed up my dog, went to California and never went back."

Things didn't happen overnight there, either. "I got a little apartment across the street from Disneyland and ended up in a chorus line in Vegas. I was up all night, sleeping all day, and I turned into a thing. I saw myself one day on TV in a red wig, looking like somebody's pet monkey. That's when I quit. It was a crappy life. I went back to L.A., gave myself two weeks and if I didn't make it, I would go back to Maryland."

One day before the deadline, she landed a bit in an Andy Griffith TV special. An agent from William Morris spotted her, got her three segments on "Laugh-In," and that was the beginning of Goldie Hawn. Billy Wilder saw the show one night, called Mike Frankovich, and he put her in "Cactus Flower." A star was born.

But Goldie's private life continued to be an uphill climb. She found herself in the hands of a manager who used her success to go on an ego trip of his own, alienating everyone around her. "He was refusing scripts behind my back, insulting the press and making enemies I didn't even know I had. I was very inexperienced and trying like mad to cope with success, and suddenly my manager sued me for $6 million! I've been in and out of innocent lawsuits ever since, but this is the first time in my life that I'm really making my own decisions. I'm just now beginning to pull myself together."

IN THE INTERIM, she made some impressive films. "Shampoo" gave her a chance to play a real person, although she calmly says, "There were times when I wondered who the real director was. Warren Beatty got all the best closeups." "Sugarland Express" was her best acting role, but "Steven Spielberg is better with action than people" (a fact that was finally proved with "Jaws"). She says she learned more from Richard Brooks on "$" than any other director she's ever worked with.

"Not only was I in Germany, but I was in the hands of this madman! If you weren't yelled at, you were nothing. But he knows everything there is about making movies and he taught me a great deal."

What started out as a challenging experience with "The Girl From Petrovka" ended up a bitter disappointment. "I went to Russia to research the girl, got all the way to Yugoslavia to start filming, and the whole company was turned away by Tito. We had to re-build Russia on the backlot at Universal. It was a nightmare. I even had to pay $1,000 a week out of my own salary for a gaffer to head the lighting crew because the studio was too cheap to hire one. I had to turn down 'Day of the Locust' to do it and that was killing me, so my heart wasn't in it anymore, but I couldn't get out of it."

Self-assured after taking time off to rethink her priorities, Goldie Hawn is now running her life and her career. Her head is glued on under that blonde waterfall of hairdresser's joy with all the right tacks.

"I learned that people no longer have to do things just to be nice or make other people happy. I met my husband Gus when I was a chorus girl in 'Kiss Me Kate.' I was very green, a real baby. He was a father figure to me. Then I met Bill on an airplane. We have the same humor, the same needs, similar family backgrounds. I always felt temporary when I was married. Now I feel I'm mature enough to know what love is. It's a very responsible thing.

"People are so easy, money is so easy, there are so many divorces in Hollywood. Yesterday I sat down and tried to figure out who my real friends are. They are people I've known a very long time. Most of them aren't in show business at all. My best friend owns a carpet mill. Show business, with its transitory and very superficial values, is not the most important thing in my life anymore. When I told my mother I was pregnant, she said, 'Don't tell anybody, get your divorce right away! You'll ruin your career!' But times have changed. Nobody has done one thing to me. I've had no feedback, no repercussions, no DAR ladies picketing the Oscars. I'm living my way."

Goldie Hawn is her real name. She hated it as a kid because of all the Goldilocks jokes she suffered. Her mother said, "Look at it this way — nobody will ever forget a name like that." All kidding about dumb blondes aside, they didn't. And they haven't. And they won't.

'Terrace' location praised

A prestige location will be a major advantage for buyers of townhomes of Sea Terrace, Avco Community Developers' community overlooking the ocean in Laguna Niguel.

Priced from $59,900 to $65,900, the two- and three-bedroom townhomes are located above the Pacific Coast Highway in an area noted for its expensive custom homes, points out Joseph W. Smith, Avco sales director.

"Near Sea Terrace is the Sea Gate, with custom-built single-family homes priced from $230,000," he notes. "Just across the highway are the well known communities of Monarch Bay and Monarch Bay Terraces, with homes averaging $150,000."

The townhomes for sale in Sea Terrace are ready for move-in and are located in a community of 316 homes. Landscaping, street improvements, and all community facilities are complete, Smith observed.

"SEA TERRACE townhomes appear, because of their architectural design, to be separate homes," he said. "Each has an individual cement driveway, private enclosed patio and completely fenced yard."

Residents of Sea Terrace have private parking space at Niguel Beach Park nearby, as well as their own three-acre recreation center, including a small park, pool, jacuzzi, tennis courts and volleyball courts.

Sea Terrace is a private, guard-gated community, with access only by residents or guests.

New Lake Forest project

The Woods breaks ground

Another new entry into Orange County's fast-selling Lake Forest community got under way the past week when ground was broken for The Woods by The Baldwin Co., Irvine developer.

Set in a dense forest of eucalyptus trees, south of Toledo Drive, the 67-acre project will have 196 single-family detached homes featuring some of the most contemporary exteriors ever offered single-family home buyers in Orange County, according to James Baldwin, principal.

"The forest portion of Lake Forest is a world apart from the typical Southern California home development. Entering The Woods will be like entering a mountain village surrounded by mature trees," Baldwin said.

"In addition, families benefit from the many recreation opportunities that living in Lake Forest offers."

SIX PLANS will be available. The homes will range from two bedrooms and den to five bedrooms, one a loft bedroom/den. The plans incorporate large living rooms, formal dining rooms, family rooms, nook areas in the kitchens, and spacious master suites with luxurious dressing rooms.

Architectural high lights will include clerestory windows and high vaulted ceilings in living rooms, master bedrooms, and some kitchens; brick, siding, or shingle fireplace treatments; plant areas in master suite baths and entries; and rooftop sun decks.

"The single- and split-level homes have been designed to blend with the rolling, tree-studded terrain. The exteriors stress natural materials, using natural finish wood siding, shingles and brick," Baldwin noted. "Clipped eaves, shedroofs, and multiple roof planes will give the project an interesting and varied look."

The majority of homes at The Woods will overlook natural wooded areas, a part of Lake Forest's equestrian and pedestrian trail system which follows stream beds, across small meadows, and through the densely forested woods. Lake Forest, with its clubhouses and lakes, also offers a variety of recreation facilities including tennis, swimming, and horseback riding.

Ranging in size from 1,903 to 2,757 square feet, the homes at The Woods are expected to be priced in the low-$70,000 to the high-$80,000 bracket.

The project is scheduled to hold its grand opening in late July, while first move-ins are expected to begin in January.

A salesperson is at an on-site trailer, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday through Wednesday, to answer any questions and show blueprints of the homes.

The on-site office may be reached by taking the San Diego (5) Freeway to Lake Forest Drive, then proceeding north on Lake Forest to Toledo Way, and turning right.

Lido condominiums selling

A sales rate of almost one condominium sold per week since Jan. 1 is reported by 601 Lido Condominiums management.

The super-luxury highrise condominiums located at the entrance of Lido Isle in Newport Beach began its fast-paced sales in January and to date the complex is at the half-way mark, with only 27 units remaining.

The management attributes the stepped-up pace not only to the acceleration in the economy but to the fact that 601 Lido is the only highrise in that area and no future highrises are planned.

The new model condominiums offer a view of the harbor area from their penthouse vantage point. The 601 Lido management predicts the complex will be sold out before the end of 1976. One model, Model C, is sold out on all nine floors.

The condominiums feature two bedrooms, 2 or 2½ baths, wet bar, private balcony, some with private sauna, master bath with private dressing room, air-conditioning individually controlled and anti-glare glass.

An added feature of 601 Lido Condominiums is its 24-hour guard and closed-circuit television surveillance service of all entraces, hallways and common areas with a call system in each residence.

THE WILDERNESS DESIGNED FOR LOVERS OF HORSES

The Wilderness a rider's haven

Horses as welcome as people

The Wilderness, designed for families who love horses, is a $3 million residential community offering ranch-like living amid the foothills of the Santa Ana Mountains.

Created by Pacesetter Homes, in Orange, The Wilderness is a "delightfully relaxing place for horses and humans," noted Landon M. Exley, vice president and general manager of the company.

"Unlike most residential developments where horses must be kept in the back yard, The Wilderness is designed so that horses are easily accessible to owners without destroying the California lifestyle of backyard living."

Managed by The Wilderness Homeowners Association, a complete equestrian center operates daily. Included within the center is a fenced riding ring, covered stables with pipe stalls, tack boxes, automatic water cups, a horse washing rack, an electric hot walker, covered hay storage and a private bridle trail.

THERE IS ALSO a paved, fenced storage area for trailers and recreational vehicles.

"Plus, additional riding trails criss-cross the area from The Wilderness into Irvine Park several miles away," Exley said.

"It required months of research and planning, but what we have achieved at The Wilderness," Exley continued, "is a community that is appealing to those people who enjoy the feel of open space, and particularly those who own horses."

Grouped in clusters of two on very large lots, a total of 48 homes are scattered about the 24-acre site. More than 15 acres of fully landscaped open space winds throughout the site, which is completely enclosed by a rustic, open fence.

Homes are located on cul-de-sac streets. The one through street, designed for the semi-private use of residents and their guests, has minimal through traffic.

Located on Santiago Canyon Road near Irvine Park and Irvine Lake, The Wilderness homes offer three floor plans from 1,780 to 2,151 square feet.

There are two, two-story models — The Appaloosa and The Cascade — and one, single-story home — The Cheyenne. All three have extensive wood siding and rustic cedar shake roofs that add to the country atmosphere.

Homes have three and four bedrooms, and two and 2½ baths.

Desirable features include wood-burning fireplace, cathedral ceilings, stained rough ceiling beams, shag carpets throughout, vinyl asbestos floor tile, designer-selected hardware and lighting fixtures and energy-saving gas forced-air heating.

ALL-GAS KITCHENS with built-in oven and range, dishwasher, formica countertops and hand-finished cabinetry are other features.

"Common area maintenance, supported by the homeowners association, includes the upkeep of the grounds, landscaping and even the exteriors of the homes," said Exley.

"This means homeowners are free to spend more time enjoying their horses, or whatever."

Homes are priced from $63,950 to $73,950.

New elementary and intermediate schools are within a five-minute walk for children. Several neighborhood centers are less than 10 minutes drive, and the Mall of Orange is about 15 minutes away.

The Wilderness was designed by Frank Leslie Spangler Associates, Newport Beach.

To reach the sales office, which is open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk, follow the Newport Freeway to Katella Avenue. Go east about 2½ miles — Katella becomes Santiago Canyon Road — to Meads Avenue.

Country Club Gardens

Recreation facilities of townhomes noted

Adult-oriented recreational facilities have contributed to the sales at Country Club Gardens townhomes, an exclusive new residential community in Long Beach, spokesmen report.

Recreation highlights include a large free-form swimming pool, jacuzzi and night-lighted paddle tennis courts. Quiet residential streets provide an area for bicycle riding.

The homes are also convenient to Los Cerritos Park and tennis courts, Lakewood Golf and Tennis Club and Long Beach's world-famous beaches and marinas.

Prices range from $52,950 to $54,950 with excellent conventional financing.

All are in rustic contemporary exterior styling designed in keeping with the area's exquisite custom homes.

Architectural detailing includes roofs of cedar shake, trellised entries and beautiful private garden patios.

Spacious master suites and convenience-planned kitchens with deluxe Tappan appliances, pantries and luminous ceilings are in each home.

Ceramic tiling and plush wall-to-wall carpeting are additional price-included features.

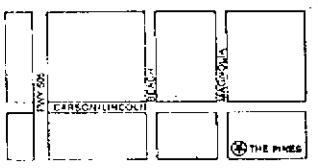

Surrounding the townhomes are extensive greenbelt areas with waterfalls, streams, bridges and reflection lakes and winding, lighted, tree-lined walkways and drives.

The park-like grounds, facilities and exteriors of the residences are professionally maintained through the homeowners association.

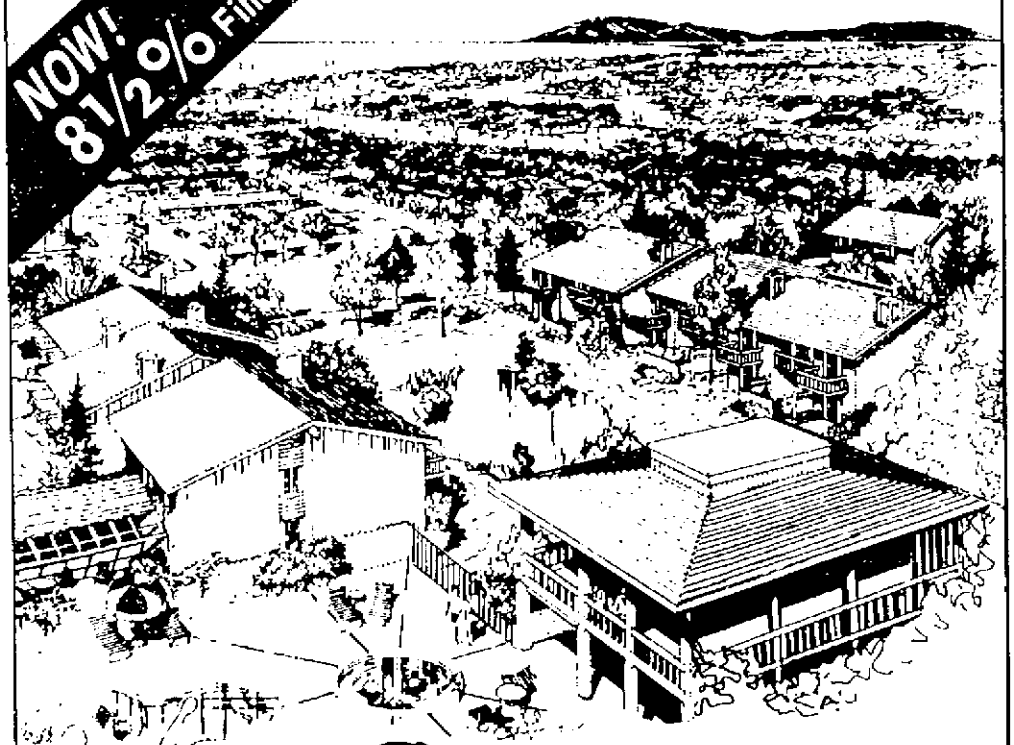

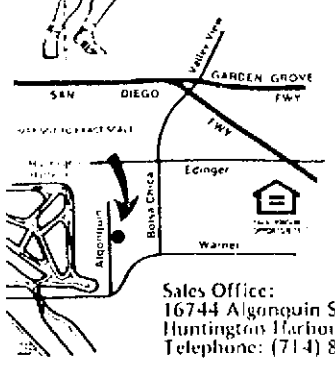

Immediate occupancy is available at this community of 72 townhomes. The sales office and model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. at 3655 Country Club Drive and Cedar Avenue for selection in the final group of homes.

Country Club Gardens may be reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to the Long Beach Boulevard exit, then north on Long Beach Boulevard to 36th Street and west on 36th (which becomes Country Club Drive) for one-quarter mile to Cedar Avenue.

25 Showcase homes sold

Sales are fast paced at Lake Forest's single-family community, Showcase On The Lake, where 25 homes have been sold in the last three weeks.

Sparking buyer enthusiasm in the Showcase Homes community is the unique "custom completion plan" that allows early-selection homebuyers to choose door positions, window placement, put in or remove interior walls (except load bearing walls), and add individual features depending upon the stage of construction.

Priced from $50,000 to $72,950 with 8¾ per cent interest (9 per cent annual percentage rate) on conventional financing, the homes offer up to 1,806 square feet of living space with three and four bedrooms and up to three baths in one- and two-story concepts.

EACH OF the six innovative floor plans is available in three distinctive exterior stylings. Broad expanses of shingle, rich wood and stucco siding topped by shake roofs with wide overhangs compliment the Showcase community.

Living areas are enhanced by vaulted and elevated ceilings, wall-to-wall shag carpeting and draperies. A wet bar and brick, wood-burning fireplace with convenient loglighter are delightful living-room features.

Other luxury features include master suite with private bath, walk-in closets or oversized wardrobes and Dupont Corian marble and Armstrong vinyl flooring in baths. Each plan has a private patio, and attached two-car garage. Lakefront plans have docking space.

PLANNED for convenience and easy care, Showcase kitchens include built-in eye-level double oven, dishwasher and disposal, luminous ceiling, custom hardwood cabinetry and large dining space. All homes have inside laundry areas.

Residents are within walking distance of the Sun and Sail Club.

To see the furnished models at 24342 Toledo Lane, decorated by Vickie Welsh of Modern Interiors, take the San Diego Freeway to the Lake Forest Drive off-ramp in Lake Forest. Turn left on Lake Forest to Toledo, and left one-half mile on Toledo to the models and sales information center, open from 10 a.m. to dusk.

TYPICAL KITCHEN AREA OF A SHOWCASE HOME

Refinancing home may help your chances of selling it

By DON CAMPBELL

The reasons for refinancing a home can run from absolute necessity (putting the monthly mortgage payments back down at a level you can afford) to simply making the house more attractive to a potential buyer.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

We have a mortgage balance of $7,500 on our home on which we pay 5¾ per cent interest. It has been appraised at $38,000. We would like to sell it since we do not want to continue maintenance of our swimming pool.

The house we would like to buy is $33,500 and will need some work, which we can do ourselves. It has a mortgage balance of $16,400 at 6¾ per cent.

The majority of our savings is in Series E bonds, which we would like to keep secure and not cash in until we retire in about 15 years. Would we be better off to pay off our mortgage of $7,500, thus making it easier for someone to buy our home and assume the new mortgage?

Also, we would have the available money to assume the mortgage of the new house and have an interest rate of only 6¾ per cent. Is it, in your opinion, sound for us to do this, and would a bank go along with this? — Mrs. C. R., Phoenix, Ariz.

ANSWER: I don't see anything wrong with it, and — all other things being equal — I don't know why a lender wouldn't go along with it.

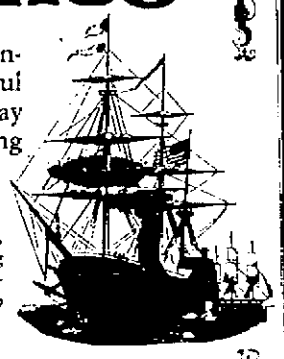

In order to get the mortgage on your present home down (or, looking at it the other way — "up") to a level where a prospective buyer could assume it, you'd have to refinance it for $30,000 or $33,000. Whether, in today's money market, a lender would find this acceptable or not is a matter that only investigation can determine.

It would certainly make your present home pretty attractive — requiring only a buyer capable of putting $5,000 down in cash and assuming a monthly mortgage payment of $272 (principal and interest for 30 years at 9¼ per cent). Or perhaps, the buyer could put down $8,000 in cash and take on mortgage payments of about $247.

THE FORMULA

Cut down bacteria

Perspiration is a liquid given off by the skin. While it consists chiefly of water, it also contains salt, phosphorous, sulphur and small amounts of waste matter. Perspiring is a continuous process even though its physical presence can't always be seen; its principal function being to control body temperature by evaporation.

Most unexposed parts of the body are covered with porous clothing that norman stark

permits air contact with the skin. The notable exception is our feet. Each of these marvels of engineering is usually encased in a housing of relatively impervious leather, which inhibits air from contacting the skin. As a result, the unevaporated perspiration permeates the lining of the shoes where bacterial action causes deterioration of the linings. But here's a way to overcome this problem — inexpensively and simply.

You'll need one tablespoon of FORMALDEHYDE (obtainable from a druggist) and one-fourth cup of WATER. Mix the formaldehyde into the water and store in glass or plastic container. To use, swab the shoe linings, using a cotton swab and allow to dry for several days before wearing. Repeat as often as necessary. CAUTION: Formaldehyde is toxic by inhalation, skin contact and ingestion. Handle carefully.

The cost for making your own disinfectant for shoes is approximately four cents per ounce. To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-bought brand by the number of ounces it contains. Then compare the per-ounce cost — you'll be surprised at how much you can save for so little effort.

Note: Material costs are based on the prices at retail outlets of national drug, grocery and hardware chains. These costs will vary, depending on the geographic area. If you wish to make up a larger quantity — and save even more — buy your materials at a chemical supply company.

(Like any chemical produce you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

(There has never been a how-to book so practical and helpful as THE FORMULA BOOK. Hundreds of easy recipes put savings and fun into the making of your own personal and home care items. Over 200 pages of recipes, diagrams and instructions on ingredients and equipment, in a large paperback format, $5.95. Send to THE FORMULA BOOK, Independent Press Telegram, P. O. AT WIT'S END

Dram of truth in conversation

You know what they say. The metric system is like termites. No sense worrying about them until they get here.

Well, friend, they're here. Those creeping, crawling centimeters, grams and liters that threaten to put me in a size 142 girdle and a size 28 sandal have taken over.

The other day at coffee, Madelyn Murk the neighborhood gossip said, "Have I got a flash for all of you." We all sat there like a tableau — our coffee mugs in mid-air, not daring to breathe lest we miss one whip of her vicious tongue. "Remember Ginger, the hostess at the club who wears makeup a meter thick and stands around with her mouth open a kilometer? Well, she has this thing for Jan's husband."

"No!" we gasped in unison.

"Well, you know Jan," she continued. "All wool and a meter wide. She wouldn't suspect anything. Takes everything with a gram of salt. Played right into Ginger's hand."

"I don't know Ginger," said Mayva.

"YOU DO TOO. She's always got the dry, wild hair that looks like she's down a liter of oil. Pushy! Very pushy! Give her a meter and she'll take a kilometer."

"Well, what happened was one day at lunch, Ardis said to Jan, 'Remember the old gent Ginger was after? The one with one centimeter on a banana peel and one centimeter in the grave? Well, she's got new action now. A married man! And you know something? He's sitting a scant hectometer away from us.'"

"Leave it to Ardis to put her meter in her mouth."

"Don't I know? She was never one to hide her ignorance under a hectoliter basket. Go on! What happened?"

"They looked over and, of course, there sat Jan's husband."

"What did she do?"

"Jan turned to Ardis and said, 'Judge no one until you've walked a kilometer in his moccasins.'"

"That's beautiful," said Mayva. "What does it mean?"

"THAT MEANS you can go all over God's green hectare and you'll never find anyone with an avoirdupois of human kindness to equal that of Jan's."

"Believe me, if it were me I'd demand my kilogram of flesh."

"What's that in English measurement?" I asked quietly.

"A pound," said Madelyn.

"What the heck," I said. "Put me down for a pound too. Anyone know how to double a kilogram?"

Women's rights topic

A half-day workshop on Women's Legal Rights will be presented from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday in the Student Activities Center of Long Beach City College, 4901 E. Carson St.

Jointly sponsord by four Long Beach groups — Women's Community Resources Center, National Organization for Women, California Home Economics Association and American Civil Liberties Union — the workshop is free. Registration is scheduled at 12:15 p.m.

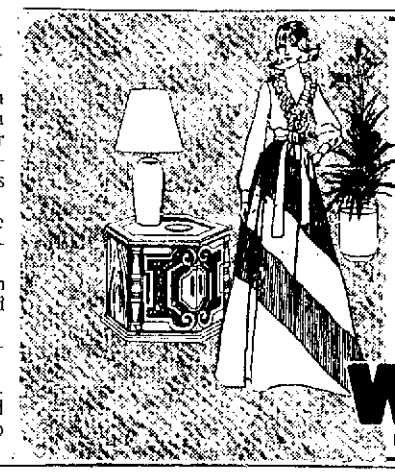

Jill Jakes, staff attorney with the Southern California Chapter of ACLU, will explore such topics as discrimination in employment, discrimination in credit and lesbian women's rights.

Available to answer questions will be a panel of six attorneys, Adrienne Stein, James Batchelor, Geraldine Sandor, Lada Marx, Marjorie Fuller and Nancy Bunn.

Free child care can be arranged by contacting Long Beach NOW or WCRC.

Activities brighten dull days

BURT WILLIAMS, 89-year-old former violinist, sings along spiritedly at Palmcrest day activities center. Williams was one of the first enrolled in the day center.

Staff photos by ROBERT GINN

By PATRICIA de LUNA
Staff Writer

Long Beach, with a population of 72,000 people over age 60 and a variety of facilities to meet their needs, now has something new — a day care center at Palmcrest House.

Day care centers in general are designed to keep older members of society out of institutions until the last possible moment. They have been used in Great Britain as part of a network of services keeping all but two per cent of their elderly out of nursing homes, but in this country their use is just beginning.

Nationally, there are 30 such day care centers, with 16 of these in the West — two dissimilar ones locally. A program set up under the auspices of the National Institute of Mental Health on the East Coast has been used as a fairly common model for most. But each takes its own special twists.

The way Nancy Knapp, director for the Palmcrest center, sees day care, is to make the real world as stimulating as possible, so that an older person may maintain his or her independence in that world. It holds a middle ground between one-to-one babysitting and a senior citizen's social get-together.

The way Rachel Downing, director of the part-time Senior Day Center at El Cerrito County Health Center, sees day care, it serves as crisis intervention for elderly on the very brink of being placed in a nursing home. This day center has provided two-day a week emergency intercedence and follow-up activities for almost three years. As a government project it is seeking to be refunded.

Nancy Knapp, who ran a program for older people in Washington State, says the Palmcrest center will form flexible lines along the particular needs of the 24 people who can use that center at any one time.

"A lot of people are natural loners. They are off by themselves to the mountains at age 20 and they remain the same at 90," she says. These are not the people who would be interested in what is officially called the day activities center, a facet of the Palmcrest House senior citizen residence on Cedar Avenue.

But for others, older people who face involuntary isolation, who sit at home alone for want of means or opportunity for socializing, who wave goodby to spouse or offspring in the morning and do nothing all day but await that person's return, who want to develop new interests or who simply want to mill around in a crowd, the day center can be as individual as each person's desires.

"When a person becomes disengaged from society, the fantasy world seems much better than reality." Thus her role, she says, is to bring the real world to each of those involved, and on each person's own terms.

AT PALMCREST HOUSE, the facilities offered to full-time residents also are available for day participants, including physical and occupational therapy rooms, health care, beauty parlor, movie theater, green house, piano, kitchen area, and separate sitting rooms.

The activities center, (Mrs. Knapp objects to the nationally used term 'day care' as demeaning) would be open from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. five days a week for a sliding fee of from $1 to $10 a day.

"This is an exciting field," says Dr. Julian Feingold, a rabbi who founded the four-year-old Palmcrest complex of proprietary care center and convalescent hospital. "Day care enables the elderly to stay at home as long as possible.

"Too many people," he says, "are institutionalized prematurely." Day care centers, he hopes, will forestall this. "This is a whole new field; there are very few specialists."

Mrs. Knapp sees day care as a way to cut down on approaching senility, a way to rehabilitate stroke patients, a way to evoke stories or memories, to stimulate an older person's mind on various levels, and, no less valid she says, as a means of providing relief for the family of the older person.

"Too much can happen to families as a person grows older. Sometimes the reaction is desperate and families break up when a little guidance could have helped."

Fifty years ago gerontology was not a popular field. "Few people wanted to get involved — it seemed too depressing," she points out, "because there is no cure for old age. The only alternative for growing old is dying."

But as the quantity of life improves, the quality of that life must improve, she maintains.

ONE OF THE FIRST things on her agenda in that regard is to "shave away the baby talk" used with older people. "It is important not to be demeaning. The parallel with children is very demeaning."

She favors using Audubon prints and various bird feathers to stimulate conversation and learning on a variety of levels, to using egg cartons for arts and crafts. "Many of the participants were bird watchers or want to learn about birds," she says. "Others just want to play with the feathers and some are stimulated by seeing the feathers and recall having chickens as growing youngsters.

Everything must therefore be individual," Mrs. Knapp says. "We have to remember that we come with an agenda of things for them to do, but their agenda is what really counts. The people will shape the program.

Hitting somewhere between senior citizen centers where everyone plays bridge and centers which are primarily babysitting arrangements, she says, the Palmcrest center will also be able to offer some individual therapy for stroke patients.

"We'll roll bandages, which is really not a Mickey Mouse activity. Many of these people remember rolling bandages during the war and feel they are performing a useful function. It doesn't cost much and is not like something for a Cub Scout troop.

"The motion improves their eye-hand coordination and the work is important in the community."

NANCY KNAPP, director of day center at Palmcrest House on Cedar Avenue, shares a joke with Jake Cooperman, 80-year-old Palmcrest resident who helped inspire a geography project for center.

Joan Kennedy's father takes issue with stories

By MALVINA STEPHENSON
Women's News Service

WASHINGTON — Beautiful, blonde Joan Bennett Kennedy has emerged as the most attractive and sensitive of all the Kennedy women. She has been vulnerable to mounting family pressures.

JOAN KENNEDY is defended by her father, who says she has drinking problem under control and was never institutionalized for treatment.

Although Joan's father says her drinking problem is "under control," she has become almost a stranger on the Washington scene. Her absence was conspicuous on at least two recent occasions.

The wife of the Massachusetts senator skipped a White House state dinner, which he attended with their 16-year-old daughter. Then, the annual Senate wives' luncheon for the First Lady packed in former and current members from everywhere — but not Joan.

About the same time, Joan was reported participating in suburban meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous. She was accompanied by an unidentified woman friend.

Now, Harry W. Bennett contends that his daughter Joan did not enter Smithers Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center in New York "for personal treatment," as recently reported.

"Joan went there to learn about the institution and how they treat alcoholics," Bennett said in a telephone interview from his home near New Orleans. "She has a tremendous sympathy for people with that problem because she was almost facing it herself."

And then he adds with an edge of bitterness, "She was no more there for care than the man in the moon."

BENNETT IS IRATE over two National Enquirer articles that purported to reveal Joan's confidences while at the institution. Two patients there quoted her alleged complaints about her Kennedy in-laws and doubts from the Chappaquiddick accident in which a Kennedy secretary died.

While Eunice Kennedy Shriver publicly expressed outrage over the Enquirer articles, she did refer to the two controversial sources as "fellow patients" of Joan. She complained about the "invasion of Joan's privacy" and asserted that Ted's wife is on good terms with his family.

Joan's father, however, rejected the entire account as pure fabrication. "There wasn't one word of truth about it," he declared.

These gossipy, embarrassing stories about Joan have left her father in a sour mood toward all the news media. Add to this the published reports about the late President Kennedy and his girl friend with Mafia connections.

"They are all looking for scare headlines," Bennett declared. "They want to talk about the bad part of anything rather than the good. This is what gets you upset. Poor Joan has been so harassed by this for so long."

Asked what his daughter is really like, Bennett said, "She is lovely and beautiful, with the kindest heart you have ever seen in your life. The trouble is, she has been so outgoing and trustful, she has been hurt often."

BENNETT DESCRIBED his daughter as "a housewife first, and a loving mother, more concerned with her children. She is trying to raise them as good Americans. She is trying to protect them from all the publicity and everything else that goes on."

In a candid interview last year, Bennett discussed some of the pressures that sent Joan to clinics and the brink of alcoholism. He spoke of fear of her husband's assassination if he ran for president, and cited the difficulty of a shy, unathletic Joan trying to cope with the boisterous, competitive Kennedys.

"A lot of her personal interests had to be put aside to keep up with the affairs of the Kennedy family," he said. "She's artistic, loves music, and is not an outgoing girl when it comes to sports, except skiing. She has to conform to the Kennedy image, and that is always a battle she carries on within herself."

At that time, Bennett revealed for the first time, "I think she may have been close to being an alcoholic. She indicated to me that she might be, and it scared her." (It was six months later that Joan was at the New York AA Center.)

Another burden that still weighs on Joan is the shock of son Teddy's illness. Although cancer forced the amputation of the boy's leg above the knee, he appears to have won his battle and no longer is required to take treatment, according to the senator's office. Earlier this year, he accompanied his parents on a ski trip to Vermont.

Joan's parents were separated, and her mother was recently found dead in her Florida apartment. Joan will be 40 in September, the elder of two daughters, and has always been close to her father. He said they frequently exchange letters and telephone each other.

THERE IS A biographical chapter on Joan in a new book on "Kennedy Wives, Kennedy Women," by Nancy Gager. While written from the viewpoint of women's liberation, critical of the Kennedy concept of the female role, it does highlight Joan's life story with insight into the background of her personal struggle.

After Bobby Kennedy's assassination, Gager reports, "Journalists began noticing an increase in Ted's drinking, careless driving, and an ever-ready eye for a pretty woman."

Joan reacted with physical flamboyance.

Four months before Chappaquiddick, in March of 1969, Gager writes, "Joan shocked Washington society — and the Nixons — by appearing at the White House annual congressional reception wearing a glittering low-cut mini dress. The First Lady was clearly startled out of her usual self-control and stared at Joan's legs."

The public is all too familiar with the image of "loyal Joan" during the Chappaquiddick period. In the years that followed, Joan admitted to consulting psychiatrists, and by 1973, she was tripping to Europe alone and getting therapy at clinics.

Her drinking problem was brought out in the open in a minor car accident in the fall of 1974. She was fined $200 and had her driver's license suspended for six months.

Joan shows no signs of wanting to end her marriage, according to Gager, who describes her as "the classic version of the conventional put-up-with-almost-anything wife, the antithesis of today's liberated woman."

Although Joan has made efforts to have more individuality, she apparently has little taste for Gager's version of the "liberated woman."

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

49er Foundation 'roast' rare to well done

WHITEY LITTLEFIELD and Dean Martin have a lot in common.

Although Whitey, as general manager for Somerset Distributors, drinks only Michelob beer while Dean is on the hard stuff, both were roasted recently.

The 49er Athletic Foundation of Long Beach State University themed the installation of new officers and farewell to the old "Hurray!...Whitey's Out."

More than 500 men and women dined and roasted at the Lafayette Hotel.

You may have heard of "Whitey" as Brian Littlefield who promoted the Big Appearance of Frank Sinatra at the benefit for the Long Beach Police Officers Memorial Trust Fund.

Even though he is a good guy, the dinner committee plotted some bad things against him.

Under the direction of Jim Kennedy who provided a forklift, certain persons "stole" Whitey's black Pontiac Grand Prix and mounted it smack in front of the hotel on four barrels painted to look like Coors beer cans. (Whitey does NOT drink Coors.) In fact, the Brand Manager for Michelob, Mike Roarty, came all the way from St. Louis to discover the rival beer company displayed prominently throughout the evening.

Dinner (read torture) committee members included Don Dyer who served as emcee for the roasting, President-elect Rick Bryson, Dr. Tom Dean George Medak (Tom and George are new co-vice presidents) and Nelson Farris.

More were Dick Kussman, Mike Colonna, Harry Duple, Axel Brenna, Ed Spoo and 49er Foundation executive director, Craig Cross.

When the guest of "honor" arrived he was carolyn mcdowell

promptly put in a cage built partially of Coors beer cans.

His guards, dressed as referees, were football players Russ Bolinger (just drafted by the Detroit Lions on the third round), and University linebacker Dan Bunz, a junior.

The gag resulted from a recent incident at a University basketball game when Whitey had a dispute with one of the refs.

They finally let Whitey out of his cage to join the other tuxedo clad VIPS and roasters on the dais. At least roasters Gary Little, representing the University, and Mike Tracy from the Police Officers Association wore tuxes. Roaster Bill Barnes, of City College, representing the Long Beach Boys Club, wore a white tuxedo. Former 49er lineback Darryl Wright draped his 6-foot 4-inch, 245-pound frame as a lady of the night. Only female roaster, Marion Keener, dressed as comedian Ruth Buzzi of "Laugh In" fame.

Pranksters not only stole Whitey's car, but also his prepared retaliation speech, which was read to the audience before Whitey could protest. When it came his turn to talk, everyone on the dais got up and left.

Including new 49er secretary Bunny Kussman. (I guess she wasn't wearing a tux.

NOW FOR NEWS of a younger, bit more serious set. Members of Assisteens, junior auxiliary of Assistance League, are junior high school aged daughters and grand-daughters of members of Assistance League.

Officers of Assisteens attended the biennial officers workshop at Assistance League clubhouse in Hollywood recently.

The Long Beach girls also staged their annual fashion show and fund raising at Bullock's tea room.

Co-chairteens of the successful luncheon were Lynn Richmond and Lori Bettison with assistance from their respective mothers, Patti and Barbara.

Member models showed fashions from the personal collection of Susan Nickerson. In spite of her tender years, she owns costumes circa 1870 through the 1950s.

Susan modeled a dress from 1882, Laura Shadden displayed the 1904 wedding dress of the second Mrs. Irvine of the land family. Karen Wilkinson and Theresa Davidson (she is chairteen of Assisteens' represented the Civil War era. Ann Trostle went a little more modern with 1933 apparel and Karen Steuber stole the show with a costume from the 50s which most of the mothers remember too well.

Other ninth graders modeling 1976 clothes were Julie Brandon, Anita Hilton, Patty King and Sheril Olson.

With the help of League coordinator, Joan Nickerson, Susan's mother and assistant Joan Lucas (daughter Lisa is chairteen-elect) the group raised $130 for its philanthropies.

This year, they presented playroom equipment and toys to Earl and Lorraine Miller Children's Hospital at a party which featured Gumdrops the clown.

Cindy Sewak, with help of mom, Wanda, chaired the formal presentation of toys to Dottie Possios, child life director of the hospital.

Women are asking...

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

'I prefer a shower to a tub bath. Am I losing out on beauty aids?'

More people take a shower than a tub bath. But, most people admit they enjoy the tub more than the shower. That's the result of our postcard poll of readers.

The statistics reveal seven out of ten prefer showers because they are speedier. The lingering, more relaxing tub bath is restricted by many to once a week, while a shower is once or even twice a day.

Talking with a physical conditioner, he came up with some bathing pointers. "If you're in the shower, avoid that ice cold-red hot blast of water. Keep temperature comfortable. Use a thick, terry towel to rub body dry. This increases circulation. However if skin is tender, merely pat dry. Then, smooth on lotion."

He reminded, "Don't rule out the tub. At the end of a frantic day, it's the quickest way to relax. Keep temperature moderate, add your favorite salts or oil, and let the world roll by!"

The expert also suggested, "Wash the face BEFORE bathing. After removing make-up, thoroughly cleanse face, usually with a complexion brush and soap or lotion. Then, study skin texture.

"Use index finger (regarded the most sensitive digit) and skim along the T-zone of the face — across forehead, down nose to cleft of chin. If finger is oily, skin freshener or astringent may help. If area is flaky and a white residue is on finger, avoid lotions that have alcohol in them, and substitute a moisture-balancing cream."

Invest in Long Beach, 2076

Plans to build a clock tower in the new Civic Center complex as the people's Bicentennial gift to the city of Long Beach require the support of citizens to be a success.

Several groups have gotten into the spirit of the Bicentennial by raising money to buy the Heritage Certificates. Proceeds from the sale of these non-redeemable, non-interest-bearing certificates will go into a fund to buy the clock tower and to establish a legacy for the Tricentennial committee to work with in 2076.

Among the groups purchasing certificates are Scout Troop 209, under guidance of Clyde Robinett; Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, with Mrs. John Roggeveen as president, and Gold Star Manor.

The scouts earned $80 doing odd jobs to buy 13 $5 certificates and 1 $15 certificate. The auxiliary has purchased 45 $5 certificates to be given to all babies born at Memorial during the first week in May. Additional certificates will be bought as needed.

The $1 fee collected at the Gold Star Bicentennial Tea today will go into a fund to purchase certificates in the name of Gold Star Mothers.

Other denominations available in certificates are $10, $20 and $25. The parchment certificate is appropriately hand-lettered with the purchaser's name and is ready for framing.

Certificates are available from the city's Bicentennial Committee headquarters, 555 E. Ocean Blvd., Suite 718, or from area savings and loan offices — Mercury in Bixby Knolls, Fidelity in downtown Long Beach, Great Western in Belmont Shore and Brentwood in Los Altos Center.

Glad you asked that!

Q: I read where James Dougherty, a former Los Angeles police officer and Marilyn Monroe's first husband, is the latest to write a Marilyn book. Has he anything to say in it that hasn't been said many times before? — Bernice and Barbara Brown, Milwaukee.

A: We think so. For one, he doesn't agree with the conclusions of the Los Angeles police team that investigated her death, that it was a "probable suicide." "I'm positive in my own mind," he writes, "that her death was an accident. She had overdosed one time too many and there was no one to save her ... I'm equally positive that Norma Jean would have written a short note, telling the world good-bye, if nothing else."

Jim also makes reference to her friendship with the Kennedys. "Probably she did know the Kennedy brothers well," he concedes. "And I understand that the computer record of Norma Jean's telephone calls for that week in August disappeared from the telephone company's files. As a former policeman, I happen to know that such a removal can only be achieved through a federal subpoena, so perhaps someone very high in Washington wanted that evidence out of the way."

Dougherty, who took Norma Jean Baker for his wife on June 19, 1942, when she was a pretty teen-age brunette, not a blonde sex symbol, has no doubt that she found love again after their divorce. "Joe DiMaggio loved her tremendously," he says. "And Arthur Miller must have loved her because he stood by her at the time that the strain was beginning to show and she needed more support than ever. He was always there until the very last, when I guess he tossed in the towel."

Jim, who's been married twice since divorcing Marilyn, is living happily with his present wife, Rita, in a quiet valley in the Arizona desert.

Q: When Sally Quinn found she wouldn't make any rating inroads against Barbara Walters on TV — and was fired by CBS — I understand she was a very sick girl. What happened? — Mrs. L.D. Cinder, Pittsburgh.

A: As a result of the tension and then deep depression, Sally came down with acne, diabetes and ulcers. Miss Quinn caustically castigated her "CBS Morning News" executive producer declaring: "He never produced anything in his life." And complained that her co-host, newsman Hughes Rudd, had never been an anchorman.

Ms. Quinn's a lot happier now back in her cozy niche at the Washington Post. She will cover the upcoming summer Olympics and presidential campaigns.

Q: Where could I have seen Barry Morse (who plays Prof. Bergman on TV's "Space: 1999") before? — Grace F., Floral Park, N.Y.

A: On "The Fugitive," Morse played police Lt. Gerard who relentlessly pursued David Janssen week after week. You may also have seen the talented actor on "Wagon Train," "Dr. Kildare" and "The Saint."

Last summer he, Lilli Palmer, Brian Keith and John Mills were in "The Zoo Gang," a mini-series about former World War II fighters who banded together after the war to protect "law and order." Former Beatle Paul McCartney and his wife Linda wrote the scripts, produced and then performed the music they penned for the series.

Q: With all the money he had, I understand Howard Hughes carefully examined every check he ever signed. Is this true? — E. Kehoe, Richmond, Ca.

A: There was one incident we heard about. Shortly after Hughes bought the RKO Studios, Steve White (who wrote a series on Hughes for Look magazine), saw him write out a check for $23,000,000.00. Noticing that he studied the check carefully before signing it, Steve asked: "Is something wrong?" "No," replied Hughes. "I'm just busy counting the zeros!"

Q: "The First Time," the book that reveals the details of the first sexual experiences of many famous people — is it true it's going to be made into a movie? And that some of the celebrities mentioned will play themselves on the screen? — Mrs. Oscar S., Minneapolis.

A: Yes — it will be filmed. But no the celebs (such as Burt Reynolds, Liberace, Joan Rivers, Dyan Cannon, Mae West, Jack Lemmon, Debbie Reynolds, Sally Kellerman and Joseph Cotten) want nothing to do with it. They've even forbidden the mention of their names in the movie. So the producers will have to substitute fictitious names — with any resemblance to people living or dead purely coincidental.

Comments actress Cannon about the book: "It's one of those pimples that keeps coming back."

Q: Is it true that French Gen. Lafayette, our great friend in the American Revolution, is buried in American soil? — Arnold Smythe, Philadelphia.

A: Yes. The tomb of Gen. Lafayette, although it is located in the Picpus Cemetery in France, is buried in earth brought from Virginia — with an American flag flying on the site since the burial date, May 22, 1834. Little known is the fact that Lafayette was made an American citizen by the U.S. Congress.

Goldie Hawn doesn't fit 'dumb blonde' mold

HOLLYWOOD — Goldie Hawn stepped out of her silver sportscar, bright as a yellow tulip, full-blossomed and fully pregnant, adjusted the skirt of her maternity smock, ignored the buzzing gossip of the sidewalk cafe, spied the lunchtime Bloody Mary I was having with envy, gritted her teeth and ordered a glass of milk.

"I'm in my fifth month," she chirped cheerfully, "and I have to drink four glasses of milk a day. I hate it. The baby is moving around inside me quite a bit now. Every now and then he pinches me real good. But I'm happy. It's something I've wanted for a long time. I just had to be sure the Daddy would be the right person."

The Daddy is Bill Hudson, a member of the Hudson Brothers rock group. Goldie's husband is Gus Trikonis, a fledgling director, whom she is divorcing. "In the days of Hedda and Louella, you couldn't be one man's wife, have another man's child and still call yourself a movie star. Ingrid Bergman tried it, and they destroyed her. But in the post-Watergate reality of now, it is all too evident that nobody's pinning any scarlet letters on Goldie. She even showed up on the Academy Awards for all the world to see.

"Fortunately," she said, attacking her omelet, "times have changed. Rona Barrett even called to ask my permission before she announced it. I am not having this baby in a closet. It's no secret. Gus and I will be divorced before the baby is born, so it'll work out all right. One of the reasons we never had children was that he just wasn't ready. It's not fair to any baby to come into a world that doesn't want him. The baby didn't ask to be born.

"Before I met Bill, I felt I had given up all hope. Now I'm happy I waited because I can really appreciate this baby and everything he means to me and to Bill. The past three years have changed my life and given me time to rethink a lot of my values.

"I got married in 1968, right after 'Cactus Flower,' We've been separated three years. I had a lot of success all at once, and my husband worked too hard to equal it. He never made it. He's Greek, and it's very important to Greek men to bring home the bread and butter. He wouldn't let me give him anything. We had no luxuries. He was always talking about his pride, about his pride was too big to allow his wife to pay for anything.

"Now he is demanding $75,000 of my money to free me so I can marry Bill. I figure it's worth it to buy a new life, but what happened to the pride?"

EVERY AGE HAS its dumb blonde, but if that's what Goldie's screen image has been, she's not living up to it in person. She's about as dumb as a fox. She's more Judy Holliday than Marilyn Monroe. Offscreen, she looks nothing like the Tweety Pie saloon singer she plays in her new movie, "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox." She wears no make-up, her golden hair is long, straight and silky as meadow pollen, and with the extra weight she's gained, her wide blue eyes disappear into a soft, round face white and puffy as an unbaked angel food cake. When she talks, she loses the dumb-dodo voice she made famous on "Laugh-In," and she sounds like the mature, sensitive woman she really is.

What Hollywood does to these people is mystifying. Famous for her blank, wide-eyed "born yesterday" stares, Goldie makes people laugh. But she wasn't born yesterday. She's done it the hard way and, through an accumulation of ideas and experience, has developed into an important actress of surprising depth, which she proved in "The Sugarland Express" and "The Girl from Petrovka."

"My greatest regret is that I won the Oscar for 'Cactus Flower' too early. I wasn't even there to accept it. I was in London doing a film, and when I got back, nobody cared. I didn't even like myself in that film. I've learned so much about life and acting

since then. I'd like to have another crack at it now, but I think they've cemented me in comedy roles. I think most people have even forgotten that I started out as a dancer."

She grew up in Takoma Park, Md., and was a very average student with no aspirations to go on to college. All she wanted to do was dance. Her father was a violinist. He plays one of the musicians in the dance hall in "Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox." He lives in Las Vegas. Her mother ran a dancing school and owned a gift shop.

"She was a pragmatic, strong, extremely self-disciplined woman. You could never call her an ordinary housewife. Both parents were and still are extremely supportive of my gifts. I taught dancing for a while after high school, then went to Williamsburg and acted in passion plays in a 3000-seat amphitheater. Then I got a job in the World's Fair and moved to New York.

"I roomed with a girl on West 70th St., then moved to a building on Eighth Avenue that is now overrun with hookers. I auditioned for everything, got turned down by Herbert Ross and shown the door by the Copacabana. Those were dog days."

SHE REMEMBERS them with humor, but there were times when Goldie was so weary and so blue, both from loneliness and from being pinched by every guy who thought she was another stereotyped blonde pushover, that she almost gave up show business. "I had a go-go agent at one low point. One night he booked me in a strip joint in Jersey. I made $20 for dancing my buns off, he got $5 of that, and I danced in sequin pasties on tabletops with guys exposing themselves and ended up hitching a ride back to New York in a Mack truck. I really don't believe the things I went through, but I wanted to be in show business so desperately. I went to Puerto Rico once where I worked with a rock band. Then I found myself with $200 in my pocket, and I bought a dog for $175. I called him Lamb Chop. It was my rent money, but I guess I needed a friend.

"I was ready to throw in the towel when a choreographer friend called and asked me to go to California. I left my four roommates, my furniture, said goodbye to my boyfriend, packed up my dog, went to California and never went back."

Things didn't happen overnight there, either. "I got a little apartment across the street from Disneyland and ended up in a chorus line in Vegas. I was up all night, sleeping all day, and I turned into a thing. I saw myself one day on TV in a red wig, looking like somebody's pet monkey. That's when I quit. It was a crappy life. I went back to L.A., gave myself two weeks and if I didn't make it, I would go back to Maryland."

One day before the deadline, she landed a bit in an Andy Griffith TV special. An agent from William Morris spotted her, got her three segments on "Laugh-In," and that was the beginning of Goldie Hawn. Billy Wilder saw the show one night, called Mike Frankovich, and he put her in "Cactus Flower." A star was born.

But Goldie's private life continued to be an uphill climb. She found herself in the hands of a manager who used her success to go on an ego trip of his own, alienating everyone around her. "He was refusing scripts behind my back, insulting the press and making enemies I didn't even know I had. I was very inexperienced and trying like mad to cope with success, and suddenly my manager sued me for $6 million! I've been in and out of innocent lawsuits ever since, but this is the first time in my life that I'm really making my own decisions. I'm must now beginning to pull myself together."

IN THE INTERIM, she made some impressive films. "Shampoo" gave her a chance to play a real person, although she calmly says, "There were times when I wondered who the real director was. Warren Beatty got all the best closeups." "Sugarland Express" was her best acting role, but "Steven Spielberg is better with action than people" (a fact that was finally proved with "Jaws"). She says she learned more from Richard Brooks on "$" than any other director she's ever worked with.

"Not only was I in Germany, but I was in the hands of this madman! If you weren't yelled at, you were nothing. But he knows everything there is about making movies and he taught me a great deal."

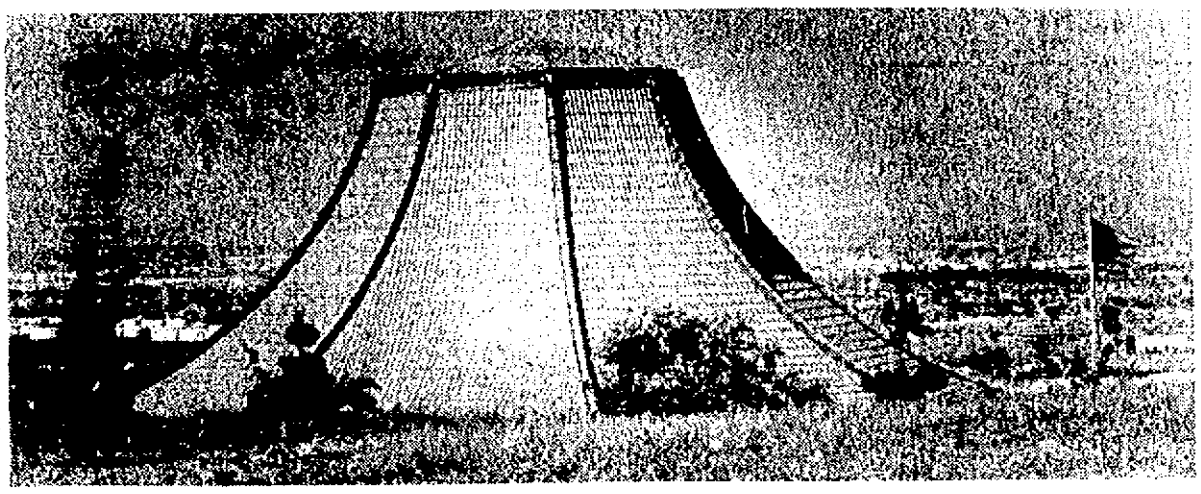

What started out as a challenging experience with "The Girl From Petrovka" ended up a bitter disappointment. "I went to Russia to research the girl, got all the way to Yugoslavia to start filming, and the whole company was turned away by Tito. We had to re-build Russia on the backlot at Universal. It was a nightmare. I even had to pay $1,000 a week out of my own salary for a gaffer to head the lighting crew because the studio was too cheap to hire one. I had to turn down 'Day of the Locust' to do it and that was killing me, so my heart wasn't in it anymore, but I couldn't get out of it."

Self-assured after taking time off to rethink her priorities, Goldie Hawn is now running her life and her career. Her head is glued on under that blonde waterfall of hairdresser's joy with all the right tacks.

"I learned that people no longer have to do things just to be nice or make other people happy. I met my husband Gus when I was a chorus girl in 'Kiss Me Kate.' I was very green, a real baby. He was a father figure to me. Then I met Bill on an airplane. We have the same humor, the same needs, similar family backgrounds. I always felt temporary when I was married. Now I feel I'm mature enough to know what love is. It's a very responsible thing.

"People are so easy, money is so easy, there are so many divorces in Hollywood. Yesterday I sat down and tried to figure out who my real friends are. They are people I've known a very long time. Most of them aren't in show business at all. My best friend owns a carpet mill. Show business, with its transitory and very superficial values, is not the most important thing in my life anymore. When I told my mother I was pregnant, she said, 'Don't tell anybody, get your divorce right away! You'll ruin your career!' But times have changed. Nobody has done one thing to me. I've had no feedback, no repercussions, no DAR ladies picketing the Oscars. I'm living my way."

Goldie Hawn is her real name. She hated it as a kid because of all the Goldilocks jokes she suffered. Her mother said, "Look at it this way — nobody will ever forget a name like that." All kidding about dumb blondes aside, they didn't. And they haven't. And they won't.

Dram of truth in conversation

erma bombeck

You know what they say. The metric system is like termites. No sense worrying about them until they get here.

Well, friend, they're here. Those creeping, crawling centimeters, grams and liters that threaten to put me in a size 142 girdle and a size 38 sandal have taken over.

The other day at coffee, Madelyn Murk the neighborhood gossip said, "Have I got a flash for all of you." We all sat there like a tableau — our coffee mugs in mid-air, not daring to breathe lest we miss one whip of her vicious tongue. "Remember Ginger, the hostess at the club who wears makeup a meter thick and stands around with her mouth open a kilometer? Well, she has this thing for Jan's husband."

"No!" we gasped in unison.

"Well, you know Jan," she continued. "All wool and a meter wide. She wouldn't suspect anything. Takes everything with a gram of salt. Played right into Ginger's hand."

"I don't know Ginger," said Mayva.

"YOU DO TOO. She's always got the dry, wild hair that looks like she's down a liter of oil. Pushy! Very pushy! Give her a meter and she'll take a kilometer."

"Well, what happened was one day at lunch, Ardis said to Jan, 'Remember the old gent Ginger was after? The one with one centimeter on a banana peel and one centimeter in the grave? Well, she's got new action now. A married man! And you know something? He's sitting a scant hectometer away from us.'"

"Leave it to Ardis to put her meter in her mouth."

"Don't I know? She was never one to hide her ignorance under a hectoliter basket. Go on! What happened?"

"They looked over and, of course, there sat Jan's husband."

"What did she do?"

"Jan turned to Ardis and said, 'Judge no one until you've walked a kilometer in his moccasins.'"

"That's beautiful," said Mayva. "What does it mean?"

"THAT MEANS you can go all over God's green hectare and you'll never find anyone with an avoirdupois of human kindness to equal that of Jan's."

"Believe me, if it were me I'd demand my kilogram of flesh."

"What's that in English measurement?" I asked quietly.

"A pound," said Madelyn.

"What the heck," I said. "Put me down for a pound too. Anyone know how to double a kilogram?"

Women's rights topic

A half-day workshop on Women's Legal Rights will be presented from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday in the Student Activities Center of Long Beach City College, 1901 E. Carson St.

Jointly sponsord by four Long Beach groups — Women's Community Resources Center, National Organization for Women, California Home Economics Association and American Civil Liberties Union — the workshop is free. Registration is scheduled at 12:15 p.m.

Jill Jakes, staff attorney with the Southern California Chapter of ACLU, will explore such topics as discrimination in employment, discrimination in credit and lesbian women's rights.

Available to answer questions will be a panel of six attorneys, Adrienne Stein, James Batchelor, Geraldine Sandor, Lada Marx, Marjorie Fuller and Nancy Bunn.

Free child care can be arranged by contacting Long Beach NOW or WCRC.

THE FORMULA

Cut down bacteria

norman stark

Perspiration is a liquid given off by the skin. While it consists chiefly of water, it also contains salt, phosphorous, sulphur and small amounts of waste matter. Perspiring is a continuous process even though its physical presence can't always be seen; its principal function being to control body temperature by evaporation.

Most unexposed parts of the body are covered with porous clothing that permits air contact with the skin. The notable exception is our feet. Each of these marvels of engineering is usually encased in a housing of relatively impervious leather, which inhibits air from contacting the skin. As a result, the unevaporated perspiration permeates the lining of the shoes where bacterial action causes deterioration of the linings. But here's a way to overcome this problem — inexpensively and simply.

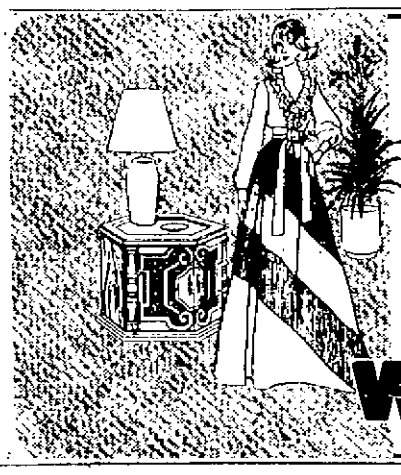

You'll need one tablespoon of FORMALDEHYDE (obtainable from a druggist) and one-fourth cup of WATER. Mix the formaldehyde into the water and store in glass or plastic container. To use, swab the shoe linings, using a cotton swab and allow to dry for several days before wearing. Repeat as often as necessary. CAUTION: Formaldehyde is toxic by inhalation, skin contact and ingestion. Handle carefully.

The cost for making your own disinfectant for shoes is approximately four cents per ounce. To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-bought brand by the number of ounces it contains. Then compare the per-ounce cost — you'll be surprised at how much you can save for so little effort.

Note: Material costs are based on the prices at retail outlets of national drug, grocery and hardware chains. These costs will vary, depending on the geographic area. If you wish to make up a larger quantity — and save even more — buy your materials at a chemical supply company.

(Like any chemical produce you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

(There has never been a how-to book so practical and helpful as THE FORMULA BOOK. Hundreds of easy recipes put savings and fun into the making of your own personal and home care items. Over 200 pages of recipes, diagrams and instructions on ingredients and equipment, in a large paperback format, $5.95. Send to THE FORMULA BOOK, Independent Press Telegram, P. O. 49er Foundation 'roast' rare to well done

WHITEY LITTLEFIELD and Dean Martin have a lot in common.

Although Whitey, as general manager for Somerset Distributors, drinks only Michelob beer while Dean is on the hard stuff, both were roasted recently.

The 49er Athletic Foundation of Long Beach State University themed the installation of new officers and farewell to the old "Hurray!...Whitey's Out."

More than 500 men and women dined and roasted at the Lafayette Hotel.

You may have heard of "Whitey" as Brian Littlefield who promoted the Big Appearance of Frank Sinatra at the benefit for the Long Beach Police Officers Memorial Trust Fund.

Even though he is a good guy, the dinner committee plotted some bad things against him.

Under the direction of Jim Kennedy who provided a forklift, certain persons "stole" Whitey's black Pontiac Grand Prix and mounted it smack in front of the hotel on four barrels painted to look like Coors beer cans. (Whitey does NOT drink Coors.) In fact, the Brand Manager for Michelob, Mike Roarty, came all the way from St. Louis to discover the rival beer company displayed prominently throughout the evening.

Dinner (read torture) committee members included Don Dyer who served as emcee for the roasting, President-elect Rick Bryson, Dr. Tom Dean George Medak (Tom and George are new co-vice presidents) and Nelson Farris.

More were Dick Kussman, Mike Colonna, Harry Duple, Axel Brenna, Ed Spoo and 49er Foundation executive director, Craig Cross.

When the guest of "honor" arrived he was carolyn mcdowell

promptly put in a cage built partially of Coors beer cans.

His guards, dressed as referees, were football players Russ Bolinger (just drafted by the Detroit Lions on the third round), and University linebacker Dan Bunz, a junior.

The gag resulted from a recent incident at a University basketball game when Whitey had a dispute with one of the refs.

They finally let Whitey out of his cage to join the other tuxedo clad VIPS and roasters on the dais. At least roasters Gary Little, representing the University, and Mike Tracy from the Police Officers Association wore tuxes. Roaster Bill Barnes, of City College, representing the Long Beach Boys Club, wore a white tuxedo. Former 49er lineback Darryl Wright draped his 6-foot 4-inch, 245-pound frame as a lady of the night. Only female roaster, Marion Keener, dressed as comedian Ruth Buzzi of "Laugh In" fame.

Pranksters not only stole Whitey's car, but also his prepared retaliation speech, which was read to the audience before Whitey could protest. When it came his turn to talk, everyone on the dais got up and left.

Including new 49er secretary Bunny Kussman. (I guess she wasn't wearing a tux.

NOW FOR NEWS of a younger, bit more serious set. Members of Assisteens, junior auxiliary of Assistance League, are junior high school aged daughters and grand-daughters of members of Assistance League.

Officers of Assisteens attended the biennial officers workshop at Assistance League clubhouse in Hollywood recently.

The Long Beach girls also staged their annual fashion show and fund raising at Bullock's tea room.

Co-chairteens of the successful luncheon were Lynn Richmond and Lori Bettison with assistance from their respective mothers, Patti and Barbara.

Member models showed fashions from the personal collection of Susan Nickerson. In spite of her tender years, she owns costumes circa 1870 through the 1950s.

Susan modeled a dress from 1882, Laura Shadden displayed the 1904 wedding dress of the second Mrs. Irvine of the land family. Karen Wilkinson and Theresa Davidson (she is chairteen of Assisteens' represented the Civil War era. Ann Trostle went a little more modern with 1933 apparel and Karen Steuber stole the show with a costume from the 50s which most of the mothers remember too well.

Other ninth graders modeling 1976 clothes were Julie Brandon, Anita Hilton, Patty King and Sheril Olson.

With the help of League coordinator, Joan Nickerson, Susan's mother and assistant Joan Lucas (daughter Lisa is chairteen-elect) the group raised $130 for its philanthropies.

This year, they presented playroom equipment and toys to Earl and Lorraine Miller Children's Hospital at a party which featured Gumdrops the clown.

Cindy Sowak, with help of mom, Wanda, chaired the formal presentation of toys to Dottie Possios, child life director of the hospital.

Women are asking...

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

'I prefer a shower to a tub bath. Am I losing out on beauty aids?'

More people take a shower than a tub bath. But, most people admit they enjoy the tub more than the shower. That's the result of our postcard poll of readers.

The statistics reveal seven out of ten prefer showers because they are speedier. The lingering, more relaxing tub bath is restricted by many to once a week, while a shower is once or even twice a day.

Talking with a physical conditioner, he came up with some bathing pointers. "If you're in the shower, avoid that ice cold-red hot blast of water. Keep temperature comfortable. Use a thick, terry towel to rub body dry. This increases circulation. However if skin is tender, merely pat dry. Then, smooth on lotion."

He reminded, "Don't rule out the tub. At the end of a frantic day, it's the quickest way to relax. Keep temperature moderate, add your favorite salts or oil, and let the world roll by!"

The expert also suggested, "Wash the face BEFORE bathing. After removing make-up, thoroughly cleanse face, usually with a complexion brush and soap or lotion. Then, study skin texture.

"Use index finger (regarded the most sensitive digit) and skim along the T-zone of the face — across forehead, down nose to cleft of chin. If finger is oily, skin freshener or astringent may help. If area is flaky and a white residue is on finger, avoid lotions that have alcohol in them, and substitute a moisture-balancing cream."

Invest in Long Beach, 2076

Plans to build a clock tower in the new Civic Center complex as the people's Bicentennial gift to the city of Long Beach require the support of citizens to be a success.

Several groups have gotten into the spirit of the Bicentennial by raising money to buy the Heritage Certificates. Proceeds from the sale of these non-redeemable, non-interest-bearing certificates will go into a fund to buy the clock tower and to establish a legacy for the Tricentennial committee to work with in 2076.

Among the groups purchasing certificates are Scout Troop 209, under guidance of Clyde Robinett; Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, with Mrs. John Roggeveen as president, and Gold Star Manor.

The scouts earned $80 doing odd jobs to buy 13 $5 certificates and 1 $15 certificate. The auxiliary has purchased 45 $5 certificates to be given to all babies born at Memorial during the first week in May. Additional certificates will be bought as needed.

The $1 fee collected at the Gold Star Bicentennial Tea today will go into a fund to purchase certificates in the name of Gold Star Mothers.

Other denominations available in certificates are $10, $20 and $25. The parchment certificate is appropriately hand-lettered with the purchaser's name and is ready for framing.

Certificates are available from the city's Bicentennial Committee headquarters, 555 E. Ocean Blvd., Suite 718, or from area savings and loan offices — Mercury in Bixby Knolls, Fidelity in downtown Long Beach, Great Western in Belmont Shore and Brentwood in Los Altos Center.

DEAR ABBY

Sorry, some subjects are better left unshared

DEAR ABBY: I am a 63-year-old widow. My husband died two years ago after a beautiful marriage that lasted for 30 years.

I went completely to pieces and foolishly took up with a man shortly afterwards. I was lost and lonely, and he provided the tenderness and consolation I desperately needed at the time. It was mostly a sexual attraction, and it lasted only a few months.

abigail van buren

After we broke up, I met a very fine, 72-year-old gentleman who was everything a woman could want in a husband. He proposed marriage and I accepted. Then I told him about my brief affair, thinking he would understand. Well, he didn't! Instead, he said he couldn't marry me knowing that I was "second-hand" merchandise.

I told him that in all the years of my marriage, I never looked at another man, but he said it didn't matter — my affair after my husband's death was something he could never forgive.

Abby, don't you think he is wrong to hold that against me? I didn't even know him when this happened. I love him and want to marry him, but I cannot understand his attitude. Please advise. — HEAVY-HEARTED

DEAR HEAVY: I think he's wrong. But you could be lucky to have found out how unforgiving and unfair he is. I'm sure you realize how foolish you were to discuss your past with him. Don't make that mistake again.

DEAR ABBY: When I first heard about topless swimsuits for girls, I thought it was just a lot of talk, but yesterday I actually saw one for sale in a store!

If women would consider wearing a topless swimsuit in public, we have reached a new low in our civilization — even lower than the decadence that preceded the fall of the Roman empire.

Topless swimsuits! Have we lost all sense of decency? Who cares if we are bombed back to the Stone Age? What's left to save? — MOTHER OF GIRLS

DEAR MOTHER: The bottoms.

DEAR ABBY: I am in my middle 70s. Since my wife's death 10 years ago, I have been seeing a very lovely married woman who is now in her middle 30s.

She is married to a man who barely makes a living for her and their children.

I am making out my will and want to provide generously for this woman who has given me so much happiness. How can I do so without casting a shadow on her reputation or embarrassing her? — NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Talk to your lawyer, and then discuss it with the woman. Remembering someone in a will isn't necessarily an admission of a romantic involvement.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter about the myna bird who was taught to use dirty words?

RONA

DESIGNER PATTERN

A design fit for any event

When day extends to dinner or when you are vacation or travelbound, this dress and jacket designed by Mario Forte for Rona will be your prized possession. If finesse of fit is a crucial factor to you, you'll be delighted by the princess lines that flow down the dress into pleats in front. Note the way the jacket curves smoothly to the body to continue the line. A crisp touch of white — or a spark of color — animates the square neckline, collar and pocket detail. Choose prints or solids in machine-washable polyester blends, cotton, linen, shantung.

Printed Pattern M347 is available in Misses Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) dress requires 2⅞ yards 45-inch fabric; jacket 1¾ yards.

Please send $1.25 for Printed Pattern M347 to Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Department, P.O. Box 59, Old Chelsea Station, New York, N.Y. 10011. (Add 35 cents for each pattern for first class mail and special handling.) Print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with ZIP, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

New work tells women's impact on literature

Literary Women: The Great Writers
By Ellen Moers. Doubleday, $10

Ellen Moers selected her women writers not only because they were women but because they introduced new styles and genres. We learn how and why Harriet Beecher Stowe was the first to write powerfully impassionate exposes of slavery; George Sand championed the rights of the lowly; George Eliot those of the Jews; how and why Charlotte Bronte and books

Louisa May Alcott dealt with the harsh realities of earning a living.

We learn, too, how the Gothic novel thrived on female anxieties about sexuality, motherhood and beauty in the works of Emily Bronte, Mary Shelley and Carson McCullers; how George Eliot differed from Jane Austen, Emily Dickinson from Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Willa Cather from George Sand. Women writers, we are shown, broke a lot of new ground.

Growth of the American Revolution 1766-1775
By Bernhard Knollenberg. Free Press, $15

The late brilliant historian and scholar Bernhard Knollenberg (who wrote "The Origin of the American Revolution 1759-1766) turned in his engrossing sequel, "Growth of the American Revolution 1766-1775," to one of the most turbulent eras in American history. It saw the Boston Massacre, the Liberty Riots, the Boston Tea Party, the First Continental Congress, and the shots at Lexington that opened the Revolutionary War. We get a new and deeper meaning of the American fight for independence — not just a chronicle of events, but a study of American attitudes as they changed, the growth of the spirit of resistance and rebellion, and the current that formed a new national identity.

Micronesia: Islands of Wilderness
By Kenneth Brower
Photographs by Robert Wenkam. Seabury, $29.50

One of the three main chains of Pacific islands (the other two are Polynesia and Melanesia), Micronesia occupies a total area of about 1,135 square miles, its islands widely scattered, west of the Philippines in the Western Pacific. It includes the Mariana, Palau, Caroline, Marshall and Gilbert Islands, which are all small.

Variation is a word that could have been coined especially for Micronesia: the Marianas, Palaus and many of the Carolines are volcanic in origin, some with peaks of 1,000 to 2,500 feet, while others of the Carolines and all of the Marshall and Gilbert Islands are low coral atolls.

The Micronesian peoples are a mixed race of Polynesian, Melanesian and some Maluysian stock, but the interesting and unexplained ruins on several of the islands indicate the ancient presence of a very capable people of extremely early origin. Most of Micronesia belonged to Spain for centuries, and was sold by Spain to Germany after the Spanish-American War. Japan seized a vast area from the Germans in World War I and heavily fortified portions of the islands, which were the scenes of bitter battle between the U.S. and Japan in World War II.

Now Micronesia is a trust territory under U.S. control through a United Nations mandate; Palauans, who are fiercely individualistic people, support an independence movement; Yap (the famed island of stone money), Truk, and others favor a federation of Micronesia without giving up U.S. ties; Saipan and Tinian in the Mariannas have opted for dominion status, like that of Puerto Rico.

The language spoken on nearly every one of the Micronesian islands is different from that of the others. One of the fascinating aspects of Micronesia is the proliferation, as the result of successive occupations, of Spanish, German, Japanese, American, as well as native given names and surnames.

Micronesia is one of the few portions of the Pacific still unspoiled. But so lovely are these islands, so full of fascinating sights and peoples, as this handsome volume shows, that the day cannot be very far off, alas, when Micronesia will be swarming with tourists. There will be hotels a la Tahiti and souvenir shops galore.

Right now the islands are a delight to those who enjoy the exotic without the phoney. The islands are quite accessible by air, prop jets will carry you from island to island to landing fields that look like something out of the days of the Wright brothers.

If lands unspoiled are to your liking, Micronesia is your dish; if you can't go, then travel there in your armchair through this big, lavishly illustrated book, the collaboration of a first-class artist-photographer and a noted conservationist on the vast Micronesian expanse whose 2,200 islands are smaller in the aggregate than Rhode Island. — Nat Houig

The Wild Boy of Aveyron by Harlan Lane
Harvard University Press, $15

Wild "children of nature" have captured the popular imagination in most countries of Europe over the centuries, and of writers too, Voltaire and Rousseau among them.

But the most sensational case, and a real one, was that of the Wild Boy of Aveyron (a department of southern France) at the turn of the 19th century. People would glimpse him in an absolute state of nature, swimming streams, climbing trees, digging for roots — or running at great speed on all fours. He would be shouting or laughing.

The farm folk were kind to him. Suddenly early one morning in 1800, he came to the workshop of a farmer and into a new life and a new experiment in human education. Victor, the Wild Boy of Aveyron, and the achievements of his teacher, Jean-Marc Itard, intrigued philosophers, psychologists, educators and anthropologists, and the debate still goes on about the matter.

In any event, the case of the Wild Boy of Aveyron led to new methods of educating the mentally retarded and revolutionary new ways of childhood education. The Wild Boy inspired three novels, two poems, three plays, a Truffaut film, even a rock hit. But this is the first book to recount, in a scholarly and lively way, the full story of Dr. Itard's accomplishments with the wild boy. Harlan Lane's book is often as dramatic as a novel, except that it all really happened. — T.A. Dugan

Literary Women: The Great Writers
By Ellen Moers. Doubleday, $10

Ellen Moers selected her women writers not only because they were women but because they introduced new styles and genres. We learn how and why Harriet Beecher Stowe was the first to write powerfully impassionate exposes of slavery; George Sand championed the rights of the lowly; George Eliot those of the Jews; how and why Charlotte Bronte and Louisa May Alcott dealt with the harsh realities of earning a living.

We learn, too, how the Gothic novel thrived on female anxieties about sexuality, motherhood and beauty in the works of Emily Bronte, Mary Shelley and Carson McCullers; how George Eliot differed from Jane Austen, Emily Dickinson from Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Willa Cather from George Sand. Women writers, we are shown, broke a lot of new ground.

Growth of the American Revolution 1766-1775
By Bernhard Knollenberg. Free Press, $15

The late brilliant historian and scholar Bernhard Knollenberg (who wrote "The Origin of the American Revolution 1759-1766) turned in his engrossing sequel, "Growth of the American Revolution 1766-1775," to one of the most turbulent eras in American history. It saw the Boston Massacre, the Liberty Riots, the Boston Tea Party, the First Continental Congress, and the shots at Lexington that opened the Revolutionary War. We get a new and deeper meaning of the American fight for independence — not just a chronicle of events, but a study of American attitudes as they changed, the growth of the spirit of resistance and rebellion, and the current that formed a new national identity.

Micronesia: Islands of Wilderness
By Kenneth Brower
Photographs by Robert Wenkam. Seabury, $29.50

One of the three main chains of Pacific islands (the other two are Polynesia and Melanesia), Micronesia occupies a total area of about 1,135 square miles, its islands widely scattered, west of the Philippines in the Western Pacific. It includes the Mariana, Palau, Caroline, Marshall and Gilbert Islands, which are all small.

Variation is a word that could have been coined especially for Micronesia: the Marianas, Palaus and many of the Carolines are volcanic in origin, some with peaks of 1,000 to 2,500 feet, while others of the Carolines and all of the Marshall and Gilbert Islands are low coral atolls.

The Micronesian peoples are a mixed race of Polynesian, Melanesian and some Maluysian stock, but the interesting and unexplained ruins on several of the islands indicate the ancient presence of a very capable people of extremely early origin. Most of Micronesia belonged to Spain for centuries, and was sold by Spain to Germany after the Spanish-American War. Japan seized a vast area from the Germans in World War I and heavily fortified portions of the islands, which were the scenes of bitter battle between the U.S. and Japan in World War II.

Now Micronesia is a trust territory under U.S. control through a United Nations mandate; Palauans, who are fiercely individualistic people, support an independence movement; Yap (the famed island of stone money), Truk, and others favor a federation of Micronesia without giving up U.S. ties; Saipan and Tinian in the Mariannas have opted for dominion status, like that of Puerto Rico.

The language spoken on nearly every one of the Micronesian islands is different from that of the others. One of the fascinating aspects of Micronesia is the proliferation, as the result of successive occupations, of Spanish, German, Japanese, American, as well as native given names and surnames.

Micronesia is one of the few portions of the Pacific still unspoiled. But so lovely are these islands, so full of fascinating sights and peoples, as this handsome volume shows, that the day cannot be very far off, alas, when Micronesia will be swarming with tourists. There will be hotels a la Tahiti and souvenir shops galore.

Right now the islands are a delight to those who enjoy the exotic without the phoney. The islands are quite accessible by air, prop jets will carry you from island to island to landing fields that look like something out of the days of the Wright brothers.

If lands unspoiled are to your liking, Micronesia is your dish; if you can't go, then travel there in your armchair through this big, lavishly illustrated book, the collaboration of a first-class artist-photographer and a noted conservationist on the vast Micronesian expanse whose 2,200 islands are smaller in the aggregate than Rhode Island. — Nat Honig

The Wild Boy of Aveyron by Harlan Lane
Harvard University Press, $15

Wild "children of nature" have captured the popular imagination in most countries of Europe over the centuries, and of writers too, Voltaire and Rousseau among them.

But the most sensational case, and a real one, was that of the Wild Boy of Aveyron (a department of southern France) at the turn of the 19th century. People would glimpse him in an absolute state of nature, swimming streams, climbing trees, digging for roots — or running at great speed on all fours. He would be shouting or laughing.

The farm folk were kind to him. Suddenly early one morning in 1800, he came to the workshop of a farmer and into a new life and a new experiment in human education. Victor, the Wild Boy of Aveyron, and the achievements of his teacher, Jean-Marc Itard, intrigued philosophers, psychologists, educators and anthropologists, and the debate still goes on about the matter.

In any event, the case of the Wild Boy of Aveyron led to new methods of educating the mentally retarded and revolutionary new ways of childhood education. The Wild Boy inspired three novels, two poems, three plays, a Truffaut film, even a rock hit. But this is the first book to recount, in a scholarly and lively way, the full story of Dr. Itard's accomplishments with the wild boy. Harlan Lane's book is often as dramatic as a novel, except that it all really happened. — T.A. Dugan

Flu epidemic hysteria unwarranted, says M.D.

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Use of a vaccine against the so-called swine-virus influenza is warranted but widespread hysteria about a major flu epidemic is unreasonable, says an authority on infectious diseases at UC Irvine College of Medicine.

Dr. Thomas Cesario of Newport Beach, an assistant professor of medicine at UC Irvine, says that even if a major epidemic occurs next year, many of the deaths such as those in the earlier epidemic of 1917-18 might be preventable, thanks to currently available medications.

A major influenza epidemic usually comes in 10-year cycles, affecting almost every other person.

"While it affects all ages, the young are particularly susceptible because of their lack of immunity," Dr. Cesario says.

And the death rates are highest in those with a severe underlying disease, he adds.

It is also thought that there are larger cycles — from 60 to 80 years — involving major flu pandemics (epidemics occurring over a wide geographical area).

health

"If you think about it," he notes, "that's just about the span of a person's lifetime, so you reach a point where the population is again susceptible to certain viral infections because of lack of exposure."

Exposure to the virus, he points out, brings immunity.

The first influenza virus was isolated in 1930. It was named the swine virus because it caused disease in pigs. After it was isolated, the blood from some persons was examined and found to contain antibodies to the swine virus.

And because of a high prevalence of these antibodies, it was then assumed that this was the virus that caused the 1917-18 pandemic that took 10 to 20 million lives around the world and a half million lives in the United States.

"We don't know how many of those persons died of influenza, bacterial infection or of underlying diseases or complications now treatable," Dr. Cesario says.

THE SWINE VIRUS has not been seen in humans very much until last year, the doctor says. Several cases were discovered in Fort Dix, N. J., and there has been evidence of antibodies in three cases — in Wisconsin, Tennessee and Pennsylvania.

"In the past it has been the pattern of epidemics that there were first these sporadic isolates," he says. "Then there was a dying down of cases of the viruses during the summer, and the next year an epidemic occurred.

"We could anticipate that since it has been 60 years since the last pandemic, we could have a highly susceptible population."

On the basis of this pattern, preparation and distribution of vaccine are appropriate, he says.

He notes that there have been some "subtle but not all that convincing" suggestions that the swine flu virus might be related to development in later life of Parkinson's disease (shaking palsy).

"So it is very worthwhile to prepare the vaccine," he says. "But I don't believe one should be caught up in hysteria about the possibility of an epidemic."

MEDICINE AND YOU

Sponge robs blood supply

Another medical use has been found for the housewife's plastic cleaning sponge.

It appears to be an ideal material for insertion into blood vessels under X-ray guidance to halt bleeding or to rob a growing tumor of its blood supply.

The new medical use is described by three Minneapolis radiologists in a report in the American Journal of Roentgenology, Radium Therapy and Nuclear Medicine.

The material used is polyvinyl alcohol converted into sponge-like material by foaming agents and then hardened with formaldehyde. It is inert and compressible when wet. After being compressed and dried, it retains the compressed shape. It has plastic

ben zinser

memory so that when it is made wet again it will resume its original shape.

Because its volume can be drastically reduced by compression, the material can be made small enough to be inserted in a catheter and then delivered to a particular blood vessel where it re-expands to block the flow of blood beyond that point.

The wetness is provided by the blood, which causes the compressed sponge to swell. Once expanded, it is invaded by a certain type of cell and it becomes part of the patient tissue.

How sweet it isn't

Accurate diagnosis of perfume allergies may be difficult for the doctor because of the large number of chemicals present in low concentrations in most perfumes.

Dr. Niels Hjorth, professor at the University of Copenhagen, says that the diagnosis of perfume allergy may be further complicated by the presence of perfumes in a wide variety of products. For example, they may be present in cigarettes, car wax and shoe polish.

The concentration of perfume compounds in some cigarettes is high enough that a patient with perfume hypersensitivity may aggravate dermatitis on the hand by smoking.

Twenty cigarettes may contain as much as one-half gram of perfume chemicals, Dr. Hjorth says.

A report appears in Skin & Allergy News, a newspaper for physicians.

Diet togetherness

Women lose more weight if their husbands are involved in the dieting program too, a researcher says.

And partial husband involvement is as effective as complete husband involvement, says Barbara S. Rosenthal, Ph.D., of the University of Connecticut.

Working together as a team has a highly positive effect on the treatment of overweight, Dr. Rosenthal says.

The program is one using a behavioral approach to the problem, according to Internal Medicine News, a newspaper for physicians.

High in cholesterol

Shellfish have a higher content of cholesterol than other seafood, a nutrition specialist says.

H. L. Dillon of the Department of Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association, Chicago, Ill., cites a recent study from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The following amounts of cholesterol were reported in milligrams per 100 grams of seafood:

Oysters, 50; shrimp, 150; lobster, 85; clams, 50; scallops, 53; and crab, 100.

The following amounts of cholesterol were reported in milligrams per 100 grams of fatty fish:

Salmon, 120; trout, 55; sardines, 120; mackerel, 95; and herring, 85.

The report is in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

IN-SIGHTS

Parenthood holds both joy and sorrow

A lot of questions are put to me by parents who have a problem with one of their children.

The mother of a young toddler is concerned about his thumb sucking and whether it will cause any serious problems (probably not), or does it mean she is not meeting his needs (I doubt it).

The divorced mother of a first-grade youngster worries about her son's reaction to her going out on dates, being more demanding just as she is about to leave. How should she react? (Accept the behavior as not surprising, an attempt to hold onto her; respect it, but deal with the son firmly and talk about what may really be bothering him.)

The father of a high school girl is concerned about her involvement with boys and wonders whether she will engage in the "new morality" which seems so prevalent. Should he bring the subject up and talk with her about it, or just remain silent? (It's always better to get things out in the open and talk about them, as long as you keep your emotions in check during the discussion — which is not easy to do.)

All these dilemmas and many more are part of the struggle of being a parent. And nearly everybody is looking for advice. I am consulted professionally, and privately and socially, about problems of parenthood all the time.

THE CHANGING VIEW of the "right" way to deal with children is reflected in the changing attitudes over the years toward disciplining children. One book for parents reviews the "Advice for Parents" over the decades:

1910 — Spank them
1920 — Deprive them
1930 — Ignore them
1940 — Reason with them
1950 — Love them
1960 — Spank them lovingly
1970 — THE HELL WITH THEM!

It may be that the struggles of parenthood have discouraged some young couples from having children. And some couples justify their decision not to have children on the basis of overpopulation, or just not wanting to be bothered with children.

Of course, children are not always a bother. I have written previously on why we hate children, but there are satisfactions too. And an excellent book on the subject of parenting is "The Joys and Sorrows of Parenthood," a report by the Committee on Public Education of the Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry. (Available from GAP Publications, 419 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10016, for $4.)

This 132-page monograph is one every parent ought to read. It speaks to all parents — those with the first off-spring on the way (a good gift for new parents), grandparents, adoptive parents, step-parents, and persons married to step-parents, parents of chronically-disabled children.

dr. walt menninger

One interesting section deals with the problems of parental expectations and the degree to which children get put in the position of being an extension of their parents. I suspect most of us know the parent who was a frustrated athlete in his childhood and who expects his child to be the star he never was. Thus, instead of leading his own life, the child is expected to satisfy an unfulfilled parental ambition.

Suggests the GAP report, a parent should strive to become as free as possible from his own childhood-determined expectations, so that there will not be too great a discrepancy between his expectations of his children and the way they really develop.

Of course, the challenge facing every parent is to find the right balance between satisfying his or her own needs while keeping parenthood in perspective. Parents are people, too, and they should respect their own values and live by them. At the same time, they should appreciate that the greatest accomplishment of parenthood is a secure and independent offspring.

Childbirth films shown

Long Beach area teachers of the Bradley method of husband-coached, natural childbirth will sponsor a free showing of the films, "Happy Birth-day" and "Childbirth for the Joy of It," Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Iacaboni Library, 5020 Clark Ave., Lakewood.

There will be an explanation of the exercises and techniques involved and signups will be taken for future classes.

'Fledermaus' spins mood of Vienna

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

With a concert production of Johann Strauss' merry, tuneful "Die Fledermaus," Long Beach Symphony Association will conclude its spring schedule.

Certainly one of Strauss' most delightful, beloved and enduring works, "Die Fledermaus" has charmed thousands of music lovers since it first was performed in Vienna April 5, 1874. Its frothy plot and lighthearted tunes, in true Viennese tradition, romp through a bewildering mixup of characters and situations to the happy conclusion.

The Long Beach Symphony version will be staged next Sunday at 8:30 p.m. in Millikan High School Auditorium, 2800 Snowden Ave. By popular demand — and this is meant quite literally — the four soloists who last year made "The Merry Widow" such a memorable evening, are returning for this non-subscription concert.

LAURA KILLINGSWORTH is the irresistible Rosalinda; John L. Hyer is Eisenstein, her husband; Lynda Sue Marks is Adele, Rosalinda's maid; and John Guarnieri is Alfred, the singing teacher who initiates the plot's complications with his romantic visit to Rosalinda.

Completing the cast are Rick Davis in the dual role of Dr. Blind and Frank; Andrew Taylor as Dr. Falke; and Becky Tepfer as Prince Orlofsky. Alberto Bolet will conduct a small orchestra of members from the Long Beach Symphony.

Tickets at $5.50, $4.50 and $3.50 may be ordered from Long Beach Symphony Association, 121 Linden Ave., Long Beach 90802. All seats are reserved.

WITH TRUE Viennese talent for merriment, Laura Killingsworth as Rosalinda and John L. Hyer as Eisenstein complicate 'Die Fledermaus' plot with joyous disregard for stodgy situations.

Tickets may be picked up (or purchased) at the Symphony office or will be held at the Paid For window at the box office to be picked up the night of performance. They also will be for sale at the box office next Sunday beginning one hour before performance.

L.A. Phil in concerts

Sidney Harth, associate conductor of Los Angeles Philharmonic, will direct the orchestra in its final appearance this season in Long Beach.

The concert, Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in Millikan High School Auditorium, 2800 Snowden Ave., will include Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Mendelssohn's "Symphony No. 4" ("Italian") and Sibelius' "Symphony No. 2."

Tickets may be purchased from Velma B. McGraw, 246 Argonne Ave., or from Mrs. Lawrence Reichner, 3630 E. Second St.

arts

TODAY, the Philharmonic will give two hour-long performances at the fifth annual Peninsula Music Fair on the hilltop campus of Chadwick School, Palos Verdes, at Crenshaw and Palos Verdes Drive North.

Harth will be on the podium for a 1 p.m. Youth Concert featuring pianist Helen Kim, 13, in the first movement of Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 2." The bright, breezy program also lists music by Bizet, Grofe, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Joplin, Falla and Sousa.

At 3 p.m., Zubin Mehta will lead the orchestra in an exuberant concert that will close the popular festival, extended this year to two days. The program will be Bernstein's Overture to "Candide," the first movement of Dvorak's "Symphony No. 9," the first movement of Bach's "Concerto in D-minor for Two Violins," (which in this case will be played on two tubas!) performed by the Philharmonic's tuba virtuoso Robert Bobo and player Tommy Johnson.

Mostel as 'Fiddler'

Zero Mostel, who created the role of Tevye in 'Fiddler on the Roof,' will appear in the part for the first time on the West Coast when the world's most popular musical comes to the Shubert Theater, Los Angeles, for four weeks only, June 2 through 27. The Shubert appearance is the first in a six month tour which will mark Mostel's farewell appearance in the role. The original production ran for eight years to become the longest running Broadway production in theatrical history. More than 40,000,000 people around the world have seen 'Fiddler.'

Spring sprouts art dates

Tickets now are on sale for the phenomenally successful Festival of Arts and Pageant of the Masters which July 16 will open its 41st annual show. This Bicentennial Special will continue through Aug. 29 in Irvine Bowl, 650 Laguna Canyon Road, Laguna Beach. The box office is open Wednesdays through Sundays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tickets are $8, $7, $5, $4 and $3.

Sales are on a first come, first served basis and tickets always sell out long before opening date. The Bowl seats 2,580. If you can't get a ticket, you can go early the day you wish to see the performance of living tableaux, to put your name on a waiting list for cancellations.

A ONE DAY conference on "Arts in Shopping Malls and Redevelopments" will be held May 13 from 8:45 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in Kinsey Auditorium of California Science and Industry, 700 State Drive, Exposition Park, Los Angeles. Sponsored by Arts for Communities, this program is a continuation of the Arts Exposure series and is a development of the Art in Public Places project.

Artists, businessmen, developers and regional planners are encouraged to attend. Keynote speaker will be Ralph Burgard, who for five years was director of the Associated Council of the Arts. Other participants are Jerome Halprin, president of Ruder and Finn of California, and Ernest Hahn, Southern California developer. Registration fee is $7.50. An optional box lunch is $2.

FRANK NEFF has a one-man exhibit at Bach Branch Library, 4055 Bellflower Blvd., which will continue through May 8. The retired physician and surgeon began painting after meeting Millard Sheets with whom he later studied. His oils, acrylics and watercolors may be seen Mondays through Thursdays from noon to 9 p.m. and Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

BELLFLOWER Art Association will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Simms Park Social Hall, 16614 Clark Ave., Bellflower, to see demonstrator Carter Hosfeldt.

The association will hold its Spring Show May 15 and 16 in conjunction with the Bellflower Parks and Recreational Annual Arts and Crafts Show. The Spring Show will be open to members and non-members.

CAROLE DEMAS

Topol stars in musical

"The Baker's Wife," new Broadway-bound musical version of a classic French film, will have its world premiere at the Music Center Pavilion May 11. It will be the first attraction of this year's Los Angeles Civic Light Opera season.

In addition to Topol, who will make his American stage debut as the temperamental baker, and Carole Demas, who plays his restless wife, the cast of the musical includes Kurt Peterson as the young rake whose romantic fling with the baker's wife sets off a village scandal, and Keene Curtis as the local mayor whose menage of attractive "nieces" creates a furor of its own.

"The Baker's Wife" will play in Los Angeles for seven weeks only.

Bruce Polay to direct Philharmonia concert

This is the time when orchestras conclude their annual seasons, so on Saturday at 8 p.m. in Lakewood High School Auditorium, 4400 Briercrest St., Lakewood Philharmonia will play its final 1975-76 concert. Bruce Polay will conduct.

The program will open with Joanna Hodges performing "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra" by Khachaturian. This will be followed by "Concerto in D-minor for Two Pianos and Orchestra" by Poulenc, featuring Polay and David Koerner. This work delves into satirical wit and romantic beauty; its lyric, melodic fragments have given it a popular place among major piano works.

A featured work with the combined choirs from Long Beach State University will be Igor Stravinsky's "Symphony of Psalms," one of the most highly acclaimed choral works in the literature. Commissioned for the 50th season of the Boston Symphony, it calls for chorus, two pianos, large wind and brass ensemble, cellos and string basses.

Tickets may be purchased at the door before the perforamnce at $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for students and senior citizens.

Flu epidemic hysteria unwarranted, says M.D.

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Use of a vaccine against the so-called swine-virus influenza is warranted but widespread hysteria about a major flu epidemic is unreasonable, says an authority on infectious diseases at UC Irvine College of Medicine.

Dr. Thomas Cesario of Newport Beach, an assistant professor of medicine at UC Irvine, says that even if a major epidemic occurs next year, many of the deaths such as those in the earlier epidemic of 1917-18 might be preventable, thanks to currently available medications.

A major influenza epidemic usually comes in 10-year cycles, affecting almost every other person.

"While it affects all ages, the young are particularly susceptible because of their lack of immunity," Dr. Cesario says.

And the death rates are highest in those with a severe underlying disease, he adds.

It is also thought that there are larger cycles — from 60 to 80 years — involving major flu pandemics (epidemics occurring over a wide geographical area).

health

"If you think about it," he notes, "that's just about the span of a person's lifetime, so you reach a point where the population is again susceptible to certain viral infections because of lack of exposure."

Exposure to the virus, he points out, brings immunity.

The first influenza virus was isolated in 1930. It was named the swine virus because it caused disease in pigs. After it was isolated, the blood from some persons was examined and found to contain antibodies to the swine virus.

And because of a high prevalence of these antibodies, it was then assumed that this was the virus that caused the 1917-18 pandemic that took 10 to 20 million lives around the world and a half million lives in the United States.

"We don't know how many of those persons died of influenza, bacterial infection or of underlying diseases or complications now treatable," Dr. Cesario says.

THE SWINE VIRUS has not been seen in humans very much until last year, the doctor says. Several cases were discovered in Fort Dix, N. J., and there has been evidence of antibodies in three cases — in Wisconsin, Tennessee and Pennsylvania.

"In the past it has been the pattern of epidemics that there were first these sporadic isolates," he says. "Then there was a dying down of cases of the viruses during the summer, and the next year an epidemic occurred.

"We could anticipate that since it has been 60 years since the last pandemic, we could have a highly susceptible population."

On the basis of this pattern, preparation and distribution of vaccine are appropriate, he says.

He notes that there have been some "subtle but not all that convincing" suggestions that the swine flu virus might be related to development in later life of Parkinson's disease (shaking palsy).

"So it is very worthwhile to prepare the vaccine," he says. "But I don't believe one should be caught up in hysteria about the possibility of an epidemic."

MEDICINE AND YOU

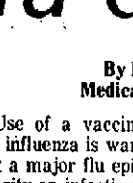

Sponge robs blood supply

Another medical use has been found for the housewife's plastic cleaning sponge.

It appears to be an ideal material for insertion into blood vessels under X-ray guidance to halt bleeding or to rob a growing tumor of its blood supply.

The new medical use is described by three Minneapolis radiologists in a report in the American Journal of Roentgenology, Radium Therapy and Nuclear Medicine.

The material used is polyvinyl alcohol converted into sponge-like material by foaming agents and then hardened with formaldehyde. It is inert and compressible when wet. After being compressed and dried, it retains the compressed shape. It has plastic

ben zinser

memory so that when it is made wet again it will resume its original shape.

Because its volume can be drastically reduced by compression, the material can be made small enough to be inserted in a catheter and then delivered to a particular blood vessel where it re-expands to block the flow of blood beyond that point.

The wetness is provided by the blood, which causes the compressed sponge to swell. Once expanded, it is invaded by a certain type of cell and it becomes part of the patient tissue.

How sweet it isn't

Accurate diagnosis of perfume allergies may be difficult for the doctor because of the large number of chemicals present in low concentrations in most perfumes.

Dr. Niels Hjorth, professor at the University of Copenhagen, says that the diagnosis of perfume allergy may be further complicated by the presence of perfumes in a wide variety of products. For example, they may be present in cigarettes, car wax and shoe polish.

The concentration of perfume compounds in some cigarettes is high enough that a patient with perfume hypersensitivity may aggravate dermatitis on the hand by smoking.

Twenty cigarettes may contain as much as one-half gram of perfume chemicals, Dr. Hjorth says.

A report appears in Skin & Allergy News, a newspaper for physicians.

Diet togetherness

Women lose more weight if their husbands are involved in the dieting program too, a researcher says.

And partial husband involvement is as effective as complete husband involvement, says Barbara S. Rosenthal, Ph.D., of the University of Connecticut.

Working together as a team has a highly positive effect on the treatment of overweight, Dr. Rosenthal says.

The program is one using a behavioral approach to the problem, according to Internal Medicine News, a newspaper for physicians.

High in cholesterol

Shellfish have a higher content of cholesterol than other seafood, a nutrition specialist says.

H. L. Dillon of the Department of Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association, Chicago, Ill., cites a recent study from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The following amounts of cholesterol were reported in milligrams per 100 grams of seafood:

Oysters, 50; shrimp, 150; lobster, 85; clams, 50; scallops, 53; and crab, 100.

The following amounts of cholesterol were reported in milligrams per 100 grams of fatty fish:

Salmon, 120; trout, 55; sardines, 120; mackerel, 95; and herring, 85.

The report is in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

IN-SIGHTS

Parenthood holds both joy and sorrow

A lot of questions are put to me by parents who have a problem with one of their children.

The mother of a young toddler is concerned about his thumb sucking and whether it will cause any serious problems (probably not), or does it mean she is not meeting his needs (I doubt it).

The divorced mother of a first-grade youngster worries about her son's reaction to her going out on dates, being more demanding just as she is about to leave. How should she react? (Accept the behavior as not surprising, an attempt to hold onto her; respect it, but deal with the son firmly and talk about what may really be bothering him.)

The father of a high school girl is concerned about her involvement with boys and wonders whether she will engage in the "new morality" which seems so prevalent. Should he bring the subject up and talk with her about it, or just remain silent? (It's always better to get things out in the open and talk about them, as long as you keep your emotions in check during the discussion — which is not easy to do.)

All these dilemmas and many more are part of the struggle of being a parent. And nearly everybody is looking for advice. I am consulted professionally, and privately and socially, about problems of parenthood all the time.

THE CHANGING VIEW of the "right" way to deal with children is reflected in the changing attitudes over the years toward disciplining children. One book for parents reviews the "Advice for Parents" over the decades:

1910 — Spank them
1920 — Deprive them
1930 — Ignore them
1940 — Reason with them
1950 — Love them
1960 — Spank them lovingly
1970 — THE HELL WITH THEM!

It may be that the struggles of parenthood have discouraged some young couples from having children. And some couples justify their decision not to have children on the basis of overpopulation, or just not wanting to be bothered with children.

Of course, children are not always a bother. I have written previously on why we hate children, but there are satisfactions too. And an excellent book on the subject of parenting is "The Joys and Sorrows of Parenthood," a report by the Committee on Public Education of the Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry. (Available from GAP Publications, 419 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10016, for $4.)

This 132-page monograph is one every parent ought to read. It speaks to all parents — those with the first off-spring on the way (a good gift for new parents), grandparents, adoptive parents, step-parents, and persons married to step-parents, parents of chronically-disabled children.

dr. walt menninger

One interesting section deals with the problems of parental expectations and the degree to which children get put in the position of being an extension of their parents. I suspect most of us know the parent who was a frustrated athlete in his childhood and who expects his child to be the star he never was. Thus, instead of leading his own life, the child is expected to satisfy an unfulfilled parental ambition.

Suggests the GAP report, a parent should strive to become as free as possible from his own childhood-determined expectations, so that there will not be too great a discrepancy between his expectations of his children and the way they really develop.

Of course, the challenge facing every parent is to find the right balance between satisfying his or her own needs while keeping parenthood in perspective. Parents are people, too, and they should respect their own values and live by them. At the same time, they should appreciate that the greatest accomplishment of parenthood is a secure and independent offspring.

Childbirth films shown

Long Beach area teachers of the Bradley method of husband-coached natural childbirth will sponsor a free showing of the films, "Happy Birth-day" and "Childbirth for the Joy of It," Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Iacaboni Library, 5020 Clark Ave., Lakewood.

There will be an explanation of the exercises and techniques involved and signups will be taken for future classes.

Gourmet guide

FOR MANY YEARS I have been a careful observer of wealthy individuals who dine out frequently. They love to visit beautiful establishments where the sumptuous fare costs $10 or more a plate. But do they dine like that all the time?

The answer is no. Wealthy people are just like the rest of us. They enjoy dining economically at times, finding pleasure in good but simple food that's inexpensive. Perhaps that's why they're wealthy. They know how to save.

You'll often find wealthy people dining inconspicuously at the Carriage Trade restaurant, 10911 Westminster Ave., just west of Euclid Street, Garden Grove, a brief drive from Long Beach on the Garden Grove Freeway. Although its name implies that it caters to the upper classes, the Carriage Trade isn't that kind of restaurant. It's a family establishment with budget dinners that are darned good. The fare isn't gourmet. There aren't any linen cloths on the tables. But it's a good-looking place with a modern colonial design and very popular because of the quality and flavor of those low-cost meals.

The owner of the Carriage Trade is Kamran Hussni, a personable, friendly, conscientious man who has a B.A. degree from UCLA and a master's degree from USC. He and his wife Lucy have owned the Carriage Trade for 15 months. They enjoy their work and they enjoy making people happy with their specialities. The Carriage Trade has been unusually successful during the past year because Kamran, No. 1 chef Sam Vigil and their kitchen staff use certain old-fashioned methods. They shun the use of pre-prepared "quickie" items that lack rich flavors. Instead they work patiently by hand on such tasks as disjointing fresh chickens and dipping them in batter, grinding their own hamburger and making their own patties.

The Carriage Trade is open every day from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m., serving breakfast, luncheon, dinner, fountain items, beer and modestly priced tap wines. The nightly special dinners are top values, such as: Sundays and Mondays, roast prime rib au jus, $3.25; Tuesdays, Swiss steak, $1.95; Wednesday, fried chicken, $1.95; Thursdays, New York steak, $2.75. They come with soup or salad, potatoes, vegetable of the day, giant hot fresh roll with butter and dessert of Jell-O, pudding or sherbet. The Carriage Trade uses a slight amount of tenderizer on some of its beef items, but it's skillfully done and doesn't affect the flavor or texture.

Another popular entree, featured every night, is the filet mignon wrapped in bacon, $2.99 with the coupon printed in this restaurant section. It's served with soup or salad, potatoes, vegetable and the big fresh roll with butter.

MOST PEOPLE WHO'VE lived in Southern California for a few years know that the Spanish word "amigo" means friend. Newcomers from other states aren't familiar with it and are sometimes mystified when they find it in an advertisement or hear it on the radio or TV.

A woman who phoned this department the other day wondered what the word "Hiamigos" means on the top of the souvenir menus at El Patio Mexican Restaurant, 3505 Atlantic Ave. a block north of Wardlow Road. "Is it some kind of Mexican food?" she asked.

She laughed when I explained that it's a greeting, partly in Spanish, partly in English. The two words, "Hi" and "Amigos" happen to be run so close togther on the menu that they appear to be one word. They mean "Hi, friends."

El Patio is an absolutely wonderful Mexican restaurant, with sparkling fresh foods. That menu greeting is an example of the friendliness of owners Tony and Triny Guillen, their son Buddy and their large staff of skilled cooks and waitresses. Most of the waitresses are dark-eyed, cheerful senoras (wives) and senoritas (unmarried girls) who've worked there a long time. They love El Patio and do their best to give good service day and night.

Buddy, assistant manager and bartender, is much like his father. They are friendly fellows, but they aren't the pushy, outspoken type. They're more on the quiet side. Buddy is a graduate of Lakewood High and the University of San Francisco. He's been on the El Patio staff since last September. He works in the cantina at the rear. Among his cocktail specialities are the superb, 9½-ounce tequila Margarita, $1, and the generous pitcher of Margaritas.

Near the cantina is El Patio's new "no smoking" room for guests who like to dine away from the fumes of cigarettes and cigars. It has seating for 40 in complete privacy. It is available on request for luncheon or dinner.

Open every day from 11:30 a.m. to midnight. El Patio is large and authentically Mexican, with modern designs. Tony and Triny have been in business in Long Beach for over 20 years and have many devoted customers who have been dining with them all that time. Their menu has a huge variety, ranging from appetizers, soup and salads to Mexican seafoods featuring baby rock lobster, steaks with the most delicious Mexican sauce, child's plates, hamburgers and cheeseburgers, sausage with eggs, Mexican and U.S. beers and the tostada grande, $1.85, a huge salad-like creation made with lettuce, beans and cheese. There are 11 of the finest, freshest combination platters, $2.50 to $3.95, emphasizing tacos, enchiladas, tamales, red chili and stuffed chili rellenos.

'Fledermaus' spins mood of Vienna

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

With a concert production of Johann Strauss' merry, tuneful "Die Fledermaus," Long Beach Symphony Association will conclude its spring schedule.

Certainly one of Strauss' most delightful, beloved and enduring works, "Die Fledermaus" has charmed thousands of music lovers since it first was performed in Vienna April 5, 1874. Its frothy plot and light-hearted tunes, in true Viennese tradition, romp through a bewildering mixup of characters and situations to the happy conclusion.

The Long Beach Symphony version will be staged next Sunday at 8:30 p.m. in Millikan High School Auditorium, 2800 Snowden Ave. By popular demand — and this is meant quite literally — the four soloists who last year made "The Merry Widow" such a memorable evening, are returning for this non-subscription concert.

LAURA KILLINGSWORTH is the irresistible Rosalinda; John L. Hyer is Eisenstein, her husband; Lynda Sue Marks is Adele, Rosalinda's maid; and John Guarnieri is Alfred, the singing teacher who initiates the plot's complications with his romantic visit to Rosalinda.

Completing the cast are Rick Davis in the dual role of Dr. Blind and Frank; Andrew Taylor as Dr. Falke; and Becky Tepfer as Prince Orlofsky. Alberto Bolet will conduct a small orchestra of members from the Long Beach Symphony.

Tickets at $5.50, $4.50 and $3.50 may be ordered from Long Beach Symphony Association, 121 Linden Ave., Long Beach 90802. All seats are reserved.

WITH TRUE Viennese talent for merriment, Laura Killingsworth as Rosalinda and John L. Hyer as Eisenstein complicate 'Die Fledermaus' plot with joyous disregard for stodgy situations.

Tickets may be picked up (or purchased) at the Symphony office or will be held at the Paid For window at the box office to be picked up the night of performance. They also will be for sale at the box office next Sunday beginning one hour before performance.

L.A. Phil in concerts

Sidney Harth, associate conductor of Los Angeles Philharmonic, will direct the orchestra in its final appearance this season in Long Beach.

The concert, Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in Millikan High School Auditorium, 2800 Snowden Ave., will include Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Mendelssohn's "Symphony No. 4" ("Italian") and Sibelius' "Symphony No. 2."

Tickets may be purchased from Velma B. McGraw, 245 Argonne Ave., or from Mrs. Lawrence Reichner, 3630 E. Second St.

arts

TODAY, the Philharmonic will give two hour-long performances at the fifth annual Peninsula Music Fair on the hilltop campus of Chadwick School, Palos Verdes, at Crenshaw and Palos Verdes Drive North.

Harth will be on the podium for a 1 p.m. Youth Concert featuring pianist Helen Kim, 13, in the first movement of Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 2." The bright, breezy program also lists music by Bizet, Grofe, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Joplin, Falla and Sousa.

At 3 p.m., Zubin Mehta will lead the orchestra in an exuberant concert that will close the popular festival, extended this year to two days. The program will be Bernstein's Overture to "Candide," the first movement of Dvorak's "Symphony No. 9," the first movement of Bach's "Concerto in D-minor for Two Violins," (which in this case will be played on two tubas!) performed by the Philharmonic's tuba virtuoso Robert Bobo and player Tommy Johnson.

Mostel as 'Fiddler'.

Zero Mostel, who created the role of Tevye in 'Fiddler on the Roof,' will appear in the part for the first time on the West Coast when the world's most popular musical comes to the Shubert Theater, Los Angeles, for four weeks only, June 2 through 27. The Shubert appearance is the first in a six month tour which will mark Mostel's farewell appearance in the role. The original production ran for eight years to become the longest running Broadway production in theatrical history. More than 40,000,000 people around the world have seen 'Fiddler.'

Spring sprouts art dates

Tickets now are on sale for the phenomenally successful Festival of Arts and Pageant of the Masters which July 16 will open its 41st annual show. This Bicentennial Special will continue through Aug. 29 in Irvine Bowl, 650 Laguna Canyon Road, Laguna Beach. The box office is open Wednesdays through Sundays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tickets are $8, $7, $5, $4 and $3.

Sales are on a first come, first served basis and tickets always sell out long before opening date. The Bowl seats 2,580. If you can't get a ticket, you can go early the day you wish to see the performance of living tableaux, to put your name on a waiting list for cancellations.

A ONE DAY conference on "Arts in Shopping Malls and Redevelopments" will be held May 13 from 8:45 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in Kinsey Auditorium of California Science and Industry, 700 State Drive, Exposition Park, Los Angeles. Sponsored by Arts for Communities, this program is a continuation of the Arts Exposure series and is a development of the Art in Public Places project.

Artists, businessmen, developers and regional planners are encouraged to attend. Keynote speaker will be Ralph Burgard, who for five years was director of the Associated Council of the Arts. Other participants are Jerome Halprin, president of Ruder and Finn of California, and Ernest Hahn, Southern California developer. Registration fee is $7.50. An optional box lunch is $2.

FRANK NEFF has a one-man exhibit at Bach Branch Library, 4055 Bellflower Blvd., which will continue through May 8. The retired physician and surgeon began painting after meeting Millard Sheets with whom he later studied. His oils, acrylics and watercolors may be seen Mondays through Thursdays from noon to 9 p.m. and Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

BELLFLOWER Art Association will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Simms Park Social Hall, 16614 Clark Ave., Bellflower, to see demonstrator Carter Hosfeldt.

The association will hold its Spring Show May 15 and 16 in conjunction with the Bellflower Parks and Recreational Annual Arts and Crafts Show. The Spring Show will be open to members and non-members.

CAROLE DEMAS

Topol stars in musical

"The Baker's Wife," new Broadway-bound musical version of a classic French film, will have its world premiere at the Music Center Pavilion May 11. It will be the first attraction of this year's Los Angeles Civic Light Opera season.

In addition to Topol, who will make his American stage debut as the temperamental baker, and Carole Demas, who plays his restless wife, the cast of the musical includes Kurt Peterson as the young rake whose romantic fling with the baker's wife sets off a village scandal, and Keene Curtis as the local mayor whose menage of attractive "nieces" creates a furor of its own.

"The Baker's Wife" will play in Los Angeles for seven weeks only.

Bruce Polay to direct Philharmonia concert

This is the time when orchestras conclude their annual seasons, so on Saturday at 8 p.m. in Lakewood High School Auditorium, 4400 Briercrest St., Lakewood Philharmonia will play its final 1975-76 concert. Bruce Polay will conduct.

The program will open with Joanna Hodges performing "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra" by Khachaturian. This will be followed by "Concerto in D-minor for Two Pianos and Orchestra" by Poulenc, featuring Polay and David Koerner. This work delves into satirical wit and romantic beauty; its lyric, melodic fragments have given it a popular place among major piano works.

A featured work with the combined choirs from Long Beach State University will be Igor Stravinsky's "Symphony of Psalms," one of the most highly acclaimed choral works in the literature. Commissioned for the 50th season of the Boston Symphony, it calls for chorus, two pianos, large wind and brass ensemble, cellos and string basses.

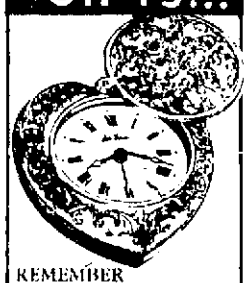

Tickets may be purchased at the door before the performance at $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for students and senior citizens.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Doffs cap to mushrooms

Today's chef of the week, Edward W. Babic, is a tax attorney, but because of former training, and because of expert rating in combat and pistol courses, he was assigned to the United States Secret Service for two presidential campaigns. The training he received in the IRS included the Treasury Law Enforcement Officers School and Special Agents School in Washington, D.C.

It all began when he became a special agent with the Intelligence Division of the Internal Revenue

mildred flanary

Service. He spent two years in Washington, D.C. and four in the Los Angeles District which includes both Los Angeles and Orange Counties.

Born in Los Angeles, he later moved with his family to Torrance. Babic attended North Torrance Elementary and High Schools. In high school, he played football, basketball and baseball.

Babic received his college education at UCLA, where he belonged to Zeta Psi and was graduated with a B.S. degree. While at UCLA, he played football and baseball, worked as manager at a McDonald's Drive-In, was a real estate appraiser and served on the academic communication staff at UCLA Medical Center.

BABIC GRADUATED from Southwestern University School of Law Juris Doctor, cum laude. While there, he was president of the Student Bar Association, and was first vice president of the American Bar Association, Law Student Division.

Babic came to Long Beach in 1970 from Los Angeles. He is a member of the American, California, Los Angeles County and Long Beach Bar Associations. He is chairman of the section on taxation for both the Long Beach and the American Bar Associations.

He is also a member of the Law Revision Commission committee of California Trial Lawyers, and the American Bar Association's special congressional advisory committee for the proposed Federal Criminal Code, rewriting the criminal tax laws. He serves on the board of directors of the Southwestern University Alumni Association, and is an active member of the UCLA Bruin Bench.

LOCALLY, BABIC is a member of the Estate Planning and Trust Council of Long Beach, and is a Volunteer in Long Beach Public Schools. Active in the Long Beach Junior and the Long Beach Chambers of Commerce, he belongs to the Diplomatic Corps of the latter. He is also listed in Who's Who in California.

ATTORNEY EDWARD W. BABIC

Babic serves on the board of governors for the Long Beach Grand Prix, and is a member of the President's Association, LBSU. A member of the Kiwanis Club of Long Beach, he is president elect, 1976-77. He belongs to both the Virginia Country Club and the Long Beach Yacht Club, and serves on the Congressional Cup committee of the latter.

Babic is married to the former Sandra Cheryl Ward of Orange County. They have a daughter, Jennifer Ilene.

Today, our chef is preparing some extra special hors d'oeuvres, Crab Stuffed Mushrooms.

CRAB STUFFED MUSHROOMS

- 16 to 24 large mushrooms
- 1½ tablespoons. butter, melted
- 2 tablespoons finely minced onion
- ¼ teaspoon finely minced garlic
- 3 tablespoons butter
- ½ pound crab meat, cooked and flaked
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 2 tablespoons soft bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons large dried onion flakes
- 2 tablespoons parsley flakes
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- ⅛ teaspoon EACH, cayenne pepper, garlic powder, onion powder, celery salt

Remove mushroom stems. Dip caps in melted butter and set aside. Finely chop stems and saute in butter with onion and garlic. Combine with remaining ingredients. Fill caps, top with 2 tablespoons soft bread crumbs mixed with 2 tablespoons melted butter and sprinkle with paprika. Place in well-buttered shallow baking dish and bake in a 400 degree oven 10 to 15 minutes until mushrooms are tender and tops are browned.

FLEA MARKET

Collection going to pots

Q. "Please assist me in appraising my collection of old chocolate pots." — Doris, Garden City, Kan.

A. Collectors have been pouring plenty of dollars into ceramic chocolate pots, particularly those bearing the mark of a prominent potter. Complete sets naturally fetch substantial returns, but even single

dan d'imperio

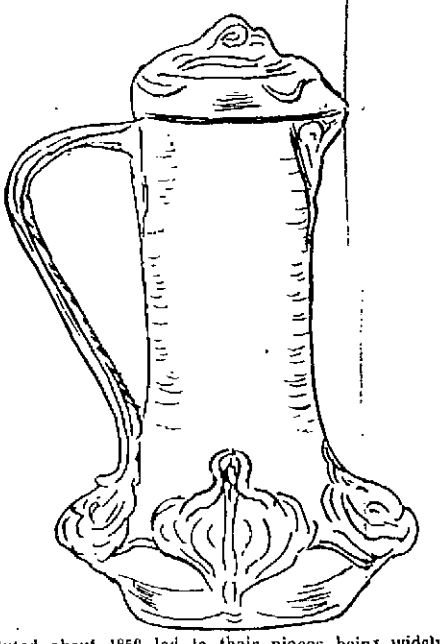

cups and saucers or pots generate considerable excitement. Chocolate pot value guide: Bavaria, pale roses, white background, 11-inches tall, $85; Haviland, blue forget-me-nots, white background, 10-inches tall, $57; Nippon, gold and white decor, $50; Royal Bayreuth, scenic type, horses on hill, green background, $110; R.S. Prussia, pale pink roses, pearlized light green background, $155; Victorian, Carlsbad, handpainted florals, $68.

Q. "At a yard sale I purchased a vase described as Crackle glass...?" — May, Petersburg, Va.

A. During the late 19th century American glasshouses revived this type of glass which was originally made by Venetian glass workers in the 16th century. Hobbs Brockunier and the Boston Sandwich Glass Factory were among the firms producing it in clear and pastel colors. The distinctive crackle appearance was achieved by plunging the red-hot object into cold water. The crackled look proved both eye and customer catching. Ice glass is another acceptable term for this hot collectible. Crackle glass value guide: vase, 9-inches tall, applied rosettes, $45.

Q. "We're anxious to know more about a bentwood side chair marked 'Thonet'." — Mr. & Mrs. H. L., Levittown, Pa.

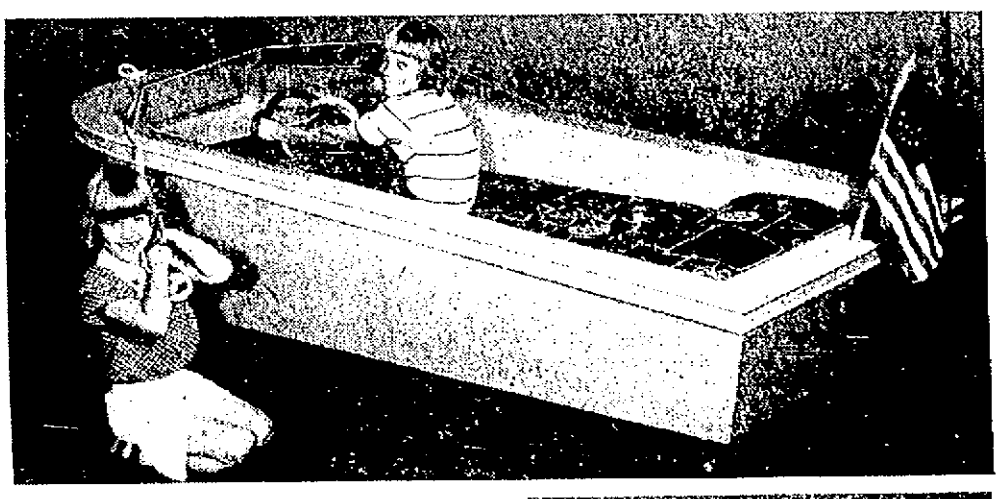

A. When the Thonet family established their furniture factory in Vienna, Austria, in 1853, they tossed the public a curve in the right direction. Michael Thonet along with his five sons founded this still existing factory. Mass-production methods instituted about 1859 led to their pieces being widely exported to various countries. The Thonet No. 14 side chair brought them worldwide fame. By 1871 they ranked as the world's foremost furniture factory. The name Thonet in various forms appears on their pieces, providing positive identification. Thonet value guide: side chair, circa 1890, $85.

Q. "I'm thimble happy. I buy every old one I can find." — Clara, Binghamton, N.Y.

A. Thousands of collectors agree antique thimbles are thumb collectibles. They have been known since Roman days, and over the centuries have been made of many materials, including bone, glass, silver, leather, wood, gold, porcelain, ivory, mother-of-pearl, steel, pewter and tortoiseshell. Advertising and commemorative thimbles of 19th century origin always attract buyers. Some fancy examples boasted secret compartments. Did you realize that these protective thumb covers were once called thumbbells?

Appraise your antiques with the aid of Dan D'Imperio's book and value guide "ABC' an Antiques," Dodd, Mead & Co., $9.95. An autographed copy may be ordered from the Star-Telegram Syndicate, Inc., P. O. Box 681, Weatherford, TX 76086. Please include check or money order.

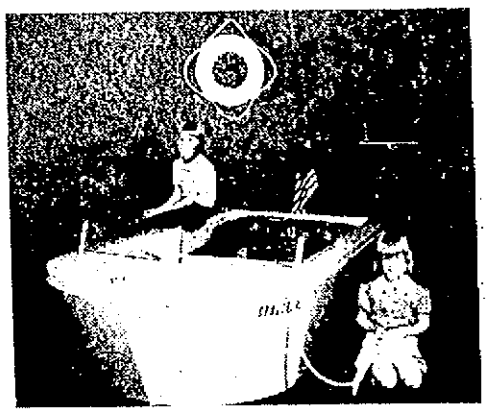

The workshop

By STEVE ELLINGSON

Imagine your children's faces when they get aboard this sleek, speedboat bed, ready to zoom them off to dreamland. As you can see, it looks just like a motorboat, yet is a perfectly great bed for the young "salts" in your family.

Built principally of plywood, the bed measures 50 inches beam to beam, and 96 inches stem to stern, and it takes a standard 39" mattress. The plexiglass windshield is cut from scrap pieces available at hardware stores and lumber yards. The "metal" windshield frame is actually plywood painted silver.

Paint the boat bed with a few enamel coats of your child's favorite bright color, add a flag and maybe a ring-buoy. Chances are, you'll have trouble getting the kids out of bed.

So, "anchors aweigh" for a fun project. To order the Speedboat Bed, Pattern No. 574, send $2.50 (includes first class postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Department, P.O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, Ca. 91409

ira corn

Aces on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

Is the penalty for discussing hands during a tournament ever invoked? Rarely have I ever heard of a director dropping the axe.

Quiet Queen
Dayton

Answer: Yes and it's becoming more frequent. The penalty is a full board for the session played — strong enough to convert most any winning game into a loser. At a recent regional, ACBL director Jerry Maclin assessed 155 points in penalties in one night, most of them for illegal discussion.

One of the 25 point penalties really hurt. A player was put in seven spades holding Q 7 4 in dummy opposite A 9 8 6 3. Opening lead was the spade deuce which declarer was allowed to win with his six. Declarer's ace then dropped RHO's king and the queen picked up the suit.

And Maclin says, "So he scored 2210 on a deal where many were going down at six, thereby picking up a totally undeserved and unexpected 25 match points — which he promptly lost by talking about it."

Dear Mr. Corn:

What happens if one player has one more card than she should and another has one less?

Foul Ball,
San Francisco

Answer: There must be a redeal if the irregularity is discovered before play has been completed.

Dear Mr. Corn:

What about preempts? Is a change of suit forcing? Can one preempt in a minor when holding three of a major? How about a preempt in a major with four of the other major?

Jumping Jack,
Skaneateles, N.Y.

Answer: A change of suit after a preempt is forcing. The other restrictions you mention should be avoided but the field of preemptive bidding is much too large to establish hard and fast rules. So much depends on the specific circumstances and player personalities that what might be a bad bid one day becomes a good risk the next day.

In general, the preemptive bid is a defensive weapon intended to obstruct the opponents.

When there's a good chance for that, preempt. If the hand might belong to your side (when partner hasn't yet passed), then you should be careful that you don't preempt your side out of the best contract.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Opponent opened one heart. I overcalled one no trump. Next hand passed and partner bid two clubs. I passed and that was it. She claimed she was using Stayman. I was taught that Stayman doesn't apply to no trump overcalls. What is the answer?

Club Mixup
Kerrville, Tex.

Answer: Yes and no. Some play two clubs as Stayman after a no trump overcall and that treatment is known as defensive Stayman. However, the treatment is far from standard and should not be used without prior partnership discussion and agreement.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner opened one diamond and I held:

♠ A K 7 5/2-A
♥ A 9 4
♦ 10 8 4 2
♣ 8 7 6

I couldn't find a satisfactory bid so I temporized one spade. What would you have done?

Impossible Dream,
Menlo Park, Calif.

Answer: That is a dilly of a problem and there really is no correct answer. After gasping for air, I would have to choose between one in a major or two clubs to show 10 or more points by going to the two level. I don't like to bid three card majors over a minor and, although two clubs is almost as bad, I think I would choose that bid.

Two clubs will allow me to bid twice to show my strength and is less likely to lead to a game with the partnership holding only seven cards in the trump suit.

WHEN GUILDS REIGNED SUPREME

Glory of the Middle Ages

By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

DINKELSBUHL, Germany — This Medieval time capsule is located at the intersection of the ancient north-south Romantic Road trade route and the more modern east-west holiday trail to the Alps and the Baltic Sea.

The most perfectly preserved of Germany's walled cities along the commercial artery blazed by the Romans when the Empire expanded to the north, Dinkelsbuhl has had no development since the Renaissance. It stands today almost exactly as it did nearly 500 years ago, encircled by a continuous fortification studded with watchtowers and gates behind embracing moats.

But the multi-shaped towers reflecting in the ponds of the moat system and the half-timbered structures clustered closely around the soaring bell tower of southern Germany's largest Gothic period church are modern by comparison with Dinkelsbuhl's beginnings.

THE ORIGINAL settlement of Dinkilo, also called Thingwolf, existed in the sixth century. Old documents describe it as surrounded by ramparts and moats as early as the year 928. The first fortifications soon were found inadequate for the protection of the bourgeoning population and were succeeded by a second ring and then a third, which stands today.

In 1270, Dinkelsbuhl became the second of Imperial Germany's Free Cities. This historic event attracted skilled artisans, architects and scholars along with freedom-seeking commercial travelers. As trades developed, so did social awareness, resulting in the beginnings of the organized labor movement.

This fringe benefit of Dinkelsbuhl's autonomy marked the first step toward the overthrow of the feudal system in central Europe. Following the earlier example of the dukes and earls of England who combined forces to reduce the powers of their king through the Magna Carta, the artists, designers and smiths of Dinkelsbuhl used collective action by their guilds to enforce demands for greater economic freedom.

travel

By the end of the 14th century, the antecedents of today's trade unions had gained equal rights under law with the aristocracy. In spite of predictions of disaster, the city-state prospered as never before. The architecture of Dinkelsbuhl which blossomed during the peak period of the guilds became renowned for its harmony of form and function.

THE MASSIVE 15th century St. George's church, with its three naves, graceful fluted columns and vaulted ceilings seemingly carved from a single rock, created demands for the services of Dinkelsbuhl's stonemasons throughout Europe as far west as Ireland.

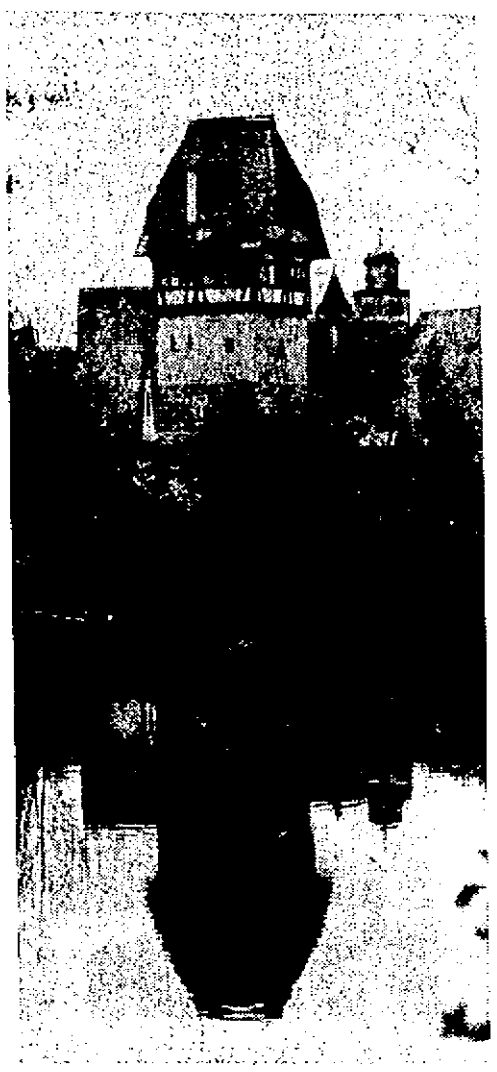

The guildsmen expanded their influence by taking leading roles in the government of the free city, concluding alliances and treaties and representing Dinkelsbuhl as ambassadors to other powers. For 400 years the guild form of democracy reigned behind the walls and turrets of the town, surviving takeover attempts by envious neighbor states and foriegn invaders into the 19th century. In 1806, control of the city returned to Bavaria and the unified German state.

One exception to the city's martial success came in 1632, when the children of the town saved Dinkelsbuhl from destruction by Swedish forces. At the point where surrender was imperative, the youngsters of the town formed an ad hoc guild of their own to plead with the armed invaders. The Swedes melted before this touching display of courage and marched away without pillage or plunder.

THIS EVENT is celebrated in mid-July each year with a festival week which has become one of Germany's most revered folk plays. The preformance begins with an impressive overture by the uniformed town band and the 70 members of the Dinkelsbuhl Boys' Band. The youth band, composed of boys from eight to 16 years of age, is the most popular feature of the festival.

The pageantry ends with a re-enactment of the surrender in the old town hall square, complete with a parade of the band and the official Boys' Battalion. Dancing and a concert to the clink of beer steins in a giant festival tent bring the holiday week to a rollicking close.

Lufthansa German Airlines provides the most direct route to Dinkelsbuhl from Los Angeles. Overnight non-stop flights to Amsterdam continue to Frankfurt, where connection with coach and rail tours of the Romantic Road are available.

TOWER of Dinkelsbuhl's fortification system reflects peacefully in a moat pond.

SPRING flowers bloom at London's Tower Bridge.

London

Spring came to London at 48 degrees. Light snow was falling on the soft yellow stone villages in the Shakespeare country.

Temperatures do not dismay the British — when the calendar reads April, it IS spring.

They turned out in shorts and knee socks and rode bikes down ice-cold country lanes. Got into skivvy shirts and shorts and rowed racing shells on the Thames.

"Oh, to be in England now that April's there," says the poet. (To which we add, "And inside a nice warm pub.")

Money exchange favors the Yankee dollar. Last year we got an English pound and gave the bank $2.40 U.S. When I arrived this time, we paid $1.92 for the pound. Last week we were buying them for $1.82.

The last time I went to Culpeper's the Queen Mother was expected. What excitement!

CULPEPER'S IS an herb shop. It's on Burton Street, just off Berkeley Square. You begin to smell it three doors down in this crisp London spring.

The smell of cinnamon and ginger. Wild thyme and cloves. They sell green peppercorns on the stem. Canebaskets of spices grown specially for Culpeper's in Granada.

You buy herbal preparations for nerves, insomnia, varicose veins.

What we buy is Eyebright. It's just what it says: Makes your eyes brighten up.

A pretty lady behind the sweet-smelling counter got down a great big book and turned to "E." She perched on a tall stool and read me the scam on Eyebright:

"Medical herbalists still retain faith in this herb and recommend its use in diseases of sight, weakness of the eyes, irritation of the eye, general disorders and discomforts of the eye.

"The juice is obtained by essences from the plant made by infusion of one ounce of Eyebright to a pint of boiling water. The eyes should be bathed several times a day. Very soothing. Strengthens weak brains and improves poor memory."

A bag of the dark green leaves costs half of an English pound.

HARROD'S: THERE'S no greater department store in the world. ALL purchases are gift-wrapped. (You too if you like. Harrod's has a department that builds custom-made coffins.)

Besides the clothing and other things of department stores, Harrod's can sell you a rhinoceros for 5000 pounds. Or any kind of rare kitten.

Truman Capote quote: "I buy all my dogs at Harrod's."

You can do your grocery shopping. They have 36 kinds of pate and 30 kinds of butter. The express trains from Scotland bring daily boxes of fresh salmon trout.

There's a bank on the fourth floor and a children's barber.

And that's the way it is in London, now that April's there. (Or it was just a couple of days ago.)

Only one ticket to buy

Most of Britain's leading tourist attractions are "Open to View" with the 1976 ticket of that name, now reduced in price to $9.50.

Individual admissions now average $1. That includes the Tower of London, Edinburgh Castle, Stonehenge, Woburn Abbey, Beaulieu Abbey, Longleat House and Hampton Court Palace, plus more than 400 others, so that visitors can recoup the cost of the ticket in a couple of days in London alone.

But one of the biggest pluses is convenience — you only have to show the ticket at the entrance and walk in — no standing in line, no ticket-buying.

There's a special children's version for only $4.75.

A FEW OF the other famous places which come under the ticket are: Shakespeare's birthplace, Stratford-upon-Avon, Caernarvon Castle, Winston Churchill's home Chartwell, Holyroodhouse, Montagu Motor Museum, Harewood House, Windsor Castle, and Harlech and Dover Castles.

For leaflet or ticket, write BritRail Travel Int'l, 510 West Sixth St., Los Angeles Ca., 90014.

Bargains at Shannon Airport's Duty Free Store are an even bigger value to dollar-spending Americans due to the slipping value of the pound sterling.

The shopping complex in the west of Ireland earns more than half of its $9.25 million annual turnover in dollars.

Ninety per cent of duty-free sales are to passengers west-bound to North America.

Get your Caribbean cruise off to a flying start.

Take off on a Royal Caribbean Air/Sea Cruise. Aboard Sun Viking or Nordic Prince—the two most popular two week cruise ships in the Caribbean.

You'll see eight of the Caribbean's most asked-to-see islands. Places like St. Thomas, Curaçao and San Juan. Plus Caracas on the continent of South America.

You'll enjoy bathing by the seaside in a refreshing salt water pool. Almost an acre of deck under the gentle Caribbean sun. A dining room that's a Restaurant Francais one night, an English Pub the next.

Entertainment that changes everytime we entertain. (You'll never see the same act twice. Unless you give it an encore.)

If you thirst for more, we have the top bar in the Caribbean: the Viking Crown Lounge—10 stories above the sea.

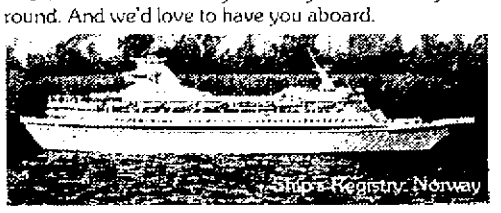

And a Royal Caribbean Air/Sea Cruise is one vacation where you can really unwind. Because you'll know what it's going to cost before you go.

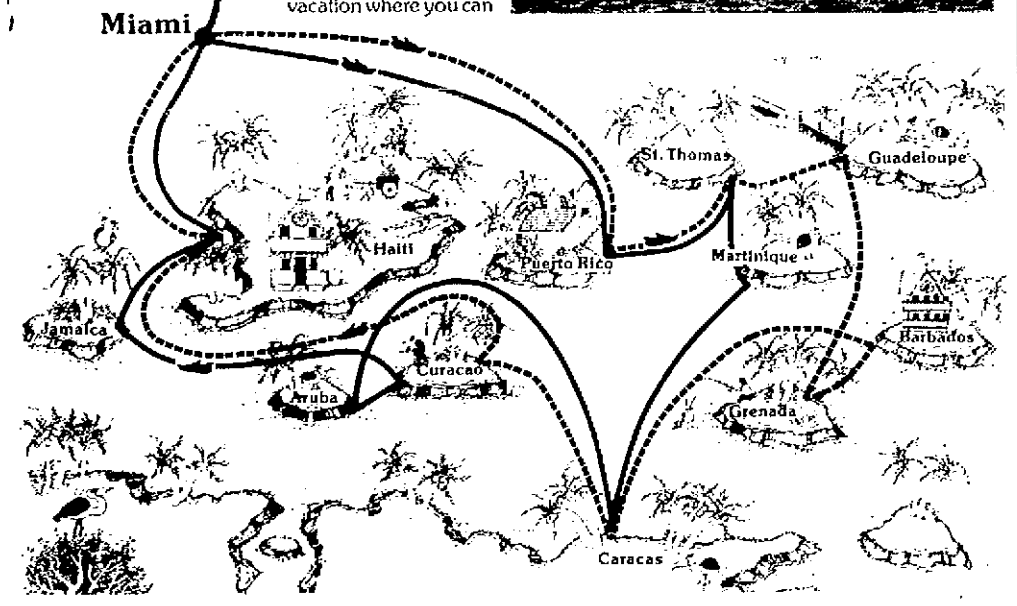

Where else, for example, does the cost of your vacation include the cost of all your food and entertainment?

Fact is, our price includes a 14-day cruise, round-trip air fare to Miami, airline security charges, ground transportation in Miami, and all transportation and port taxes.

That's a lot of vacation for the money. So, see your travel agent. And tell 'em you want to take off for the Caribbean. On Sun Viking or Nordic Prince.

One of them sails every Saturday from Miami, year round. And we'd love to have you aboard.

Gourmet guide

tedd thomey

FOR MANY YEARS I have been a careful observer of wealthy individuals who dine out frequently. They love to visit beautiful establishments where the sumptuous fare costs $10 or more a plate. But do they dine like that all the time?

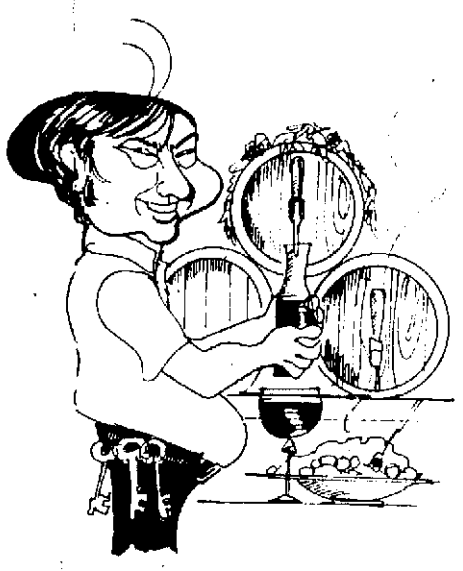

The answer is no. Wealthy people are just like the rest of us. They enjoy dining economically at times, finding pleasure in good but simple food that's inexpensive. Perhaps that's why they're wealthy. They know how to save.

You'll often find wealthy people dining inconspicuously at the Carriage Trade restaurant, 10911 Westminster Ave., just west of Euclid Street, Garden Grove, a brief drive from Long Beach on the Garden Grove Freeway. Although its name implies that it caters to the upper classes, the Carriage Trade isn't that kind of restaurant. It's a family establishment with budget dinners that are darned good. The fare isn't gourmet. There aren't any linen cloths on the tables. But it's a good-looking place with a modern colonial design and very popular because of the quality and flavor of those low-cost meals.

The owner of the Carriage Trade is Kamran Eussni, a personable, friendly, conscientious man who has a B.A. degree from UCLA and a master's degree from USC. He and his wife Lucy have owned the Carriage Trade for 15 months. They enjoy their work and they enjoy making people happy with their specialities. The Carriage Trade has been unusually successful during the past year because Kamran, No. 1 chef Sam Vigil and their kitchen staff use certain old-fashioned methods. They shun the use of prepreparred "quickie" items that lack rich flavors. Instead they work patiently by hand on such tasks as disjointing fresh chickens and dipping them in batter, grinding their own hamburger and making their own patties.

The Carriage Trade is open every day from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m., serving breakfast, luncheon, dinner, fountain items, beer and modestly priced tap wines. The nightly special dinners are top values, such as: Sundays and Mondays, roast prime rib au jus, $3.25; Tuesdays, Swiss steak, $1.95; Wednesday, fried chicken, $1.95; Thursdays, New York steak, $2.75. They come with soup or salad, potatoes, vegetable of the day, giant hot fresh roll with butter and dessert of Jell-O, pudding or sherbet. The Carriage Trade uses a slight amount of tenderizer on some of its beef items, but it's skillfully done and doesn't affect the flavor or texture.

Another popular entree, featured every night, is the filet mignon wrapped in bacon, $2.99 with the coupon printed in this restaurant section. It's served with soup or salad, potatoes, vegetable and the big freshroll with butter.

BUDDY GUILLEN
Friendly welcome to all

MOST PEOPLE WHO'VE lived in Southern California for a few years know that the Spanish word "amigo" means friend. Newcomers from other states aren't familiar with it and are sometimes mystified when they find it in an advertisement or hear it on the radio or TV.

A woman who phoned this department the other day wondered what the word "Hiamigos" means on the top of the souvenir menus at El Patio Mexican Restaurant, 3505 Atlantic Ave. a block north of Wardlow Road. "Is it some kind of Mexican food?" she asked.

She laughed when I explained that it's a greeting, partly in Spanish, partly in English. The two words, "Hi" and "Amigos" happen to be run so close togther on the menu that they appear to be one word. They mean "Hi, friends."

El Patio is an absolutely wonderful Mexican restaurant, with sparkling fresh foods. That menu greeting is an example of the friendliness of owners Tony and Triny Guillen, their son Buddy and their large staff of skilled cooks and waitresses. Most of the waitresses are dark-eyed, cheerful senoras (wives) and senoritas (unmarried girls) who've worked there a long time. They love El Patio and do their best to give good service day and night.

Buddy, assistant manager and bartender, is much like his father. They are friendly fellows, but they aren't the pushy, outspoken type. They're more on the quiet side. Buddy is a graduate of Lakewood High and the University of San Francisco. He's been on the El Patio staff since last September. He works in the cantina at the rear. Among his cocktail specialities are the superb, 9½-ounce tequila Margarita, $1, and the generous pitcher of Margaritas.

Near the cantina is El Patio's new "no smoking" room for guests who like to dine away from the fumes of cigarettes and cigars. It has seating for 40 in complete privacy. It is available on request for luncheon or dinner.

Open every day from 11:30 a.m. to midnight, El Patio is large and authentically Mexican, with modern designs. Tony and Triny have been in business in Long Beach for over 20 years and have many devoted customers who have been dining with them all that time. Their menu has a huge variety, ranging from appetizers, soup and salads to Mexican seafoods featuring baby rock lobster, steaks with the most delicious Mexican sauce, child's plates, hamburgers and cheeseburgers, sausage with eggs, Mexican and U.S. beers and the tostada grande, $1.85, a huge salad-like creation made with lettuce, beans and cheese. There are 11 of the finest, freshest combination platters, $2.50 to $3.95, emphasizing tacos, enchiladas, tamales, red chili and stuffed chili rellenos.

GAL-IVANTING

This college teaches fine tennis

RANCHO BERNARDO FEATURES RIDING AND TENNIS

They came tall, short, round, flat, middle-aged, teen-aged, clumsy and agile. And then there was me, soft from sitting at typewriters. I hadn't even held a tennis racket for 18 years.

We all sat quietly watching an animated film that depicted court strategy like an old-time sing-along flick with a ball bouncing off the notes.

"When you finish here, you may not play as well as a pro, but you sure won't play like a loser." We were listening to Ed Collins, director of the Tennis College at Rancho Bernardo Inn.

Then we divided into groups of six and all trooped out to our appointed courts, with one group working out in the cages.

The Tennis College at this plush resort 20 miles north of San Diego is not just another gimmick. Designed for beginners as well as advanced players, it is so effective that I learned more in the two-day crash course than I learned in a year of lessons taken at one time with a Wimbledon Cup holder.

MUCH OF THE Tennis College equipment was designed by Vic Braden, well known tennis pro and psychologist who instituted the course at Rancho Bernardo, which also features a saddle club as an off-court diversion.

There are volley machines for rapid fire practice, video tape stop-action recorders and film training sessions. A large staff, all with university degrees in physical education, give constant personal attention to the small classes that work out from 9 a.m. until 6:30 p.m. with only breaks for lunch and rest.

The cages were most instructive for me. These consist of a long alley, like a dog run, framed on all sides by a wire fence. An automatic ball dispenser throws the ball according to a prescrib- .etting — to your backhand or forehand — while you return perfect top spins right to the target every time.

choral pepper

Meanwhile, your sterling performance is recorded on a video tape so you can retire to the tennis shop afterwards and appraise yourself in action. All this is supervised by one of the school's expert pros who helps to correct your errors, just in case.

If this tends to intimidate you, don't let it. We were not all perfect. Out on the courts where we were unable to control the images shown on the video tapes, some of us only occasionally succeeded in controlling the ball.

But we were never discouraged. Every muscle, every stroke, every strategic play we made was concentrated on the psychology of winning, for that is the emphasis of the course.

WITH RANCHO BERNARDO'S swimming pools, riding stables, golf courses, smart shopping center and 5,800 acres of dramatic, boulder-studded terrain cooled by Pacific breezes, you are cheating yourself by devoting all of your time to tennis. However, when you sign up for the two-day crash course, that's the way it has to be.

The best idea is to spend a week here, working out in the cages and on the courts to firmly establish the new habits you acquired in class.

Not the least of the attractions at Rancho Bernardo is a tall distinguished figure named Juan Bellon, well-known to habituees of the Villa Frascati restaurant in Hollywood and L'Escale in San Diego, both of which he formerly owned and hosted. Bellon now manages the Tennis College.

Like a catalyst that makes things happen, his charisma activates the whole place. The fashions in his tennis shop reflect his great sense of style and you will no doubt, like everyone else, spend a lot of time enjoying the comraderie that goes on in his headquarters.

His influence has even spread to the decor of the Inn.

While in Europe, he admired the work of a "starving" artist of unusual talent. "Why don't you pack up your paints and come to America?" he inviled, "I'll hang your work in my restaurant and teach you a profession."

The artist, Angelo Gleria, came and Bellon did. Gleria now manages the restaurant at San Bernardo Inn and is proud to be able to afford to paint what he likes and sell only what he wants to sell.

Many of his paintings hang on the walls of the Inn and others are in the collections of Ginger Rogers, Jerome Robbins and other members of the film colony. It is predicted that he will become California's leading artist of the Impressionist revival.

Tour savings offered

Trans World Airlines has announced a 10 per cent price reduction on the land portion of seven tours to Italy featured in the airline's Getaway Europe program for 1976.

Savings, which are based on per-person double-occupancy rates, range from $10 for a one-week vacation to Rome to $52 for the two-week "Allegro" trip which covers the country from North to South. Motorcoach and independent travel packages are included on the roster of itineraries reflecting the reduction.

Reductions were made possible by the increased value of the dollar in exchange for Italian currency. TWA is passing the savings along to its customers.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Doffs cap to mushrooms

mildred flanary

Today's chef of the week, Edward W. Babic, is a tax attorney, but because of former training, and because of expert rating in combat and pistol courses, he was assigned to the United States Secret Service for two presidential campaigns. The training he received in the IRS included the Treasury Law Enforcement Officers School and Special Agents School in Washington, D.C.

It all began when he became a special agent with the Intelligence Division of the Internal Revenue Service. He spent two years in Washington, D.C. and four in the Los Angeles District which includes both Los Angeles and Orange Counties.

Born in Los Angeles, he later moved with his family to Torrance. Babic attended North Torrance Elementary and High Schools. In high school, he played football, basketball and baseball.

Babic received his college education at UCLA, where he belonged to Zeta Psi and was graduated with a B.S. degree. While at UCLA, he played football and baseball, worked as manager at a McDonald's Drive-In, was a real estate appraiser and served on the academic communication staff at UCLA Medical Center.

BABIC GRADUATED from Southwestern University School of Law Juris Doctor, cum laude. While there, he was president of the Student Bar Association, and was first vice president of the American Bar Association, Law Student Division.

Babic came to Long Beach in 1970 from Los Angeles. He is a member of the American, California, Los Angeles County and Long Beach Bar Associations. He is chairman of the section on taxation for both the Long Beach and the American Bar Associations.

He is also a member of the Law Revision Commission committee of California Trial Lawyers, and the American Bar Association's special congressional advisory committee for the proposed Federal Criminal Code, rewriting the criminal tax laws. He serves on the board of directors of the Southwestern University Alumni Association, and is an active member of the UCLA Bruin Bench.

LOCALLY, BABIC is a member of the Estate Planning and Trust Council of Long Beach, and is a Volunteer in Long Beach Public Schools. Active in the Long Beach Junior and the Long Beach Chambers of Commerce, he belongs to the Diplomatic Corps of the latter. He is also listed in Who's Who in California.

ATTORNEY EDWARD W. BABIC

Babic serves on the board of governors for the Long Beach Grand Prix, and is a member of the President's Association, LBSU. A member of the Kiwanis Club of Long Beach, he is president elect, 1976-77. He belongs to both the Virginia Country Club and the Long Beach Yacht Club, and serves on the Congressional Cup committee of the latter.

Babic is married to the former Sandra Cheryl Ward of Orange County. They have a daughter, Jennifer Ilene.

Today, our chef is preparing some extra special hors d'oeuvres, Crab Stuffed Mushrooms.

CRAB STUFFED MUSHROOMS

- 16 to 24 large mushrooms
- 1½ tablespoons, butter, melted
- 2 tablespoons finely minced onion
- ¼ teaspoon finely minced garlic
- 3 tablespoons butter
- ½ pound crab meat, cooked and flaked
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 2 tablespoons soft bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons large dried onion flakes
- 2 tablespoons parsley flakes
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- ⅛ teaspoon EACH, cayenne pepper, garlic powder, onion powder, celery salt

Remove mushroom stems. Dip caps in melted butter and set aside. Finely chop stems and saute in butter with onion and garlic. Combine with remaining ingredients. Fill caps, top with 2 tablespoons soft bread crumbs mixed with 2 tablespoons melted butter and sprinkle with paprika. Place in well-buttered shallow baking dish and bake in a 400 degree oven 10 to 15 minutes until mushrooms are tender and tops are browned.

Collection going to pots

dan d'imperio

Q. "Please assist me in appraising my collection of old chocolate pots." — Doris, Garden City, Kan.

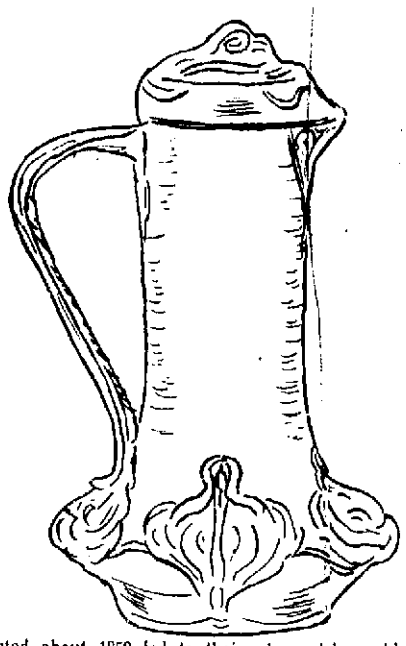

A. Collectors have been pouring plenty of dollars into ceramic chocolate pots, particularly those bearing the mark of a prominent potter. Complete sets naturally fetch substantial returns, but even single cups and saucers or pots generate considerable excitement. Chocolate pot value guide: Bavaria, pale roses, white background, 11-inches tall, $65; Haviland, blue forget-me-nots, white background, 10-inches tall, $57; Nippon, gold and white decor, $50; Royal Bayreuth, scenic type, horses on hill, green background, $110; R.S. Prussia, pale pink roses, pearlized light green background, $155; Victorian, Carlsbad, handpainted florals, $68.

Q. "At a yard sale I purchased a vase described as Crackle glass...?" — May, Petersburg, Va.

A. During the late 19th century American glasshouses revived this type of glass which was originally made by Venetian glass workers in the 16th century. Hobbs Brockunier and the Boston Sandwich Glass Factory were among the firms producing it in clear and pastel colors. The distinctive crackle appearance was achieved by plunging the red-hot object into cold water. The crackled look proved both eye and customer catching. Ice glass is another acceptable term for this hot collectible. Crackle glass value guide: vase, 9-inches tall, applied rosettes, $45.

Q. "We're anxious to know more about a bentwood side chair marked 'Thonet'." — Mr. & Mrs. H. L., Levittown, Pa.

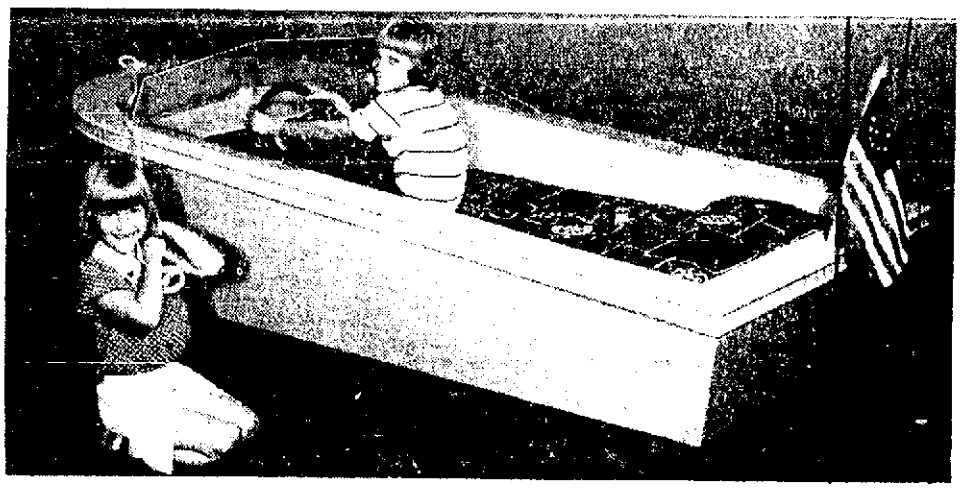

A. When the Thonet family established their furniture factory in Vienna, Austria, in 1853, they tossed the public a curve in the right direction. Michael Thonet along with his five sons founded this still existing factory. Mass-production methods instituted about 1859 led to their pieces being widely exported to various countries. The ThonetNo. 14 side chair brought them worldwide fame. By 1871 they ranked as the world's foremost furniture factory. The name Thonet in various forms appears on their pieces, providing positive identification. Thonet value guide: side chair, circa 1890, $85.

Q. "I'm thimble happy. I buy every old one I can find." — Clara, Binghamton, N.Y.

A. Thousands of collectors agree antique thimbles are thumb collectibles. They have been known since Roman days, and over the centuries have been made of many materials, including bone, glass, silver, leather, wood, gold, porcelain, ivory, mother-of-pearl, steel, pewter and tortoiseshell. Advertising and commemorative thimbles of 19th century origin always attract buyers. Some fancy examples boasted secret compartments. Did you realize hat these protective thumb covers were once called thumbbells?

Appraise your antiques with the aid of Dan D'Imperio's book and value guide "ABC of Antiques," Dodd, Mead & Co., $9.95. An autographed copy may be ordered from the Star-Telegram Syndicate, Inc., P. O. Box 681, Weatherford, TX 76086. Please include check or money order.

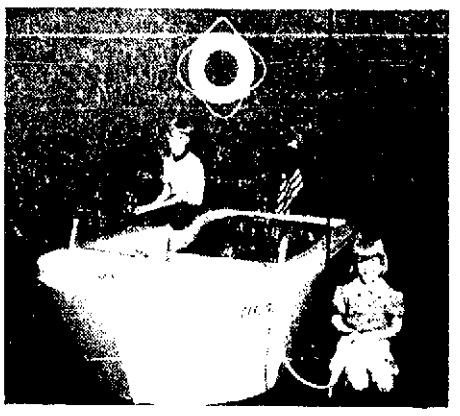

The workshop

By STEVE ELLINGSON

Imagine your children's faces when they get aboard this sleek, speedboat bed, ready to zoom them off to dreamland. As you can see, it looks just like a motorboat, yet is a perfectly great bed for the young "salts" in your family.

Built principally of plywood, the bed measures 50 inches beam to beam, and 96 inches stem to stern, and it takes a standard 39" mattress. The plexiglass windshield is cut from scrap pieces available at hardware stores and lumber yards. The "metal" windshield frame is actually plywood painted silver.

Paint the boat bed with a few enamel coats of your child's favorite bright color, add a flag and maybe a ring-buoy. Chances are, you'll have trouble getting the kids out of bed.

So, "anchors aweigh" for a fun project. To order the Speedboat Bed, Pattern No. 574, send $2.50 (includes first class postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Department,

Aces on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

Is the penalty for discussing hands during a tournament ever invoked? Rarely have I ever heard of a director dropping the axe.

Quiet Queen
Dayton

Answer: Yes and it's becoming more frequent. The penalty is a full board for the session played — strong enough to convert most any winning game into a loser. At a recent regional, ACBL director Jerry Maclin assessed 155 points in penalties in one night, most of them for illegal discussion.

One of the 25 point penalties really hurt. A player was put in seven spades holding Q 7 4 in dummy opposite A 9 8 6 3. Opening lead was the spade deuce which declarer was allowed to win with his six. Declarer's ace then dropped RHO's king and the queen picked up the suit.

And Maclin says, "So he scored 2210 on a deal where many were going down at six, thereby picking up a totally undeserved and unexpected 25 match points — which he promptly lost by talking about it."

Dear Mr. Corn:

What happens if one player has one more card than she should and another has one less?

Foul Ball,
San Francisco

Answer: There must be a redeal if the irregularity is discovered before play has been completed.

Dear Mr. Corn:

What about preempts? Is a change of suit forcing? Can one preempt in a minor when holding three of a major? How about a preempt in a major with four of the other major?

Jumping Jack,
Skaneateles, N.Y.

Answer: A change of suit after a preempt is forcing. The other restrictions you mention should be avoided but the field of preemptive bidding is much too large to establish hard and fast rules. So much depends on the specific circumstances and player personalities that what might be a bad bid one day becomes a good risk the next day.

In general, the preemptive bid is a defensive weapon intended to obstruct the opponents.

When there's a good chance for that, preempt. If the hand might belong to your side (when partner hasn't yet passed), then you should be careful that you don't preempt your side out of the best contract.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Opponent opened one heart. I overcalled one no trump. Next hand passed and partner bid two clubs. I passed and that was it. She claimed she was using Stayman. I was taught that Stayman doesn't apply to no trump overcalls. What is the answer?

Club Mixup
Kerrville, Tex.

Answer: Yes and no. Some play two clubs as Stayman after a no trump overcall and that treatment is known as defensive Stayman. However, the treatment is far from standard and should not be used without prior partnership discussion and agreement.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner opened one diamond and I held:

♠ A K 7 5 2 A
♥ A 9 4
♦ 10 8 4 2
♣ 8 7 6

I couldn't find a satisfactory bid so I temporized one spade. What would you have done?

Impossible Dream,
Menlo Park, Calif.

Answer: That is a dilly of a problem and there really is no correct answer. After gasping for air, I would have to choose between one in a major or two clubs to show 10 or more points by going to the two level. I don't like to bid three card majors over a minor and, although two clubs is almost as bad, I think I would choose that bid.

Two clubs will allow me to bid twice to show my strength and is less likely to lead to a game with the partnership holding only seven cards in the trump suit.

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

IRS questions expenses

DEAR MR. SMITH: We are being audited by IRS for 1974. We claimed a medical deduction which IRS is questioning. We have a mentally retarded and physically handicapped child. In 1974 he needed major back surgery which could not be done locally. We had to transport him to a San Francisco hospital for the operation. Because of his mental and physical condition we had to be with him constantly for feeding and for psychological reasons. Ten days after the operation he was encased in a full body cast and we transported him home in a rented station wagon. He then remained in bed in our home for 90 days.

Thereafter, we had to transport him back to San Francisco for change of casts, X-rays, etc., every three months. He could not be moved from the hospital until the cast dried, so we had to remain there overnight.

We feel that our expenses for meals and lodging were part of our child's medical care because of his handicaps and psychological problems. — L.J.B.

jacob smith

The Internal Revenue Code says that medical care includes payments "for the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease, or for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body" and payments "for transportation primarily for and essential to medical care..." and for medical insurance premiums.

If you listed all payments described in your letter, then you properly claimed the medical care deduction allowed by law. IRS may ask why a San Francisco hospital was chosen for the initial surgery, and for the subsequent checkups. Your doctors should certify why this was essential, and why both parents had to be close to their child.

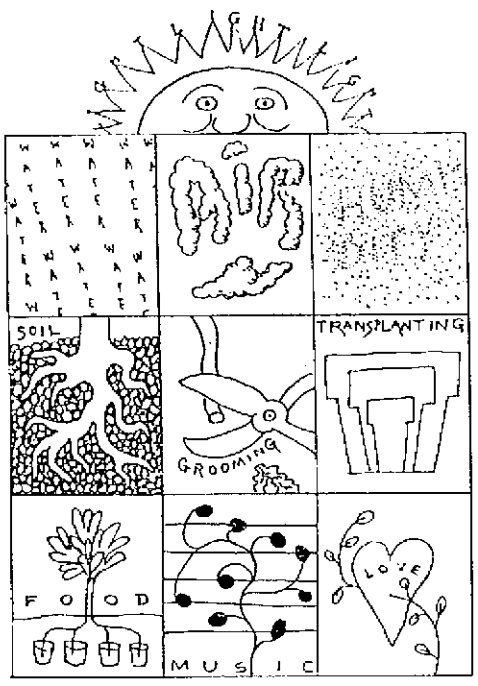

Since most of your payments were for hospital, doctors, transportation and "in transit" expenses, the IRS should, in the end, allow them all. The facts and circumstances of your case would dictate that your meals and lodging, while in San Francisco, be classified as "in transit" expenses and therefore deductible as part of transportation.

There are many decided cases on the deductibility of meals and lodging as medical transportation expenses. The IRS has won most of them. However, there are some appellate court decisions that favor your case. I hope you win!

DEAR MR. SMITH: Last April (1975) I gave my daughter $30,000 cash. I understood that anyone can give that amount, one time only, tax free, federal and state. I filled out IRS Form 709 and no gift tax was due. But when I filled out the California gift tax return form, they said that I would have to pay a penalty of $680 to the state of California which I did. Is this $680 deductible on federal or state income taxes? — J.R.

Your letter highlights a point which may be of interest to many readers. Don't be "penny wise and pound foolish"! Before making substantial gifts, or entering into transactions involving large sums, verify the tax consequences — don't rely on "understanding"!

The $680 is not a penalty; it is the State's gift tax. It is not deductible for either federal or California income tax purposes.

Dear Mother Earth:

DEAR MOTHER EARTH:

In a small, roofed patio, which receives very little natural light, I had planned to install a grow-light fixture to be timed for about 4 to 6 hours after midnight each night. The purpose was two-fold: To give the plants needed growing light and to replace the patio night light I usually keep on for illumination and protection. However, I just read in your column that plants need a rest period during the night so they can give off carbon dioxide during the hours of darkness. I can, of course, use the already installed patio lantern and use the grow-light during earlier daylight time. Your suggestions would be very much appreciated. — R.N.

DEAR R.N.:

Not to worry. In the first place, there will be plenty of darkness between nightfall and midnight to give your plants the rest they need. And a grow-light will only help them become lusher and fuller than would an ordinary incandescent patio light.

What we were referring to is that, besides their need to give off carbon dioxide, plants kept constantly under grow-lights will complete their life cycle much faster than those allowed to rest at least five or six hours a day. Isn't it amazing how much alike plants and people can be? We're sure you'll have the prettiest and best protected patio in town. The only problem might be how to protect the plants from those ever-present (and mean, mean, mean) people who might want to "pluck off" your plants. In any event, good luck and happy growing!

(If you have any questions to ask DEAR MOTHER EARTH, send them in care of the Independent Press Telegram. As many as possible will be used in this column.)

In Memoriam 30

IN Memory of Steve - April 27, 1974
I see a small red haired boy who barely turned a man when he marched off to a useless war. I still can see him yet I can Flowers placed on a hillside, neath the gently swaying trees and though it says he's buried there - I know he's here with me.

WHEN GUILDS REIGNED SUPREME

Glory of the Middle Ages

By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

DINKELSBUHL, Germany — This Medieval time capsule is located at the intersection of the ancient north-south Romantic Road trade route and the more modern east-west holiday trail to the Alps and the Baltic Sea.

The most perfectly preserved of Germany's walled cities along the commercial artery blazed by the Romans when the Empire expanded to the north, Dinkelsbuhl has had no development since the Renaissance. It stands today almost exactly as it did nearly 500 years ago, encircled by a continuous fortification studded with watchtowers and gates behind embracing moats.

But the multi-shaped towers reflecting in the ponds of the moat system and the half-timbered structures clustered closely around the soaring bell tower of southern Germany's largest Gothic period church are modern by comparison with Dinkelsbuhl's beginnings.

THE ORIGINAL settlement of Dinkilo, also called Thingwolf, existed in the sixth century. Old documuments describe it as suurrounded by ramparts and moats as early as the year 928. The first fortifications soon were found inadequate for the protection of the buurgeoning population and were succeeded by a second ring and then a third, which stands today.

In 1270, Dinkelsbuhl became the second of Imperial Germany's Free Cities. This historic event attracted skilled artisans, architects and scholars along with freedom-seeking commercial travelers. As trades developed, so did social awareness, resulting in the beginnings of the organized labor movement.

This fringe benefit of Dinkelsbuhl's auutonomy marked the first step toward the overthrow of the fuedal system in central Europe. Following the earlier example of the dukes and earls of England who travel

combined forces to reduce the powers of their king through the Magna Carta, the artists, designers and smiths of Dinkelsbuhl used collective action by their guilds to enforce demands for greater economic freedom.

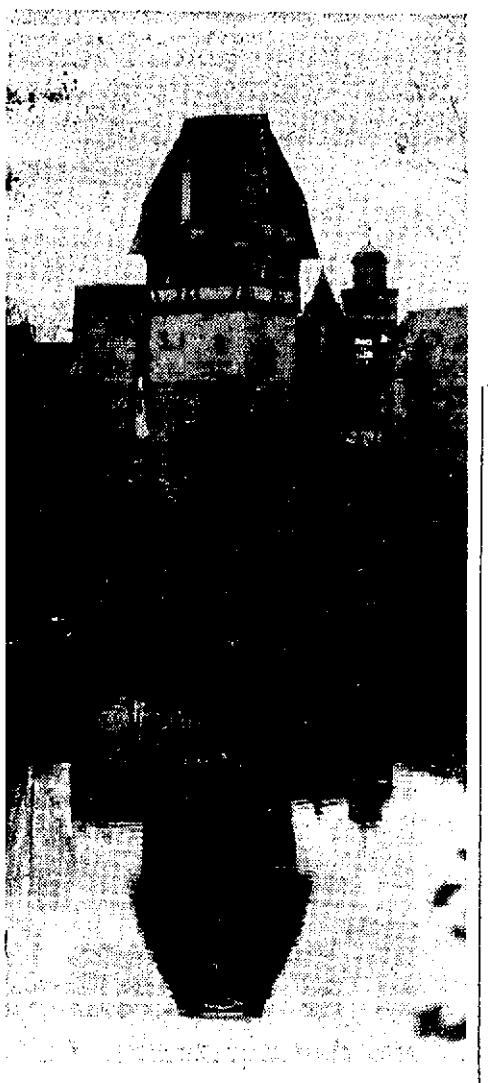

By the end of the 14th century, the antecedents of today's trade unions had gained equal rights under law with the aristocracy. In spite of predictions of disaster, the city-state prospered as never before. The architecture of Dinkelsbuhl which blossomed during the peak period of the guilds became renowned for its harmony of form and function.

THE MASSIVE 15th century St. George's church, with its three naves, graceful fluted columns and vaulted ceilings seemingly carved from a single rock, created demands for the services of Dinkelsbuhl's stonemasons throughout Europe as far west as Ireland.

The guildsmen expanded their influence by taking leading roles in the government of the free city, concluding alliances and treaties and representing Dinkelsbuhl as ambassadors to other powers. For 400 years the guild form of democracy reigned behind the walls and turrets of the town, surviving takeover attempts by envious neighbor states and foriegn invaders into the 19th century. In 1806, control of the city retuurned to Bavaria and the unified German state.

One exception to the city's martial success came in 1632, when the children of the town saved Dinkelsbuhl from destruction by Swedish forces. At the point where surrender was imperative, the youngsters of the town formed an ad hoc guild of their own to plead with the armed invaders. The Swedes melted before this touching display of courage and marched away without pillage or plunder.

THIS EVENT is celebrated in mid-July each year with a festival week which has become one of TOWER of Dinkelsbuhl's fortification system reflects peacefully in a moat pond.

Germany's most revered folk plays. The preformance begins with an impressive overture by the uniformed town band and the 70 members of the Dinkelsbuhl Boys' Band. The youth band, composed of boys from eight to 16 years of age, is the most popular feature of the festival.

The pageantry ends with a re-enactment of the surrender in the old town hall square, complete with a parade of the band and the official Boys' Battalion. Dancing and a concert to the clink of beer steins in a giant festival tent bring the holiday week to a rollicking close.

Lufthansa German Airlines provides the most direct route to Dinkelsbuhl from Los Angeles. Overnight non-stop flights to Amsterdam continue to Frankfurt, where connection with coach and rail tours of the Romantic Road are available.

SPRING flowers bloom at London's Tower Bridge.

Stiff upper lip may be just a chilblain

stan delaplane

London

Spring came to London at 48 degrees. Light snow was falling on the soft yellow stone villages in the Shakespeare country.

Temperatures do not dismay the British — when the calendar reads April, it IS spring.

They turned out in shorts and knee socks and rode bikes down ice-cold country lanes. Got into skivvy shirts and shorts and rowed racing shells on the Thames.

"Oh, to be in England now that April's there," says the poet. (To which we add, "And inside a nice warm pub.")

Money exchange favors the Yankee dollar. Last year we got an English pound and gave the bank $2.40 U.S. When I arrived this time, we paid $1.92 for the pound. Last week we were buying them for $1.82.

The last time I went to Culpeper's the Queen Mother was expected. What excitement!

CULPEPER'S IS an herb shop. It's on Burton Street, just off Berkeley Square. You begin to smell it three doors down in this crisp London spring.

The smell of cinnamon and ginger. Wild thyme and cloves. They sell green peppercorns on the stem. Canebaskets of spices grown specially for Culpeper's in Granada.

You buy herbal preparations for nerves, insomnia, varicose veins.

What we buy is Eyebright. It's just what it says: Makes your eyes brighten up.

A pretty lady behind the sweet-smelling counter got down a great big book and turned to "E." She perched on a tall stool and read me the scam on Eyebright:

"Medical herbalists still retain faith in this herb and recommend its use in diseases of sight, weakness of the eyes, irritation of the eye, general disorders and discomforts of the eye.

"The juice is obtained by essences from the plant made by infusion of one ounce of Eyebright to a pint of boiling water. The eyes should be bathed several times a day. Very soothing. Strengthens weak brains and improves poor memory."

A bag of the dark green leaves costs half of an English pound.

HARROD'S: THERE'S no greater department store in the world. ALL purchases are gift-wrapped. (You too if you like. Harrod's has a department that builds custom-made coffins.)

Besides the clothing and other things of department stores, Harrod's can sell you a rhinoceros for 5000 pounds. Or any kind of rare kitten.

Truman Capote quote: "I buy all my dogs at Harrod's."

You can do your grocery shopping. They have 36 kinds of pate and 30 kinds of butter. The express trains from Scotland bring daily boxes of fresh salmon trout.

There's a bank on the fourth floor and a children's barber.

And that's the way it is in London, now that April's there. (Or it was just a couple of days ago.)

Only one ticket to buy

Most of Britain's leading tourist attractions are "Open to View" with the 1976 ticket of that name, now reduced in price to $9.50.

Individual admissions now average $1. That includes the Tower of London, Edinburgh Castle, Stonehenge, Woburn Abbey, Beaulieu Abbey, Longleat House and Hampton Court Palace, plus more than 400 others, so that visitors can recoup the cost of the ticket in a couple of days in London alone.

But one of the biggest pluses is convenience — you only have to show the ticket at the entrance and walk in — no standing in line, no ticket-buying.

There's a special children's version for only $4.75.

A FEW OF the other famous places which come under the ticket are: Shakespeare's birthplace, Stratford-upon-Avon, Caernarvon Castle, Winston Churchill's home Chartwell, Holyroodhouse, Montagu Motor Museum, Harewood House, Windsor Castle, and Harlech and Dover Castles.

For leaflet or ticket, write BritRail Travel Int'l, 510 West Sixth St., Los Angeles Ca,, 90014.

Free Eire

Bargains at Shannon Airport's Duty Free Store are an even bigger value to dollar-spending Americans due to the slipping value of the pound sterling.

The shopping complex in the west of Ireland earns more than half of its $9.25 million annual turnover in dollars.

Ninety per cent of duty-free sales are to passengers west-bound to North America.

Get your Caribbean cruise off to a flying start.

Take off on a Royal Caribbean Air/Sea Cruise. Aboard Sun Viking or Nordic Prince—the two most popular two week cruise ships in the Caribbean.

You'll see eight of the Caribbean's most asked-to-see islands. Places like St. Thomas, Curaçao and San Juan. Plus Caracas on the continent of South America.

You'll enjoy bathing by the seaside in a refreshing salt water pool. Almost an acre of deck under the gentle Caribbean sun. A dining room that's a Restaurant Francais one night, an English Pub the next.

Entertainment that changes everytime we entertain. (You'll never see the same act twice. Unless you give it an encore.)

If you thirst for more, we have the top bar in the Caribbean: the Viking Crown Lounge—10 stories above the sea.

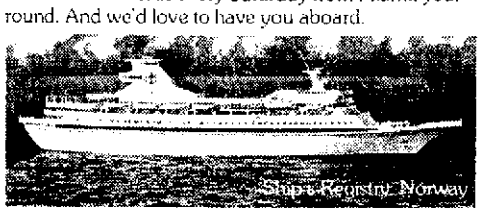

And a Royal Caribbean Air/Sea Cruise is one vacation where you can really unwind. Because you'll know what it's going to wind-up costing before you go.

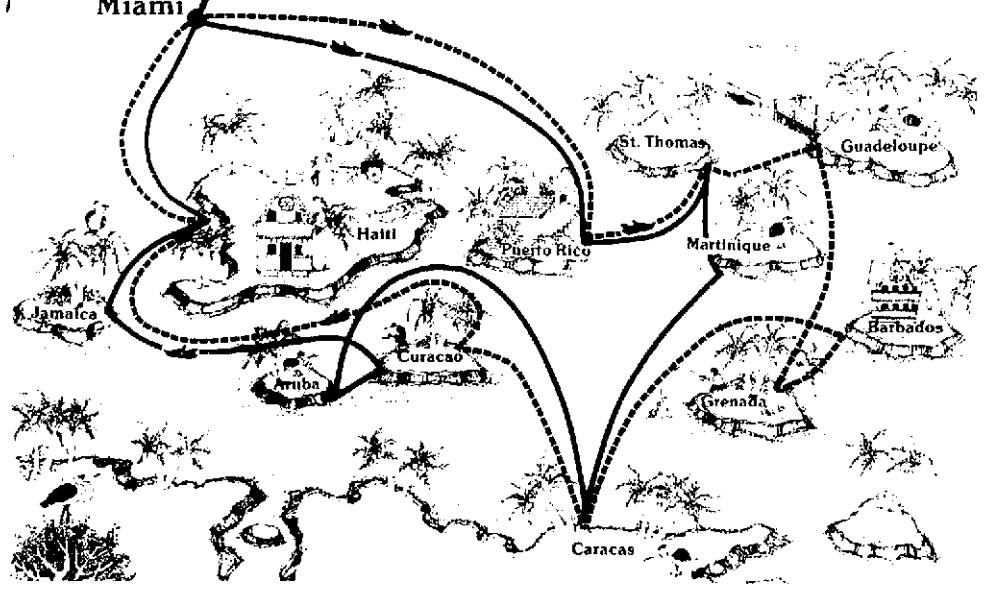

Where else, for example, does the cost of your vacation include the cost of all your food and entertainment?

Fact is, our price includes a 14-day cruise, round-trip air fare to Miami, airline security charges, ground transportation in Miami, and all transportation and port taxes.

That's a lot of vacation for the money. So, see your travel agent. And tell 'em you want to take off for the Caribbean. On Sun Viking or Nordic Prince.

One of them sails every Saturday from Miami, year round. And we'd love to have you aboard.

WAKE UP!
It should be obvious that there are only 2 ways to make any real money in California, go into business for yourself or take a commission sales position.
I am talking about a full time professional sales career with the oldest and largest International Organization of its kind in existence. I am talking about an opportunity to build a consistently growing income which is based on that ability of yours you have been dying to use. Benefits include pension plan, free life insurance plan, major health insurance and personal as well as professional growth.
This could be "THAT" opportunity to break into sales which you have often thought about.
We furnish a complete training program. Sales experience not necessary, some of our most successful people have no background in sales.

GAL-IVANTING

This college teaches fine tennis

RANCHO BERNARDO FEATURES RIDING AND TENNIS

They came tall, short, round, flat, middle-aged, teen-aged, clumsy and agile. And then there was me, soft from sitting at typewriters. I hadn't even held a tennis racket for 18 years.

We all sat quietly watching an animated film that depicted court strategy like an old-time sing-along flick with a ball bouncing off the notes.

"When you finish here, you may not play as well as a pro, but you sure won't play like a loser." We were listening to Ed Collins, director of the Tennis College at Rancho Bernardo Inn.

Then we divided into groups of six and all trooped out to our appointed courts, with one group working out in the cages.

The Tennis College at this plush resort 20 miles north of San Diego is not just another gimmick. Designed for beginners as well as advanced players, it is so effective that I learned more in the two-day crash course than I learned in a year of lessons taken at one time with a Wimbledon Cup holder.

MUCH OF THE Tennis College equipment was designed by Vic Braden, well known tennis pro and psychologist who instituted the course at Rancho Bernardo, which also features a saddle club as an off-court diversion.

There are volley machines for rapid fire practice, video tape stop-action recorders and film training sessions. A large staff, all with university degrees in physical education, give constant personal attention to the small classes that work out from 9 a.m. until 6:30 p.m. with only breaks for lunch and rest.

The cages were most instructive for me. These consist of a long alley, like a dog run, framed on all sides by a wire fence. An automatic ball dispenser throws the ball according to a prescrib- -etting — to your backhand or forehand — while you return perfect top spins right to the target every time.

choral pepper

Meanwhile, your sterling performance is recorded on a video tape so you can retire to the tennis shop afterwards and appraise yourself in action. All this is supervised by one of the school's expert pros who helps to correct your errors, just in case.

If this tends to intimidate you, don't let it. We were not all perfect. Out on the courts where we were unable to control the images shown on the video tapes, some of us only occasionally succeeded in controlling the ball.

But we were never discouraged. Every muscle, every stroke, every strategic play we made was concentrated on the psychology of winning, for that is the emphasis of the course.

WITH RANCHO BERNARDO'S swimming pools, riding stables, golf courses, smart shopping center and 5,800 acres of dramatic, boulder studded terrain cooled by Pacific breezes, you are cheating yourself by devoting all of your time to tennis. However, when you sign up for the two-day crash course, that's the way it has to be.

The best idea is to spend a week here, working out in the cages and on the courts to firmly establish the new habits you acquired in class.

Not the least of the attractions at Rancho Bernardo is a tall distinguished figure named Juan Bellon, well-known to habituees of the Villa Frascati restaurant in Hollywood and L'Escale in San Diego, both of which he formerly owned and hosted. Bellon now manages the Tennis College.

Like a catalyst that makes things happen, his charisma activates the whole place. The fashions in his tennis shop reflect his great sense of style and you will no doubt, like everyone else, spend a lot of time enjoying the comraderie that goes on in his headquarters.

His influence has even spread to the decor of the Inn.

While in Europe, he admired the work of a "starving" artist of unusual talent. "Why don't you pack up your paints and come to America?" he invited. "I'll hang your work in my restaurant and teach you a profession."

The artist, Angelo Gleria, came and Bellon did. Gleria now manages the restaurant at San Bernardo Inn and is proud to be able to afford to paint what he likes and sell only what he wants to sell.

Many of his paintings hang on the walls of the Inn and others are in the collections of Ginger Rogers, Jerome Robbins and other members of the film colony. It is predicted that he will become California's leading artist of the Impressionist revival.

Tour savings offered

Trans World Airlines has announced a 10 per cent price reduction on the land portion of seven tours to Italy featured in the airline's Getaway Europe program for 1976.

Savings, which are based on per-person double-occupancy rates, range from $19 for a one-week vacation to Rome to $52 for the two-week "Allegro" trip which covers the country from North to South. Motorcoach and independent travel packages are included on the roster of itineraries reflecting the reduction.

Reductions were made possible by the increased value of the dollar in exchange for Italian currency. TWA is passing the savings along to its customers.

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

IRS questions expenses

DEAR MR. SMITH: We are being audited by IRS for 1974. We claimed a medical deduction which IRS is questioning. We have a mentally retarded and physically handicapped child. In 1974 he needed major back surgery which could not be done locally. We had to transport him to a San Francisco hospital for the operation. Because of his mental and physical condition we had to be with him constantly for feeding and for psychological reasons. Ten days after the operation he was encased in a full body cast and we transported him home in a rented station wagon. He then remained in bed in our home for 90 days.

Thereafter, we had to transport him back to San Francisco for change of casts, X-rays, etc., every three months. He could not be moved from the hospital until the cast dried, so we had to remain there overnight.

We feel that our expenses for meals and lodging were part of our child's medical care because of his handicaps and psychological problems. — L.J.B.

jacob smith

The Internal Revenue Code says that medical care includes payments "for the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease, or for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body" and payments "for transportation primarily for and essential to medical care..." and for medical insurance premiums.

If you listed all payments described in your letter, then you properly claimed the medical care deduction allowed by law. IRS may ask why a San Francisco hospital was chosen for the initial surgery, and for the subsequent checkups. Your doctors should certify why this was essential, and why both parents had to be close to their child.

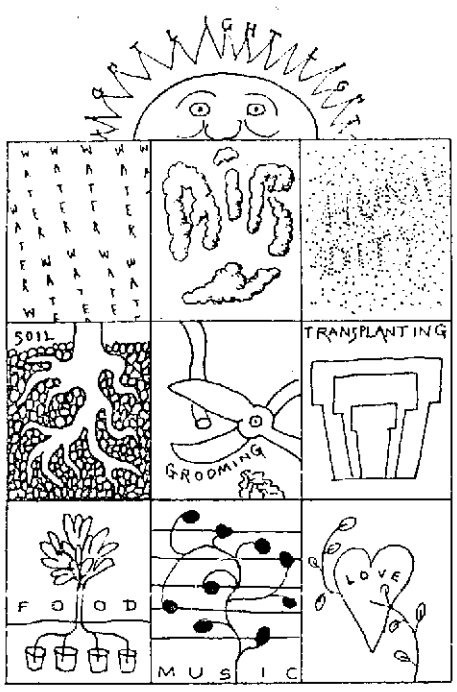

Since most of your payments were for hospital, doctors, transportation and "in transit" expenses, the IRS should, in the end, allow them all. The facts and circumstances of your case would dictate that your meals and lodging, while in San Francisco, be classified as "in transit" expenses and therefore deductible as part of transportation.

There are many decided cases on the deductibility of meals and lodging as medical transportation expenses. The IRS has won most of them. However, there are some appellate court decisions that favor your case. I hope you win!

DEAR MR. SMITH: Last April (1975) I gave my daughter $30,000 cash. I understood that anyone can give that amount, one time only, tax free, federal and state. I filled out IRS Form 709 and no gift tax was due. But when I filled out the California gift tax return form, they said that I would have to pay a penalty of $680 to the state of California which I did. Is this $680 deductible on federal or state income taxes? — J.R.

Your letter highlights a point which may be of interest to many readers. Don't be "penny wise and pound foolish"! Before making substantial gifts, or entering into transactions involving large sums, verify the tax consequences — don't rely on "understanding"!

The $680 is not a penalty; it is the State's gift tax. It is not deductible for either federal or California income tax purposes.

Dear Mother Earth:

DEAR MOTHER EARTH:

In a small, roofed patio, which receives very little natural light, I had planned to install a grow-light fixture to be timed for about 4 to 6 hours after midnight each night. The purpose was two-fold: To give the plants needed growing light and to replace the patio night light I usually keep on for illumination and protection. However, I just read in your column that plants need a rest period during the night so they can give off carbon dioxide during the hours of darkness. I can, of course, use the already installed patio lantern and use the grow-light during earlier daylight time. Your suggestions would be very much appreciated. — R.N.

DEAR R.N.:

Not to worry. In the first place, there will be plenty of darkness between nightfall and midnight to give your plants the rest they need. And a grow-light will only help them become lusher and fuller than would an ordinary incandescent patio light.

What we were referring to is that, besides their need to give off carbon dioxide, plants kept constantly under grow-lights will complete their life cycle much faster than those allowed to rest at least five or six hours a day. Isn't it amazing how much alike plants and people can be? We're sure you'll have the prettiest and best protected patio in town. The only problem might be how to protect the plants from those ever-present (and mean, mean, mean) people who might want to "pluck off" your plants. In any event, good luck and happy growing!

(If you have any questions to ask DEAR MOTHER EARTH, send them in care of the Independent Press Telegram. As many as possible will be used in this column.)

THINKING OF BUYING OR SELLING ?

REX L. HODGES

MEANS MORE FOR YOUR DOLLAR

THINKING OF BUYING?

Buy at Todays Prices:

WE DON'T HAVE TO TELL YOU HOME PRICES ARE SOARING
Land is scarce - material costs are soaring, labor costs rising to keep up with the times. You never will be able to buy at todays prices.

Buy For A Reason:

In a sense you will be putting a control on your monthly expenses — you probably should have purchased in 1975 then you would know what we mean.

Buy With Confidence:

At Rex L. Hodges we have sold over 100,000 homes. We have been in business since 1929, that's over 47 years.

THINKING OF SELLING?

When Your Home Is Listed With Hodges:

You get action — you receive results — historically Hodges listing receive "Special Attention." Rex L. Hodges has 47 years of experience.

It's No Secret — Hodges Needs Your Listing:

OUR SALESPERSONS SET A 47 YEAR RECORD —
IN MARCH Rex L. Hodges Realty SOLD OVER $12,000,000 (Twelve Million!)

Your Home Will Get Attention:

You better believe it will be advertised — Your home will be held open if you wish. And furthermore, your property will receive special multiple listing activity. Ask for Hodges Free Evaluation . . .

In Memoriam 30

IN Memory of Steve - April 27, 1974
I see a small red haired boy who barely turned a man when he marched off to a useless war I still can see him yes I can Flowers placed on a hillside, neath the gently swaying trees
And though it says he's buried there - I know he's here with me.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

LEE LIVINGSTON

The opening of Lee Livingston Realty was a great thrill in what for Lee has been a very happy career in sales.

For over twenty years he sold industrial equipment starting with the Star Machinery Co. in Seattle, and later with the DeVilbiss Co. headquartered in Toledo, Ohio. His various territory assignments have included most of the West Coast and Alaska. About five years ago, after some extended trips through the South Pacific, Lee decided to "settle down" and call Long Beach home. Real Estate seemed to offer the opportunity to continue in sales without too much traveling. It has met all his expectations.

While Lee has enjoyed success in sales, some of his greatest satisfaction has come from his work with the Long Beach Board of Realtors, the Chamber of Commerce and the California Real Estate Association. Besides the pleasure of the company of the many fine people he's met in these organizations, Lee spends a little spare time with shooting hobbies. He maintains an active interest in national defense through a membership in the American Ordnance Association.

SALES
WAKE UP!
It should be obvious that there are only 2 ways to make any real money in California, go into business for yourself or take a commission sales position.
I am talking about a full time professional sales career with the oldest and largest International Organization of its kind in existence. I am talking about an opportunity to build a consistently growing income which is based on that ability of yours you have been dying to use. Benefits include pension plan, free life insurance plan, major health insurance and personal as well as professional growth.
This could be "THAT" opportunity to break into sales which you have often thought about.
We furnish a complete training program. Sales experience not necessary; some of our most successful people have no background in sales.

Divider wall adds storage

Enhancing an open feeling of shared space while separating living areas is the special charm of a well-designed divider wall in an open-plan house.

And when the divider also serves as a storage wall with display shelves, it's easy to understand why one family is so pleased with the family-living room wing of their high-ceiling house.

The entry hallway opens on the family room, sunken one step from the floor level and surrounded by a three-foot-high railing. The bottom half is solid, faced with vertical cedar boards. The top open half of vertical 2x2s spaced a foot apart supports a milled rail.

The divider wall runs through the length of the combination room, tying in visually with the large laminated wood center beam supporting the ceiling.

The cabinet top counter is used for display and for serving hors d'oeuvres or a buffet when entertaining informally.

The upper part of the divider wall is divided into five sections, with three shelves of western pine boards in the two sections at the ends. The center section has built-in cabinets for a tape deck and record changer, and two shelves above.

The back of the divider facing the living room is used as a gallery wall. In other homes the shelves could be open to both rooms and the cabinets could have doors on both sides.

The walls of the rooms are paneled with vertical 1x6-inch V-groove boards, accenting the height of the rooms. Paintings near the top of the living room wall can be enjoyed in the family room as well.

America founded on do-it-yourself

Our forefathers called it "old fashioned self-reliancec" today we call it "do-it-yourself."

Whatever its name, an increasing number of modern day Americans, forced by mounting inflation, rising repair costs and tightening energy supplies, are returning to the values of early Americans who did just about everything themselves for their homes and families.

The Hand Tools Institute points out that the spirit of independence on which our nation was founded was sparked by the self-sufficient householder of that day who not only could perform each job but intimately knew each tool required for the task.

According to HTI it was the practice for most of this country's early settlers to make their own tools, inscribe them with the family name and proudly hand them down from generation to generation. These hand-fashioned tools were such an intimate part of the early craftsman's daily life that many were given familiar first names.

Most of the tools of that day were used to work with wood — axes, adzes, chisels and mallets were among the most common. The use of iron nails (squared) and hammers was not as popular because of the penchant of early settlers to use wooden nails or pegs.

Today's self-reliant handyman with a wider range of materials to work with also has a broader variety of hand tools to help him perform his various household tasks. To help him do these jobs better and safer the Hand Tools Institute has issued some safety guidelines for the use of both striking and struck tools.

First — wear safety goggles while hammering. This is especially important for such jobs as pounding nails into concrete, chipping masonry, splitting bricks and striking chisels.

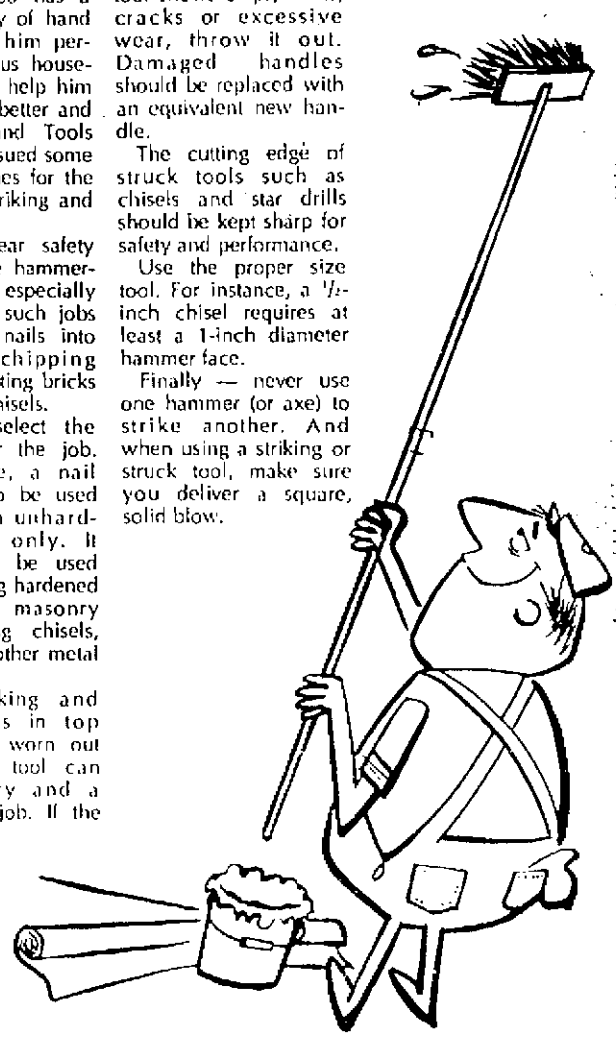

Next — select the right tool for the job. For example, a nail hammer is to be used for common unhardened nails only. It should never be used for hammering hardened concrete or masonry nails, striking chisels, star drills or other metal products.

Keep striking and struck tools in top condition. A worn out or damaged tool can cause injury and a botched up job. If the tool shows chips, dents, cracks or excessive wear, throw it out. Damaged handles should be replaced with an equivalent new handle.

The cutting edge of struck tools such as chisels and star drills should be kept sharp for safety and performance.

Use the proper size tool. For instance, a ½-inch chisel requires at least a 1-inch diameter hammer face.

Finally — never use one hammer (or axe) to strike another. And when using a striking or struck tool, make sure you deliver a square, solid blow.

Check on building codes

Before beginning any remodeling or building on your property, check with Department of Building and Safety at your local City Building. Each community has strict codes and it's better to check before you begin than to complete a project and find that you have violated a local building code.

This includes installing patios, changing doors, roof a patio, fencing etc.

Wall holds home office

It's amazing how easily 18 inches of unused floor space running eight to ten feet along the wall of the family room can become a home office and library, with desk, cabinets and shelves.

One couple had a blank wall between a free-standing fireplace in one corner and built-in cabinets in the other corner, and decided to put this family room space to better use.

First, they paneled the wall with 6-inch western cedar boards to provide a more interesting backdrop for the new built-ins.

Cabinet units with drawers on one side and storage on the other were built onto the wall, with a 30-inch desk-space between. This provides a convenient place for correspondence and family records, and doubles as a serving counter for informal buffets.

Above the counter top is a slanting shelf for magazines and large books, made from a 1x12-inch board with a strip of wood molding along the bottom for a stop.

Four more shelves of 1x8-inch Douglas fir were added above the magazine shelf, for books, house plants and other items.

In homes with large bedrooms, a similar installation would utilize wall space more efficiently. Or the same idea can be adapted to a sewing center, with a fold-away sewing machine replacing the desk area. Cabinets can be built onto the wall instead of shelves.

Another variation can be used in children's rooms for a study-storage area. When two youngsters share a room, one wall can be used, with a divider of bookshelves separating the two desk areas.

Pool needs a shady spot - - -

Swimming pools, even modest above-ground models surrounded by wood decks, provide pleasant places to entertain family and friends.

But every pool needs a cooling off spot, a tree or other shady nook, where swimmers can escape from the hot sun.

A simple pavilion is all that's needed, and it can be built with a post-and-beam framework of western wood. The roof and sides can be spaced 2x5s to give shade without trapping heat.

A deck of 2x4s, around the pool, slightly spaced and elevated to allow air to pass through, provides a cooler surface to stretch out on and dry off.

Suitable woods for deck and pavilion construction include fir, pine and western cedar.

Wood walls warm bath

Despite the utilitarian nature of a bathroom, there's no need to neglect it in the over-all decorating scheme when building or remodeling a house.

A bathroom should have a look of freshness and light, but adding a lot of frills usually will result in a cluttered rather than a pleasant appearance.

The walls and ceiling are the background for any successful decorating project and are especially important in a smaller, confined area such as a bathroom.

Rough-sawn 1x6-inch lumber paneling added warm tones, a rich texture and a contemporary look to the walls and ceiling of the master bath in this Southland family's home.

The boards were installed vertically on the walls to accent the sloping, higher than ordinary ceiling, and were finished only with a water-repellent coating.

Paired fir 2x12-inch ceiling beams and the window frames, both stained dark, add accent to the walls. One window, set high on the end wall, is sloped along the top edge, following the ceiling line.

Cabinets framed in along one wall provide ample storage for towels and other supplies, and is topped by a full-length plastic laminate counter.

White-frosted globe lights flanking a large mirror above the lavatory and the stark white counter top offer contrast to the warm, natural colors of the wood walls and ceiling.

Wallcovering of ribbons 'n ruffles

Ribbons and ruffles, and as a color scheme pink/green/yellow/white — what more could a little girl ask for a room of her own. No matter that it's small and under the eaves, and furnished with items from elsewhere, this is a "fun" room starting with the vinyl wallcovering — "It's Raining Violets". Painted headboard and nightstand match its shocking pink accents, repeated its touches of mint green in bedspread and pillows, and its sunny yellow in pillows, too. Wicker chair is painted white to match the hang-it-yourself vinyls ground color, and carpet is green.

Planks are perfect as kitchens go rural

The modern kitchen goes country.

The current movement is prompted as much by the need to find more living space in present homes (rather than searching for newer, larger, more expensive houses) as it is by the rage for nostalgia and back-to-the-earth trends.

And with the rural decor comes the adaptability of the old farm kitchen that was used for family room, dining room, study and general workshop.

A freer approach to design and layout are allowed by the multi-purpose nature of the kitchen, the mobility of modern appliances and flexibility of decorating materials, says Judy Johnson, home improvement director of Marlite paneling.

This reprieve from the confinement of the basic triangle layout of range — sink — refrigerator may result in some peculiarly-shaped and placed stretches of wall: strips between doors, areas behind moveable larger appliances, doors fronting hideaways, and facings for work isles.

These are perfect places for planks, says Ms. Johnson. She suggests using Marlite prefinished planks that present the desired rustic atmosphere as well as the needed durability and cleaning ease.

For those who like a textured look, there are the designs with special deep embossing in hardboard that capture the subtle detail of simulated woodgrain finishes. Measuring a convenient-to-work with 16-inches x 8-feet x 1/4-inch, they also are surface-scored for a natural random plank effect in Barnside and Weatherboard patterns.

Like all Marlite planks, the textured designs are tongued-and-grooved for ease of installation.

Colors in the Marlite plank line range from the satiny deep browns of Persian walnut design to the lighter tones of the textured Chapel Oak design and Light Wormy Chestnut.

Between is an array of textures and tones from Brown and Gray Barnside to the smooth off-whites of Frost Wood and Swedish Cherry.

Ten-foot planks, ideal for older homes with higher ceilings, also come in the deep woodgrain finishes of the new Bolero Rosewood design and the free-form Antique Gold, severe Polar White and rich Gold Lace designs.

Paneling should please eye

Most satisfactory way to select cedar lumber to panel an accent wall is to do so personally at the lumber yard.

Choices vary widely, between clear and tight-knot grades, smooth surfaced and sawtextured, flush joint and patterned.

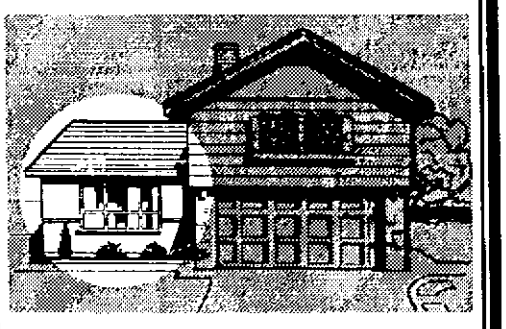

Bevel and channel rustic styles are widely used for interiors.

Trouble-saving tips on painting

Painting can be fun and easy or it can be a miserable mess, depending on how it is done. So before you start slinging paint around your apartment, here are some trouble-saving tips many other painters have picked up the hard way.

If you are painting finished furniture or woodwork, nothing beats a good overall sanding. If you are lazy, sand the parts that get the most wear. Then wash the whole thing with "liquid sander" to take off wax, dirt and grease and soften old paint so the surface is more receptive.

Always mask off woodwork when you paint walls or the floor when painting woodwork with a roll of inexpensive masking paper with one sticky edge. When you mask off a project, remove the tape while the paint is still wet; you'll get a smoother line.

Remove all knobs, hinges, and other hardware in preparation for painting furniture. Wood knobs are easier to paint if you put the screw back in part way and hold the knob like a popsicle; or set the knob on the neck of a pop bottle and spray paint. You'll save time and do a better job. If you are painting furniture with legs, drive a short nail in the bottom of each to boost them off the floor, so they won't stick to newspaper or whatever you use to catch drips. Place legless cabinets, chests, and the like on old magazines or wood blocks for the same reason.

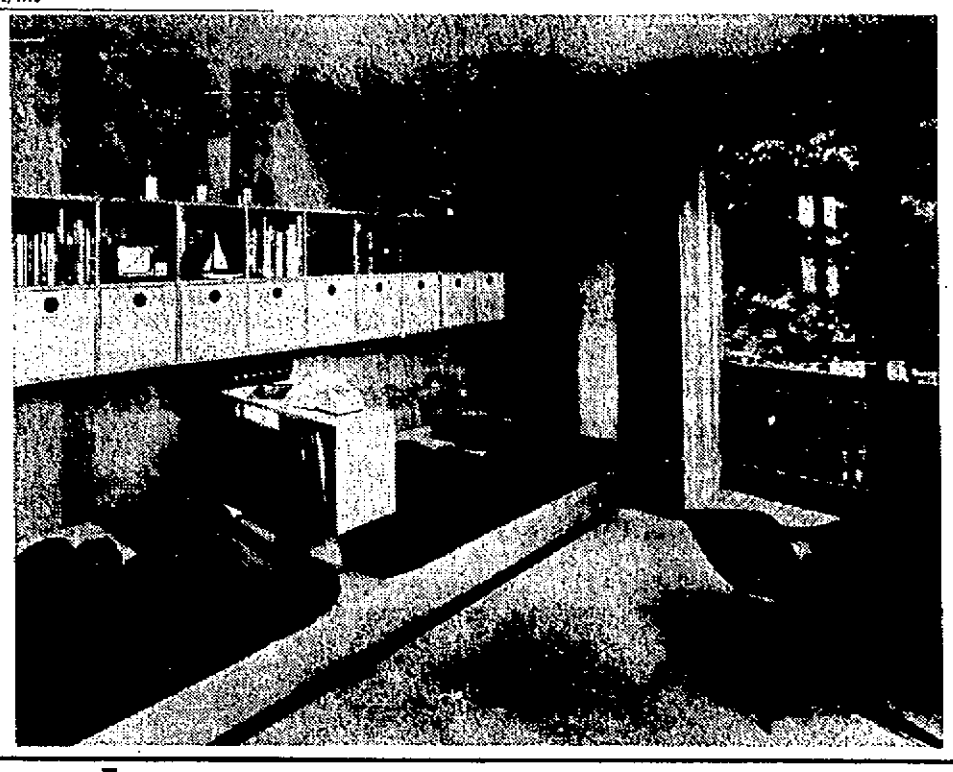

When you open a can of paint, punch several holes in the groove the lid fits into. The paint slopped into the groove will run back into the can. When you put the lid on, it will seal against the side of the groove. At the end of a job — before you start tapping the lid on with a hammer — drop an old rag over the can so you won't splash paint all over yourself. Smaller cans seal best if you set them flat on the floor and step on the top. To keep paint from drying out in storage, invert the can once to seal around the lid.

When painting, submerge your brush bristles only about a third into the paint, and the brush will be easier to clean later. Buy good quality brushes and take care of them. Don't bother with cheap ones; the bristles come out and they don't carry enough paint from the can to adequately do the job.

Cheap paint thinner or mineral spirits clean as well as turpentine and cost less. Of course, if you are using water-based paint, plain water or soap and water will probably do the job. It's not necessary to clean your brush between coats of enamel — just put a tablespoon of thinner in a plastic bag, stick the brush in, and tape the bag tightly around the brush handle.

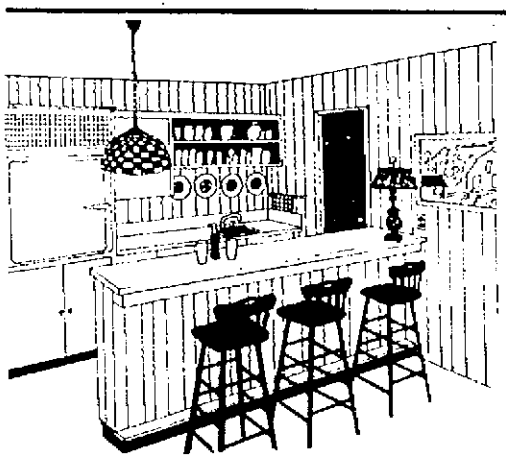

Spray paint is handy for small projects, but because it's thin, plan to apply several light coats. If you use more than one can, try using only one nozzle so you will have a clean one for the next job. In fact, it pays to hoard clean spray can nozzles — it's nice to have spare ones on hand because they clog easily.

Most competing brands of spray paint aren't compatible, so if you are going to paint something with several colors, buy them all in the same brand. It's disheartening to see paint wrinkle and come off where colors overlap.

Redwood room is rugged for teenager

Easy-to-install 1 6 redwood paneling provides an attractive, rugged and durable interior for this teenager's room. Built-in redwood shelves and storage units encourage the youngster to keep the room in order. For other ideas , send for an informative full-color booklet, "Redwood Interiors," by sending 35 cents to Interior Booklet, California Redwood Association, 617 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Calif. 94111. The booklet contains photographs of paneling applications along with installation tips and finish recommendations.

Snack center cuts snarl in kitchen

Diverting traffic from a busy kitchen at meal preparation times is just one of the bonus features of a refreshment center built into the corner of a family room.

Hungry children coming home from school can be shunted off to fix their own snacks, and the area can be used to serve refreshments before dinner parties.

One family incorporated a handsome, convenient serving counter that faces a wall with built-in cabinets, a small refrigerator and a work counter with sink.

The built-ins fit along an end wall of the family room, with cabinet doors fabricated of the same 1x6-inch western pine board paneling that covers the walls.

The half-sized refrigerator, framed in at counter height for easy access, holds soft drinks, milk, fruit and other snack items for the youngsters, and mixes, ice and hors d'oeuvres for entertaining.

The counter extending out from the adjoining wall is framed with 2x4-inch western lumber, is faced with the board paneling and has a top of laminated plastic for easy cleaning.

Tall wood counter stools, the kind children seem to like, were purchased unfinished and painted a lively color to complement the counter top and other furnishings.

The refreshment center also provides a pleasant gathering area and cuts down on the usual throng that collects in the kitchen before dinner parties.

The wood paneling is finished only with a coat of sealer, to retain the natural color and grain textures. If the paneling is rough-sawn, a semi-transparent stain is recommended.

Paint color selection can save energy

Our Colonial fathers were knowledgeable in many areas other than how to throw tea into Boston harbor or draw up the Declaration of Independence. For instance, they certainly were aware of what they were doing when they applied dark colors to their homes, particularly in the northern colonies.

"Colonial colors" were mostly of deep tones and they tended to absorb far more heat than lighter tones. And in homes largely heated by fireplaces, heat conservation was paramount.

By the beginning of the 18th century, the Colonists began to move away from their log cabins and were building "salt box houses" and "Cape Codders." At first, they painted these structures only on the interior but gradually exterior paints were applied.

One of the first colors to appear in the colonies was blue. A green was made of unscorched pulverized coffee and egg white. Next appeared deep golds, browns, brick reds, black and bronzes.

As the nation approaches its Bicentennial, shoulder to shoulder with a continuing energy problem, local Fuller-O'Brien paint dealers are offering a palette of "Colonial colors" after the pattern set by our forefathers.

The colonists had little risk of paint peeling, but many modern homeowners with tightly sealed homes will encounter this peeling problem, a condition in which the paint becomes detached and raises up to form blisters or bubbles. This generally results because a "house has to breathe."

Most paint, particularly flat paint, will permit moisture to pass through. A heavy build-up, however, will act as a barrier. Moisture that is trapped in the siding under the paint film and then heated by the sun, turns to vapor which forces paint blistering.

If blistering is minimal, scrape all loosely adhering paint down to the surface, spot prime and re-coat.

Geometrics and supergraphics create a dashing room with very simple ingredients. Rectangles, circles and criss-cross slashes inter-act in this lively room.

Dramatic room on a budget

After a grocery shopping expedition, it doesn't seem as though there's much of the household budget left over to do anything about the house — at least for most of us. All is not as bleak as it seems, however. It's possible to live well and eat satisfactoryily, too.

The trick is to know how to do it! One of the solutions to this problem is the larger selection of good-looking modestly-priced furnishings being shown in stores now. The day of having to spend a fortune to furnish a home nicely is over. Today, more and more manufacturers have gotten the message that there are plenty of people with taste who aren't living in mansions.

Being a smart shopper is always part of the secret of making your money buy more. Don't just settle for what's immediately available. Look around. Comparison shop. Ask questions, particularly about quality. For example, such great things have been done with man-made materials that furniture with plastics are equal to and often superior to more costly wood pieces. Frequently, you can't even tell the difference by sight or feel, the furniture finishes reproduce the look and texture of wood or leather graining so perfectly — and the cost is considerably less.

Bright color and strong design is another device used by the knowing that can substitute for elaborate furnishings in designing a room with flair.

In the room shown, created by designer Peggy Walker for a family with a child away at school, the idea was to make a room that could serve equally well for a guest room or a retreat when the youngster returned for vacation. The furniture selected was simple, moderately priced and extremely practical. Drama was created with color and geometric forms.

The bedspread with its gold, brown, black and white polka dots on a bright royal blue background sets the color scheme.

Since the room was small-scaled, night stands were chosen rather than a single large dresser and, for greater impact were used in tandem rather than on either side of the bed in the conventional manner. Thus, they provide drama and ample short-term storage needs in a very limited space.

The rug is an all wool shag rug made in Denmark from designs created here especially to blend with American furnishings. It's white criss-cross motifs on a brown ground are a perfect geometric foil for the circular designs on the spread. A new young firm, Concepts International's design philosophy is based on the conviction that there are a lot of us with more taste than money and their prices for long wearing natural wool rugs are moderate.

The room is given its special eclat with the final touch — the circular designs in royal blue painted on the gold wall, echoing the motifs on the spread. For a touch of whimsy, the two dogs were cut out of a poster and mounted with wallpaper paste.

Bright pillows in blue, black, brown, gold and white reiterate the color notes.

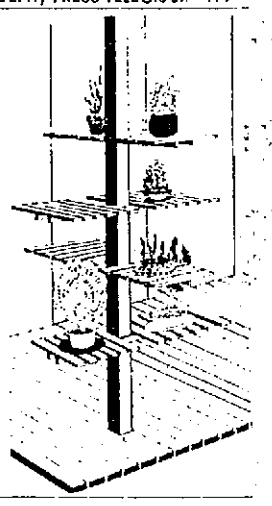

The total retail cost of re-doing this room was about $350 excluding the paint and the chair which the owners already had. All of the merchandise is readily available in department and specialty stores. It only takes some looking and a bit of doing and you, too, can have a room with drama.

Greenery

Greenery — hanging plants or potted arrangements for desk or floor — brings new life to a room.

To achieve their maximum decorative effect, it's important to give plants a natural background.

Post platforms add patio color

Posts of 4x4-inch wood are commonly used to support patio covers, trellises along the front of a house and arbors or other yard structures.

But the posts also can double as supports for pots of flowers or other plants. One idea is to nail 24-inch, 1x2 slats on edge to opposite sides of the post, then nail on platforms of spaced 1x2s on each side.

By alternating these platforms on the post up to about eye level, a variety of plants in different sizes can be displayed.

Stairs link living areas

Idle rooms and unimproved floor space are fast disappearing in homes as families beat the high cost of moving by remodeling attics, basements or garages into new bedrooms or leisure areas.

One of the more creative renovations visited recently began with knocking out the wall at the front entry and adding a new living room at the front of the house. More interesting, however, is the new party room and how to get there.

Originally, the only way to the unfinished room was down the back stairs behind the kitchen and through the basement laundry room. All right for family, maybe, but not too good for entertaining.

So the couple cut a round hole 5½ feet across in the middle of the floor between the new living room and the family room-dining area. Then they dug a rectangular hole alongside the basement room, so they wouldn't take away any floor space.

This rectangular stairwell was bricked in and faced with cedar shingles left over from the living room addition. The shingles blend handsomely with the cedar board paneling on the walls of the new living room and party room.

A railing of metal rods and wood rails was added around the stairwell in the entryway for safety. A welder friend fabricated the circular stairs following the couple's design.

The stairs were brought in in sections and welded in place. The steps are iron frames with wood pieces cut to fit and set in. The treads are covered with carpeting that is removable for cleaning or replacing.

Carpeting, white paint and the cedar paneling add brightness and color hardly imaginable before the renovation began. And the new stairs make it easy for an overflow of friends to move downstairs into the new party room.

New titles added to "Home Pro" guides

Four new books in 3M Company's "Home Pro" series of how-to guides are now available for bicyclists, gardeners and handymen.

The soft-cover volumes, ranging in length from 172 to 188 pages, are:

- "The Home Pro Guide to Roof and Gutter Installation and Repair," which tells how to make roofing preparations, install new roofing, make roof repairs and install gutters;
- "The Home Pro Guide to Carpentry," which gives guidelines for basic carpentry as well as directions for making frames for floors, walls, ceilings and roofs, installing windows and doors, and adding a room or wing to an existing structure;
- "The Home Pro Guide to Bicycle Repair and Maintenance," which includes maintenance charts as well as procedures for everything from adjusting a seat to removing and installing a derailleur;
- "The Home Pro Guide to Vegetable Gardening and Food Preserving," which covers every step from planning a food garden to freezing, canning, drying and storing vegetables.

All "Home Pro" volumes contain step-by-step illustrations, keyed by number to text on the same page. Language easily understood by do-it-yourselfers is used throughout, and the guides have been use-tested to make sure they contain all information needed by a novice to complete the projects outlined.

The four new volumes bring the "Home Pro" library to 14 titles.

The "Home Pro" books are available at home improvement stores, nurseries and other retail outlets.

Sewing hideaway

A complete sewing center and cabinets can be built in behind louver wood doors on a bedroom wall.

Take home safety precautions

Winter or summer, the home accident is always with us. A check of potential danger spots and a review of safety rules is in order.

1. WINDOWS. Window shade cords or venetian blind cords are always tempting to young children. They should be kept out of reach as much as possible. For greater peace of mind consider custom aluminum, thin louvered window blinds.

2. HALLS AND STAIRWAYS. Are these well lighted? Are halls free of wall fixtures and shelving? Is stair carpeting tacked properly?

3. STORAGE AREAS. Attics should be free of old clothes, magazines, oily rags, paints, kerosene, etc. These are highly inflammable.

4. GARAGE. Do not store insecticides, lye, weed killers or other poisons here, except in locked cabinets. Never leave car motor running in closed garage.

5. KITCHENS. Don't overload electric circuits with appliances. Keep household cleansers out of children's reach. Mop up slippery floors and don't overwax. Watch out for grease fires. Keep carbon dioxide extinguisher or baking soda handy for putting out such fires — not water.

6. LIVING ROOM. Screen fireplace completely when in use. Make sure scatter rugs are secure. Use deep ash trays to prevent spilling.

Family room can enrich your living

As a family grows, both in numbers and in the ages of younger members, more living space is needed for expanded activities and to allow parents and children to spread out.

Well-planned additions and remodelings not only add space, but also can increase the efficiency of the original house, add to its total livability and give the house a new face.

Our family accomplished all this and more by converting the carport of a well-done builder house into a master suite of bedroom, dressing room and bath, and by adding a family room at the front of the house.

The new family room includes a conversation-lounging-television area gathered around a free-standing fireplace. An exposed aggregate hearth surrounding the fireplace matches material used for the entry and walkway.

Fir ceiling decking and heavy fir beams that extend past the walls as overhangs for the walkway, and a large window wall visually blend the comfortable family room with the newly landscaped entry garden.

A sitting deck, large planter box and tall fences of vertical 2x2-inch western wood were added along with evergreen plantings.

The original exterior wall of the kitchen was removed when the new family room was added, for free flow of space between the two rooms.

Western cedar board paneling applied horizontally to the walls of the family room and adjoining breakfast nook enhances the open mood, and adds color and texture to the walls.

Tips on choosing a family sink

Many families that feel they cannot move into a new home at the present time are remodeling their old ones. A favorite place to remodel is the kitchen.

If your family belongs to this group, be sure to choose your sink carefully. Time was when a sink was a plain "bowl" with drainboards and storage space beneath. Now it comes equipped with all the accessories that a true food preparation and cleanup center should have. Here's what's available according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau:

1. Two or three-bowl sinks to multiply convenience.

2. Electric food waste disposers connected to the drain and installed beneath the sink. They operate at the flick of a wall switch.

3. Electric dishwashers that are many-cycled to handle all types of cooking equipment and dishes, including delicate stemware.

4. Faucets that are single-handle, push-pull or dial. Separate models for hot and cold water also are, of course, available. Faucets come equipped with aerators to reduce splashing as well as the amount of water needed because millions of air bubbles are introduced into the stream.

5. Sprays with flexible metal hose.

6. Hot water dispensers for instant drinks.

7. Ice-makers.

8. Dispensers for liquid soap, detergent or hand lotion.

9. Integral lighting.

The best location for a sink is under a window for natural light and a view. Most sinks are installed 36 inches from the floor to suit the average woman, who's said to be 5'4" tall. Make sure your sink is installed at the right height for you, to save you backaches and general fatigue.

—Garden workshop— in a redwood gazebo

Redwood garden shelter makes an attractive outdoor party room that can serve many practical uses. Serving counter for summer buffets can convert to a convenient gardening work surface.

Do-it-yourselfers will be digging into more home gardening projects this spring than ever before. For green thumbing or outdoor living in general, a redwood garden shelter can make a graceful and practical multi-purpose outdoor room in your backyard.

This year you can design and build your own shelter with garden grades of redwood for much less than you think. These knot and sapwood-containing grades — Construction Heart, Construction Common, and Merchantable — have the weatherability and stability of more expensive clear grades, with a rustic texture ideal for a garden shelter.

You can design a redwood garden shelter to do whatever you want it to. It can be a practical potting and planting center as well as an outdoor party room or secluded retreat.

You can build shelves, cabinets, and cupboards for folding lawn chairs, bench cushions, and garden party knick-knacks. These spaces can also store long-handled garden tools, power tools, a lawnmower, garbage cans, and hoses. A serving counter for summer buffets can convert to a convenient gardening work surface.

As extra storage space or a poolside service room, a shelter can frame a view or screen out too-close neighbors, show off favorite plants, or give a garden a new focus. Some garden layouts suggest other redwood structures, for example, a trellis or colonnade that can be used as a shaded walkway or entry.

Depending on your skill and needs, you can build a redwood garden shelter with simple post and beam construction, or design a more complicated structure. You should also think about where to put your shelter. Do you want to use it to catch or escape from the sun — and wind — or let in some sunlight for potted plants?

Different roof materials can control light and blend uniquely with your garden. Shingles, shakes, reed fencing, bamboo, window screening, lath, louvers, canvas, glass, or plastic can be simply nailed on. Perhaps you want removable roof members attached to a framework fastened to the rafters in sections, or eggcrate blocking covered with canvas or matting.

Where do you want water outlets, or electrical outlets for lanterns and power tools? Cabinets can be designed especially for long-handled tools, or with shelves for small tools. You can plan to store your lawnmower in a ground-level cupboard that lets you roll it straight in.

Your gardening counter can be high enough to fit garbage cans underneath. A sliding door on children's wagon wheels to enclose your workshop can be locked.

Decay and insect resistant Construction Heart grade redwood is recommended for posts, retaining walls, planters, steps, greenhouse framing, and shelves subject to periodic moisture, on, in, or within six inches of the ground.

Less known but most economical for decking, fence boards, trellises, and benches above ground are Construction Common and Merchantable grades. These contain knots (as does Construction Heart) and cream-colored flashes of sapwood that blend naturally with a garden, but should not be used in actual ground contact.

For cabinet doors requiring close fit, you can use Clear (knotless) grades, available Certified Kiln Dried.

In building a redwood garden shelter, you'll find that aluminum alloy nails and non-corrosive fastenings far outlast plain iron, steel, or cement-coated nails in outdoor use. Nails galvanized by other than the hot-dip process deteriorate, leaving black marks on the wood, and lose holding power. Top quality hardware may cost extra but its performance is worth it.

Redwood's pink to cinnamon brown colors blend and weather without finishes to a bleached gray. However, redwood also holds finishes and paint better than most woods, eliminating many maintenance problems.

Redwood has low density, high dimensional stability, and high resistance to checking.

Available in smooth-planed or rough resawn textures, its long straight grain and long board lengths make it easy to work with and it contains no pitch.

Where, how to buy material

Once you decide to build a redwood garden shelter, pay a visit to your local lumber dealer. He'll help you decide what grades and sizes of redwood you'll need, and perhaps give you some construction tips. Ask for economical garden grades of redwood, and keep in mind that heartwood grades must be used for any application in or on the ground.

Check the thicknesses, widths and lengths of your lumber. Widths and thicknesses are slightly less than nominal sizes because lumber is reduced when planed in the mill. Lengths are often longer than nominal.

Lumber purchases for a good-sized project need careful planning, and as with any large home project, allow two to three weeks from order to delivery time.

Remember that top quality nails and hardware may cost extra, but they far outlast cheaper materials. Your dealer can also give advice on brands and applications of finishes for your shelter, such as water repellents, stains, or paint.

This gardening workshop built of garden grades of redwood includes special cupboards for long-handled tools, shelves for pots and small tools, and a work surface under which garbage cans fit.

A compact do-it-yourself redwood gardening center has a convenient work counter and cabinets for gardening and power tools, garbage cans, hoses, fertilizer. A sliding door on children's wagon wheels completely encloses and locks work and storage areas.

Exterior decorating? Start at top

If sprucing up the house exterior tops your list of improvements this year, it's a good idea to start at the top, especially if replacing the roof is involved.

In metropolitan and suburban areas where lots are often smaller and homes located close together, the roof's height, size, color and material are the design element that give the entire house its character and appeal.

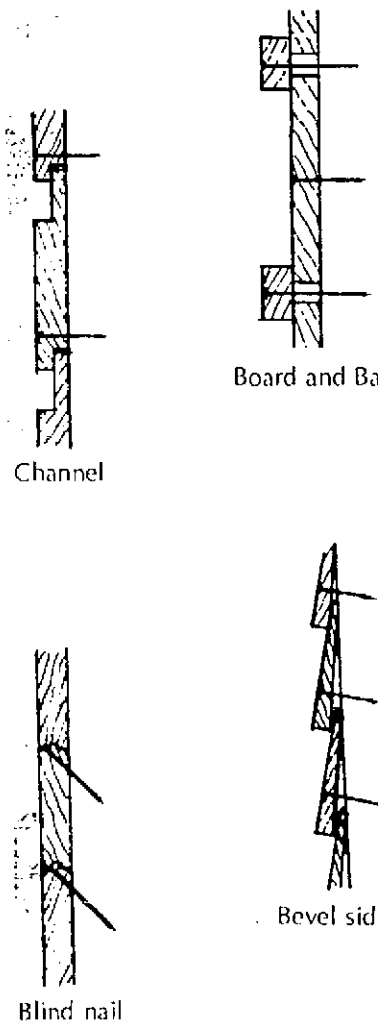

Unlike the siding, which can be repainted periodically, the roof color you decide on is likely to be around for a good many years. Heavy-textured asphalt shingles, for instance, are designed for long life, in many cases up to 25 years. Choosing the roof color first, therefore, becomes the prime rule in exterior design.

Dark colored shingles are popular for expansive roofs with a variety of planes and setbacks because they serve to bring all the elements together cohesively.

A light colored roof on the other hand tends to make a short house appear longer.

Asphalt shingles offer the homeowner virtually unlimited opportunities in avoiding lackluster roofing due to the availability of numerous colors, blends and textures. Earthtone shades of brown, green and slate are growing in popularity. These low-maintenance, durable asphalt shingles help relate the exterior of a home with its environment. Random butts and deep textures also create attractive shadow lines that give a roof a rugged three-dimensional appearance.

Nailing care helps siding

Sawn wood siding will resist rain and sun as much as decades longer if properly fastened in the first place.

Nailing patterns must allow for wood's natural shrinking and swelling when exposed to alternating damp and dry conditions according to experts of the Western Red Cedar Lumber Association.

Movement is slight, but if fastenings interfere splitting or buckling can result. Siding lumber is shaped to overlap, so that normal size changes won't hinder its ability to shed rain.

For bevel siding applied horizontally, the most popular style, only one nail is driven in each piece at each vertical stud. It's located slightly more than an inch above the butt edge, high enough to clear the thin upper edge of the board lapped under it.

Board and batten siding is nailed at centers of both pieces which permits their widths to change freely. This style is suitable for vertical use only.

Flush-joint, tongue-and-groove siding, preferably a vertical type, can be blind nailed along the tongue edge, for boards up to nominal six inches in width. If wider, boards should be face-nailed with two nails at each bearing.

Dull saw chain can do a lot of harm

Ever try cutting a steak with only a butter knife or using a power drill that has no bit ... or a stapler devoid of staples?

A chain saw with a dull chain is practically as useless — and even worse — it can damage various components.

This is the important point for a growing number of homeowners who are purchasing chain saws to cut firewood and to take the backbreak out of many home improvement projects.

Step No. 1 is basic advice on how to take care of a new chain saw since it represents a serious investment. Above all, don't let the cutting edge, known as the saw chain, get dull. It is the worst thing a chain saw owner can do.

Aside from failing to cut wood adequately, a dull chain also puts an extra load on the engine itself.

Because of the added load, the saw's effective horsepower will be reduced and fuel required to do the job will be increased. In addition, a dull chain will cause overheating and can shorten the life of the guidebar and other components.

Cutting can also become an impossible task with a dull chain. It is difficult to maintain a straight cut when a chain is uneven, and it naturally takes a longer time to cut through wood. Increased effort is required since the operator also has a harder time cutting when the chain is dull.

A saw chain should be filed sharp at the first signs of dullness. However, it is important to remember that length of chain service is reduced with each filing. Filing instructions are often contained in the owner's manual.

Fence stows garden gear

For some it's just a chore, but for many others gardening is a pleasant hobby or a retirement pastime that gives them healthy outdoor exercise along with the joy of seeing their handiwork sprout and grow.

Adding to this joy, or easing the chore, is a storage unit that keeps tools and supplies close at hand and quickly located for each outing.

One well-organized but unobtrusive idea is a storage fence, called the "Stow-it-All" by its designers because there's a place for everything.

On the neighbor's side, it looks like no more than a handsome, horizontal board fence, but on the builder's side, in three-foot modules, it can hold a mower, spreader, shovels, rakes, bags of peat moss and fertilizer, chemicals, small tools and other supplies.

Added modules will hold deck furniture, large barbecues, fireplace wood, snow tires and outdoor sports equipment. Regular fencing continues from either side, enclosing the yard for privacy.

Building the "Stow-it-All" takes little more skill than for a regular fence, with the addition of a roof and doors required. The only tools needed are a shovel, saw, hammer, square and carpenter's level.

The fence is built of 1x8-inch fir or pine boards on 4x4-inch fir or cedar posts. The portion of the posts that will be in continual contact with the ground should be preservative-treated.

The doors are built with the same boards, on an inside box-frame of 1x4s, so the doors and end wall appear as a continuation of the fence. The roof is so the doors and end wall appear as a contuation of the fence. The roof is built-up roofing over 1x8 boards, with metal flashing and sloped for drainage.

Install bathroom in wasted space

In one-bath families, there's probably more bickering about who gets to use the bathroom during morning and evening "rush" hours than there is about which TV program to watch.

Such quarrels get everybody off to a bad start in the morning, the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau notes.

They're also a bad way to close the day — particularly since family members often go to their separate ways in the evening and don't see each other again until morning, when the whole thing starts over again.

If yours is a one-bath house, you might consider adding a full bath or using "wasted" space to install one or more "compact" baths.

Areas to consider include:

1. Your attic
2. A part of the utility room
3. A large closet
4. An old pantry
5. Under the stairs
6. A corner of your family room
7. A section of the garage

Many areas, such as the utility room, often already have plumbing in or near them, thereby simplifying the installation of a bathroom.

Fixtures for compact bathrooms come in the standard colors and styles of many manufacturers.

'Shorts'

When buying lumber for small projects, ask the dealer for "shorts" and save the cost of cutting from a long piece.

Forests hard at work to help remodelers

Doing the best with what you have could be called a principle of home improvement — and of good forest management.

Wood is an essential building material in the burgeoning remodeling market. Lumber, plywood, particleboard, and countless other wood and paper products used in home construction and modernization account for about one-third of the 12 billion cubic feet of wood fiber used annually. In the next 20 years, the combined market demands of housing, paper and other wood-derivative products such as chemicals are expected to double. To help meet these needs, the forest products industries are managing forests for maximum timber production and working toward maximum utilization of wood fiber.

The American Forest Institute, information arm of the forest products industries, says giant strides have been made in fiber utilization in three important areas:

- In the forests, where improved harvesting machines and methods recover more of the tree and leave less waste on the forest floor.
- In the manufacturing plant, where waste has been dramatically reduced. Modern plants, on the average, use about 80% of the tree, with some mills achieving almost total utilization.
- In fiber recycling and recovery. For instance, about half the fiber used to manufacture paper comes from recycled paper and the residues of other wood product manufacturing processes.

The successful results of forest product technology and fiber utilization are evident in materials familiar to all home remodelers — particleboard, hardboard and plywood. Particleboard and hardboard are manufactured from small flakes and strands of wood fiber that are compressed and bonded together in panel form. In plywood manufacture, wood is peeled or sliced, and then reassembled.

While sophisticated harvesting and manufacturing methods are recovering more wood and making maximum use of available fiber, sound forestry practices are helping to grow more trees faster. These practices include fertilization, irrigation, protection against insects, tree diseases and wildfire, thinning overcrowded stands, and prompt reforestation.

Straightforward design, furnishings of family room give it versatility for casual activities, overflow of more formal entertaining.

Family room warm, versatile

Family rooms that look like afterthoughts furnished with collections of castoff furniture from other parts of the house seldom carry their weight or provide the full variety of living amenities possible.

Drawing up a list of all possible activities a new or remodeled family room will encompass offers an excellent guideline for built-ins and furnishings that will help provide this versatility.

One family added a room that is formal enough to graciously accomodate the overflow when entertaining, yet remains casually comfortable for family run with a minimum of maintenance.

Many family rooms are located adjacent to the kitchen, and this one has a pass-through for serving lunches, bridge parties or other entertaining. Folding wood shutters screen off the kitchen at other times.

Ceiling beams, solid board wall paneling and wood flooring with braided rugs add to the relaxed, warm feeling of the room.

The 1x6-inch tongue-and-groove paneling was finished with a white wipe-off stain which lightens the room while accenting the beautiful grain pattern and tones of the wood.

A family wood is a good location for a piano or organ, both for practicing and entertaining. This room has space for a piano along the wall between the kitchen pass-through and louvered wood doors leading to the den.

Cabinets built in on both sides of fireplace are topped with five shelves of 1x12-inch pine extending up to a 10-inch soffit along the ceiling.

Success of wallpaper project often in preparation work

What you do before you wallpaper may be even more important to the overall success of the project than the actual hanging.

In short, says Ron Foster, whose company manufacturers Golden Harvest wall covering adhesives, wall preparation is all-important.

"The walls must be properly prepared for the new wallcoverings. Shortcuts at this point only will cause trouble at the end," he adds.

Foster suggests that you wash painted walls with water to which soap powder and some household amonia have been added. After rinsing well, let the walls dry before filling any cracks with a spackling compound. Remember to sand the spackling evenly.

For best results, give the wall a coat of wall sizing. This acts as the first coat in preparing old or new surfaces for painting, calcimining or papering.

If there is a glossy paint or vinyl-coated paper on the walls, use sandpaper to dull and smooth it. For best results, however, remove all the old paper.

New plaster walls must be thoroughly cured and then coated with sizing.

Some common sense about ladders —

"One of the home repairman's best friends is the ladder, but if this helpful tool is not treated with respect, the do-it-yourselfer may find himself in trouble.

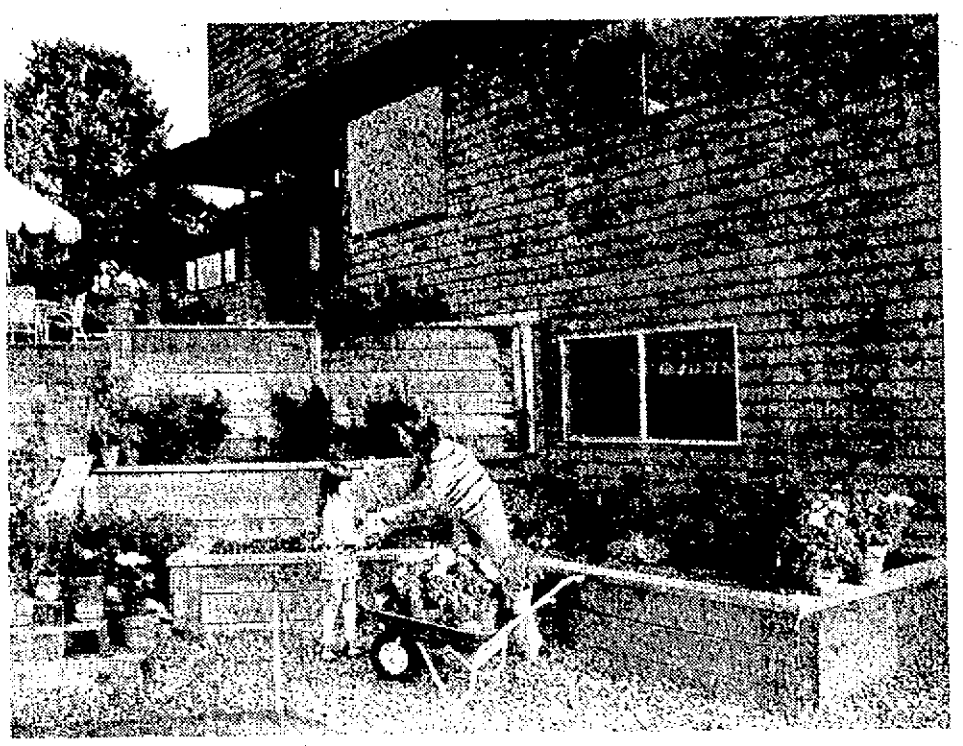

Alcan Aluminum Corporation reports that some common sense about ladder use can save steps and costly repair bills or medical bills.

Before using the ladder, make certain that it will support your weight. Lay it flat on the ground and walk on each rung. The weak rungs in a wooden ladder will show themselves in this safe way. If there are defects or cracks, perhaps it is time to invest in a new ladder.

Don't begin work on a windy day; a sharp gust of wind has been known to topple more than a man on a ladder. Choose a level, solid place to rest the feet of the ladder. If you place the feet of the ladder about one-fourth its length away from the wall, the angle will be relatively secure. Avoid placing the ladder near power lines or tree branches.

Before you carry your building materials to the top of the ladder, see that you have a resting place for them. Liquid materials in cans may be fitted with hooks so they can hang from rungs on the ladder. Tools should never be carried loosely in your pocket. Wear overalls with specially deep pockets for the tools you will need, or wear a special apron which has been designed to hold tools.

Also, never reach from the top of the ladder for anything. You may upset the delicate balance and fall. Just in case you do, or if you drop any tools, make certain that family and neighbors steer clear of the ladder while you are working.

Terrace planters ease slope

When you have a house built on a slope, you have a problem; how to landscape that steep yard.

The conventional approach is to ignore it, planting the side yards to lawn and hoping for the best. But grass doesn't flourish because sprinkler water mostly runs off.

A better handling of the steep slope is to grade it into terraces. The uppermost terrace, on the same level as the home's main floor, can be spacious and designed for outdoor living. The lowest terrace will be at the ground level.

Connecting top to bottom will be two or three narrow terraces, each just wide enough to be treated as an individual raised planting bed.

Terracing means moving earth and holding it in place with retaining walls. Much as that's tough work, the result can be enormously attractive, especially when wood is ssed for the retaining walls.

Stained a natural shade or allowed to weather, wood retaining walls easily blend into the landscape and allow plant materials to dominate the scene.

To some, the idea of using wood in direct contact with earth may be hard to believe. But it's not at all unusual. Wood that has been pressure-treated with preservatives is commonly used in such applications and for foundation sills and plates.

Lumber treated merely by dipping or soaking in preservative would not be recommended for retaining walls, however.

The difference is that, in pressure-treating, preservatives are forced into the wood under hydraulic pressure so that the chemicals thoroughly permeate the wood fibers. In the soaking or dipping method, penetration is only superficial.

Building a wood retaining wall is something like building a fence. Four-by-four-inch posts form the vertical supports, and 2x8s make up the body of the wall. Douglas fir, because of its strength, is a good choice.

To trim the top of each wall and emphasize its planter-box appearance, lay a 2x8 flat as a cap board. Caps also will serve as display ledges for pots of annuals and bulbs, tree roses and other seasonal ornamentals.

Use the planters themselves for your permanent shrub garden — or for vegetables, if there's adequate sun.

Porch holds potential as added floor space

Converting a porch for year-around use is a relatively easy way to gain added floor space a nominal cost, because the foundation and at least partical framing already are in place.

A minimum, temporary conversion might involve replacing the screens with wood-framed windows, but for cold-weather use insulation should be installed to conserve heating energy.

To convert other porches, it may be necessary to frame in the side walls and a finished ceiling, build up the floor, and add windows; electrical circuits and heating.

First step in remodeling is to examine the floor, posts and foundation for soundness, replacing or repairing any members as needed. Fir, pine or other western lumber is suitable for this work.

If necessary, the porch floor should be brought level with the house floor. After insulating, the walls and ceiling can be finished. In some cases, the inner wall of the house is removed to combine the porch with the existing room.

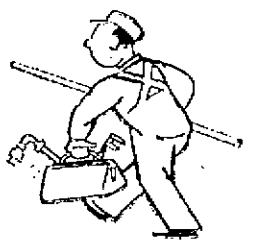

Court renews the view

If a dining room or living room has an ordinary or undesirable view, it's easy to create a new one, with a garden atmosphere.

First enclose a courtyard around the window with a screen of 2x2s set vertically on 2x4 stringers and 4x4 posts. Low-maintenance evergreen plantings will add color and textures.

A birdbath and feeders will provide daytime interest and subtle lighting will add interest to dinner parties.

Take a second look at your hand tools

If you have some favorite hand tools — hammers, chisels, punches, wedges, etc. — that you have had around for a long time, maybe it's time you gave them a second look.

This reminder is from the Hand Tools Institute which urges an inspection of your tools from time to time to insure they are still in proper condition for the jobs ahead.

For instance, if you are still banging away with an old, worn out hammer on an antique, chipped, mushroomed chisel, you are not only wasting your energy and doing a poor job, you are also endangering yourself.

The hazard is that a chipped or mushroomed tool can easily chip more or fragment causing possible eye injury.

Here are some recommendations from HTI:

1. Make sure that hammer heads are mounted securely and that the handles are sound.

2. The hammer face should not be cracked, chipped or mushroomed. If so, replace it with a new one.

3. On struck tools, make sure the striking part is not battered, chipped or mushroomed. If so, replace it.

4. Keep working end of struck tool sharp. Make sure blade or point has been sharpened to proper angle or bevel.

5. When sharpening struck tools, a file or hand stone is recommended. High speed grinding can cause overheating which can cause loss of strength and durability.

6. For storage, keep hammers and struck tools in a safe place where they won't be chipped or dented by falling or coming into contact with other tools.

A couple of other points: make sure you use the proper tool for each task. And on every hammering — be sure to wear safety goggles.

Curves add deck charm

Many homeowners who have hardly had a hammer in hand before have experienced the satisfaction of adding a deck to the side or back of their house.

In addition to the enjoyment of an outdoor living area offered by a deck, an imaginative design will enhance the landscaping and add charm to a yard.

One homeowner, adept at his surgical profession, wanted to broaden his horizons by personally building a deck over part of his lot that sloped from one side to the other as well as to the back boundary.

Because he wanted more than just a square extension of the covered patio, the owner worked with a landscape architect on the design of a deck with two curves, meeting to draw the eye toward a pleasant view through trees.

The decking of 2x4-inch western wood on edge over 2x8 joists and 4x4 posts also was laid to direct the visual interest toward the view. An existing tree was retained in the center of the deck, providing shade for a picnic table and benches.

Railing requirements vary with local codes, and on this curved deck there was the further challenge of retaining the graceful arcs of the design.

The owner used posts of paired 2x4s, bolted to the 2x8 facings attached across the joists. The rails, one at the top and another about a foot down from the top, were made of paired 2x4s.

Curving the rail boards was made easier with saw kerfs a third of the thickness of the boards, spaced an inch apart the length of the boards. The rails were attached to the posts with galvanized nails to avoid rust stains.

The deck was left unfinished so it would weather to a natural pewter gray and blend with the surrounding bark chip ground cover and plantings. Western wood decking also can be finished with a transparent sealer or with natural and tinted stains.

Use the sun to heat your pool

Many people with swimming pools and spas are again concerned about the rising cost of gas and pool heating with summer now approaching. Present pool owners and those planning to install pools face the same problems — spiraling costs, energy shortage, adverse legislation and so forth.

The first practical and economical solutions is solar heating being offered by many manufacturers.

According to Jerry Supernaw, president of Solar Resources Company, Santa Ana, "A solar pool heating system permits people to take maximum advantage of the universe's best heater — the sun — at absolutely no cost."

Solar heaters can be installed on new or existing pools and spas, in or above ground. It can be used to heat the pool on its own during the normal swimming season and as a back-up to an esisting heater for cooler days to extend the swimming season. It is noted that the solar heater's initial cost is slightly more than gas or propane heaters, but it pays for itself usually in five years or less by minimizing or eliminating gas bills.

Every pool installation involves a different set of circumstances including pool size, pool orientation, pool location, water temperature preference, wind conditions and other variables too numerous to mention. But savings can be sizeable.

Supernaw added that in Southern California the expense for natural gas is about $40 per month for a pool measuring 10 feet by 40 feet. This is a bill the owner wouldn't have to pay with a solar pool heating system.

The properly oriented and shielded solar system can produce 100 degree water even when the outside temperature is zero.

Every manufacturer has a slighlty different idea of how to produce results for the pool owner. But basically, they are similar.

Most of the work in the solar pool heating system is done by the sun. The only additional energy needed is a small motor to circulate the pool water.

When the collectors are installed on a roof or sloped surface, the pump motor forces water to the panels where it goes into a pipe inlet at the top of the collector. The water is then distributed equally in a thin layer or copper pipe across the inside of the collector. The water is then drawn inside the collector absorbing the sun's heat dollected by the surface. It then enters a second pipe which carries the water back to the pool.

Typically, the pool water heated in the collectors will rise in the range of 2 degrees to 10 degrees. Because of the constant water flow through the system, pool owners can raise the pool's temperature to the desired level.

To obtain the greatest solar yield from a solar collector, it is important that the collector be correctly oriented. The best direction to face is due south and at a slope perpendicular to the sun's rays. Small variations from a due south direction will not affect the capacity greatly, but if the unit orientation is to vary more than 45 degrees from due south, an analysis is made to determine the loss in unit capacity.

The position of the collector must sometimes be a compromise between the optimum collection angle and the roof slope of the building. Installation, even by the pool owner, can be completed in less than a day.

In some instances users may want to bypass their conventional pool heaters entirely, or to install the solar pool heating system without conventional gas heating. All the owner need do is utilize a pump with a small horseppower motor to his pool equipment area to circulate the water.

Use logic to gain storage space

In some kitchens, disorganized or inadequate storage leads to daily "search and deploy" missions. Food and utensils have to be hunted in one place, then taken to another place for use.

The National Kitchen Cabinet Association says all this wasted time and effort could be avoided by having enough cabinets near each kitchen work center, and by organizing storage space in a logical fashion. Here are some suggestions:

- Food and utensils used together should be stored together at point of first use. Example: coffee, coffee pot and measuring spoon near the sink, because water is required.
- Store food preparation tools together: knives, parers, measuring cups, wooden spoons, mixing bowls, beaters and blenders.
- Near the range, store pot covers, pot holders, testing spoons, spatulas, even platters and vegetable dishes in which hot food is served.
- Keep china and glasses near the cleanup center, so items can be stored as they are dried or removed from the dishwasher.
- Store most-used items in cabinets within easy reach — between eye and hip level. Put heavy or awkward items at waist level or below.
- Use cabinet features that facilitate storage: adjustable, pull-out and lazy susan shelves, cutlery drawers and tray dividers, for example.

NKCA says good kitchen storage also requires that cabinets perform well day in and day out for a long time. The NKCA certification seal on cabinets indicates the cabinets meet construction and performance standards of the American National Standards Institute, and have been laboratory tested to prove it. The seal is applied at the factory.

Certified cabinets are designed to stand up to hard daily use, such as cans dropped on shelves and in drawers, doors slammed shut by knees, even the abuse of children who use shelves and doors as step stools. Cabinet finish can be expected to resist food spills, including harsh substances such as alcohol and lemon juice; water and detergent; and the high humidity and sharp temperature changes common in kitchens.

Sears SAYS . . .

Now there's an exciting new way to decorate...with a no-wax Solarian floor and pattern-coordinated wallcovering.

The Decoresq™ Collection...from Armstrong

For the first time ever, you can start your decorating scheme with an Armstrong no-wax Solarian floor — and complement it with elegant patterned wallcovering that echoes the same design motif!

It's a sophisticated approach to decorating that can give your home the "professional decorator look", but you don't have to pay the cost of a decorator. You get a Solarian floor with the famous Mirabond® wear surface that holds its shine far longer than an ordinary vinyl floor. Just mop it clean, and it really does look just-waxed! The pattern-coordinated wallcoverings are pre-pasted washable vinyl.

Be your own decorator. Come in and see our Decoresq Collection.

All-American award winning roses for '76

Fall planting of roses has become an accepted practice by many good gardners throughout the milder areas of the temperate regions. In the deep south, the planting of roses at this time of year is an accepted way of life, but many long-time growers further north have also learned its advantages.

Dormant, bare-root roses planted in this season, although they will make no new growth on top or roots during the cold weather, will become firmly settled into the ground ready to start active growth as soon as the warm days of spring arrive.

The soil, mellow and warm from the heat of summer and the rains of autumn, is usually in excellent condition to work, often far better than the hard, tight earth of early spring.

Such pictures don't just happen, but are the result of imagination, careful planning and some study of plant materials.

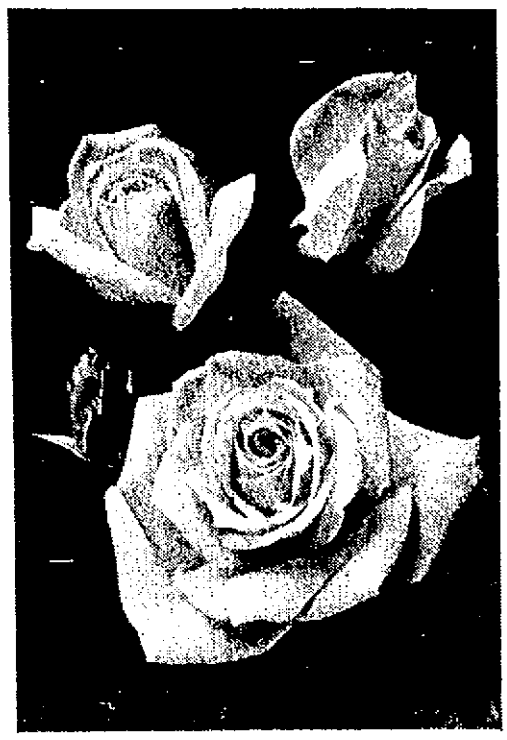

Numerous fall mail order rose catalogs from reputable firms, and many of the alert garden centers are offering plants of the four 1976 award winning roses.

They are: Seashell — the golden peach and pink hybrid tea, of average height and will readily fit into any rose bed, patio planting, terrace or rub planting, border, or dooryard garden.

America — a silvery salmon climber which will be most useful in any position suitable for climbing roses. This includes pergolas, trellises or fences.

Yankee Doodle — the new orange sherbet hybrid tea. A tall grower and could well be placed in the center planting of a large rose bed, used along a drive, or in the back row of a foundation planting bordering the house.

Cathedral — an apricot-pink floribunda, fine for mass planting, small groups to provide showy spots of color, and edging the beds of taller growing roses.

ABOVE: Seashell — Hybrid Tea

A hundred uses

Many plants are taken for granted — and members of the Ivy family are often in this situation.

There may be nothing flashy about Ivy, but there's distinctive beauty to be sure. Many recent introductions of this foliage favorite have thrilled gardners.

Few people are unaware that Ivy is used as a ground cover on slopes as a lawn substitute. Many people grew up watching Ivy climb up a tree trunk — or, had the chance to train Ivy against the house or a garage wall.

Keep your lawn happy

Undoubtedly, some federal agency could come up with a computerized estimate on how many acres of land are dedicated to use as lawn areas in home gardens throughout America. The figure would be astronomical.

And, even though artifical turfs are showing-up here and there, there is nothing like a beautiful lawn — and a true gardener would never consider a substitute.

When it comes to lawn care, the California Association of Nurserymen suggests that a little effort frequently applied will go a long way. Certainly, it's better than the infrequent big effort which may come too late.

One exception to this is your watering schedule. It's better to train a lawn to take a deep watering less frequently — to encourage deep root growth — rather than, say, daily shallow sprinklings.

Thought it will vary by area, a good rule of thumb is to water deeply once a week in cool dry weather, twice a week during warm dry weather. The length of watering time will depend on the soil condition. In most soils, one should strive to achieve actual water penetration of six to eight inches and in heavy clay soils, one to two inches.

Your lawn feeding program should start immediately. Regular feeding is important for healthy, attractive lawns. Your nurseryman can recommend the proper lawn food for the type of turf you have. Where weeds are a traditional problem, you may wish to consider the weed control products available today.

Mowing is very important to the health of a lawn as well as appearance.

Mow weekly during the growth season and less often when growing slowly. If you lowered your mower to cut at 1-inch during winter, make sure it's 1½ to 2-inches as the weather warms up; and at least two inches in hot climates. Cutting a lawn too short in hot weather exposes the crowns of the individual grass plants. This ruins its appearance — and its future.

Hardy standbys

The variety of sizes and shaped that succulents come in have fascinated people for ages. Dedicated hobbyists surround themselves with these favorites — planting them almost to the exclusion of all other types of garden plants.

In temperate climates, gardeners often use succulents to contrast with other plants and with masonry or wood textures in the landscape.

Here's why the rear-bagging Grassmaster® is the finest mower Toro ever engineered Innovative Toro engineering gives you the convenience of bagging your clippings plus the maneuverability to handle tight turns, irregular borders, narrow spaces.

And the Grassmaster® converts easily to a mulching mower which deposits nitrogen-rich clippings for a healthier lawn.

Maneuverable Rear Bag

The spacious, 2¼-bushel bag is conveniently located in the rear of the Grassmaster®. Leaves you clear to reach those tight spots around trees, hedges, and flower beds.

The sturdy bag detaches in seconds for quick disposal of clippings.

Powerful High-Torque® Engine

At the heart of Grassmaster® performance is a Toro exclusive—the High-Torque® engine. This quiet-running, 10-cu.-in. engine delivers extra torque (turning force) to the blade.

That translates into the kind of cutting power that helps prevent stalling in grass up to 10 inches high.

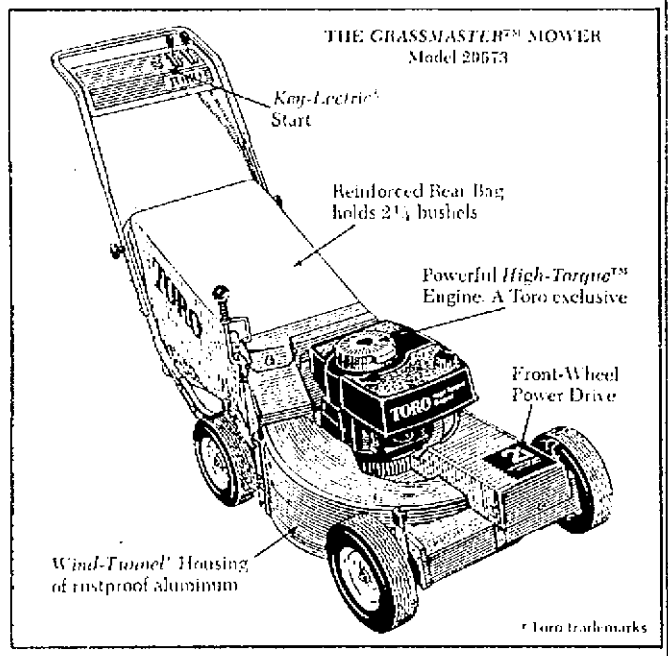

Grassmaster® Versatility

The Grassmaster® offers you the option of bagging your clippings or laying them down as mulch.

Simply convert this Toro® to a mulching mower. As you mow, you deposit nitrogen-rich clippings on your lawn to enrich the soil.

Innovative Engineering

The Grassmaster® design includes many Toro engineering innovations:

• Key-Lectric®. Instant starting and stopping at a turn of the key. Standard on Model 20673.
• Wind-Tunnel® Housing. Molded aluminum housing vacuums grass for clean, even cutting.
• Safety. A flexible rear safety shield.

The Toro Promise
(A full one-year warranty)
During the first year of use, Toro will pay the full cost of parts and labor for the repair of any Grassmaster® found defective in materials or workmanship. All you have to do is return it to your Toro Dealer. And this promise holds good even if you aren't the original owner.

Warren' research facilities, established twenty years ago, have under observation over 1,000 strains and species of grasses. Some of these grasses have been patented and are available to the public in various parts of the United States and Europe.

About ten years ago one of these new grasses...

BenSun (A-34)

KENTUCKY BLUEGRASS

...was introduced into California. Its performance has proven to be outstanding for these reasons:

- Rated first in shade tolerance (up to 65%) yet grows vigorously in full sunlight.
- Rated first in wear tolerance by a university doing turfgrass research. (Of eighteen top bluegrasses tested, for golf course use, BenSun (A-34) was the only grass to receive an excellent rating.)
- Quick to recover when injured and is used extensively on athletic fields and golf courses.
- Does well in most soils, and is highly drought resistant.
- Thrives in hot or cold climates, at high or low altitudes.
- Requires less fertilizer to keep it healthy.
- Can be mowed down to ½ inch when planted in sunlight.
- One pound of seed will plant 2,000 sq. ft. of new lawn area at a cost of only ½¢ per square foot.
- BenSun (A-34) Lawngrass Seed carries this guarantee: "If you are not satisfied with the results obtained from this seed, return the empty box with proof of purchase within 6 months to Warren's Turf Nursery, Inc. You will be supplied with more seed or your money will be refunded, your choice".

Available as Sod, Sod Plugs and Seed!

To keep your lawn green and healthy use WARREN'S LAWN FOOD, specially formulated (10-8-4 analysis for proper balance) to give your lawn the proper food nutrients. Use the lawn food the grass professionals use.

Fern favorites

Bright flowering plants are hard to beat — but for a good, green "woodsy look," consider Ferns to add a freshing touch. They are readily adaptable and easy to grow, providing a few simple cultural requirements are met.

Ferns generally prefer shade and a deep, loose soil rich in humus — the kind you scoop-up from under old, large trees, full of twigs and leaves and hall decayed wood.

Fortunately, your nurseryman can recommend a ready-to-use planter mix that contains all the necessary ingredients.

Some Ferns can take more sun and wind than given credit for. This is especially true of the varieties native to California and North America's coastal climates. The Sword Fern is one of these.

It grows to about three feet and is excellent for naturalizing under grees. The Woodwardia Fern, which produces five foot fronds, is another hardy candidate; it makes a trouble-free background for low shrubs on the north or east side of the house.

The Maidenhair Fern is a moisture lover, with small, fine leaflets. It excels as a ground cover or a pot plant subject. There is a Five Finger Maidenhair that is distinguishable by its unique foliage shape.

Holly Fern is a California favorite because of its handsome, dark green fronds that resemble a holly leaf. The low grower will stand some neglect; it prefers partial shade.

A busy specimen is Leatherleaf Fern, which sports dark green, leathery fronds. It is a favorite with floral arrangers because of the lasting qualities in arrangements. Mother Fern does well indoors, in the garden it likes medium to heavy shade, and the fern becomes heavy with plantlets.

The larger-growing tree ferns are extraordinary members of the clan. Australian Tree Fern has graceful, arching stems and spreading light green fronds on a well-portioned trunk, and it has become a popular landscape subject. The Tasmanian (or New Zealand) Tree Fern, which is slightly hardier, creates a feathery canopy. Both are excellent choices for containers — or partially shaded garden spots.

Portable

The surroundings of your home and garden needn't ever be dull if you look upon container plants as portable props and use them as beautiful accessories.

Regardless of the season, there are always choice plants in bloom.

Beauty indoors

For many Californians the "art" of gardening is practiced indoors. Indoor gardening is no passing fancy — as people become more and more aware of the role of plants in our lives, the interest in plants suitable for growing indoors becomes greater.

Successful indoor plant growing is dependent on many things — including the planting mix used in containers. Ordinary soil or heavy potting soils can pack or "sour" in a relatively short time. The idea planting medium is a rich light planter mix — one that duplicates the tropical growing habitat of exotic indoor plants. Nurseries have ready-to-use planter mixes for indoor plants, and may offer for sale a soil mix that incorporates organic ingredients to help provide drainage and promote good growth.

Shade special

One of the easiest shade shrubs to grow is the Greenleaf Aucuba. It can always be counted on to produce a full mass of large, glossy green serrated leaves.

Snapper picks up where most mowers leave off

THE OPTIONAL ZIP KIT. ANOTHER FIRST FROM SNAPPER.

The Zip Kit attaches easily to a Snapper and is simple to operate. It saves you the time it takes to rake or empty your clippings at the curb. And when you are through your grass is really bagged.

1. Make sure the grass bag is mounted between the handles, so it trims close on both sides. You can mow anywhere, with no hang ups.

2. Check to see if it has a larger capacity grass bag that needs emptying less often.

3. Ask if it has vacuum action. A powerful suction that cleans your lawn as you mow.

4. Be certain the self-propelled mower has rear-wheel drive for greater traction. And automatic free-wheeling action for safer control.

5. Look for a tough, 6-speed transmission. For extra power and easy handling.

6. Now, if it has everything we've mentioned so far, buy it. It's a Snapper.

See us for a free demonstration.

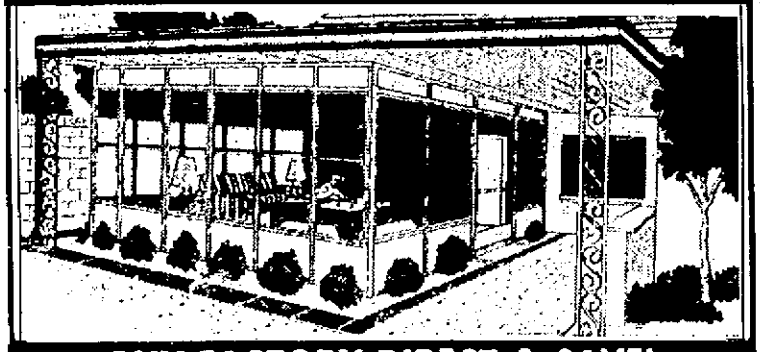

THE OPTIONAL SNAPPERIZER. ANOTHER FIRST FROM SNAPPER.

This convenient attachment makes cleaning up leaves half the job because you empty half as often. The leaves are pulverized so the catcher can hold at least twice as much. Ask us for a free demonstration.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

LEE LIVINGSTON

The opening of Lee Livingston Realty was a great thrill in what for Lee has been a very happy career in sales.

For over twenty years he sold industrial equipment starting with the Star Machinery Co. in Seattle, and later with the DeVilbiss Co. headquartered in Toledo, Ohio. His various territory assignments have included most of the West Coast and Alaska. About five years ago, after some extended trips through the South Pacific, Lee decided to "settle down" and call Long Beach home. Real Estate seemed to offer the opportunity to continue in sales without too much traveling. It has met all his expectations.

While Lee has enjoyed success in sales, some of his greatest satisfaction has come from his work with the Long Beach Board of Realtors, the Chamber of Commerce and the California Real Estate Association. Besides the pleasure of the company of the many fine people he's met in these organizations, Lee spends a little spare time with shooting hobbies. He maintains an active interest in national defense through a membership in the American Ordnance Association.

"Don't shop in that aisle, Evelyn — it would be hazardous to our wealth."

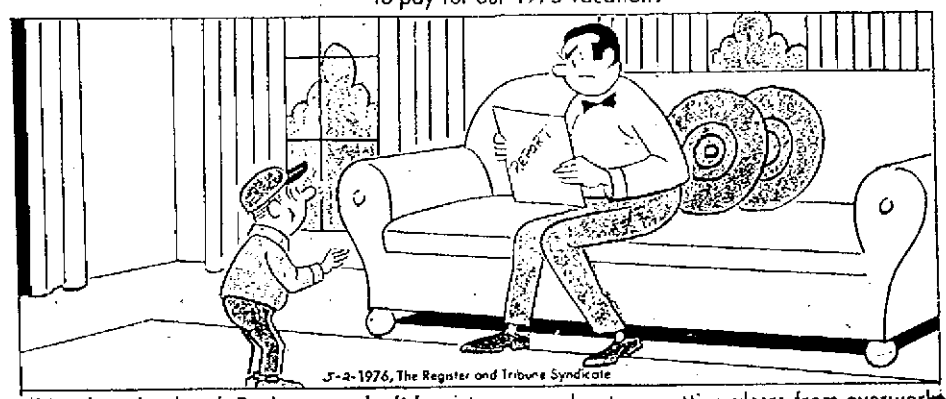

"Dear, what would you change if you had my whole life to live over?"

"Try not to get too sick, dear. All the office collection got for you was ten dollars."

"Our vacation trip for 1976? — I thought we agreed to get extra jobs this summer to pay for our 1975 vacation?"

"On the other hand, Dad — you don't have to worry about me getting ulcers from overwork at school."

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

Kelly would just love to fill Barbara's shoes

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

"Well, there's good news and there's bad news," reported TV news girl Kelly Lange immediately after shaking hands and taking a seat in a booth at the Smoke House restaurant in Burbank.

"The bad news is that 'Take My Advice' is going to be canceled by NBC, and the good news is that it looks as though it will be picked up as a nationally syndicated show and will continue to appear on KNBC."

Kelly's words were, indeed, news to the NBC publicist having lunch with us. The interview had been arranged by the publicist primarily to discuss the daytime talk show series, which Miss Lange hosts each weekday from 11:30 to noon on Channel 4.

"Take My Advice," Kelly's first network series, premiered last Jan. 5, and she's convinced it's a good one.

"We've been leading the competition in the Los Angeles area — perhaps because I'm well known here," she said. "But in most parts of the country we're up against two of the most popular soap operas on the air, and haven't been doing as well. Daytime viewers have to have their soap operas and prizes, it seems."

THE SERIES, which she says will stay on NBC until June, is television's version of the "Dear Abby" and "Ann Landers" columns which are so popular in newspapers across the nation. Viewers send in letters asking advice on marital and other problems, and four celebrity guests each day discuss the problems and offer suggestions. Of course, the celebrities don't always agree.

In fact, Miss Lange pointed out, Lorraine Gary hurled a glass of water (yes, the glass, too) at George Hamilton one time in a heated discussion of whether a man should keep a gun in his home.

Panel members often draw on their own experiences and reveal facets of their lives rarely exposed to the public.

"You can't tell what kind of man Carroll O'Connor is by watching him on 'All in the Family,' but you can find out much about him by seeing him on our show," said Kelly.

REGARDLESS of what becomes of "Take My Advice," Kelly Lange is not likely to disappear from the tube — so, men, quit worrying.

Her two-year contract with NBC extends to Nov. 15, and will be renewed unless the network bigwigs are dumber than I think. And, in addition to doing the five "Take My Advice" shows a week, the breezy and attractive blonde still appears weekdays on all three evening KNBC news programs — the only person to do so.

She presents a "people in the news" segment on Jess Marlow's 5 o'clock news, and is the weather girl on Paul Moyer's 6 o'clock news and John Schubeck's 11 o'clock news.

In addition, KNBC declined to accept her proferred resignation as "Sunday" show hostess when she got the network series, and she does it with cohost Ralph Story when she can work it in.

She reports to work at KNBC at 2 p.m. daily and doesn't get away until the middle of the night. And, on some Friday nights, she stays up all night working on her scripts for the "Take My Advice" shows that are taped on the weekend at NBC.

KELLY LANGE ... weathers television's storms

"SO HOW'S your love life?" I inquired of the single, mid-thirtyish career girl.

"Terrible!," she quickly replied, with a laugh. "I don't have time for it." Then, after a pause: "Oh, I have a guy."

Kelly was married "ages ago" and has a 14-year-old daughter who lives with her in Nichols Canyon in the Hollywood area.

She is a warm, friendly, talkative person who is both bright and a go-getter. With her persistence and charm, she helped to break the barriers to women in television in Los Angeles.

Now, with nearly 10 years of experience in L.A. radio and television, she is being mentioned in the press, along with such women as Bess Myerson, Candice Bergen and Betty Furness, as the possible replacement for Barbara Walters on NBC's "Today" show.

Would she like the job?

"Would I like it! Why, I'd even kill for it!," said Miss Lange. . .with exaggeration, of course.

"I consider Barbara's job on the 'Today' show the No. 1 job in the field I'm in (the field of television interviews), so of course I'd give anything to have it," she said.

Added Kelly: "I don't know how the reports got started, but Time magazine, Associated Press and others have phoned to get my reaction. I just hope that NBC will consider me for the position."

WHAT DOES she think about Miss Walters' reported five-year, $1-million-a-year contract with ABC as coanchorperson with Harry Reasoner on the "ABC Evening News"?

"I think it's wonderful!," replied Miss Lange, who delights in the advances being made by women in television.

Does the hiring of Miss Walters smack of show business?

"Of course," conceded Kelly. "That's a part of it. The networks all have the same news, the same minicams. They're like the airlines, whose planes fly to the same place. They have to do something to attract the people."

Is it fair for Miss Walters to make so much money — to be paid more than veteran newscasters like Reasoner, Walter Cronkite and John Chancellor?

"Life isn't fair," replied Kelly. "Maybe, to be fair, everyone at birth should be given the same amount of money. Barbara happened to be in a position to command that much, and if she raises ABC's ratings even by three points she'll bring the network more than $3 million extra in advertising revenue."

THERE WAS a time when Miss Lange would have been willing to work for almost nothing to get on television. But not quite — she turned down a job for no pay on Channel 9 several years ago, she said.

She came to Los Angeles in 1966 with her daughter, also named Kelly, possessing a degree from Merrimack College in North Andover, Mass. (she grew up in Massachusetts), and the credentials to be a high school teacher of English and Latin. She had been a stewardess for United Air Lines and a substitute teacher in a Salt Lake City high school and had modeled and taught modeling in San Francisco.

In Los Angeles, she was on her way home from a modeling assignment one day when she spotted a line of women standing near a trailer owned by radio station KABC at a shopping mall. She stopped and discovered that the station was looking for a "Lady Bird" — an airborne traffic-watcher. She auditioned

Unhappy times for John Amos

By GARY DEEB
Chicago Tribune

John Amos and I have one thing in common: We're both fed up with the heavy emphasis on Jimmie Walker's teen-age J. J. character in the popular CBS comedy series "Good Times."

Amos, however, has one giant advantage over me. All I can do is express my disgust in print. But John can dramatize his anger by quitting the show. Which is precisely what he just did.

When "Good Times" begins its fourth season in September, Amos' character, James Evans, won't be around. The scriptwriters will have him working on the Alaskan pipeline, and after a month or so he'll probably die in a job-related accident.

"JOHN HAS been spouting his mouth off in a lot of places," says one source close to the program. "He said he didn't want to come back in the fall. So we said OK. Therefore, you will not see him any more.

"For the first four episodes, he'll be talked about by the other members of the family. After the fourth episode, the writers probably will do something drastic, like kill him off — which will give us a widow as the head of the family."

According to other insiders, Amos is bailing out because he's angered by the increasingly fat part that has been developed for the J. J. character. He feels — as do many other observers — that "Good Times" is glorifying an essentially obnoxious and immature character.

J. J., of course, as played by the 27-year-old Walker, is famous for mugging, winking, strutting, leering, dropping his jaw, rolling his eyes, snapping his fingers, and exclaiming "Dyn-o-mite!" about 12 times per program.

The producers say he's a realistic ghetto youngster — streetwise, impetuous, and eager.

But many viewers, including some black social-action organizations, say J. J. is the perfect attraction for racists — a grotesque jughead who reinforces a lot of bigoted concepts of what ghetto youngsters are all about.

WORSE YET, Walker is an utterly hopeless actor. He delivers every line as if he's performing in a slapstick vaudeville skit. He doesn't know the meaning of the term "laying back." And he hasn't improved one iota in three seasons.

On the other hand, Amos is one of television's truly underrated actors. He handles his role with dignity, compassion, and, most importantly, believability.

Unfortunately, both he and Esther Rolle, who plays the mother of the family, gradually have been reduced to the level of providing straight lines for J. J.'s strident gaglines.

WHAT STARTED out as a promising comedy series about a struggling black family in a Chicago slum has degenerated into a slap-happy showcase of belly-laughs starring a 1976 adolescent version of Stepin Fetchit.

And rather than continue to collect a handsome paycheck for his part in such silliness, John Amos is getting out. He's to be saluted.

A 13-POUND, solid, 24-karat gold tennis ball, belonging to Arthur Ashe, was displayed recently on NBC's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson." The ball was given to Ashe as the world's top tennis player in 1975.

'Police Woman' actor honored

Ed Bernard, who plays the stern, tough Detective Joe Styles in NBC-TV's "Police Woman," has been honored with a Humanitarian Award for his "contribution to the positive image of the community."

Sponsored by the Metropolitan Baptist Church of Altadena, the awards honor artists who live in the Altadena area.

Bernard was singled out for having made "humanitarian strides in communications" by portraying a dedicated police officer and family man.

2 press awards go to KNX Newsradio

KNX Newsradio (1070 AM) was named first place winner both in the "Best Radio Newscast" and "Best Radio Editorial" categories by the Greater Los Angeles Press Club.

The awards were accepted by KNX general manager George Nicholaw and KNX newsman Harry Birrell at the 19th Annual Greater Los Angeles Press Club's Journalism Awards Banquet at the Century Plaza Hotel.

Divider wall adds storage

Enhancing an open feeling of shared space while separating living areas is the special charm of a well-designed divider wall in an open-plan house.

And when the divider also serves as a storage wall with display shelves, it's easy to understand why one family is so pleased with the family-living room wing of their high-ceiling house.

The entry hallway opens on the family room, sunken one step from the floor level and surrounded by a three-foot-high railing. The bottom half is solid, faced with vertical cedar boards. The top open half of vertical 2x2s spaced a foot apart supports a milled rail.

The divider wall runs through the length of the combination room, tying in visually with the large laminated wood center beam supporting the ceiling.

The cabinet top counter is used for display and for serving hors d'oeuvres or a buffet when entertaining informally.

The upper part of the divider wall is divided into five sections, with three shelves of western pine boards in the two sections at the ends. The center section has built-in cabinets for a tape deck and record changer, and two shelves above.

The back of the divider facing the living room is used as a gallery wall. In other homes the shelves could be open to both rooms and the cabinets could have doors on both sides.

The walls of the rooms are paneled with vertical 1x6-inch V-groove boards, accenting the height of the rooms. Paintings near the top of the living room wall can be enjoyed in the family room as well.

America founded on do-it-yourself

Our forefathers called it "old fashioned self-reliancec" today we call it "do-it-yourself."

Whatever its name, an increasing number of modern day Americans, forced by mounting inflation, rising repair costs and tightening energy supplies, are returning to the values of early Americans who did just about everything themselves for their homes and families.

The Hand Tools Institute points out that the spirit of independence on which our nation was founded was sparked by the self-sufficient householder of that day who not only could perform each job but intimately knew each tool required for the task.

According to HTI it was the practice for most of this country's early settlers to make their own tools, inscribe them with the family name and proudly hand them down from generation to generation. These hand-fashioned tools were such an intimate part of the early craftsman's daily life that many were given familiar first names.

Most of the tools of that day were used to work with wood — axes, adzes, chisels and mallets were among the most common. The use of iron nails (squared) and hammers was not as popular because of the penchant of early settlers to use wooden nails or pegs.

Today's self-reliant handyman with a wider range of materials to work with also has a broader variety of hand tools to help him perform his various household tasks. To help him do these jobs better and safer the Hand Tools Institute has issued some safety guidelines for the use of both striking and struck tools.

First — wear safety goggles while hammering. This is especially important for such jobs as pounding nails into concrete, chipping masonry, splitting bricks and striking chisels.

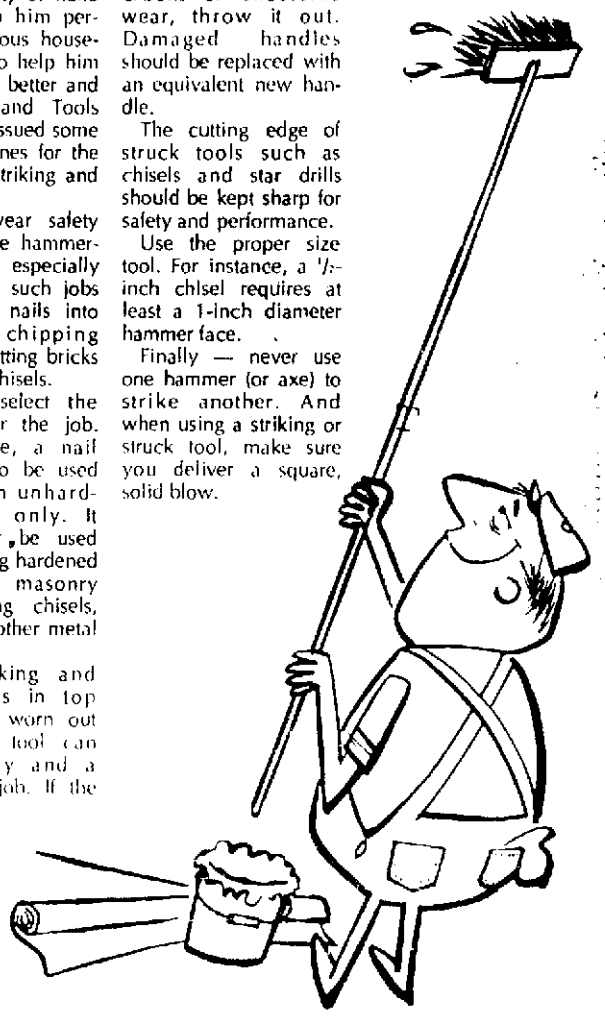

Next — select the right tool for the job. For example, a nail hammer is to be used for common unhardened nails only. It should never be used for hammering hardened concrete or masonry nails, striking chisels, star drills or other metal products.

Keep striking and struck tools in top condition. A worn out or damaged tool can cause injury and a botched up job. If the tool shows chips, dents, cracks or excessive wear, throw it out. Damaged handles should be replaced with an equivalent new handle.

The cutting edge of struck tools such as chisels and star drills should be kept sharp for safety and performance.

Use the proper size tool. For instance, a ½-inch chisel requires at least a 1-inch diameter hammer face.

Finally — never use one hammer (or axe) to strike another. And when using a striking or struck tool, make sure you deliver a square, solid blow.

Check on building codes

Before beginning any remodeling or building on your property, check with Department of Building and Safety at your local City Building. Each community has strict codes and it's better to check before you begin than to complete a project and find that you have violated a local building code.

This includes installing patios, changing doors, roof a patio, fencing etc.

Are doctors guilty of child abuse?

Dr. Leboyer, who keeps his delivery rooms dark and warm and quiet, would probably say yes.

So would most babies.

What do you think? Would the world be a better place if we all came into it smiling instead of crying?

Starting tonight, Eyewitness News Reporter Diana Lewis will be looking into all the ways to be born.

Natural childbirth. Caesarians. Leboyer. Lamaze.

Sophisticated medical techniques versus the return to midwives.

Watch Channel 7, Eyewitness Closeup, all week on the 6 o'clock news and find out everything you always wanted to know about childbirth. Without the labor.

Childbirth.
An Eyewitness Closeup.

New stages being built

Construction has begun on two new studio stages, to be equipped for video tape production at the ABC Television Center at 4151 Prospect Ave., Los Angeles, it was announced by Julius Barnathan, vice president in charge of broadcast operations and engineering for ABC.

"There is no question that video tape will continue to play an increasingly important role in television production," Barnathan said, "and this expansion plus the six stages currently in operation in Los Angeles will enable us to meet future production requirements."

Armando Cerna Ch. 34 news director

Daniel D. Villanueva, general manager of Spanish-language TV station KMEX, Channel 34, has appointed Armando Cerna to the position of news director. Cerna's responsibilities include the station's nightly news broadcasts as well as all public affairs programming.

JESSICA WALTER will be a guest star on "The Rich Little Show," at 8 p.m. Tuesday on Ch. 4.

Wall holds home office

It's amazing how easily 18 inches of unused floor space running eight to ten feet along the wall of the family room can become a home office and library, with desk, cabinets and shelves.

One couple had a blank wall between a free-standing fireplace in one corner and built-in cabinets in the other corner, and decided to put this family room space to better use.

First, they paneled the wall with 6-inch western cedar boards to provide a more interesting backdrop for the new built-ins.

Cabinet units with drawers on one side and storage on the other were built onto the wall, with a 30-inch desk space between. This provides a convenient place for correspondence and family records, and doubles as a serving counter for informal buffets.

Above the counter top is a slanting shelf for magazines and large books, made from a 1x12 inch board with a strip of wood molding along the bottom for a stop.

Four more shelves of 1x8-inch Douglas fir were added above the magazine shelf, for books, house plants and other items.

In homes with large bedrooms, a similar installation would utilize wall space more efficiently. Or the same idea can be adapted to a sewing center, with a fold-away sewing machine replacing the desk area. Cabinets can be built onto the wall instead of shelves.

Another variation can be used in children's rooms for a study-storage area. When two youngsters share a room, one wall can be used, with a divider of bookshelves separating the two desk areas.

Pool needs a shady spot - - -

Swimming pools, even modest above-ground models surrounded by wood decks, provide pleasant places to entertain family and friends.

But every pool needs a cooling off spot, a tree or other shady nook, where swimmers can escape from the hot sun.

A simple pavilion is all that's needed, and it can be built with a post-and-beam framework of western wood. The roof and sides can be spaced 2x5s to give shade without trapping heat.

A deck of 2x4s, around the pool, slightly spaced and elevated to allow air to pass through, provides a cooler surface to stretch out on and dry off.

Suitable woods for deck and pavilion construction include fir, pine and western cedar.

Wood walls warm bath

Despite the utilitarian nature of a bathroom, there's no need to neglect it in the over-all decorating scheme when building or remodeling a house.

A bathroom should have a look of freshness and light, but adding a lot of frills usually will result in a cluttered rather than a pleasant appearance.

The walls and ceiling are the background for any successful decorating project and are especially important in a smaller, confined area such as a bathroom.

Rough-sawn 1x6-inch lumber paneling added warm tones, a rich texture and a contemporary look to the walls and ceiling of the master bath in this Southland family's home.

The boards were installed vertically on the walls to accent the sloping, higher than ordinary ceiling, and were finished only with a water-repellent coating.

Paired fir 2x12-inch ceiling beams and the window frames, both stained dark, add accent to the walls. One window, set high on the end wall, is sloped along the top edge, following the ceiling line.

Cabinets framed in along one wall provide ample storage for towels and other supplies, and is topped by a full-length plastic laminate counter.

White-frosted globe lights flanking a large mirror above the lavatory and the stark white counter top offer contrast to the warm, natural colors of the wood walls and ceiling.

Wallcovering of ribbons 'n ruffles

Ribbons and ruffles, and as a color scheme pink/green/yellow/white — what more could a little girl ask for a room of her own. No matter that it's small and under the eaves, and furnished with items from elsewhere, this is a "fun" room starting with the vinyl wallcovering — "It's Raining Violets". Painted headboard and nightstand match its shocking pink accents, repeated its touches of mint green in bedspread and pillows, and its sunny yellow in pillows, too. Wicker chair is painted white to match the hang-it-yourself vinyls ground color, and carpet is green.

Planks are perfect as kitchens go rural

The modern kitchen goes country.

The current movement is prompted as much by the need to find more living space in present homes (rather than searching for newer, larger, more expensive houses) as it is by the rage for nostalgia and back-to-the-earth trends.

And with the rural decor comes the adaptability of the old farm kitchen that was used for family room, dining room, study and general workshop.

A freer approach to design and layout are allowed by the multi-purpose nature of the kitchen, the mobility of modern appliances and flexibility of decorating materials, says Judy Johnson, home improvement director of Marlite paneling.

This reprieve from the confinement of the basic triangle layout of range — sink — refrigerator may result in some peculiarly-shaped and placed stretches of wall: strips between doors, areas behind moveable larger appliances, doors fronting hideaways, and facings for work isles.

These are perfect places for planks, says Ms. Johnson. She suggests using Marlite prefinished planks that present the desired rustic atmosphere as well as the needed durability and cleaning ease.

For those who like a textured look, there are the designs with special deep embossing in hardboard that capture the subtle detail of simulated woodgrain finishes. Measuring a convenient-to-work with 16-inches x 8-feet x ⅛-inch, they also are surface-scored for a natural random plank effect in Barnside and Weatherboard patterns.

Like all Marlite planks, the textured designs are tongued-and-grooved for ease of installation.

Colors in the Marlite plank line range from the satiny deep browns of Persian walnut design to the lighter tones of the textured Chapel Oak design and Light Wormy Chestnut.

Between is an array of textures and tones from Brown and Gray Barnside to the smooth off-whites of Frost Wood and Swedish Cherry.

Ten-foot planks, ideal for older homes with higher ceilings, also come in the deep woodgrain finishes of the new Bolero Rosewood design and the free-form Antique Gold, severe Polar White and rich Gold Lace designs.

Paneling should please eye

Most satisfactory way to select cedar lumber to panel an accent wall is to do so personally at the lumber yard.

Choices vary widely, between clear and tight-knot grades, smooth surfaced and sawtextured, flush joint and patterned.

Bevel and channel rustic styles are widely used for interiors.

KELLY

and got the job, and on Valentine's Day 1967 made her first helicopter flight to report on traffic and weather conditions.

For the first two years of the five years she was with KABC radio, the station had her use the name Dawn O'Day; then it let her use her real name.

Kelly made many efforts to land a TV job, "but the stations had their one token woman. Channel 4 had Gail Christian, Channel 7 had Rona Barrett and Channel 2 had Ruth Ashton Taylor." Finally, she came up with the idea for a weather girl, and she was permitted to audition for such a role on KNBC, along with scores of "gorgeous actresses." Her radio reporting experience paid off, and Kelly got the job as weekend weather reporter on Channel 4 in March 1971. She continued to work for KABC-radio station, too, to make financial ends meet.

MISS LANGE'S sunny disposition and breezy manner on TV brought her the label of "Little Miss Sunshine" in some quarters, and her wholesome good looks quickly made her the sweetheart of countless male viewers in Southern California. After her job on Channel 4 expanded, she gave up her radio work.

Kelly is perhaps most closely linked in the minds of most viewers with Tom Snyder, the former anchorman on KNBC's 6 p.m. news. Their lighthearted banter preceding the weather reports helped to enliven many a newscast, and they also cohosted the "Sunday" interview-talk show before he left for New York City to work for the NBC station there and to host the network's late-night "Tomorrow" show.

Does she ever hear from Tom?

"Oh, yes, I hear from him often — he writes me notes in the middle of the night," she said.

She added that she usually watches the "Tomorrow" show while unwinding from her own evening reporting chores.

What does she think of Snyder?

"He's stark-raving bananas ... he's one of a kind ... he's marvelous," replied Kel.

Many TV viewers think Kelly Lange is marvelous, too. Take my advice, NBC, and give her strong consideration for Barbara Walters' old job.

COME IN AND ENTER NOW! WIN THIS Armstrong ROOM FREE!

Grand Prize: the contents of this magnificent Armstrong Solarian® American Craftsman Family Room

Floor design copyrighted by Armstrong

136 PRIZES!

No purchase necessary to enter! Just come in and fill out an official entry blank!* You could win the Grand Prize ... this fabulous family room that includes Armstrong floor, ceiling, and carpeting, furniture by Thomasville, and decorative accessories and antiques. Or one of 135 other home-fashion prizes, including (5) oak tables with chairs, (10) pairs of upholstered swivel chairs, (20) Designer Solarian floors, and (100) Wilton Armetale® pitcher and goblet sets.

Enter now. Sweepstakes ends June 12, 1976.

LIMITED-TIME STORE OFFER!

Wilton Armetale American Craftsman pewter-like plate ($20 value). A limited edition for collectors. Each plate handmade and numbered.

FREE!
with the purchase of 15 or more sq. yds. of Armstrong Solarian between April 19 and June 12, 1976.

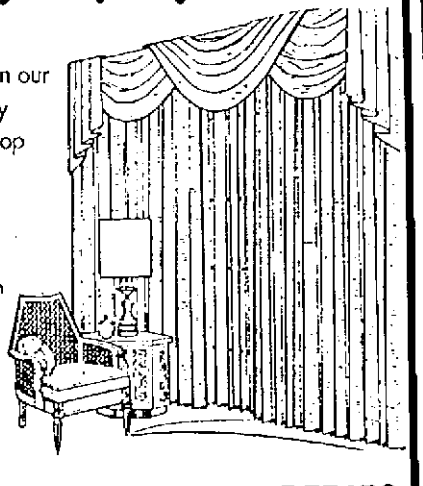

The handcrafted look of Designer Solarian is one of the features of the American Craftsman family room. Its unique "Inlaid Color" construction produces a floor of unmatched color depth and realism. And like all Solarian floors, it shines...without waxing or buffing...far longer than an ordinary vinyl floor.

OFFICIAL SWEEPSTAKES RULES 1. To enter the Armstrong Solarian American Craftsman Room Sweepstakes, visit your participating retailer, and pick up the official entry blank. Mail to Armstrong Solarian American Craftsman Room Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 10, New York, N.Y. 10046. 2. Winners will be selected in a random drawing conducted by Marden Kane, Inc., an independent judging organization whose decisions are final. Only one prize per family. Liability for taxes will be the sole responsibility of the winner. Entries must be postmarked by June 12, 1976. 3. This sweepstakes is open to all residents of the continental U.S.A. 18 years of age or older except employees of the Armstrong Cork Co., their immediate families, its subsidiaries, its advertising agencies, Marden Kane, Inc., distributors of the Armstrong line, and participating retailers. Void in Alaska and Mississippi and wherever prohibited by law. Subject to all federal, state and local laws and regulations. 4. Arizonans and Maryland residents need only send their name, address, city, state and zip code on 3" x 5" piece of paper. Mail to Armstrong Solarian American Craftsman Room Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 10, New York, N.Y. 10046. Only one entry per envelope. All prizes will be awarded. 5. Grand Prize does not include items (carpentry, labor, window treatments, family room paneling, ceiling beams, or platforms).

'Gibbsville' execs set

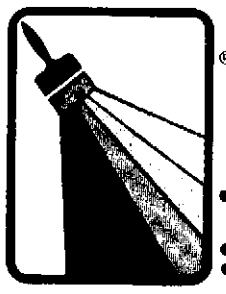

John Furia has been named producer and Larry Brody has been named executive story consultant for "Gibbsville," the new dramatic series that will be presented Wednesday nights on the NBC Television Network beginning in the fall.

Academy Award winner Gig Young and John Savage star in the series, which is based on characters from the short stories of John O'Hara.

Executive producer of the TV series is David Gerber.

"Gibbsville" is set in a small Pennsylvania town. Savage portrays Jim Malloy, cub reporter for the town's daily newspaper who learns about life from Ray Whitehead (played by Young), a once-worldly newsman whose recent life has been plagued by a series of personal failures.

Trouble-saving tips on painting

Painting can be fun and easy or it can be a miserable mess, depending on how it is done. So before you start slinging paint around your apartment, here are some trouble-saving tips many other painters have picked up the hard way.

If you are painting finished furniture or woodwork, nothing beats a good overall sanding. If you are lazy, sand the parts that get the most wear. Then wash the whole thing with "liquid sander" to take off wax, dirt and grease and soften old paint so the surface is more receptive.

Always mask off woodwork when you paint walls or the floor when painting woodwork with a roll of inexpensive masking paper with one sticky edge. When you mask off a project, remove the tape while the paint is still wet; you'll get a smoother line.

Remove all knobs, hinges, and other hardware in preparation for painting furniture. Wood knobs are easier to paint if you put the screw back in part way and hold the knob like a popsicle; or set the knob on the neck of a pop bottle and spray paint. You'll save time and do a better job. If you are painting furniture with legs, drive a short nail in the bottom of each to boost them off the floor, so they won't stick to newspaper or whatever you use to catch drips. Place legless cabinets, chests, and the like on old magazines or wood blocks for the same reason.

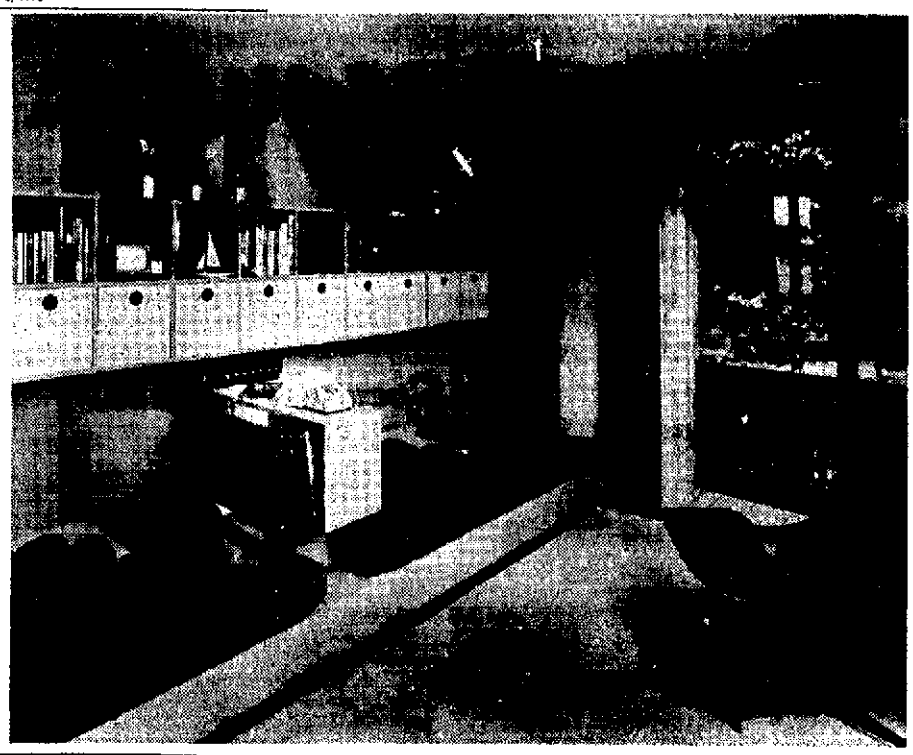

When you open a can of paint, punch several holes in the groove the lid fits into. The paint slopped into the groove will run back into the can. When you put the lid on, it will seal against the side of the groove. At the end of a job — before you start tapping the lid on with a hammer — drop an old rag over the can so you won't splash paint all over yourself. Smaller cans seal best if you set them flat on the floor and step on the top. To keep paint from drying out in storage, invert the can once to seal around the lid.

When painting, submerge your brush bristles only about a third into the paint, and the brush will be easier to clean later. Buy good quality brushes and take care of them. Don't bother with cheap ones; the bristles come out and they don't carry enough paint from the can to adequately do the job.

Cheap paint thinner or mineral spirits clean as well as turpentine and cost less. Of course, if you are using water-based paint, plain water or soap and water will probably do the job. It's not necessary to clean your brush between coats of enamel — just put a tablespoon of thinner in a plastic bag, stick the brush in, and tape the bag tightly around the brush handle.

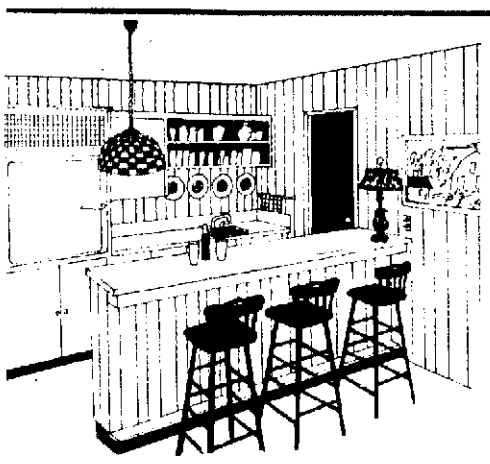

Spray paint is handy for small projects, but because it's thin, plan to apply several light coats. If you use more than one can, try using only one nozzle so you will have a clean one for the next job. In fact, it pays to hoard clean spray can nozzles — it's nice to have spare ones on hand because they clog easily.

Most competing brands of spray paint aren't compatible, so if you are going to paint something with several colors, buy them all in the same brand. It's disheartening to see paint wrinkle and come off where colors overlap.

Redwood room is rugged for teenager

Easy-to-Install 1 6 redwood paneling provides an attractive, rugged and durable interior for this teenager's room. Built-in redwood shelves and storage units encourage the youngster to keep the room in order. For other ideas , send for an informative full-color booklet, "Redwood Interiors," by sending 35 cents to Interior Booklet, California Redwood Association, 617 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Calif. 94111. The booklet contains photographs of paneling applications along with installation tips and finish recommendations.

Snack center cuts snarl in kitchen

Diverting traffic from a busy kitchen at meal preparation times is just one of the bonus features of a refreshment center built into the corner of a family room.

Hungry children coming home from school can be shunted off to fix their own snacks, and the area can be used to serve refreshments before dinner parties.

One family incorporated a handsome, convenient serving counter that faces a wall with built-in cabinets, a small refrigerator and a work counter with sink.

The built-ins fit along an end wall of the family room, with cabinet doors fabricated of the same 1x6-inch western pine board paneling that covers the walls.

The half-sized refrigerator, framed in at counter height for easy access, holds soft drinks, milk, fruit and other snack items for the youngsters, and mixes, ice and hors d'oeuvres for entertaining.

The counter extending out from the adjoining wall is framed with 2x4-inch western lumber, is faced with the board paneling and has a top of laminated plastic for easy cleaning.

Tall wood counter stools, the kind children seem to like, were purchased unfinished and painted a lively color to complement the counter top and other furnishings.

The refreshment center also provides a pleasant gathering area and cuts down on the usual throng that collects in the kitchen before dinner parties.

The wood paneling is finished only with a coat of sealer, to retain the natural color and grain textures. If the paneling is rough-sawn, a semi-transparent stain is recommended.

Paint color selection can save energy

Our Colonial fathers were knowledgeable in many areas other than how to throw tea into Boston harbor or draw up the Declaration of Independence. For instance, they certainly were aware of what they were doing when they applied dark colors to their homes, particularly in the northern colonies.

"Colonial colors" were mostly of deep tones and they tended to absorb far more heat than lighter tones. And in homes largely heated by fireplaces, heat conservation was paramount.

By the beginning of the 18th century, the Colonists began to move away from their log cabins and were building "salt box houses" and "Cape Codders." At first, they painted these structures only on the interior but gradually exterior paints were applied.

One of the first colors to appear in the colonies was blue. A green was made of unscorched pulverized coffee and egg white. Next appeared deep golds, browns, brick reds, black and bronzes.

As the nation approaches its Bicentennial, shoulder to shoulder with a continuing energy problem, local Fuller-O'Brien paint dealers are offering a palette of "Colonial colors" after the pattern set by our forefathers.

The colonists had little risk of paint peeling, but many modern homeowners with tightly sealed homes will encounter this peeling problem, a condition in which the paint becomes detached and raises up to form blisters or bubbles. This generally results because a "house has to breathe."

Most paint, particularly flat paint, will permit molsture to pass through. A heavy build-up, however, will act as a barrier. Moisture that is trapped in the siding under the paint film and then heated by the sun, turns to vapor which forces paint blistering.

If blistering is minimal, scrape all loosely adhering paint down to the surface, spot prime and re-coat.

The BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

MIRACLES HAVE CEASED NO. 2

As we noted last week, a miracle is that which either transcends natural law or suspends it in order to achieve an effect designed by God. And, in all of the examples that we have in the Bible, the one thing that you will note is prevalent in every case is the fact that there is no doubt in anyone's mind that it was, in fact, a miracle.

During the lifetime of Jesus and in the beginning of the church that was established on the first pentecost after the resurrection of Christ, a number of miracles were performed. There are approximately thirty miracles recorded in Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. We could very easily list them in four different categories: miracles over nature, miracles over death, miracles over demons, and miracles over disease.

In the performing of these miracles we wish to notice one or two under each heading and observe that there could be no doubt as to there being a miracle performed. Nature—turning the water into wine (John 2), stilling of the tempest (Matt. 8: 23-27). The miracles that were performed were immediate and complete, with no faith required on anyone's part except the one who was performing the miracle. Death—No faith was required of the ones upon whom the miracle was performed. And, the miracles were immediate and complete as in the cases of the Nobleman's son in John 4, Jairus' daughter in Matt. 9:23-26, and the raising of Lazarus in John 11. Demons—The demons had a devil's faith, but such was not required to perform the miracle. All miracles in connection with demons (Demonica at Capernaum, Mark 1:23-27; Lunatic child, Matt. 17:14-21) were immediate and complete. Disease—There are fifteen miracles recorded that were performed by Jesus over disease. Faith is mentioned in ten of these miracles. No faith is mentioned in five of these. Only one was required to have faith. All of these miracles were immediate and complete. (Blind man, Matt. 9; cleansing of the leper Matt. 8; et.al.)

One has only to glance briefly at the miracles of Christ to see the difference between His works and the works of the so-called modern "miracle worker." Who can deny it?

CH. 2 special wins award

KNXT's "A Gift Of Life" has won a San Francisco State University 1976 Preceptor Award.

The community action special on kidney transplants was broadcast in early December of 1975.

The half-hour show examined the lives of four patients who had had kidney transplants. It explored the dangers inherent in the operation and the promises offered by it. It emphasized the great need for donated organs.

"A Gift of Life" was produced by KNXT and Dave Bell Associates Inc., in cooperation with the Los Angeles County Medical Association.

The award-winning program will be rebroadcast on Channel 2 on Tuesday, May 18, at 10:30 p.m.

MANVILLE MANUFACTURING CORPORATION

5722 TUJUNGA AVE., NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CA 91601 (213) 877-1515

Geometrics and supergraphics create a dashing room with very simple ingredients. Rectangles, circles and criss-cross sashes inter-act in this lively room.

Dramatic room on a budget

After a grocery shopping expedition, it doesn't seem as though there's much of the household budget left over to do anything about the house — at least for most of us. All is not as bleak as it seems, however. It's possible to live well and eat satisfactoryily, too.

The trick is to know how to do it! One of the solutions to this problem is the larger selection of good-looking modestly-priced furnishings being shown in stores now. The day of having to spend a fortune to furnish a home nicely is over. Today, more and more manufacturers have gotten the message that there are plenty of people with taste who aren't living in mansions.

Being a smart shopper is always part of the secret of making your money buy more. Don't just settle for whats immediately available. Look around. Comparison shop. Ask questions, particularly about quality. For example, such great things have been done with manmade materials that furniture with plastics are equal to and often superior to more costly wood pieces. Frequently, you can't even tell the difference by sight or feel, the furniture finishes reproduce the look and texture of wood or leather graining so perfectly — and the cost is considerably les.

Bright color and strong design is another device used by the knowing that can substitute for elaboate furnishings in delgning a room with flair.

In the roon shown, created by designer Peggy Walker for a family with a child away at school, the idea was to make a room that could serve equally well for a guest room or a retreat when the youngster returned for vacation. The furniture selected was simple, moderately priced and extremely practical. Drama was created with color and geometric forms.

The bedspread with its gold, brown, black and white polka dots on a bright royal blue background sets the color scheme.

Since the room was small-scaled, night stands were chosen rather than a single large dresser and, for greater impact were used in tandem rather than on either side of the bed in the conventional manner. Thus, they provide drama and ample short-term storage needs in a very limited space.

The rug is an all wool shag rug made in Denmark from designs created here especially to blend with American furnishings. It's white criss-cross motifs on a rown ground are a perfect geometric foil for the circular designs on the spread. A new young firm, Concepts International's design philosophy is based on the conviction that there are a lot of us with more taste than money and their prices for long wearing natural wool rugs are moderate.

The room is given its special eclat with the final touch — the circular designs in royal blue painted on the gold wall, echoing the motifs on the spread. For a touch of whimsy, the two dogs were cut out of a poster and mounted with wallpaper paste.

Bright pillows in blue, black, brown, gold and white reiterate the color notes.

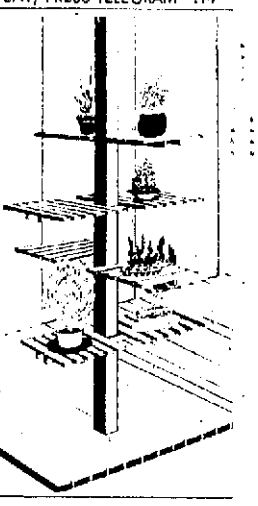

The total retail cost of re-doing this room was about $350 excluding the paint and the chair which the owners already had. All of the merchandise is readily available in department and specialty stores. It only takes some looking and a bit of doing and you, too, can have a room with drama.

Greenery

Greenery — hanging plants or potted arrangements for desk or floor — brings new life to a room.

To achieve their maximum decorative effect, it's important to give plants a natural background.

Post platforms add patio color

Posts of 4x4-inch wood are commonly used to support patio covers, trellises along the front of a house and arbors or other yard structures.

But the posts also can double as supports for pots of flowers or other plants. One idea is to nail 24-inch, 1x2 slats on edge to opposite sides of the post, then nail on platforms of spaced 1x2s on each side.

By alternating these platforms on the post up to about eye level, a variety of plants in different sizes can be displayed.

Stairs link living areas

Idle rooms and unimproved floor space are fast disappearing in homes as families beat the high cost of moving by remodeling attics, basements or garages into new bedrooms or leisure areas.

One of the more creative renovations visited recently began with knocking out the wall at the front entry and adding a new living room at the front of the house. More interesting, however, is the new party room and how to get there.

Originally, the only way to the unfinished room was down the back stairs behind the kitchen and through the basement laundry room. All right for family, maybe, but not too good for entertaining.

So the couple cut a round hole 5½ feet across in the middle of the floor between the new living room and the family room-dining area. Then they dug a rectangular hole alongside the basement room, so they wouldn't take away any floor space.

This rectangular stairwell was bricked in and faced with cedar shingles left over from the living room addition. The shingles blend handsomely with the cedar board paneling on the walls of the new living room and party room.

A railing of metal rods and wood rails was added around the stairwell in the entryway for safety. A welder friend fabricated the circular stairs following the couple's design.

The stairs were brought in in sections and welded in place. The steps are iron frames with wood pieces cut to fit and set in. The treads are covered with carpeting that is removable for cleaning or replacing.

Carpeting, white paint and the cedar paneling add brightness and color hardly imaginable before the renovation began. And the new stairs make it easy for an overflow of friends to move downstairs into the new party room.

Sewing hideaway

A complete sewing center and cabinets can be built in behind louver wood doors on a bedroom wall.

Take home safety precautions

Winter or summer, the home accident is always with us. A check of potential danger spots and a review of safety rules is in order.

1. WINDOWS. Window shade cords or venetian blind cords are always tempting to young children. They should be kept out of reach as much as possible. For greater peace of mind consider custom aluminum, thin louvered window blinds.

2. HALLS AND STAIRWAYS. Are these well lighted? Are halls free of wall fixtures and shelving? Is stair carpeting tacked properly?

3. STORAGE AREAS. Attics should be free of old clothes, magazines, oily rags, paints, kerosene, etc. These are highly inflammable.

4. GARAGE. Do not store insecticides, lye, weed killers or other poisons here, except in locked cabinets. Never leave car motor running in closed garage.

5. KITCHENS. Don't overload electric circuits with appliances. Keep household cleansers out of children's reach. Mop up slippery floors and don't overwax. Watch out for grease fires. Keep carbon dioxide extinguisher or baking soda handy for putting out such fires — not water.

6. LIVING ROOM. Screen fireplace completely when in use. Make sure scatter rugs are secure. Use deep ash trays to prevent spilling.

New titles added to "Home Pro" guides

Four new books in 3M Company's "Home Pro" series of how-to guides are now available for bicyclists, gardeners and handymen.

The soft-cover volumes, ranging in length from 172 to 188 pages, are:

• "The Home Pro Guide to Roof and Gutter Installation and Repair," which tells how to make roofing preparations, install new roofing, make roof repairs and install gutters;

• "The Home Pro Guide to Carpentry," which gives guidelines for basic carpentry as well as directions for making frames for floors, walls, ceilings and roofs, installing windows and doors, and adding a room or wing to an existing structure;

• "The Home Pro Guide to Bicycle Repair and Maintenance," which includes maintenance charts as well as procedures for everything from adjusting a seat to removing and installing a derailleur;

• "The Home Pro Guide to Vegetable Gardening and Food Preserving," which covers every step from planning a food garden to freezing, canning, drying and storing vegetables.

All "Home Pro" volumes contain step-by-step illustrations, keyed by number to text on the same page. Language easily understood by do-it-yourselfers is used throughout, and the guides have been use-tested to make sure they contain all information needed by a novice to complete the projects outlined.

The four new volumes bring the "Home Pro" library to 14 titles.

The "Home Pro" books are available at home improvement stores, nurseries and other retail outlets.

Q. Is it a fact that before Bob Hope married his wife Dolores he made her in their wedding ceremony promise "to love, honor and applaud" instead of promise "to love, honor, and obey"? –Bruce Armstrong, Greensboro, N.C.

A. Hope, like all entertainers, is a "ham" who loves applause—but he never made that dictum a part of his wedding ceremony.

DOLORES AND BOB HOPE

Q. Is Gerald Ford a conservative, a moderate, or a liberal? Is Jimmy Carter a conservative, moderate, or liberal?—T. Brock, Memphis, Tenn.

A. Gerald Ford is and always has been a conservative. Jimmy Carter is a Democrat of undetermined political philosophy.

Q. The Enforcement Bureau of the Civil Aeronautics Board recommended that the top corporate officers of Braniff Airways be dismissed or the airline be grounded on charges of making illegal political contributions and kickbacks to travel agents. To date has Harding Lawrence, head of Braniff, or any other Braniff executive been fired?—R. M., Dallas, Tex.

A. The CAB did not follow up on the recommendation of its Enforcement Bureau. It merely made Braniff Airways pay a civil penalty of $300,000. Harding Lawrence and other Braniff officials continue to lead charmed lives.

Q. Isn't Leon Jaworski, the Watergate prosecutor, working on still another Watergate book?—Owen Murphy, San Antonio, Tex.

A. Jaworski's Watergate book will be published by the Reader's Digest this fall.

Q. Has Marlene Dietrich ever recovered from the leg she broke in Australia? Will she perform again? —Leon Schneider, Reading, Pa.

A. Marlene, who broke her leg in Sydney last Sept. 29, has recovered, is at this writing in New York. At age 75 it is problematical whether she will ever perform again, but she is a woman of spirit and determination, and if doctors say she can, she will.

Q. Who was the American heart specialist who traveled with Mr. and Mrs. Nixon on their recent journey to China—and who paid for his services?— L. T., San Diego, Cal.

A. No American heart specialist accompanied the Nixons on their Chinese trip. The doctor assigned to them was a Chinese specialist in heart and lung resuscitation, Dr. Shang Tee-ting. A medical corpsman, Robert Dunn, who administers anti-coagulants to Nixon, was also on the trip, and most of Nixon's motorcades in South China were followed by a Red Cross ambulance.

Q. Jane Fonda has finished a movie called "Dick and Jane." Can you tell me if it is a political movie?— Harriet Burger, Oak Park, Ill.

A. "Dick and Jane" is a comedy starring Jane Fonda and George Segal. It concerns a young, affluent couple who turn to robbery after the husband loses his well-paying job as an aerospace engineer.

GEORGE SEGAL AND JANE FONDA

Q. How much money will Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward get for the movie "All the President's Men"?—R.R.M., Bakersfield, Cal.

A. $350,000 plus $100,000 deferred against 10 percent of the gross.

FRED MALEK

Q. One of the most ruthless hatchet men of the Nixon Administration was Fred Malek, whose job it was to fire and punish so-called "enemies." What has happened to this sweet fellow?—B. Maxwell, Columbia, S.C.

A. Malek is a vice president with the Marriott Corp., one of Nixon's leading supporters. Malek also teaches a course at Harvard's Kennedy Institute of Politics on "The Art and Politics of Public Management."

Q. In basic military capacity, how does the United States rank compared to the Soviet Union? Ronald Reagan says we are number two. What does the U.S. Government say?—Lorna Rothschild, New York City.

A. According to Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, "Over the past 10 to 15 years, the U.S. has moved from a military position of superiority to one of rough equivalency. If the trend continues we could move out of rough equivalency."

Q. Hasn't actress Cybill Shepherd dropped director Peter Bogdanovich for singer Elvis Presley? –Barbara Jane Lomax, Atlanta, Ga.

A. Shepherd and Bogdanovich are not the twosome they used to be, but Presley hasn't supplanted Bogdanovich.

CYBILL SHEPHERD

Q. The best-selling book in France thus far this year is "The Totalitarian Temptation." I understand it is all about sex. Can you outline the plot?—Eleanor Harrison, Kinston, N.C.

A. "The Totalitarian Temptation," by Jean-François Revel, is a political tract. Revel is a socialist, and in his book he points out that the enemy of socialism is communism, not capitalism, a thesis which the French find alarming.

Family room can enrich your living

As a family grows, both in numbers and in the ages of younger members, more living space is needed for expanded activities and to allow parents and children to spread out.

Well-planned additions and remodelings not only add space, but also can increase the efficiency of the original house, add to its total livability and give the house a new face.

Our family accomplished all this and more by converting the carport of a well-done builder house into a master suite of bedroom, dressing room and bath, and by adding a family room at the front of the house.

The new family room includes a conversation-lounging-television area gathered around a free-standing fireplace. An exposed aggregate hearth surrounding the fireplace matches material used for the entry and walkway.

Fir ceiling decking and heavy fir beams that extend past the walls as overhangs for the walkway, and a large window wall visually blend the comfortable family room with the newly landscaped entry garden.

A sitting deck, large planter box and tall fences of vertical 2x2-inch western wood were added along with evergreen plantings.

The original exterior wall of the kitchen was removed when the new family room was added, for free flow of space between the two rooms.

Western cedar board paneling applied horizontally to the walls of the family room and adjoining breakfast nook enhances the open mood, and adds color and texture to the walls.

Tips on choosing a family sink

Many families that feel they cannot move into a new home at the present time are remodeling their old ones. A favorite place to remodel is the kitchen.

If your family belongs to this group, be sure to choose your sink carefully. Time was when a sink was a plain "bowl" with drainboards and storage space beneath. Now it comes equipped with all the accessories that a true food preparation and cleanup center should have. Here's what's available according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau:

1. Two or three-bowl sinks to multiply convenience.

2. Electric food waste disposers connected to the drain and installed beneath the sink. They operate at the flick of a wall switch.

3. Electric dishwashers that are many-cycled to handle all types of cooking equipment and dishes, including delicate stemware.

4. Faucets that are single-handle, push-pull or dial. Separate models for hot and cold water also are, of course, available. Faucets come equipped with aerators to reduce splashing as well as the amount of water needed because millions of air bubbles are introduced into the stream.

5. Sprays with flexible metal hose.

6. Hot water dispensers for instant drinks.

7. Ice-makers.

8. Dispensers for liquid soap, detergent or hand lotion.

9. Integral lighting.

The best location for a sink is under a window for natural light and a view. Most sinks are installed 36 inches from the floor to suit the average woman, who's said to be 5'4" tall. Make sure your sink is installed at the right height for you, to save you backaches and general fatigue.

—Garden workshop— in a redwood gazebo

Redwood garden shelter makes an attractive outdoor party room that can serve many practical uses. Serving counter for summer buffets can convert to a convenient gardening work surface.

Do-it-yourselfers will be digging into more home gardening projects this spring than ever before. For green thumbing or outdoor living in general, a redwood garden shelter can make a graceful and practical multi-purpose outdoor room in your backyard.

This year you can design and build your own shelter with garden grades of redwood for much less than you think. These knot and sapwood-containing grades — Construction Heart, Construction Common, and Merchantable — have the weatherability and stability of more expensive clear grades, with a rustic texture ideal for a garden shelter.

You can design a redwood garden shelter to do whatever you want it to. It can be a practical potting and planting center as well as an outdoor party room or secluded retreat.

You can build shelves, cabinets, and cupboards for folding lawn chairs, bench cushions, and garden party knick-knacks. These spaces can also store long-handled garden tools, power tools, a lawnmower, garbage cans, and hoses. A serving counter for summer buffets can convert to a convenient gardening work surface.

As extra storage space or a poolside service room, a shelter can frame a view or screen out too-close neighbors, show off favorite plants, or give a garden a new focus. Some garden layouts suggest other redwood structures, for example, a trellis or colonnade that can be used as a shaded walkway or entry.

Depending on your skill and needs, you can build a redwood garden shelter with simple post and beam construction, or design a more complicated structure. You should also think about where to put your shelter. Do you want to use it to catch or escape from the sun — and wind — or let in some sunlight for potted plants?

Different roof materials can control light and blend uniquely with your garden. Shingles, shakes, reed fencing, bamboo, window screening, lath, louvers, canvas, glass, or plastic can be simply nailed on. Perhaps you want removable roof members attached to a framework fastened to the rafters in sections, or eggcrate blocking covered with canvas or matting.

Where do you want water outlets, or electrical outlets for lanterns and power tools? Cabinets can be designed especially for long-handled tools, or with shelves for small tools. You can plan to store your lawnmower in a ground-level cupboard that lets you roll it straight in.

Your gardening counter can be high enough to fit garbage cans underneath. A sliding door on children's wagon wheels to enclose your workshop can be locked.

Decay and insect resistant Construction Heart grade redwood is recommended for posts, retaining walls, planters, steps, greenhouse framing, and shelves subject to periodic moisture, on, in, or within six inches of the ground.

Less known but most economical for decking, fence boards, trellises, and benches above ground are Construction Common and Merchantable grades. These contain knots (as does Construction Heart) and cream-colored flashes of sapwood that blend naturally with a garden, but should not be used in actual ground contact.

For cabinet doors requiring close fit, you can use Clear (knotless) grades, available Certified Kiln Dried.

In building a redwood garden shelter, you'll find that aluminum alloy nails and non-corrosive fastenings far outlast plain iron, steel, or cement-coated nails in outdoor use. Nails galvanized by other than the hot-dip process deteriorate, leaving black marks on the wood, and lose holding power. Top quality hardware may cost extra but its performance is worth it.

Redwood's pink to cinnamon brown colors blend and weather without finishes to a bleached gray. However, redwood also holds finishes and paint better than most woods, eliminating many maintenance problems.

Redwood has low density, high dimensional stability, and high resistance to checking.

Available in smooth-planed or rough resawn textures, its long straight grain and long board lengths make it easy to work with and it contains no pitch.

Where, how to buy material

Once you decide to build a redwood garden shelter, pay a visit to your local lumber dealer. He'll help you decide what grades and sizes of redwood you'll need, and perhaps give you some construction tips. Ask for economical garden grades of redwood, and keep in mind that heartwood grades must be used for any application in or on the ground.

Check the thicknesses, widths and lengths of your lumber. Widths and thicknesses are slightly less than nominal sizes because lumber is reduced when planed in the mill. Lengths are often longer than nominal.

Lumber purchases for a good-sized project need careful planning, and as with any large home project, allow two to three weeks from order to delivery time.

Remember that top quality nails and hardware may cost extra, but they far outlast cheaper materials. Your dealer can also give advice on brands and applications of finishes for your shelter, such as water repellents, stains, or paint.

This gardening workshop built of garden grades of redwood includes special cupboards for long-handled tools, shelves for pots and small tools, and a work surface under which garbage cans fit.

A compact do-it-yourself redwood gardening center has a convenient work counter and cabinets for gardening and power tools, garbage cans, hoses, fertilizer. A sliding door on children's wagon wheels completely encloses and locks work and storage areas.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN

GERALD FORD WITH CARLA HILLS: SHE'S QUALIFIED

WANTED: FORD'S RUNNING MATE If Gerald Ford wins the Republican Presidential candidacy this August--and at this writing the chances are excellent that he will -- what sort of running mate will he choose?

Will it be a Boston Brahmin like Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson who always wears his political track suit, ready to run for anything? Will it be Ford's old pal from the Midwest, Donald "Rummy" Rumsfeld, his ex-chief of staff and his current Defense Secretary? Or will Ford seek a geographical advantage by edging towards a Southern U.S. Senator like Howard Baker or William Brock, both tried and tested conservatives from Tennessee?

Or how about a governor like Christopher Bond of Missouri, Bob Ray of Iowa or Dan Evans of Washington? All are possibilities.

Then, too, Ford has big John Connally of Texas, black Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, 65-year-old Ronald Reagan of California, and Vice President Nelson Rockefeller as additional possibilities.

Gerald Ford is not a particularly colorful or charismatic character. He is a wily, veteran politician far more complex than he appears. He is not going to choose a running mate until he carefully studies the Democratic party slate. And then he may offer the nation a surprise, possibly in the form of a woman Vice Presidential candidate, Carla Hills, his Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

The President's wife, Betty, would like that very much, and so, too, would millions of women voters throughout the country. Carla Hills is as brilliant, competent and qualified as any man Ford could choose to run with. She would add some luster to a campaign which seems to be heading for Dullsville.

FATAL DRIVER PROFILE What sort of driver is most likely to cause a fatal highway accident because he's been drinking too much?

The U.S. Department of Transportation has compiled a "fatal driver profile" drawn from special in-depth investigations of alcohol-related accidents in Boston, Baltimore, Albuquerque, and Oklahoma City.

The "fatal driver" is usually a male, 25 to 35 years old, a heavy or problem drinker who often prefers beer to liquor. He probably has a high school education, drives an older car, is single, separated, or divorced.

He displays overly aggressive drinking habits and is the greatest threat to highway safety during the early morning hours of the weekend.

CONTRACEPTIVE STAMP In China, instead of taking the pill 21 days a month, women who want to prevent pregnancy take "the stamp," which is made from an edible paper and performs the same function.

Now "the stamp" is about to be tested in England by Schering Chemicals, the German pharmaceutical house that developed the first European anti-birth stamp.

"What we've done," explains Dr. Alan Pitchford, medical director of Schering Chemicals, "is to produce a special edible paper, impregnating each tiny square with the right amount of hormone."

Before Schering can market the stamp in England, it will have to be tested for a minimum of one year on 1000 women and then evaluated.

OLDER MEANS SMARTER Senior citizens with a reasonable educational background "do not lose their marbles" with age. Just the opposite--claims Gisela Lavouvie-Vief, professor of educational psychology at the University of Wisconsin.

So long as a senior citizen retains good health, his or her verbal ability will remain constant or improve with age. A study by the National Institutes of Health holds that if as a college graduate you knew 20,000 words, you will know 65,000 by age 65.

CHAIRMAN KHADAFY'S THOUGHTS Colonel Moammar Khadafy, Chairman of Libya, who is regarded in many intelligence circles as nuttier than a fruitcake and therefore extremely dangerous, has written and released the first chapter of his "Green Book."

Khadafy's book, similar in form to Chairman Mao's quotations and admonitions, contains such wisdom as, "Green is the color of sensibility. Even for tired eyes, doctors recommend looking at green. Green is the symbol of life and fertility and paradise.

"It's also the color of new contestation, after the passing of red, black, and white contestations, the color of spiritual contestation."

Khadafy in his book advocates the replacement of political parties by "popular conferences and committees" in which the people represent themselves.

Khadafy is opposed to any accommodation with Israel and has sought to merge his country with Egypt and Tunisia, both of which turned him down. He is now attempting a third merger, this one with Algeria.

Observations

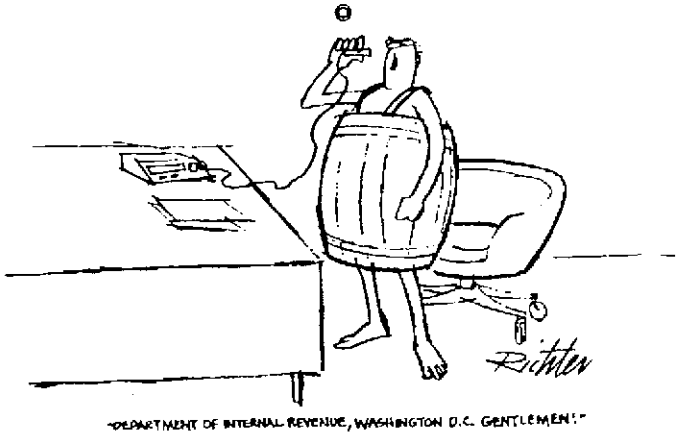

Erratic pulse. We've got a lot of faith in the American people, once they know the facts. But on energy matters, the facts must get lost somewhere between the television screen and the sports page. The Roper pollsters asked a cross section of Americans why they thought the 1974 gasoline shortage ended when it did. Most of those interviewed said it was "because oil companies had gotten gasoline prices up to where they wanted them." Hardly anyone chose the real reasons: the Arabs lifted their boycott on oil shipments to the United States (and restored their production cutbacks).

Wrong guesses. We wish we knew how facts get garbled, because myths give us all sorts of headaches. When Roper's interviewers asked how much gasoline prices would come down if the oil companies passed all their profits to the consumer through lower prices, the average answer was 13½ cents a gallon. Actually, on all petroleum sales, worldwide, Mobil averages less than a penny and a half a gallon in after-tax profit. Opinion Research Corporation put it another way: How much profit on each dollar of sales do you think the average oil company makes after taxes? The answer: 61 cents. The true answer for Mobil in 1975: less than 4 cents.

It can be done. One of every four aluminum cans used last year was recycled, the Aluminum Association estimates. There was also an energy saving: 95 percent of the energy that would be needed to convert the metal from ore is saved by recycling all-aluminum cans. Use of recycled paper, textiles, metals, and other materials, which fell drastically in 1975, is now showing signs of an upturn, reports a recycling industry executive. A recovery in recovery, you might say.

Bottom of the barrel. In his recent study, "Government Interference with the Development of Small Business", University of Maryland Professor Armand J. Thieblot, Jr., says: " . . . much of the assistance given small businesses by government was made necessary by imposition of government regulations or other government interference in the first place."

ADVISORY COMMITTEES

When in doubt, form a committee. Washington bureaucrats have obeyed that rule for more than a quarter of a century. Accordingly, hundreds of advisory committees have been established by the federal government so that individuals from the private sector can theoretically assist the federal bureaucracy in formulating public policy.

One of the newest committees is the 10-member task force created by President Ford to develop "clear, enforceable standards to prevent questionable activities" and bribes by U.S. corporations operating in foreign countries.

Most of these committees are a waste of time, manpower, and money. Perhaps this new one headed by Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson will prove an exception, but we doubt it.

For example, in describing the Richardson task force to reporters, Ford explained that it "is not a group that will undertake enforcement, but it will...study the very broad ramifications...in this very delicate field" and make recommendations by the end of the year. Gobbledygook!

On the subject of federal advisory committees, it is interesting to note that, for the most part, a relatively small group of the same people from business, labor and government serve.

An examination of the 1412-page index to the membership of federal advisory committees shows that 196 persons serve on anywhere from four to 15 committees. Specifically, 107 persons serve on four advisory committees, 47 persons serve on five advisory committees, 21 persons serve on six advisory committees, and 21 others serve on seven or more.

Some of the more popular advisory committee members are: Charles M. Baer of the Communications Satellite Corp., 15 committees; Edward E. Benham, ITT Corp., 10; Joseph Gatti, Federal Aviation Administration, 10; Robert S. Stone, National Institutes of Health, 12; Raymond B. Crowell, Federal Communications Commission, nine.

The index also shows that 29 large companies have from 21 to 95 representatives on advisory committees, universities and institutes have 23 to 35 representatives, and the AFL-CIO has 92.

The growth of these quasi-governmental bodies is apparently endless.

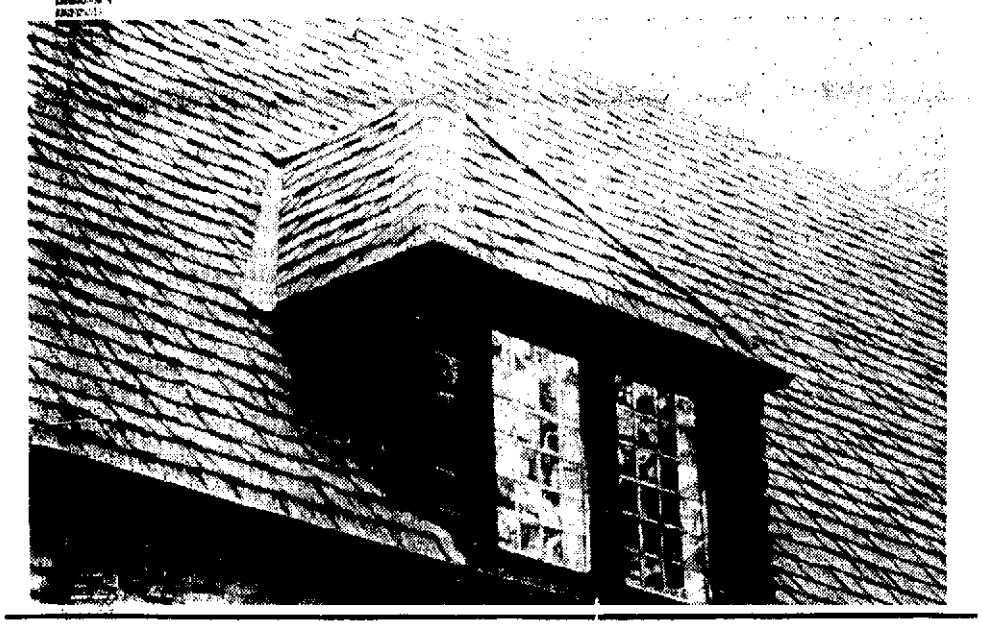

PRINCESS MARGARET

HER ROYAL HIPPYNESS

Princess Margaret of Great Britain is now referred to in her own country as "her royal hippyness."

It's not only because the Queen's younger sister is growing progressively broader in the beam, it's because she's been seen frequently in the company of Roddy Llewellyn, 28, youngest son of Henry Llewellyn, who owns the Whitehead Breweries in Wales.

Roddy and his friends have established a hippy-type commune in a farmhouse near Bath where they've been visited by the 45-year-old princess, who is separated from her husband, Antony Armstrong-Jones.

Exterior decorating? Start at top

If sprucing up the house exterior tops your list of improvements this year, it's a good idea to start at the top, especially if replacing the roof is involved.

In metropolitan and suburban areas where lots are often smaller and homes located close together, the roof's height, size, color and material are the design element that give the entire house its character and appeal.

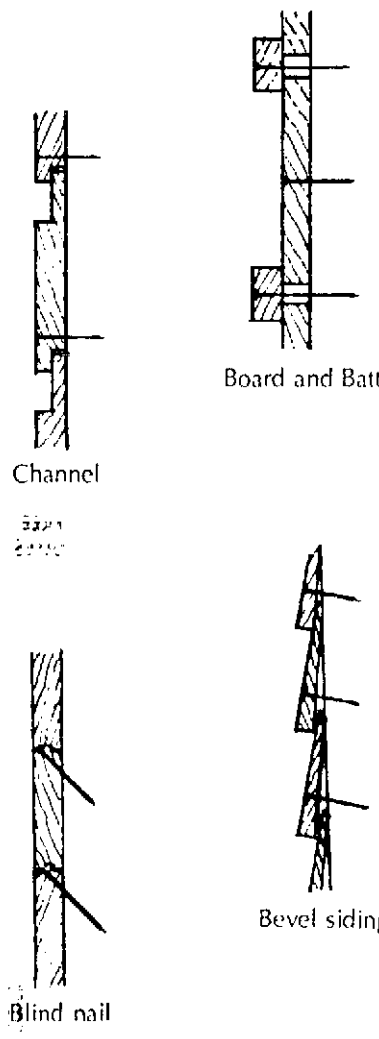

Unlike the siding, which can be repainted periodically, the roof color you decide on is likely to be around for a good many years. Heavy-textured asphalt shingles, for instance, are designed for long life, in many cases up to 25 years. Choosing the roof color first, therefore, becomes the prime rule in exterior design.

Dark colored shingles are popular for expansive roofs with a variety of planes and setbacks because they serve to bring all the elements together cohesively.

A light colored roof on the other hand tends to make a short house appear longer.

Asphalt shingles offer the homeowner virtually unlimited opportunities in avoiding lackluster roofing due to the availability of numerous colors, blends and textures. Earthtone shades of brown, green and slate are growing in popularity. These low-maintenance, durable asphalt shingles help relate the exterior of a home with its environment. Random butts and deep textures also create attractive shadow lines that give a roof a rugged three-dimensional appearance.

Nailing care helps siding

Sawn wood siding will resist rain and sun as much as decades longer if properly fastened in the first place.

Nailing patterns must allow for wood's natural shrinking and swelling when exposed to alternating damp and dry conditions according to experts of the Western Red Cedar Lumber Association.

Movement is slight, but if fastenings interfere splitting or buckling can result. Siding lumber is shaped to overlap, so that normal size changes won't hinder its ability to shed rain.

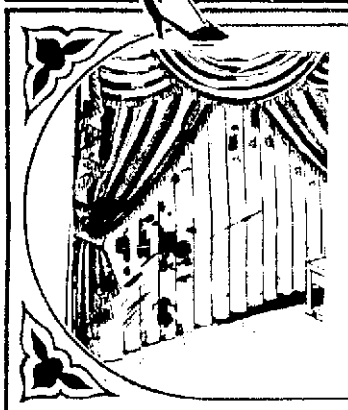

For bevel siding applied horizontally, the most popular style, only one nail is driven in each piece at each vertical stud. It's located slightly more than an inch above the butt edge, high enough to clear the thin upper edge of the board lapped under it.

Board and batten siding is nailed at centers of both pieces which permits their widths to change freely. This style is suitable for vertical use only.

Flush-joint, tongue-and-groove siding, preferably a vertical type, can be blind nailed along the tongue edge, for boards up to nominal six inches in width. If wider, boards should be face-nailed with two nails at each bearing.

VICTOR HUGO

ISABELLE ADJANI

VICTOR HUGO WOMANIZER?

Victor Hugo, the French poet, playwright and novelist who gave the world "Les Misérables" and one of literature's most memorable characters in the hunchback of Notre Dame, was a scrupulous, respectable moralist--until one day he became an indiscriminate woman-chaser, bedding down with every female he could lay his hands on.

In two years, his mistress Juliette Drouet estimated, he engaged in affairs with at least 200 women. He was insatiable.

"It was not unusual for him to see an attractive prostitute on the street in the morning and bed her before lunch, then go to a rendezvous with an actress, leave her in time for a very private meeting with a courtesan, and hurry to Juliette's apartment for dinner and a night of love-making."

So reports Samuel Edwards in his biography "Victor Hugo."

What changed Hugo (1802-85) from a cautious, industrious husband and father of four children into a sex-ridden womanizer?

He discovered that his wife was carrying on with the noted critic, Sainte-Beuve, and that all Paris knew about it. He then took as his mistress courtesan Julienne Gauvain, also known as Juliette Drouet. He confined her to a little flat which he insisted that he alone could visit. Of all the women in Hugo's life, only Juliette remained faithful to the end. She died in 1883. Her liaison with Hugo lasted 50 years. At age 76 Hugo promised to give up all his "cheap little romances" for Juliette and did.

Victor Hugo was undoubtedly one of the greatest, most colorful figures in French literature. The sad history of his daughter, who ran off with an English officer, has been made into a current film, "The Story of Adele H," starring Isabelle Adjani, possibly the best and prettiest young actress in France today.

Her film and Samuel Edwards' biography should stimulate a Victor Hugo revival.

Dull saw chain can do a lot of harm

Ever try cutting a steak with only a butter knife . . . or using a power drill that has no bit . . . or a stapler devoid of staples?

A chain saw with a dull chain is practically as useless — and even worse — it can damage various components.

This is the important point for a growing number of homeowners who are purchasing chain saws to cut firewood and to take the backbreak out of many home improvement projects.

Step No. 1 is basic advice on how to take care of a new chain saw since it represents a serious investment. Above all, don't let the cutting edge, known as the saw chain, get dull. It is the worst thing a chain saw owner can do.

Aside from failing to cut wood adequately, a dull chain also puts an extra load on the engine itself.

Because of the added load, the saw's effective horsepower will be reduced and fuel required to do the job will be increased. In addition, a dull chain will cause overheating and can shorten the life of the guidebar and other components.

Cutting can also become an impossible task with a dull chain. It is difficult to maintain a straight cut when a chain is uneven, and it naturally takes a longer time to cut through wood. Increased effort is required since the operator also has a harder time cutting when the chain is dull.

A saw chain should be filed sharp at the first signs of dullness. However, it is important to remember that length of chain service is reduced with each filing. Filing instructions are often contained in the owner's manual.

Fence stows garden gear

For some it's just a chore, but for many others gardening is a pleasant hobby or a retirement pastime that gives them healthy outdoor exercise along with the joy of seeing their handiwork sprout and grow.

Adding to this joy, or easing the chore, is a storage unit that keeps tools and supplies close at hand and quickly located for each outing.

One well-organized but unobtrusive idea is a storage fence, called the "Stow-it-All" by its designers because there's a place for everything.

On the neighbor's side, it looks like no more than a handsome, horizontal board fence, but on the builder's side, in three-foot modules, it can hold a mower, spreader, shovels, rakes, bags of peat moss and fertilizer, chemicals, small tools and other supplies.

Added modules will hold deck furniture, large barbecues, fireplace wood, snow tires and outdoor sports equipment. Regular fencing continues from either side, enclosing the yard for privacy.

Building the "Stow-it-All" takes little more skill than for a regular fence, with the addition of a roof and doors required. The only tools needed are a shovel, saw, hammer, square and carpenter's level.

The fence is built of 1x8-inch fir or pine boards on 4x4-inch fir or cedar posts. The portion of the posts that will be in continual contact with the ground should be preservative-treated.

The doors are built with the same boards, on an inside box-frame of 1x4s, so the doors and end wall appear as a continuation of the fence. The roof is so the doors and end wall appear as a contuation of the fence. The roof is built-up roofing over 1x8 boards, with metal flashing and sloped for drainage.

Install bathroom in wasted space

In one-bath families, there's probably more bickering about who gets to use the bathroom during morning and evening "rush" hours than there is about which TV program to watch.

Such quarrels get everybody off to a bad start in the morning, the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau notes.

They're also a bad way to close the day — particularly since family members often go to their separate ways in the evening and don't see each other again until morning, when the whole thing starts over again.

If yours is a one-bath house, you might consider adding a full bath or using "wasted" space to install one or more "compact" baths.

Areas to consider include:

1. Your attic
2. A part of the utility room
3. A large closet
4. An old pantry
5. Under the stairs
6. A corner of your family room
7. A section of the garage

Many areas, such as the utility room, often already have plumbing in or near them, thereby simplifying the installation of a bathroom.

Fixtures for compact bathrooms come in the standard colors and styles of many manufacturers.

'Shorts'

When buying lumber for small projects, ask the dealer for "shorts" and save the cost of cutting from a long piece.

Forests hard at work to help remodelers

Doing the best with what you have could be called a principle of home improvement — and of good forest management.

Wood is an essential building material in the burgeoning remodeling market. Lumber, plywood, particleboard, and countless other wood and paper products used in home construction and modernization account for about one-third of the 12 billion cubic feet of wood fiber used annually. In the next 20 years, the combined market demands of housing, paper and other wood-derivative products such as chemicals are expected to double. To help meet these needs, the forest products industries are managing forests for maximum timber production and working toward maximum utilization of wood fiber.

The American Forest Institute, information arm of the forest products industries, says giant strides have been made in fiber utilization in three important areas:

- In the forests, where improved harvesting machines and methods recover more of the tree and leave less waste on the forest floor.
- In the manufacturing plant, where waste has been dramatically reduced. Modern plants, on the average, use about 80% of the tree, with some mills achieving almost total utilization.
- In fiber recycling and recovery. For instance, about half the fiber used to manufacture paper comes from recycled paper and the residues of other wood product manufacturing processes.

The successful results of forest product technology and fiber utilization are evident in materials familiar to all home remodelers — particleboard, hardboard and plywood. Particleboard and hardboard are manufactured from small flakes and strands of wood fiber that are compressed and bonded together in panel form. In plywood manufacture, wood is peeled or sliced, and then reassembled.

While sophisticated harvesting and manufacturing methods are recovering more wood and making maximum use of available fiber, sound forestry practices are helping to grow more trees faster. These practices include fertilization, irrigation, protection against insects, tree diseases and wildfire, thinning overcrowded stands, and prompt reforestation.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey: The Long-Distance Runner Looks Back

by Robert Walters

COVER PHOTO BY TOM DANIEL

Humphrey and Johnson in rapport at a press conference during '64 election campaign; but forthcoming book by Humphrey says his term as Vice President was bittersweet.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Serving as Lyndon Johnson's Vice President wasn't easy.

Five weeks before the 1968 Presidential election, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, the fatigued and despondent Democratic candidate, sat in a Salt Lake City television studio preparing for one of the most important speeches of his political career.

That nationwide address represented Humphrey's first major public disagreement with President Lyndon B. Johnson concerning the Vietnam war. Fifteen minutes before broadcast time, a nervous Humphrey called his boss.

"I told him what I intended to say," Humphrey recalls, "and he said curtly, 'I gather you're not asking my advice.'"

After a brief additional discussion in which Humphrey described his plan to halt the bombing of North Vietnam, the President abruptly ended the conversation: "Well, you're going to give that speech anyway. Thanks for calling, Hubert."

That anecdote is only one of the dozens of previously unreported incidents contained in a candid new autobiography on which Humphrey has worked for more than six years. The book, to be published next month by Doubleday, is titled The Education of a Public Man: My Life and Politics.

The book's revelations

Among the other episodes Humphrey discusses for the first time are his accounts of Richard M. Nixon's 1968 offer to him of the United Nations Ambassadorship, of efforts to put together a Humphrey-Rockefeller ticket earlier that year, and a startling analysis of the man who headed the South Vietnamese government during the last 7½ years of the war.

The book marks a major turning point for Humphrey, whose irrepressible enthusiasm throughout more than three decades in public life has led to criticism that he has been an uncritical supporter of almost everyone and everything around him.

The "Happy Warrior" and the "Politics of Joy" have not been banished from the book, but it is mainly a philosophical, thoughtful effort by Humphrey to look back upon himself, his times and his country as honestly as possible on the eve of his 65th birthday.

As a result, the revealing book includes unflinching criticism of the people who angered or disappointed Humphrey and high praise for those he truly admires—but little of the flamboyant rhetoric which has been his trademark in past election campaigns for such diverse offices as Mayor of Minneapolis, U.S. Senator, Vice President and President.

"He had no motive except to tell his nine grandchildren what his life and times were all about," says Norman Sherman, a former Humphrey aide and editor of the book. "It's an honest effort on the part of a man who has been in politics since he was 34 to look back over his life."

Conflict at the convention

Some of the anecdotes are both personal and political in nature. For example, Humphrey recalls that prior to the 1960 Democratic National Convention he was approached by several fellow liberals who urged that he agree to run as Vice President on a ticket headed by John F. Kennedy.

Having waged a grueling but unsuccessful battle against Kennedy in a series of primary elections, "I was not in a particularly conciliatory mood," Humphrey says in the book.

"I, not Kennedy, had been their liberal colleague for a dozen years. We had stood together on the issues, and Kennedy had been to the right of us all. Yet when the crunch came, they moved, shamelessly I thought, to Kennedy."

Humphrey says he was cool toward the idea but did not firmly reject it until he discussed the possibility with his wife, Muriel. When he arrived in Los Angeles for the convention, he had made up his mind and told his friends that "Muriel is against it and that swings the vote."

'Get me a plane'

Eight years later Humphrey had another, far more sorrowful encounter with the Kennedy family. On the night of the California primary in 1968, he was in Colorado Springs, Colo., preparing to deliver the commencement address the next day at the Air Force Academy.

After learning of the shooting of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, an opponent in that year's race for the Democratic Presidential nomination, Humphrey telephoned Kennedy's staff in Los Angeles to offer any assistance they might need.

Kennedy aide Pierre Salinger asked Humphrey to get a military plane to fly

a neurosurgeon from Massachusetts to California, and Humphrey called the operations officer at the academy to request the aircraft.

But the airman balked, insisting upon knowing what authority Humphrey had to order the plane. "I shouted into the phone, 'I am the Vice-Commander-in-Chief,' making up a position that did not exist. My intensity overcame his reluctance, and the doctor was flown to Los Angeles."

Humphrey's political reminiscences will undoubtedly be widely read because the autobiography is loaded with the names of virtually all the politicians who have occupied the international stage for the past quarter-century.

There is, for example, this humorous anecdote from a meeting Humphrey had almost 20 years ago with Soviet Prime Minister Nikita S. Khrushchev:

"Once he literally jumped from his chair, walked over to a map case, pulled down the map of North America and said to me, 'Senator, where is your home?'

"I said,'Minneapolis, Minn.' He beckoned me to show him on the map.

"I did so, and then he looked at me and said, 'I promise you, we shall never bomb it.' "

He offered a job

The book also contains the first published account of a Miami meeting between Humphrey and Nixon, following Nixon's narrow victory in the 1968 Presidential race:

"It was a hot day, but he [Nixon] was perspiring more than one would expect and his hand shook perceptibly as he greeted me. I was struck by how ill at ease he seemed.

"He asked me to be Ambassador to the United Nations and, to sweeten the offer, proposed to grant me control over any Democratic appointments he was required to make. I had a special feeling about the United Nations . . . but I was not eager to go from Lyndon Johnson's Vice President to Richard Nixon's Ambassador."

Humphrey, who turns 65 this month, and wife Muriel have four children. He says he listens to his wife's advice.

Humphrey and Nixon: Humphrey says he rejected Nixon offer of Ambassadorship to UN, adds there was no job he would have taken in Nixon Administration.

When Nixon said he had not decided whom to nominate as Secretary of State, "I told him it was impossible for me to consider the job." Looking back, Humphrey concludes:

"I am not sure why either one of us went through the charade. There were really no conditions under which I would have accepted a post in the Nixon Administration. I can't imagine that Nixon really wanted me except perhaps as a token of unity, a unity that did not exist."

Humphrey's book includes a similar recollection about an effort to put together a "unity" slate of himself and Nelson A. Rockefeller as the Democratic Presidential and Vice Presidential ticket prior to the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

Humphrey says he always liked Rockefeller personally and found the idea "intriguing" when it was first proposed to him, even though Rockefeller was a Republican "and it would have been difficult to sell him to the Democratic Convention."

Twice is enough

After the first contact was made through intermediaries, "the report came back that Rockefeller, despite his hostility toward Richard Nixon and his respect and affection for me, felt he had to remain a Republican." A second approach also was rebuffed, and the idea was abandoned.

Humphrey characterizes his own tenure as Vice President under Johnson as a bittersweet experience, especially during the 1968 campaign when the office "was both an asset and a liability—an asset in terms of pre-convention political power and a liability when it came to freewheeling, self-assertive politics."

There were times, Humphrey remembers, when he was "frozen out" by Johnson's White House aides: "The staff took their cues from the boss. It meant sitting outside Joe Califano's office while he, an arrogant and pretentious young aide, went about his work inside at his own pace. Or Marvin Watson canceling the use of a boat on the Potomac just before my guests were to arrive."

Humphrey has fond memories of Johnson as a forceful and effective national leader, but he also recalls trips to the Texas ranch where "you did things his way." On one occasion, Johnson was said to have noticed three or four Secret Service agents sitting around and watching the President.

Johnson's query

"Why aren't you busy? Why aren't you doing something?" Johnson demanded.

"Well, Mr. President, there isn't much to do. There is no press out here, no trouble, and you have been in the house," explained the agent in charge.

"Well, for God sakes, kill flies or something, but don't sit there," retorted Johnson.

Overshadowing all else during the Johnson-Humphrey Administration was the bitter national debate over the war in Vietnam. Anti-war demonstrations peaked during the 1968 convention, where Humphrey was nominated, as thousands of protesters and Chicago police clashed in the streets.

Humphrey believes that although "thousands of young people came to Chicago with no intention of violence . . . there were maniac revolutionaries and anarchists among them, not many, but a few, enough who were capable and determined to play with aroused emotions, to escalate their own war, and manipulate a situation in which a sharp confrontation with the police was inevitable."

The streets of Chicago

Humphrey captured the Democratic Presidential nomination that year, but many believe he lost the election in the streets of Chicago. And, although he left the national scene for several years, the war in Vietnam remained.

After stepping down from the Vice Presidency, Humphrey remembers watching television one evening in 1970 while Nixon was explaining his decision to move troops into Cambodia:

"I thought I had recognized the charts I had seen in Nixon's television presentation. I recalled the day when the Joint Chiefs had presented to Johnson a plan to bomb Cambodia—charts, rationale, the whole bit.

"Johnson had leaned warily forward, elbows spread on the table, and said in his broad Texas drawl, 'General, ah got me one — — — — — —war, ah don't need unnother one.' "

One of Humphrey's most startling revelations about the war involves a classified United States intelligence report on Nguyen Van Thieu, who became South Vietnam's President in late 1967 and remained in that post with full American support—throughout the remainder of the war.

Assessment in 1964

The report, written in 1964 when Thieu was a military commander with the rank of brigadier general, said he was "considered to be loyal to only one ideal—his own personal aggrandizement" and would "stoop to anything, stop at nothing in his drive for self-advancement."

Thieu "has no basic loyalty" to the South Vietnamese government, and his ambition, the report said, "is so overriding that he is believed capable of joining the Communist-backed People's Army of Vietnam if he were assured of the top position in that army."

Finally, the report said, "Not only is Thieu extremely ambitious and unscrupulous, but he is also highly egotistical. When in the presence of American military officers, Thieu talks of only one subject—coup d'état. He considers himself and refers to himself as a coup expert."

Another revealing war incident involves an episode in the mid-1960's, when Humphrey was flying to South Vietnam for a firsthand view of United States military efforts there. The participants at one policy meeting aboard the plane included South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and Ambassador-at-Large W. Averell Harriman.

'Terror and outrage'

"Ky's fascination with his pistols" will never be forgotten by Humphrey. "He played with those damn things like a sheriff in a Grade B Western. At one time while he and others were talking with Harriman, Ky began to twirl the pistols.

"Harriman's face became a study in terror and outrage, fearful that the guns would go off, furious that this man in whom we had invested so much would attend so casually to the conversation."

The timing of the book may be crucial because it is being published shortly before the Democratic Convention, which might turn to Humphrey if no other Presidential candidate emerges from the primaries with a commanding lead.

Straightforward design, furnishings of family room give it versatility for casual activities, overflow of more formal entertaining.

Family room warm, versatile

Family rooms that look like afterthoughts furnished with collections of castoff furniture from other parts of the house seldom carry their weight or provide the full variety of living amenities possible.

Drawing up a list of all possible activities a new or remodeled family room will encompass offers an excellent guideline for built-ins and furnishings that will help provide this versatility.

One family added a room that is formal enough to graciously accomodate the overflow when entertaining, yet remains casually comfortable for family fun with a minimum of maintenance.

Many family rooms are located adjacent to the kitchen, and this one has a pass-through for serving lunches, bridge parties or other entertaining. Folding wood shutters screen off the kitchen at other times.

Ceiling beams, solid board wall paneling and wood flooring with braided rugs add to the relaxed, warm feeling of the room.

The 1x6-inch tongue-and-groove paneling was finished with a white wipe-off stain which lightens the room while accenting the beautiful grain pattern and tones of the wood.

A family wood is a good location for a piano or organ, both for practicing and entertaining. This room has space for a piano along the wall between the kitchen pass-through and louvered wood doors leading to the den.

Cabinets built in on both sides of fireplace are topped with five shelves of 1x12-inch pine extending up to a 10-inch soffit along the ceiling.

Success of wallpaper project often in preparation work

What you do before you wallpaper may be even more important to the overall success of the project than the actual hanging.

In short, says Ron Foster, whose company manufacturers Golden Harvest wall covering adhesives, wall preparation is all-important.

"The walls must be properly prepared for the new wallcoverings. Shortcuts at this point only will cause trouble at the end," he adds.

Foster suggests that you wash painted walls with water to which soap powder and some household amonia have been added. After rinsing well, let the walls dry before filling any cracks with a spackling compound. Remember to sand the spackling evenly.

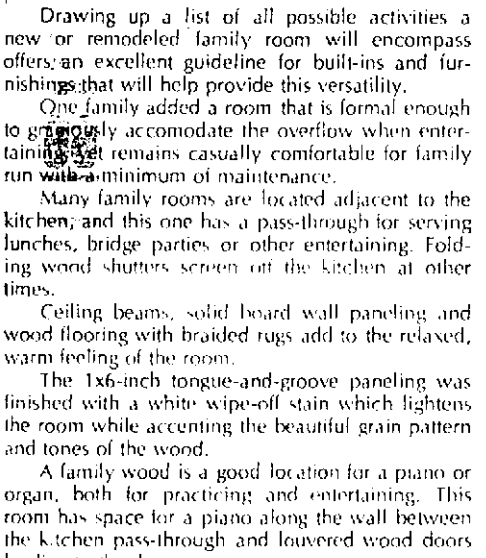

For best results, give the wall a coat of wall sizing. This acts as the first coat in preparing old or new surfaces for painting, calcimining or papering.

If there is a glossy paint or vinyl-coated paper on the walls, use sandpaper to dull and smooth it. For best results, however, remove all the old paper.

New plaster walls must be thoroughly cured and then coated with sizing.

Don't stop now, join the Army.

Congratulations. Graduating from high school is a real achievement. You've got a lot going for you now. And that's the best reason for moving ahead right away. Whether that means starting college, looking for a job—or joining the Army.

A good start. The best thing the Army will do for you is put all that fresh talent, education, and energy to work. There are plenty of good job-training courses in the Army. And Army pay is better than ever. $361.20 a month to start, with a raise in just four months to $402.60.

Soldier in Europe. Maybe what you want to do now is travel. With the Army's European Option, you can sign up for Europe when you enlist. You'll work hard, but you'll be learning a lot. Changing a lot, too.

Continue your education. You don't have to wait to start college or vocational-technical school. The Army has several educational programs, offered through accredited colleges and universities. Most of the classes are held right on post. And the Army pays up to 75% of your tuition. With one of the programs, Project Ahead (Army Help for Education And Development), you can enlist in the Army and start working on your college degree at the same time.

Join now, go later. One thing the Army offers a new graduate is a chance to recover from a head-bending senior year. With the Army's Delayed Entry Program, you can sign up in June, then take up to nine months to report.

But the main thing you want right now is to keep growing. The Army offers plenty of opportunity to do that. For more information, send the postcard. Or call 800-523-5000 toll free. In Pennsylvania, call 800-362-5696.

Some common sense about ladders —

"One of the home repairman's best friends is the ladder, but if this helpful tool is not treated with respect, the do-it-yourselfer may find himself in trouble.

Alcan Aluminum Corporation reports that some common sense about ladder use can save steps and costly repair bills or medical bills.

Before using the ladder, make certain that it will support your weight. Lay it flat on the ground and walk on each rung. The weak rungs in a wooden ladder will show themselves in this safe way. If there are defects or cracks, perhaps it is time to invest in a new ladder.

Don't begin work on a windy day; a sharp gust of wind has been known to topple more than a man on a ladder. Choose a level, solid place to rest the feet of the ladder. If you place the feet of the ladder about one-fourth its length away from the wall, the angle will be relatively secure. Avoid placing the ladder near power lines or tree branches.

Before you carry your building materials to the top of the ladder, see that you have a resting place for them. Liquid materials in cans may be fitted with hooks so they can hang from rungs on the ladder. Tools should never be carried loosely in your pocket. Wear overalls with specially deep pockets for the tools you will need, or wear a special apron which has been designed to hold tools.

Also, never reach from the top of the ladder for anything. You may upset the delicate balance and fall. Just in case you do, or if you drop any tools, make certain that family and neighbors steer clear of the ladder while you are working.

Terrace planters ease slope

When you have a house built on a slope, you have a problem; how to landscape that steep yard.

The conventional approach is to ignore it, planting the side yards to lawn and hoping for the best. But grass doesn't flourish because sprinkler water mostly runs off.

A better handling of the steep slope is to grade it into terraces. The uppermost terrace, on the same level as the home's main floor, can be spacious and designed for outdoor living. The lowest terrace will be at the ground level.

Connecting top to bottom will be two or three narrow terraces, each just wide enough to be treated as an individual raised planting bed.

Terracing means moving earth and holding it in place with retaining walls. Much as that's tough work, the result can be enormously attractive, especially when wood is ssed for the retaining walls.

Stained a natural shade or allowed to weather, wood retaining walls easily blend into the landscape and allow plant materials to dominate the scene.

To some, the idea of using wood in direct contact with earth may be hard to believe. But it's not at all unusual. Wood that has been pressure-treated with preservatives is commonly used in such applications and for foundation sills and plates.

Lumber treated merely by dipping or soaking in preservative would not be recommended for retaining walls, however.

The difference is that, in pressure-treating, preservatives are forced into the wood under hydraulic pressure so that the chemicals thoroughly permeate the wood fibers. In the soaking or dipping method, penetration is only superficial.

Building a wood retaining wall is something like building a fence. Four-by-four-inch posts form the vertical supports, and 2x8s make up the body of the wall. Douglas fir, because of its strength, is a good choice.

To trim the top of each wall and emphasize its planter-box appearance, lay a 2x8 flat as a cap board. Caps also will serve as display ledges for pots of annuals and bulbs, tree roses and other seasonal ornamentals.

Use the planters themselves for your permanent shrub garden — or for vegetables, if there's adequate sun.

Porch holds potential as added floor space

Converting a porch for year-around use is a relatively easy way to gain added floor space a nominal cost, because the foundation and at least partical framing already are in place.

A minimum, temporary conversion might involve replacing the screens with wood-framed windows, but for cold-weather use insulation should be installed to conserve heating energy.

To convert other porches, it may be necessary to frame in the side walls and a finished ceiling, build up the floor, and add windows, electrical circuits and heating.

First step in remodeling is to examine the floor, posts and foundation for soundness, replacing or repairing any members as needed. Fir, pine or other western lumber is suitable for this work.

If necessary, the porch floor should be brought level with the house floor. After insulating, the walls and ceiling can be finished. In some cases, the inner wall of the house is removed to combine the porch with the existing room.

Court renews the view

If a dining room or living room has an ordinary or undesirable view, it's easy to create a new one, with a garden atmosphere.

First enclose a courtyard around the window with a screen of 2x2s set vertically on 2x4 stringers and 4x4 posts. Low-maintenance evergreen plantings will add color and textures.

A birdbath and feeders will provide daytime interest and subtle lighting will add interest to dinner parties.

Take a second look at your hand tools

If you have some favorite hand tools — hammers, chisels, punches, wedges, etc. — that you have had around for a long time, maybe it's time you gave them a second look.

This reminder is from the Hand Tools Institute which urges an inspection of your tools from time to time to insure they are still in proper condition for the jobs ahead.

For instance, if you are still banging away with an old, worn out hammer or an antique, chipped, mushroomed chisel, you are not only wasting your energy and doing a poor job, you are also endangering yourself.

The hazard is that a chipped or mushroomed tool can easily chip more or fragment causing possible eye injury.

Here are some recommendations from HTI:

1. Make sure that hammer heads are mounted securely and that the handles are sound.

2. The hammer face should not be cracked, chipped or mushroomed. If so, replace it with a new one.

3. On struck tools, make sure the striking part is not battered, chipped or mushroomed. If so, replace it.

4. Keep working end of struck tool sharp. Make sure blade or point has been sharpened to proper angle or bevel.

5. When sharpening struck tools, a file or hand stone is recommended. High speed grinding can cause overheating which can cause loss of strength and durability.

6. For storage, keep hammers and struck tools in a safe place where they won't be chipped or dented by falling or coming into contact with other tools.

A couple of other points: make sure you use the proper tool for each task. And on every hammering — be sure to wear safety goggles.

Marlin Perkins, host of television's "Wild Kingdom" show, is a man who knows how to make friends with a jaguar. He's fighting to save many endangered animal species.

"I've Never Seen an Ugly Animal"

by Herbert Kupferberg

NEW YORK CITY.

Marlin Perkins says he's never met an animal he didn't like. And he's met a lot of them—first as a zookeeper in St. Louis, Buffalo and Chicago, then as creator of the pioneer Zoo Parade television program, and now as host of the weekly Wild Kingdom, one of TV's longest running and most popular shows.

Perkins' newest feature, billed as a Bicentennial Special and called America's Wildlife Heritage, is an eloquent appeal for the preservation of rapidly dwindling animal species, some of which are at the point of disappearing.

Bears in Florida

In the program, which is being shown at various times this spring throughout the country, the slender, trim, 71-year-old Perkins harks back fondly to the days when there were black bears and cougars in Florida; wolves in Virginia; moose, elks and bearcats in Massachusetts, and passenger pigeons everywhere.

During a recent New York stopover between photographic safaris, Perkins spoke mournfully of our diminishing wildlife. "The passenger pigeon, once the most abundant bird in North America, became extinct in 1914," he said. "The bison, the sea otter and the whooping crane — which once was down to only 14 birds—were saved only at the last minute."

Perkins is especially partial to wolves, animals which he says have undeservedly been saddled with a bad name. He and his wife Carol, who often shares his far-reaching journeys to film wildlife, are active in maintaining a wolf sanctuary called the Wild Canid Survival and Research Center in Tyson Park, St. Louis.

"The wolf is virtually gone in the United States," he says, "and that disturbs the natural balance. Unlike man, who kills off the biggest and best animals, the wolf kills off the sick, the aged and the weak. It's an advantage to the herd to lose such animals; it assists a natural process. The social behavior of wolves is remarkable. We have found that they have a variety of ways of speaking to each other— eyes, body language, attitude.

Learn from the wolf

"Man could take his cue from them in some things. Wolves normally mate for life and remain loyal to each other. They act for the safety of the group and have a strong family life. The female conceals her puppies in burrows for protection and the male brings them food. Even aunts and uncles help take care of the young."

However, Perkins, whose latest project is an extended journey to Lapland for TV programs, declines to single out any one animal as his favorite.

"I've never seen an ugly animal in my life; to me, they're all beautiful," he says. "When I was a zoo director, I'd pass through the chimpanzee house and one would reach out its hand to me, and I'd think that there was no more wonderful animal. Then I'd go by an elephant and he'd extend his trunk, that wonderful organ with 64,000 muscles that can pick up a straw or uproot a tree, and I'd think, 'What a creature!' Or then there would be a giraffe; or even the weaverbird of Africa, who builds a nest for his mate and shows it to her. If she likes it, she moves in; if she doesn't, he builds a second, or a third. Eventually she has to accept; if she didn't, there wouldn't be any weaverbirds, would there? Every creature has some specialty, some adaptation, some characteristic that delights me."

Perkins, who began his interest in animals as a boy, is shown handling a hawk. He warns that mankind's future is dependent on conservation.

Perkins, who was born in Carthage, Mo., and reared in Pittsburg, Kan., began his romance with the animal world as a boy, catching snakes, frogs, toads and turtles, and even walking around with field mice in his pocket. In 1926, just out of the University of Missouri, he started work at the St. Louis Zoo as a member of the "bull gang"—the laborer crew—at $3.75 a day. A short time later he was appointed curator of reptiles, thus beginning his advance through the zoological world.

Asked for his advice to youngsters of today who wish to develop their interest in the animal kingdom, Perkins says: "Get to know something well. Start with the local animals in your neighborhood. Find out where they live, learn something about their habits. Birds, toads, frogs, insects—they all can be fascinating. You can learn some basic principles of nature by watching them. You'll have a much fuller life. And you'll find that wherever you go, you'll meet old friends."

Danger signs

Perkins would like to see young people showing concern for animal life if for no other reason than the likelihood that so much of it is doomed to extinction unless there is a change in public attitudes.

"I'm pessimistic about the future," he says. "There are many indications of a lessening of wildlife. Man's population is growing so fast that it's destroying natural habitats. This is what has happened in India, and it's going to happen in Africa, where they're busy cutting down the trees and the local people are poaching on their own lands, killing off animals for their skins, horns and tusks.

"Most people have become so urbanized that they can't understand nature. There's an interweaving of plants and animals necessary to maintain life. Let's remember that man, who is also an animal, is still evolving. I'm afraid he hasn't yet reached the moral level to realize that he shouldn't be destroying nature, polluting water and fouling the air. He hasn't yet realized that if nature is destroyed, man can't live—he's going to go, too."

At 231 pounds, I thought I'd be fat for life. Then I lost 111 pounds.

By Barbara Koehn—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

The one thing in my life I'd always wanted to do was to become a nurse. But I did three other things first. I got married, had children, and ate myself up to 231 pounds.

Putting on that weight was quite easy for me. Each morning, I simply opened my mouth when I opened my eyes and didn't stop eating until I went to bed. Bread, pizzas, spaghetti, submarine sandwiches, pop, candy—I ate everything in sight.

By the time my first son was born, I'd gone from 140 to 194 pounds, which made it a hard birth. I was in labor for a day and a half.

When I went home from the hospital, I immediately made up my mind to stop gorging myself and lose weight. And so I began endless efforts with crash diets, reducing pills, weekly diet sessions and just plain willpower to take off all those extra pounds.

The result? After two more children, I was heavier than ever. In fact, when I finally went into training, I wore the biggest uniform on the floor—24½. No wonder my supervisor in obstetrics wouldn't let me teach nutrition to new mothers. After all, how could I teach others what I hadn't learned myself.

Of course, as a nurse, I should have known better than to let my appetite run wild. But I was human and had my weaknesses. Like when I prepared meals for my children and husband, I ate extra things and always what I knew I shouldn't.

Then one day, I watched an operation on an extremely heavy woman. She had so many layers of fat, it's a wonder she hadn't had a heart attack. After seeing her, I really got serious about my own weight problem. I ruled out diet pills, however, as they'd always made me nervous in the past. Yet I was desperate enough to consider an intestinal bypass. But I gave up that and settled on the Ayds plan. It just seemed like such a sensible way to lose weight—without drugs. Besides, I'd read that Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy contains vitamins and minerals, so I bought a box at our local store in Huntington Woods, MI.

I took one or two Ayds 15 minutes before meals with a hot drink and they really helped satisfy my appetite. I found myself eating less without any strain. Naturally, I took in fewer calories, so I lost weight.

Thanks to the Ayds plan, I actually lost 111 pounds and all my bad eating habits. I just couldn't have been happier, especially since I knew I wouldn't have to be fat for the rest of my life.

At 231 pounds, I was so big, I didn't even bother to cover up my fat arms.

Now, at 120 pounds, I can wear just about anything and still look slim.

Grass Seed Will Never Grow A Lawn Like This!

From Part Shade To Full Sun!

Save Now. Special Introductory Offer. Up To 200 Amazoy Zoysia Grass Plugs FREE

FULLY DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT. Amazoy lawns take cookouts, parties, lawn furniture. You could even play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Rarely (if ever!) needs watering.

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

By Mike Senkiw

Years ago I was like nearly everyone else with a lawn. I worried about it more than any other thing around the house.

Then things changed. My company obtained a new grass just released by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture. In honor of the explorer, Frank Meyer, it was named Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

We received only a small amount of this Grass — enough to plant test plots in our Nursery Farm.

From that small beginning, these few precious clumps of Zoysia Grass spread until they built a lawn so thick and beautiful that visitors stopped to admire it.

We Tell People, "Walk On It"

Instead of saying "Keep Off The Grass," we invited visitors to walk on it. It was an unforgetable experience for them — like walking on a thick pile carpet.

After walking on it, visitors learned that Amazoy Zoysia turf was crabgrass-proof, and the next question never failed: "How can I get some?"

Other Lawns Burn Out

Now, grass is my company's business; but it was a long time before an order of Amazoy Zoysia Grass was accepted. First we wanted to see how good this grass was. We really found out!

One summer the heat was so great you could fry eggs on the highway. Daily the sun blazed from cloudless skies; the drought worsened; whole ponds dried up. Meanwhile crabgrass flourished and took over lawns by the thousands.

IT RESISTS DROUGHT, STAYS GREEN THRU HEAT WAVES

Through it all, our deep-rooted Amazoy Zoysia stood out like a green island in a brown wasteland.

Thrives In Poor Soils

When I planted it in sandy, clay soils and sub-soil, it took hold and thrived. Other grass in the same soils struggled and died.

I compared it to other grasses in the winter, too. Ordinary grasses may die or turn sparse and scraggly due to frost and winter, but in such weather my Amazoy Zoysia merely went off its green color . . . it stayed so thick you could walk on it and not get your feet muddy.

Through zero-cold winters and blistering summer droughts . . . through onslaughts by weeds and diseases . . . our Meyer Zoysia had proved it could "take it." It had earned the right to be called AMAZOY, our Trade Mark published coast to coast and border to border.

HOW AMAZOY CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS AND WEEDS ALL SUMMER LONG!

If costly chemicals fail to control crabgrass for good, how does Amazoy Zoysia do it? Your deep-rooted, fully established Amazoy lawn grows so thick and luxurious that crabgrass seeds just do not germinate!

Your lawn chokes out not only crabgrass, but other weeds all summer long — year after year.

You will never need to spend a cent on crabgrass and weed killers again. So if you have wanted to get away from costly and dangerous lawn herbicides, Amazoy is your answer.

Your Own Supply Of Plug Transplants

Your established Amazoy lawn provides you with plugs for other areas as you may desire.

HERE'S WHY AMAZOY PLUGS ASSURE SUCCESS WHERE OTHER GRASSES FAIL

Due to Amazoy's national reputation, other grasses may be offered that sound like it. But Amazoy's pre-cut plugs look different, ARE different. They are deep-rooted, winter-hardy plugs produced exclusive for transplanting.

Each large sturdy plug contains 3 square inches or more of living vigorous Zoysia turf, complete with vigorous root system in its original enriched soil.

NEVER NEEDS REPLACEMENT

AMAZOY Saves Money, Cut Work. Never a seed to sow again with Amazoy! Year after year your lawn grows thicker, like a deep pile carpet. Defies enemies that kill other lawns.

PEOPLE WRITE TO ME

As Mrs. Harry Winslowe writes to me from the heart of wintry New England:

"How pleased we are with our Zoysia lawn! We had a lawn that was a disgrace. My husband used weed killers for every known weed, but next season new weeds sprang up. We dug the lawn up twice and reseeded before we learned about Amazoy. It does everything you say."

"Mowed It 2 Times," Writes Woman

Mrs. M. R. Miller writes me how her lawn "... is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in. ... last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

Wonderful? Yes, Amazoy Zoysia IS wonderful! Plant it now and you'll cut mowing by 2/3. ... never have another weed problem all summer, for the rest of your life!

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into hole in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas, plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds.

Easy planting instructions with order.

AMAZOY CUTS WATERING, CUTS MOWING BY 2/3

Your drought-resistant Amazoy lawn not only cuts your water bills, it cuts your work in other ways: it cuts pushing a noisy mower under a broiling summer sun by 2/3. It resists blight, disease and most insects. It will NOT WINTER-KILL TO TEMPS. 30° BELOW ZERO. After killing frost, it merely goes off its green color, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial that ends re-seeding forever!

THERE IS NO SEED

Reports U.S. Dept. of Agric., referring to Meyer Z-52 Zoysia. Experts advise planting only live grass to be sure of getting the famous winter-hardy grass perf. by U.S. Govt., Meyer Z-52.

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Or correct problem areas such as slopes where Amazoy halts erosion, in hard-to-cover spots, around swim pools, in play areas, etc.

NO SOD

Sod of ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed — such as weeds, disease, frequent mowing, burning out, etc. Amazoy is sold ONLY in pre-cut plugs . . . never a slab of field grown sod YOU must cut up in order to plant.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS .... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

MORE THAN A HALF-BILLION PLUGS SOLD, OUTSELLS OTHERS 10 TO 1!

The controlled transplant quality of Amazoy has made it another word for Meyer Z-52 Zoysia . . . the world's best known Zoysia Grass. If you don't want to take another chance with lawn disappointment, switch to the grass that assures your success: Amazoy. We guarantee every plug will grow, no matter your soil or why other grasses have failed you.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping charge collect via most economical means.

Curves add deck charm

Many homeowners who have hardly had a hammer in hand before have experienced the satisfaction of adding a deck to the side or back of their house.

In addition to the enjoyment of an outdoor living area offered by a deck, an imaginative design will enhance the landscaping and add charm to a yard.

One homeowner, adept at his surgical profession, wanted to broaden his horizons by personally building a deck over part of his lot that sloped from one side to the other as well as to the back boundary.

Because he wanted more than just a square extension of the covered patio, the owner worked with a landscape architect on the design of a deck with two curves, meeting to draw the eye toward a pleasant view through trees.

The decking of 2x4-inch western wood on edge over 2x8 joists and 4x4 posts also was laid to direct the visual interest toward the view. An existing tree was retained in the center of the deck, providing shade for a picnic table and benches.

Railing requirements vary with local codes, and on this curved deck there was the further challenge of retaining the graceful arcs of the design.

The owner used posts of paired 2x4s, bolted to the 2x8 facings attached across the joists. The fails, one at the top and another about a foot down from the top, were made of paired 2x4s.

Curving the rail boards was made easier with saw kerfs a third of the thickness of the boards, spaced an inch apart the length of the boards. The rails were attached to the posts with galvanized nails to avoid rust stains.

The deck was left unfinished so it would weather to a natural pewter gray and blend with the surrounding bark chip ground cover and plantings. Western wood decking also can be finished with a transparent sealer or with natural and tinted stains.

Use the sun to heat your pool

Many people with swimming pools and spas are again concerned about the rising cost of gas and pool heating with summer now approaching. Present pool owners and those planning to install pools face the same problems — spiraling costs, energy shortage, adverse legislation and so forth.

The first practical and economical solutions is solar heating being offered by many manufacturers.

According to Jerry Supernaw, president of Solar Resources Company, Santa Ana, "A solar pool heating system permits people to take maximum advantage of the universe's best heater — the sun — at absolutely no cost."

Solar heaters can be installed on new or existing pools and spas, in or above ground. It can be used to heat the pool on its own during the normal swimming season and as a back-up to an esisting heater for cooler days to extend the swimming season. It is noted that the solar heater's initial cost is slightly more than gas or propane heaters, but it pays for itself usually in five years or less by minimizing or eliminating gas bills.

Every pool installation involves a different set of circumstances including pool size, pool orientation, pool location, water temperature preference, wind conditions and other variables too numerous to mention. But savings can be sizeable.

Supernaw added that in Southern California the expense for natural gas is about $40 per month for a pool measuring 10 feet by 40 feet. This is a bill the owner wouldn't have to pay with a solar pool heating system.

The properly oriented and shielded solar system can produce 100 degree water even when the outside temperature is zero.

Every manufacturer has a slightly different idea of how to produce results for the pool owner. But basically, they are similar.

Most of the work in the solar pool heating system is done by the sun. The only additional energy needed is a small motor to circulate the pool water.

When the collectors are installed on a roof or sloped surface, the pump motor forces water to the panels where it goes into a pipe inlet at the top of the collector. The water is then distributed equally in a thin layer or copper pipe across the inside of the collector. The water is then drawn inside the collector absorbing the sun's heat dollected by the surface. It then enters a second pipe which carries the water back to the pool.

Typically, the pool water heated in the collectors will rise in the range of 2 degrees to 10 degrees. Because of the constant water flow through the system, pool owners can raise the pool's temperature to the desired level.

To obtain the greatest solar yield from a solar collector, it is important that the collector be correctly oriented. The best direction to face is due south and at a slope perpendicular to the sun's rays. Small variations from a due south direction will not affect the capacity greatly, but if the unit orientation is to vary more than 45 degrees from due south, an analysis is made to determine the loss in unit capacity.

The position of the collector must sometimes be a compromise between the optimum collection angle and the roof slope of the building. Installation, even by the pool owner, can be completed in less than a day.

In some instances users may want to bypass their conventional pool heaters entirely, or to install the solar pool heating system without conventional gas heating. All the owner need do is utilize a pump with a small horsepower motor to his pool equipment area to circulate the water.

Use logic to gain storage space

In some kitchens, disorganized or inadequate storage leads to daily "search and deploy" missions. Food and utensils have to be hunted in one place, then taken to another place for use.

The National Kitchen Cabinet Association says all this wasted time and effort could be avoided by having enough cabinets near each kitchen work center, and by organizing storage space in a logical fashion. Here are some suggestions:

• Food and utensils used together should be stored together at point of first use. Example: coffee, coffee pot and measuring spoon near the sink, because water is required.

• Store food preparation tools together: knives, parers, measuring cups, wooden spoons, mixing bowls, beaters and blenders.

• Near the range, store pot covers, pot holders, testing spoons, spatulas, even platters and vegetable dishes in which hot food is served.

• Keep china and glasses near the cleanup center, so items can be stored as they are dried or removed from the dishwasher.

• Store most-used items in cabinets within easy reach — between eye and hip level. Put heavy or awkward items at waist level or below.

• Use cabinet features that facilitate storage: adjustable, pull-out and lazy susan shelves, cutlery drawers and tray dividers, for example.

NKCA says good kitchen storage also requires that cabinets perform well day in and day out for a long time. The NKCA certification seal on cabinets indicates the cabinets meet construction and performance standards of the American National Standards Institute, and have been laboratory tested to prove it. The seal is applied at the factory.

Certified cabinets are designed to stand up to hard daily use, such as cans dropped on shelves and in drawers, doors slammed shut by knees, even the abuse of children who use shelves and doors as step stools. Cabinet finish can be expected to resist food spills, including harsh substances such as alcohol and lemon juice; water and detergent; and the high humidity and sharp temperature changes common in kitchens.

fish is fine fare

by beth merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

In true Bicentennial spirit, here is a dish reminiscent of Revolutionary days in New England when coastal waters teemed with myriad varieties of fish and shellfish. Vessels out of Gloucester and other ports did a thriving business then, while amateur fishermen feasted at night on their own catches. This delectable recipe is a sophisticated way to serve fish that recently swam in these waters. Inexpensive and nutritious, fish is fine fare.

fish roll-ups with almond sauce

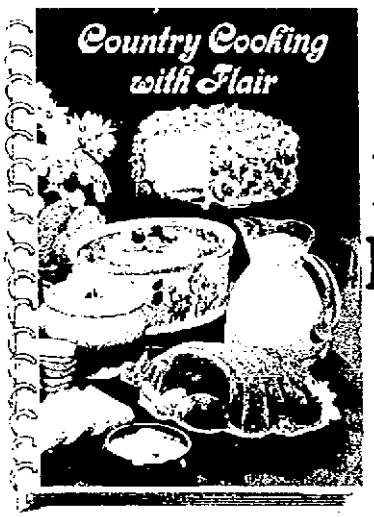

8 fillets (fresh or frozen) pollack, cod, flounder or haddock
1 package (6 oz.) top-stove stuffing mix
1 can (8 oz.) minced clams, drained
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup whole blanched almonds
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup half-and-half
1 tablespoon cut chives, fresh or freeze-dried
1 bunch fresh asparagus, cooked
Lemon juice, salt, pepper, melted butter or margarine

Thaw fish fillets if frozen. Prepare stuffing mix as directed on package, using clam liquid as part of liquid called for in directions; add minced clams; mix well. Spread stuffing mixture on fish fillets; roll up; fasten with wooden picks. Place in baking dish. Pour about ¼ cup water into bottom of baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-40 minutes.

Meanwhile melt two tablespoons butter; add almonds; stir over low heat until almonds are golden brown. Blend in flour; add half-and-half; stir constantly until thickened. Stir in chives. Cook asparagus; season to taste with lemon juice, salt, pepper and melted butter. Arrange asparagus on serving platter; place fish on asparagus; top with a ribbon of sauce. Makes eight servings.

All-American award winning roses for '76

Fall planting of roses has become an accepted practice by many good gardners throughout the milder areas of the temperate regions. In the deep south, the planting of roses at this time of year is an accepted way of life, but many long-time growers further north have also learned its advantages.

Dormant, bare-root roses planted in this season, although they will make no new growth on top or roots during the cold weather, will become firmly settled into the ground ready to start active growth as soon as the warm days of spring arrive.

The soil, mellow and warm from the heat of summer and the rains of autumn, is usually in excellent condition to work, often far better than the hard, tight earth of early spring.

Such pictures don't just happen, but are the result of imagination, careful planning and some study of plant materials.

Numerous fall mail order rose catalogs from reputable firms, and many of the alert garden centers are offering plants of the four 1976 award winning roses.

They are: Seashell — the golden peach and pink hybrid tea, of average height and will readily fit into any rose bed, patio planting, terrace or rub planting, border, or dooryard garden.

America — a silvery salmon climber which will be most useful in any position suitable for climbing roses. This includes pergolas, trellises or fences.

Yankee Doodle — the new orange sherbet hybrid tea. A tall grower and could well be placed in the center planting of a large rose bed, used along a drive, or in the back row of a foundation planting bordering the house.

Cathedral — an apricot-pink floribunda, fine for mass planting, small groups to provide showy spots of color, and edging the beds of taller growing roses.

A hundred uses

Many plants are taken for granted — and members of the Ivy family are often in this situation.

There may be nothing flashy about Ivy, but there's distinctive beauty to be sure. Many recent introductions of this foliage favorite have thrilled gardners.

Few people are unaware that Ivy is used as a ground cover on slopes as a lawn substitute. Many people grew up watching Ivy climb up a tree trunk — or, had the chance to train Ivy against the house or a garage wall.

Keep your lawn happy

Undoubtedly, some federal agency could come up with a computerized estimate on how many acres of land are dedicated to use as lawn areas in home gardens throughout America. The figure would be astronomical.

And, even though artifical turfs are showing-up here and there, there is nothing like a beautiful lawn — and a true gardener would never consider a substitute.

When it comes to lawn care, the California Association of Nurserymen suggests that a little effort frequently applied will go a long way. Certainly, it's better than the infrequent big effort which may come too late.

One exception to this is your watering schedule. It's better to train a lawn to take a deep watering less frequently — to encourage deep root growth — rather than, say, daily shallow sprinklings.

Thought it will vary by area, a good rule of thumb is to water deeply once a week in cool dry weather, twice a week during warm dry weather. The length of watering time will depend on the soil condition. In most soils, one should strive to achieve actual water penetration of six to eight inches and in heavy clay soils, one to two inches.

Your lawn feeding program should start immediately. Regular feeding is important for healthy, attractive lawns. Your nurseryman can recommend the proper lawn food for the type of turf you have. Where weeds are a traditional problem, you may wish to consider the weed control products available today.

Mowing is very important to the health of a lawn as well as appearance.

Mow weekly during the growth season and less often when growing slowly. If you lowered your mower to cut at 1-inch during winter, make sure it's 1½ to 2-inches as the weather warms up; and at least two inches in hot climates. Cutting a lawn too short in hot weather exposes the crowns of the individual grass plants. This ruins its appearance — and its future.

Hardy standbys

The variety of sizes and shaped that succulents come in have fascinated people for ages. Dedicated hobbyists surround themselves with these favorites — planting them almost to the exclusion of all other types of garden plants.

In temperate climates, gardeners often use succulents to contrast with other plants and with masonry or wood textures in the landscape.

Here's why the rear-bagging Grassmaster® is the finest mower Toro ever engineered Innovative Toro engineering gives you the convenience of bagging your clippings plus the maneuverability to handle tight turns, irregular borders, narrow spaces.

And the Grassmaster® converts easily to a mulching mower which deposits nitrogen-rich clippings for a healthier lawn.

Maneuverable Rear Bag

The spacious, 2¼-bushel bag is conveniently located in the rear of the Grassmaster®. Leaves you clear to reach those tight spots around trees, hedges, and flower beds.

The sturdy bag detaches in seconds for quick disposal of clippings.

Powerful High-Torque® Engine

At the heart of Grassmaster® performance is a Toro exclusive—the High-Torque® engine. This quiet-running, 10-cu-in engine delivers extra torque (turning force) to the blade.

That translates into the kind of cutting power that helps prevent stalling in grass up to 10 inches high.

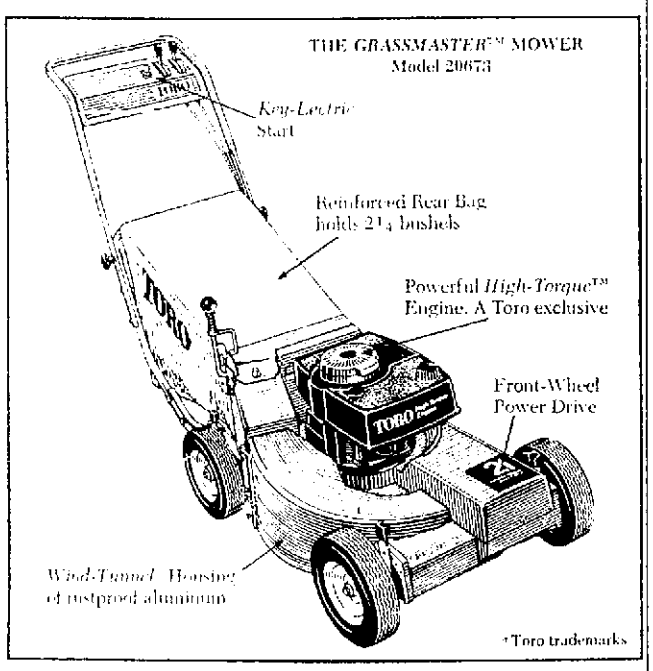

Grassmaster® Versatility

The Grassmaster® offers you the option of bagging your clippings or laying them down as mulch.

Simply convert this Toro® to a mulching mower. As you mow, you deposit nitrogen rich clippings on your lawn to enrich the soil.

Innovative Engineering

The Grassmaster® design includes many Toro engineering innovations:

*Toro trademarks

• Key-Lectric®. Instant starting and stopping at a turn of the key. Standard on Model 20673.
• Wind-Tunnel® Housing. Molded aluminum housing vacuums grass for clean, even cutting.
• Safety. A flexible rear safety shield.

The Toro Promise
(A full one-year warranty)

During the first year of use, Toro will pay the full cost of parts and labor for the repair of any Grassmaster® found defective in materials or workmanship. All you have to do is return it to your Toro Dealer. And this promise holds good even if you aren't the original owner.

Haven't you done without a Toro® long enough?

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

STANDING LONG JUMP, PART OF A NATIONWIDE FITNESS TEST FOR GIRLS AND BOYS

Not Much Improvement

In the past decade the physical fitness of the nation's boys and girls has changed little.

What it comes down to is that more girls than boys have shown improvement, particularly in endurance tests.

In a study conducted by the University of Michigan under contract to the Office of Education, 7800 boys and girls 10 to 17 were selected as a national sample.

The six-part test consisted of chinning for boys and flexed-arm hang for girls to measure arm and shoulder muscle strength; sit-ups for boys and girls to measure abdominal strength; standing long jump for boys and girls to measure leg power; a 50-yard dash for boys and girls to measure speed; a 30-foot shuttle run to measure agility, and a 600-yard run-walk for boys and girls to test endurance.

These were basically the same tests used in 1965 and 1958. Although significant gains were measured in almost all categories between 1958 and 1965, it didn't hold for differences between 1965 and 1975.

In 39 of 40 scores, the 1975 fitness performance of boys and girls remained unchanged.

Voting Bloc

More than 150 million Americans will be old enough to vote in the 1976 Presidential election. The Census Bureau estimates that this is almost 10 million more than in 1972, when the voting age in all 50 states was lowered to 18.

Young people between 18 and 25 comprise approximately 14.5 percent of the U.S. population, but relatively few of them vote.

New Campus Fad

The latest lunchtime fad on campus is watching TV soap operas.

Just why this development has occurred, no one seems to know. A feature writer for the Daily Tar Heel, the University of North Carolina student paper, concludes: "The one sector of the population that gleans more of its information from reading books than from watching TV has turned back to the tube for trivial entertainment."

Employment and Training Programs for Youth

Is it job-hunting time for you? Whether the job you're looking for is just for the summer or a permanent position, the Department of Labor has programs to help you.

The four major programs that provide services for young people are:

COMPREHENSIVE EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING ACT (CETA)—State and local government units operate projects or contract with other groups to provide on-the-job and classroom training, basic education, work experience, and supportive services.

APPRENTICESHIP TRAINING—This is a centuries-old system in which a young person learns a skilled trade, such as carpentry, bricklaying or cosmetology, on the job under an experienced craft worker and in related classroom instruction. In many areas, the principal crafts have joint labor-management committees for conducting and supervising their craft's apprenticeship programs. Apprentices are paid at progressive rates from about half the journeyman's rate up to 90 percent of full pay near the end of training. Training periods run from one to six years; most require four years. A major objective is to give minorities a chance to become skilled craft workers. The U.S. Department of Labor Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training and state apprenticeship agencies work with employers and unions to develop apprenticeship programs.

STATE EMPLOYMENT SERVICE YOUTH PROGRAMS—The employment problems of youth entering the labor market have been the concern of the federal-state employment service system since the passage of the Wagner-Peyser Act of 1933. U.S. employment service and state employment service agencies provide young people the kind of assistance needed in choosing fields of work in keeping with their interests, abilities, and aspirations. There are three major components in the youth program: the year-round services, the cooperative employment service-schools program, and the summer youth program. In the first nine months of fiscal year 1975, people under age 22 filed 3.3 million new or renewed applications for work at local employment offices. This represented about one-third of all new applications and renewals. More than 900,000 youths were placed in jobs (about 38 percent of all individuals placed), some 238,000 received employment counseling and 222,000 were tested to determine aptitudes, interests, and achievement levels.

JOB CORPS—Established by the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, Job Corps is now included as Title IV of CETA. Job Corps has 60 centers across the country and in Puerto Rico and Hawaii providing youth with skill training, on-the-job work experience, remedial education, social direction and health services. Nearly two-thirds of the enrollees are high school dropouts who, as corps members, are offered programs geared to their individual needs and learning pace, from basic education through high school equivalency. As a result, the outlook for youth completing Job Corps training is bright: 93 percent of those available for placement in the first six months of 1975 got jobs, entered the Armed Forces, or went back to school.

WHO ARE SERVED? — Unemployed, underemployed and economically disadvantaged youth. Apprenticeship applicants must be physically able to do the work and must pass an entrance examination. Job Corps enrollees must be between 16 and 21 years of age.

AUTHORIZATION — Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973, as amended; National Apprenticeship Act of 1937, as amended; Wagner-Peyser Act of 1933, as amended.

HOW TO APPLY—For CETA projects, get in touch with the agency designated to run the CETA program in your area—it may be a unit in the mayor's office or the local human resources agency. To find out about apprentice openings, call or visit the local office of the U.S. Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training (there are 150 of them) or the office of the State Apprenticeship Council. Or stop in at one of the apprenticeship information centers located in many state employment service offices. To enroll in Job Corps, apply for a job, see job listings, or find out about training and services, go to the nearest office of the state employment service.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION—Employment and Training Administration (specify CETA, apprenticeship, employment service or Job Corps), U.S. Department of Labor, 601 D Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20213, or any of the regional offices.

Succulents

Succulents are plants that store moisture in their tissues. All cacti are succulents, but all succulents are not cacti.

Want a finer lawn? Then read this!

Warren' research facilities, established twenty years ago, have under observation over 1,000 strains and species of grasses. Some of these grasses have been patented and are available to the public in various parts of the United States and Europe.

About ten years ago one of these new grasses...

BenSun (A-34)

KENTUCKY BLUEGRASS

...was introduced into California. Its performance has proven to be outstanding for these reasons:

- Rated first in shade tolerance (up to 65%) yet grows vigorously in full sunlight.
- Rated first in wear tolerance by a university doing turfgrass research. (Of eighteen top bluegrasses tested, for golf course use, BenSun (A-34) was the only grass to receive an excellent rating.)
- Quick to recover when injured and is used extensively on athletic fields and golf courses.
- Does well in most soils, and is highly drought resistant.
- Thrives in hot or cold climates, at high or low altitudes.
- Requires less fertilizer to keep it healthy.
- Can be mowed down to ½ inch when planted in sunlight.
- One pound of seed will plant 2,000 sq. ft. of new lawn area at a cost of only ½¢ per square foot.
- BenSun (A-34) Lawngrass Seed carries this guarantee: "If you are not satisfied with the results obtained from this seed, return the empty box with proof of purchase within 6 months to Warren's Turf Nursery, Inc. You will be supplied with more seed or your money will be refunded, your choice".

Available as Sod, Sod Plugs and Seed!

To keep your lawn green and healthy use WARREN'S LAWN FOOD, specially formulated (10-8-4 analysis for proper balance) to give your lawn the proper food nutrients. Use the lawn food the grass professionals use.

Fern favorites

Bright flowering plants are hard to beat — but for a good, green "woodsy look," consider Ferns to add a freshing touch. They are readily adaptable and easy to grow, providing a few simple cultural requirements are met.

Ferns generally prefer shade and a deep, loose soil rich in humus — the kind you scoop-up from under old, large trees, full of twigs and leaves and half decayed wood.

Fortunately, your nurseryman can recommend a ready-to-use planter mix that contains all the necessary ingredients.

Some Ferns can take more sun and wind than given credit for. This is especially true of the varieties native to California and North America's coastal climates. The Sword Fern is one of these.

It grows to about three feet and is excellent for naturalizing under grees. The Woodwardia Fern, which produces five foot fronds, is another hardy candidate; it makes a trouble-free background for low shrubs on the north or east side of the house.

The Maidenhair Fern is a moisture lover, with small, fine leaflets. It excels as a ground cover or a pot plant subject. There is a Five Finger Maidenhair that is distinguishable by its unique foliage shape.

Holly Fern is a California favorite because of its handsome, dark green fronds that resemble a holly leaf. The low grower will stand some neglect; it prefers partial shade.

A busy specimen is Leatherleaf Fern, which sports dark green, leathery fronds. It is a favorite with floral arrangers because of the lasting qualities in arrangements. Mother Fern does well indoors, in the garden it likes medium to heavy shade, and the fern becomes heavy with plantlets.

The larger-growing tree ferns are extraordinary members of the clan. Australian Tree Fern has graceful, arching stems and spreading light green fronds on a well-portioned trunk, and it has become a popular landscape subject. The Tasmanian (or New Zealand) Tree Fern, which is slightly hardier, creates a feathery canopy. Both are excellent choices for containers — or partially shaded garden spots.

Portable

The surroundings of your home and garden needn't ever be dull if you look upon container plants as portable props and use them as beautiful accessories.

Regardless of the season, there are always choice plants in bloom.

Beauty indoors

For many Californians the "art" of gardening is practiced indoors. Indoor gardening is no passing fancy — as people become more and more aware of the role of plants in our lives, the interest in plants suitable for growing indoors becomes greater.

Successful indoor plant growing is dependent on many things — including the planting mix used in containers. Ordinary soil or heavy potting soils can pack or "sour" in a relatively short time. The idea planting medium is a rich light planter mix — one that duplicates the tropical growing habitat of exotic indoor plants. Nurseries have ready-to-use planter mixes for indoor plants, and may offer for sale a soil mix that incorporates organic ingredients to help provide drainage and promote good growth.

Shade special

One of the easiest shade shrubs to grow is the Greenleaf Aucuba. It can always be counted on to produce a full mass of large, glossy green serrated leaves.

Snapper picks up where most mowers leave off

THE OPTIONAL ZIP KIT. ANOTHER FIRST FROM SNAPPER.

The Zip Kit attaches easily to a Snapper and is simple to operate. It saves you the time it takes to rake or empty your clippings at the curb. And when you are through your grass is neatly bagged.

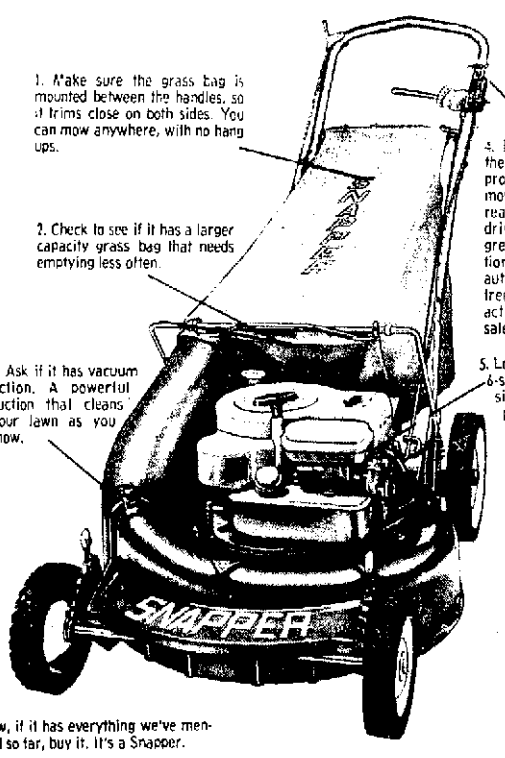

See us for a free demonstration.

1. Make sure the grass bag is mounted between the handles, so it trims close on both sides. You can mow anywhere, with no hang ups.

2. Check to see if it has a larger capacity grass bag that needs emptying less often.

3. Ask if it has vacuum action. A powerful suction that cleans your lawn as you mow.

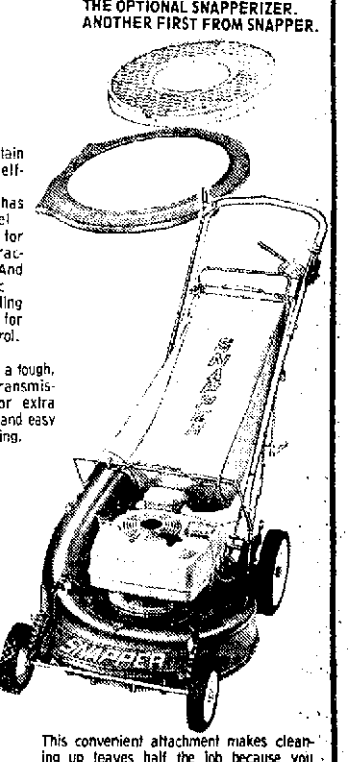

4. Be certain the self-propelled mower has rear-wheel drive for greater traction. And automatic free-wheeling action for saier control.

5. Look for a tough, 6-speed transmission. For extra power and easy handling.

6. Now, if it has everything we've mentioned so far, buy it. It's a Snapper.

THE OPTIONAL SNAPPERIZER. ANOTHER FIRST FROM SNAPPER.

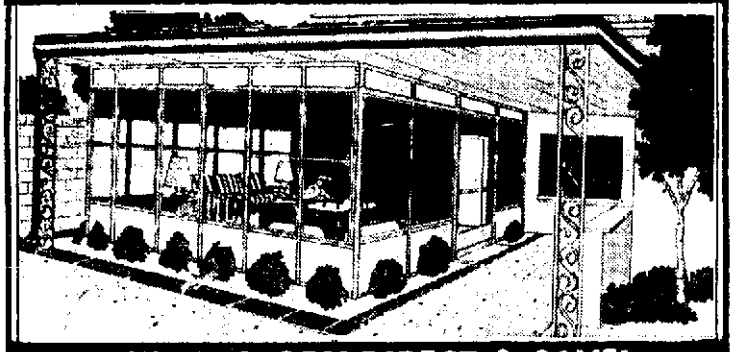

This convenient attachment makes cleaning up leaves half the job because you empty half as often. The leaves are pulverized so the catcher can hold at least twice as much. Ask us for a free demonstration.

Teen-age gang members: A new federal study says heavily armed youth gangs have become a major problem in city streets and public schools.

Street Gangs Are Back With Guns

by Daniel Rapoport

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Youth gangs in America today are more lethal than ever before. They are terrorizing greater numbers of people, employing deadlier weapons and proving harder to combat than gangs of the 1950's and '60's, according to a report recently handed the federal government. Most worrisome to local officials is that gang members have discovered the gun and have shifted a major part of their operations from the street to the school.

Efforts by cities to cope with the gangs, says the author of the report, have been failures.

"Many urban communities are gripped with hopelessness that anything can be done to curb the unremitting menace of the gangs," declares Walter B. Miller of Harvard's Center for Criminal Justice.

Miller, an anthropologist whose interest in and contact with gangs dates back to 1954, spent a year studying present-day gangs in the six cities that he concluded faced the worst gang problems—New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Detroit and San Francisco. His investigation was financed by the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) and constitutes what is believed to be the first national study of its kind. Among Miller's conclusions:

- Gang violence today is more lethal than during any previous period. The reason appears to lie in the "extraordinary increase in the availability and use" of guns by gang members.
- From 1972 through 1974 five of the six cities recorded 525 gang-related murders—about 25 percent of all juvenile homicides for those cities.
- Gangs can be found terrorizing elementary, junior and senior high schools. Says a Philadelphia junior high principal: "There is no point in trying to exaggerate the situation. The truth by itself is devastating."
- The six cities report from 760 gangs with 28,500 members to 2700 gangs with 81,500 members.
- Despite claims that American females are increasingly criminal and violent, urban youth gangs continue to be "a predominantly male enterprise." Gangs take an old-fashioned, traditional attitude toward sex roles. Girls carry weapons for boys, serve in female auxiliaries and frequently offer their impugned honor as the reason for a rumble between rival gangs.

Substantiating Miller's findings, Capt. Francis J. Daly, who commands the Youth Aid Division of the New York Police Department, says: "Ten years ago we had nothing in New York City. About 1971 it started up again in the Bronx." Although it has leveled off since then, Daly feels gang activity today is four times more violent than it was in the 1950's. "Weapons are much more available," says Daly. "Another difference between now and the old days is that innocent people are more often the victims of gang criminality. In the old days they spent much more time on rumbles against each other. Now there are more robberies, burglaries and shakedowns against non-gang members."

No cheap guns

As for weapons, Miller's report finds that gangs are no longer satisfied with the homemade zip guns of 20 years ago or even "Saturday night specials." Instead, they want top-quality weaponry, such as the Smith and Wesson .38 used by many police departments.

Los Angeles Police Capt. William J. Riddle, commanding officer of the Juvenile Division, sees guns as a major contributor to the violence. "They're not that difficult to get," he says. "Every time a million more guns are sold to the public, more of them reach gangs and other criminals through such means as burglaries."

One of Miller's most alarming findings is that gangs have turned the public schools into battlegrounds, attacking not only members of rival gangs, but also students who are nonmembers. He says that the shooting and killing of teachers by gang members has been reported in Chicago and Philadelphia.

Miller says this violence has led to "territorialization" of schools, meaning that gangs actually claim "ownership" of such areas as a cafeteria or a gym. "As 'owners' of school facilities," he reports, "gang members have assumed the right to collect 'fees' from other students for a variety of 'privileges' which can be defined as passing through the hallways, using the gym, not being assaulted and of simply going to school."

Intimidating the system

In some cases, he adds, school administrators seem helpless. A New York City source told him that some of the semi-autonomous school districts had "sold out," granting gangs the right to recruit among the student body in exchange for a promise of non-violence.

Comments a Los Angeles youth worker: "The problem is out of hand. We've had three years of violence and killing in the schools with no real action by the authorities. All the schools in the inner city have large gang populations."

For the most part, Miller says, gang activity is confined to the slum areas of big cities. Gang members range in age from 12 to 21 and usually associate by ethnic background. Black and Hispanic gangs are more numerous than gangs of white youths from working-class families.

The newest and most surprising change that Miller discovered was the increase in the number of Asian-Americans involved:

"Accepted doctrine for many years has been that Oriental youths pose negligible problems in juvenile delinquency or gang activity. This accepted tenet has been seriously undermined by events of the 1970's—not only by the violent activities of the newly immigrated 'Hong Kong Chinese,' but by the development in several cities of gangs of Filipinos, Japanese and other Asian groups. The estimated number of Asian gangs is now almost equal to that of white gangs and may exceed their number in the near future."

What the future holds

Miller is not overly optimistic about the future. LEAA has awarded him a grant to conduct a follow-up study to explore the causes of gang behavior and to try to come up with suggestions for coping with gang violence.

But barring some dramatic—and unlikely—move such as a massive program of federal help, Miller sees no immediate relief. His conclusion: "The likelihood that gang problems will continue to beset major cities during the next few years appears high."

Actually tastes good . . . right out of the bottle. Simply delicious over crushed ice!

Save these drink recipes as mixed at famous places:

COMFORT*ON-THE-ROCKS

Served at the Red Lion in Vail, Colo

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort

Pour over cracked ice in short glass, add twist of lemon peel. Delicious!

COMFORT* MANHATTAN

Served at Paul Young's Restaurant, in Washington, D.C.

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
½ oz. dry vermouth
Dash Angostura bitters (optional)

Stir with cracked ice, strain into glass. Add a cherry. It's fabulously smooth!

COMFORT*OLD-FASHIONED

As served at the Gaslight Club, Chicago

½ oz. sparkling water
Dash Angostura bitters
½ tspn. sugar (optional)
1½ oz. Southern Comfort

Stir bitters, sugar, water in glass, add ice cubes and S.C., stir. Add twist of lemon peel, orange slice, cherry.

COMFORT*COLLINS

Served in Miami Beach at Hotel Fontainebleau

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
Juice of ¼ lime + 7UP

Mix Southern Comfort, lime juice in tall glass; add ice cubes, fill with 7UP. The best—and the easiest to mix—Collins of all!

COMFORT*'N TONIC

Served at Anthony's Pier 4, Boston

Juice, rind ¼ lime
1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
Schweppes Quinine Water (tonic)

Squeeze lime over ice cubes in tall glass; add rind. S.C. Fill with tonic and stir.

SCARLETT O'HARA

Served at Antoine's in New Orleans

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
1 jigger Ocean Spray Cranberry Juice cocktail
Juice ¼ fresh lime

Shake with cracked ice; strain into glass. As intriguing as its namesake!

That's why it makes mixed drinks taste so much better!

Make this simple taste test and you'll know why so many people have been switching to Southern Comfort. It will also show you how to make better-tasting mixed drinks. First, fill two short glasses with cracked ice. Pour a jigger of Bourbon or Scotch into one. Sip it. Then do the same with Southern Comfort. Sip it, and you've found a completely different kind of basic liquor . . . one that actually tastes good with nothing added. It's delicious right out of the bottle! That's why so many experts use it, instead of ordinary whiskey, when mixing drinks. They know this "switch" improves most drinks tremendously. Get a bottle; prove it to yourself. Make both recipes for the Sour below. One sip will convince you.

ordinary SOUR

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Bourbon or rye
½ jigger fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon sugar

Shake with cracked ice; strain into glass. Add orange slice on rim of glass and a cherry. Now use recipe at right. See how a simple switch in basic liquor makes a far better-tasting drink.

improved SOUR

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
½ jigger fresh lemon juice
½ teaspoon sugar

Mix like ordinary recipe. But you'll enjoy it far more. It has a flavor no other Sour can match! Comfort' Sour, as served at the Top of the Mark, Hotel Mark Hopkins, San Francisco.

*Southern Comfort®

WHAT IS SOUTHERN COMFORT? It's a special kind of basic liquor. Long ago in old New Orleans, a talented gentleman was disturbed by the taste of even the finest whiskeys of his day. So he combined rare and delicious ingredients to create this unusually smooth, superb liquor, known today as Southern Comfort. Its formula is still a family secret . . . its delicious taste still unmatched by any other liquor. Try a bottle; see how good it tastes straight, on-the-rocks, or in mixed drinks.

To the 56,000,000 people who smoke cigarettes.

A lot of people have been telling you not to smoke, especially cigarettes with high 'tar' and nicotine. But smoking provides you with a pleasure you don't want to give up.

Naturally, we're prejudiced. We're in the business of selling cigarettes.

But there is one overriding fact that transcends whether you should or shouldn't smoke and that fact is that you do smoke.

And what are they going to do about that?

They can continue to exhort you not to smoke. Or they might look reality in the face and recommend that, if you smoke and want low 'tar' and nicotine in a cigarette, you smoke a cigarette like Vantage.

And we'll go along with that, because there is no other cigarette like Vantage.

Except Vantage.

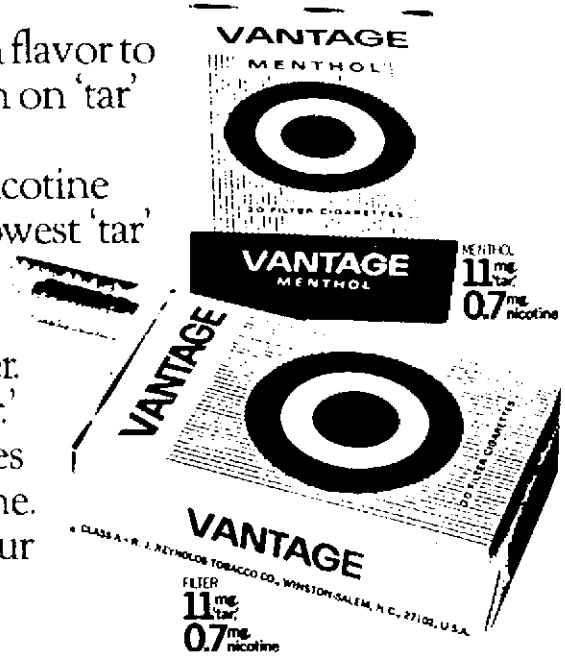

Vantage has a unique filter that allows rich flavor to come through it and yet substantially cuts down on 'tar' and nicotine.

Not that Vantage is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette. (But you probably wouldn't like the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette anyway.)

The plain truth is that smoke has to come through a filter if taste is to come through a filter. And where there is taste there has to be some 'tar.'

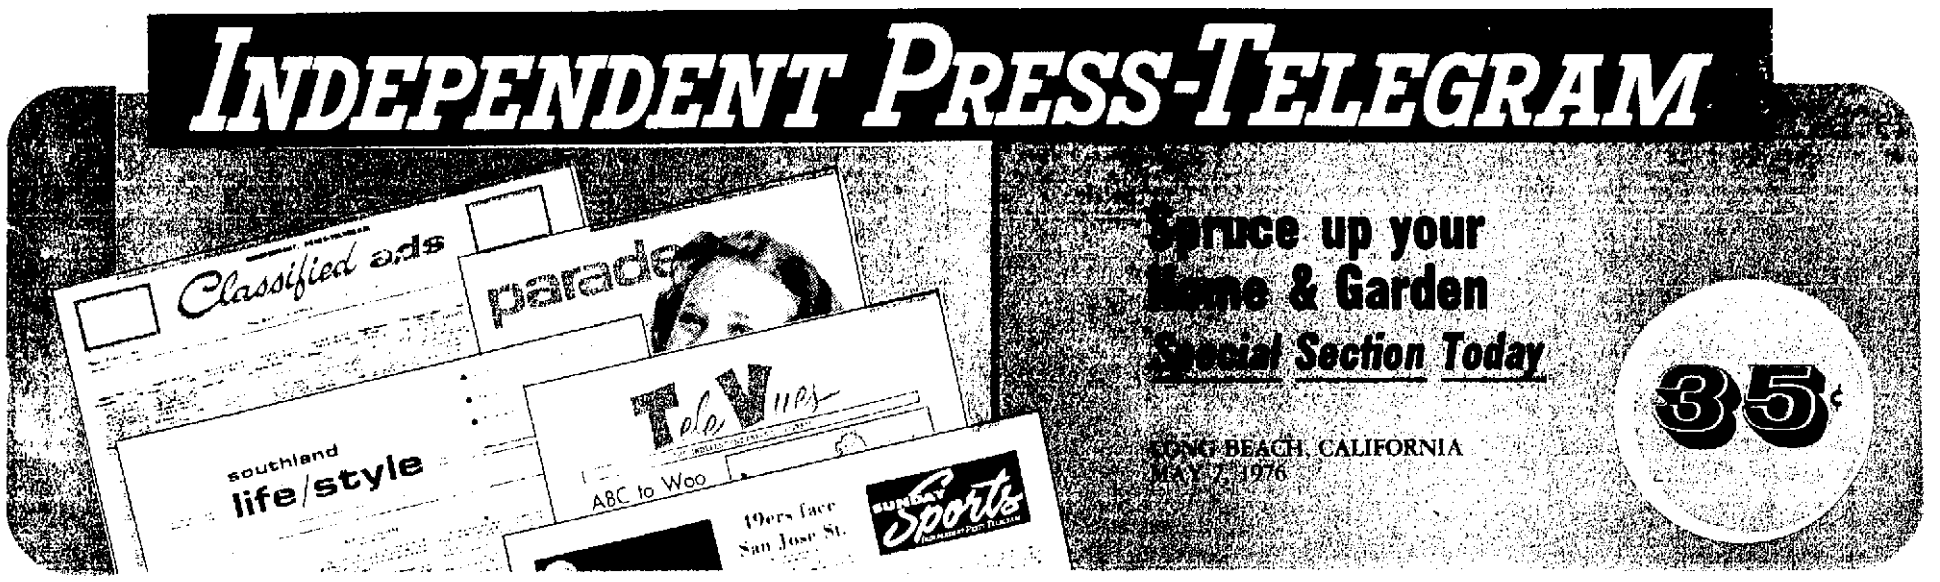

But Vantage is the only cigarette that gives you so much flavor with so little 'tar' and nicotine.

So much flavor that you'll never miss your high 'tar' cigarette.

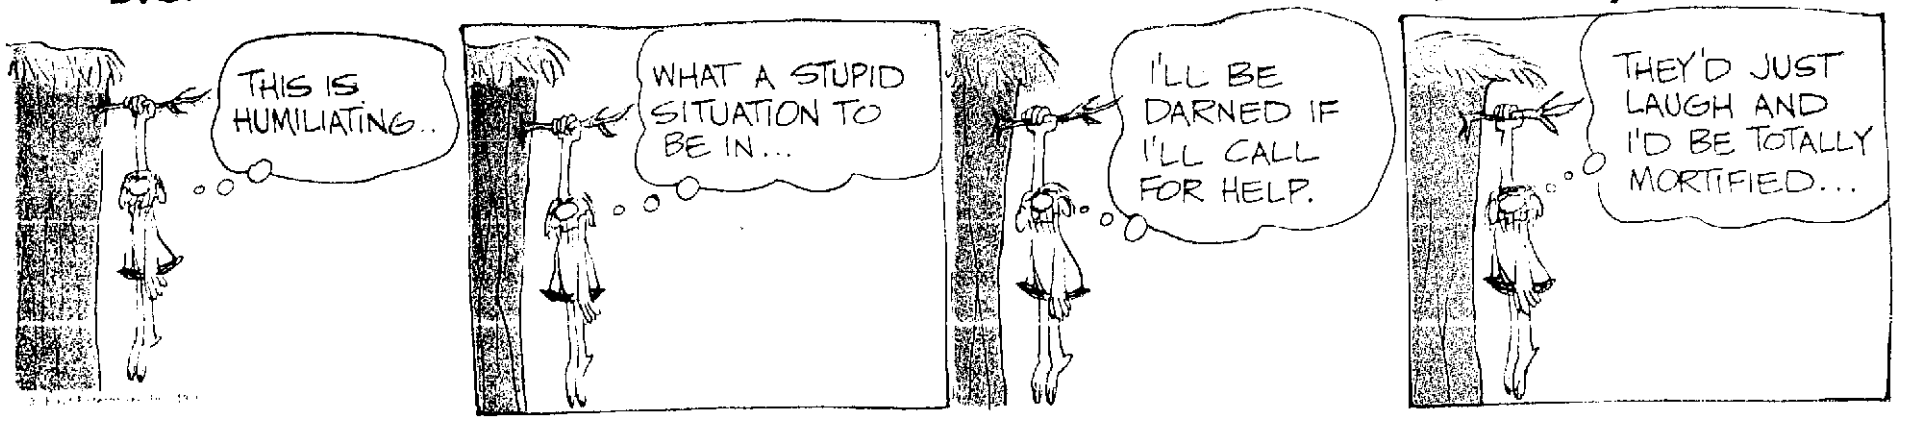

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

FILTER, MENTHOL: 11 mg. "tar", 0.7 mg. nicotine, av. per cigarette, FTC Report SEPT. '75.

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

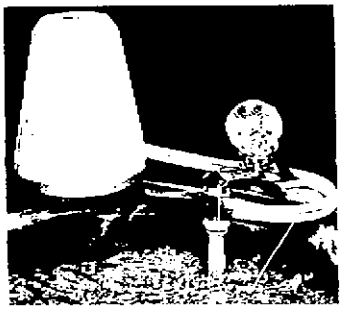

SPORTSMAN'S PAD: Useful when you carry any type of equipment with a shoulder strap, this new pad reduces the pressure of the strap and also conforms to the shape of the shoulder to help reduce slippage. It's made of cowhide permanently bonded to a Neoprene rubber cushion. Pads are available to fit rifle slings, golf bags, photo gadget bags and back packs—and in a waterproof version for scuba diving gear. $6.55 ppd. Cathey Enterprises, Dept. PP, 1165 Walnut Ave., Chula Vista, Cal. 92011. (above left)

SKILLET STRETCHER: Fitting snugly on a 10-inch frying pan, this new aluminum ring nearly doubles the pan's capacity. You can use it to keep cooked foods—such as bacon, eggs, pancakes, potatoes, fish and meat—hot until serving, storing them out of the grease and allowing any grease they contain to drain back into the pan. It makes possible preparing as many as three chickens or 15 hamburgers, according to the maker. $3.99 ppd. Innoventions, Dept. PP, Box 16083, St. Louis, Mo. 63105. (above right)

BEVERAGE WARMER: Consisting of a heat-resistant glass carafe, serving cover, and separate base, this new electric warmer can keep up to 50 ounces of prepared beverages or soups at proper serving temperature for hours without boiling or scorching. The carafe is immersible, dishwasher safe. About $14 in stores. West Bend Co., Dept. PP, Box 278, West Bend, Wis. 53095. (above left)

PORTABLE SOFTENER: A new solution to the hard-water problem—which may cause rough skin, dull hair, film and spots on glassware and silverware—is provided by the reportedly first portable water softener to become available. The unit can be installed in a few minutes at any sink; fits on shelf, wall or counter; diverts water into its ion exchanger where calcium, magnesium and other hardness materials are removed. The non-electric softener can be recharged periodically with ordinary table salt, keeping average yearly operating costs below $2, claims the maker. About $50 in stores. Bissell Inc., Dept. PP, Grand Rapids, Mich. 49501. (above right)

A NEW PLASTIC BOAT: This boat of high-impact plastic reinforced with fiberglass is eight feet long, weighs only 24 pounds, and is said to be suitable for backpacking or transport by car-top carrier, in a station wagon, or even in an automobile trunk. It has built-in foam flotation, a ribbed flat bottom and low cockpit design for stability, and is virtually indestructible and maintenance-free, claims the maker. Blue bottom, white top with red arrow. About $150 in stores. Details: J-K Manufacturing Co., Dept. PP, Box S, Sheridan, Wyo. 82801.

Do you need roughage?

Roughage is important because it retains essential water to form the bulk that moves waste material through your system.

But, unfortunately, roughage is processed out of so much of the food we eat, many of us don't get enough of it.

Without sufficient roughage in your diet, you may suffer from constipation.

Here's where Serutan can help you.

Serutan is the natural ingredient laxative that contains a rich source of roughage. It has the capacity to absorb over 20 times its weight in water. But, unlike certain foods containing harsh roughage, Serutan forms gentle bulk. Your intestinal wastes remain soft and moist and they pass through your system more rapidly.

Try Serutan. You'll be very comfortable with it.

The way it was: Here are four brothers waiting for tonsillectomies back in 1945. The operation was once a regular part of growing up, but today doctors are more skeptical of its usefulness. Still, it is the nation's most common surgical procedure.

All Those Tonsil Operations: Useless? Dangerous?

by Lawrence Galton

In a hospital almost anywhere in the U. S. today, a 5-year-old boy is having his tonsils out because of a succession of colds and sore throat, a few earaches.

Will the operation really help?

Years ago, "having the tonsils out" was virtually a ritual of childhood. Hospitals even had regular "tonsil days" set aside for en masse tonsil and adenoid removals. The theory was that the tissues served no useful purpose; that they became foci of infection.

The operation is still the most common surgical procedure in the U. S. and one of the most controversial. One million tonsillectomies are performed annually even though many authorities are not at all certain that tonsils are useless. They seriously question the need in some, even most, cases. Also, the operation is not free of risk, and more than 300 children die each year from bleeding and other complications.

A matter of rates

The tonsillectomy rate varies widely. In one Massachusetts community, 65 percent of the children lose their tonsils; in an adjoining one, the figure is 18 percent. One study found a rate of 17 operations per 10,000 children in Uppsala, Sweden; 258 per 10,000 among Blue Cross subscribers in Kansas, and 70 per 10,000 for the U. S. as a whole.

Just a few months ago, the director of pediatrics at a major New York medical center reported that a large percentage of T&A's (tonsillectomies and adenoidectomies) are done unnecessarily "and do not usually correct the condition about which the mother complains."

The tonsils are oval lumps of lymphatic tissue, one on either side of the throat behind the tongue. The adenoids, of similar tissue, lie in the throat behind the soft palate.

The tonsils have been blamed, mistakenly, for more troubles than any other single part of the body. Fifty years ago, their removal was thought by some to be a cure for goiter, diabetes and epilepsy; as recently as 20 years ago, there was some belief that tonsillectomy was good for nightmares, night sweats, snoring and foul breath.

Most commonly and persistently, they have been blamed for respiratory troubles, and it's not hard to see why.

Normally prominent during infancy and early childhood, the tonsils begin to diminish in size by the end of the first decade. Large tonsils in a small throat look inappropriate. Moreover, they are largest just when children have their greatest incidence of colds and other respiratory infections.

For a long time, it seemed there must be a connection: large tonsils, much trouble; later, small tonsils, less trouble. Why not, then, operate and stop trouble?

It remained for a skeptic, Dr. Albert D. Kaiser of Rochester, N. Y., to put tonsillectomy under scientific scrutiny. For 10 years, he kept complete records on the illnesses of 5000 children in two groups—those who had had tonsils removed and those who had not.

Just the same

Kaiser's investigation, reported almost 20 years ago, showed no significant difference between the two groups in the number of colds, sore throats and other upper respiratory infections.

Subsequent studies in New York City, Cleveland, and England confirmed Kaiser's findings. And years ago, the Medical Research Council of Britain felt it necessary to observe somewhat caustically: "One cannot avoid the conclusion that there is a tendency for the operation to be performed as a routine prophylactic ritual for no particular reason and with no particular result."

Unquestionably, there are children who urgently require tonsillectomy or adenoidectomy: children who face the threat of heart failure from impaired breathing caused by very large tonsils or adenoids; those with greatly enlarged tonsils that obstruct swallowing, or those with enlarged adenoids that produce breathing discomfort and speech distortion or that produce chronic or recurrent middle ear infections associated with hearing loss or chronic mastoiditis.

Such children, however, are few.

Risk psychological harm

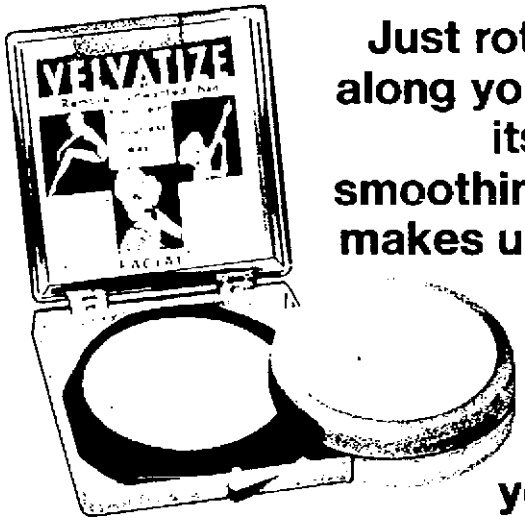

Medical concern about confusing criteria for surgery and the huge number of operations has been mounting. For one thing, there is growing appreciation that there are psychological risks for a child undergoing a T&A even under the best-managed circumstances; and when preparation of the child is inadequate or hospital management is insensitive, the risks may be major.

Moreover, it now appears that it may be wise to preserve the tonsils if possible, because they are one source of agents involved in the body's immune defense system, and their removal may weaken resistance to infections and other disease. At least one study by investigators of the New York State Department of Cancer Control suggests

More cigarette vs. your cigarette.

1. Is your cigarette as long and as lean as our cigarette for more pleasure, more style?
2. Does your cigarette draw as easy as our cigarette for more tobacco enjoyment?
3. Does your cigarette smoke slower than a 100 mm cigarette for more smoking time?
4. Does your cigarette come in a burnished brown wrap so it looks as good as it smokes?
5. Does your cigarette sit neat in your hand like it was made for it and fit your face like it found a home?
6. Does your cigarette give you all this yet cost no more than a 100 mm cigarette (which means more for your money)?

If the answer to all these questions is yes, your cigarette is probably More. Because there's only one cigarette that's so much more. More.

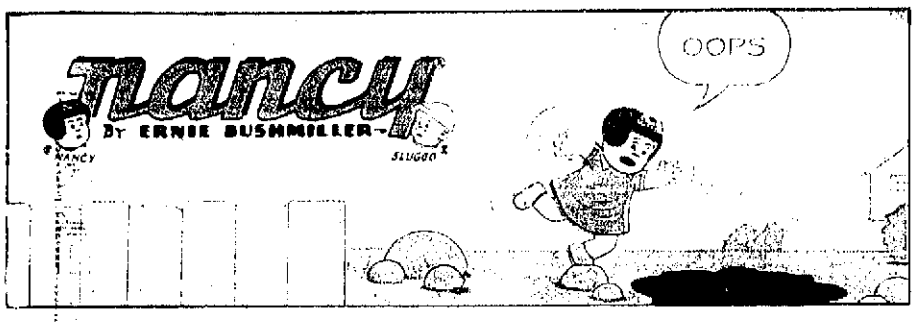

The first 120mm cigarette.

that people who have had tonsillectomies are nearly three times as likely to develop Hodgkin's disease, a form of cancer that attacks lymphoid tissue.

It was to eliminate confusion and provide rational guidelines for T&A's that a rigorous study was set up in 1971 at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh by Drs. Jack L. Paradise, a pediatrician, and Charles D. Bluestone, a surgeon.

It's the only such study ever undertaken in the U. S. Paradise wanted it because, as a consultant reviewing proposed T&A's for the United Mine Workers Welfare and Rétirement Fund, he found that most of the children did not need the surgery. Bluestone joined in because he had been finding it necessary to resist T&A pressures from parents and referring physicians.

Criteria set up

The patients in the study are non-urgent cases. (Children who urgently need surgery get it immediately.) For the remaining children, the two investigators have set up strict criteria. (See listing at end.)

Children who satisfy the criteria are then, subject to consent of parents, assigned randomly in two groups — one to receive surgery, another to receive medical treatment. And all of the children are being followed for many years.

Already the results of the Pittsburgh study are striking.

Drs. Paradise and Bluestone have found great variation in the reliability of children's medical histories as given by parents:

"A mother who is tired of nursing her child through respiratory illnesses is apt to magnify their frequency and severity," they write in the journal Hospital Practice. "Her memory may simply be inaccurate or she may consciously or unconsciously wish to influence the decision in favor of surgery. When we hear that a patient has had 12 sore throats in the last year, or five per year for the past five years, we routinely seek corroboration by attempting to obtain copies of the medical records. If the described illnesses were not completely documented—and they rarely are—we tell the parents that we would like to follow the child ourselves and observe a few episodes before we reach a conclusion. In some children the history is confirmed, but in most it is not, and an appreciable number have no attacks during long periods of subsequent observation."

Every child is screened for allergy. Nasal obstruction from enlarged adenoids may coexist with allergic rhinitis. If a marked allergic response is found, the child is referred for allergy treatment and surgery is out for at least six months.

It turns out that 60 percent of the children do not meet the criteria for either tonsillectomy or adenoidectomy, and that more children meet the criteria for adenoidectomy alone than for tonsillectomy alone or for combined T&A.

Before the study began T&A's at Children's Hospital made up 9 percent of all surgical operations. Now they account for only 5 percent. At the nearby Eye and Ear Hospital, tonsils and adenoids still account for 10 percent of all operations.

When the study is finished a few years hence and long-term comparisons are made between the two groups of children with comparable problems—one group operated on and the other not—it's expected to provide answers to many important questions: Do children with non-urgent cases really benefit from surgery? If so, exactly how and under what conditions? And does surgery involve a serious penalty in impairment of the body's immune or defense system?

Meanwhile, however, the study indicates what many authorities have suspected: Many T&A's are performed needlessly. And the criteria for the study may well help physicians — and parents — distinguish between conditions for which surgery may be of possible benefit and those for which it is not justified.

THE PITTSBURGH STUDY CRITERIA

TONSILLECTOMY is considered of possible benefit for a child with any one or more of five findings:

- Recurrent tonsillitis, with at least seven attacks in the preceding year, or five in each of the last two years, or three in each of the last three years;
- Confirmed abscess;
- Chronic tonsillitis persisting at least six months despite intensive antibiotic treatment;
- Chronic neck lymph node inflammation persisting at least six months despite intensive antibiotic treatment;
- Tonsil enlargement causing significantly muffled voice ("as if the mouth contained a hot potato") in children over 6 years of age.

ADENOIDECTOMY is considered of possible benefit for a child with any one or more of three findings:

- Persistent nasal obstruction associated with adenoid enlargement not due to allergy and resulting in mouth-breathing most or all of the time and hyponasal speech (with little air going through the nose);
- Recurrent middle ear infection, without allergy, and treated at least once with incision of the eardrum and drainage;
- Chronic sinusitis or chronic throat inflammation with adenoid enlargement unresponsive to medical treatment and not due to allergy.

DO YOU NEED A TONIC?

Doctors report iron-poor blood definitely improves with Geritol.

As you can see from the chart and photomicrographs below, medical records show that iron-poor blood definitely improves after you use Geritol. Thin, pale, badly shaped iron-poor red blood cells become round, rich and red.

		Before Geritol	After Geritol	Improvement
Here's what GERITOL can do! (Actual Laboratory Blood Tests)	Blood Count Patient A	3,200,000 red blood cells	3,900,000 red blood cells	700,000 more red blood cells
	Blood Count Patient B	3,800,000 red blood cells	4,900,000 red blood cells	over 1,000,000 more red blood cells

With the help of Geritol iron in your bloodstream, millions more healthy red blood cells are built to circulate all around your body 1500 times a day!

And the Geritol formula also gives you vitamins important for nutrition.

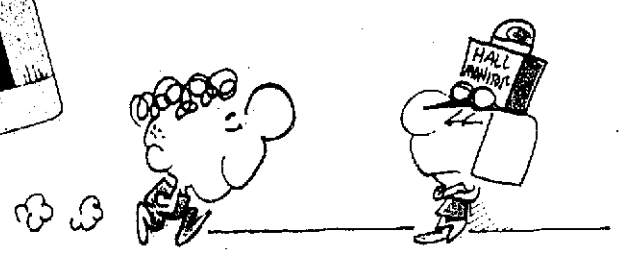

Geritol is the tonic that's protecting so many Americans today. If you need a tonic, try Geritol, tablets or liquid, starting today.

The Women in Ali's Life

Sonji Roi and Ali: Married in '64, they split 10 months later, reportedly over his religion.

Ali and Belinda Boyd: Married at 17 in 1967, she has borne Ali three daughters and a son.

Veronica Porche and Ali: She was his escort in Manila last fall for his fight with Joe Frazier.

Muhammad Ali Cleans Up

by Charles Peterson

Muhammad Ali, if you can believe him, plans to retire from the boxing world this year with a take of $32 million.

I'm 34 years old," Ali says, "and I'm starting to feel it. This year I'm set up for fights with Richard Dunn, Jimmy Young, Ken Norton, George Foreman and Japanese wrestler Antonio Inoki. They're supposed to bring in $32 million. That's enough for me, and there's no more reason for me to keep fighting.

"I am still the greatest and there's no heavyweight who can beat me—not Dunn, Foreman, Young or anyone. It's just how much trouble they will give me, how long they last," Ali says.

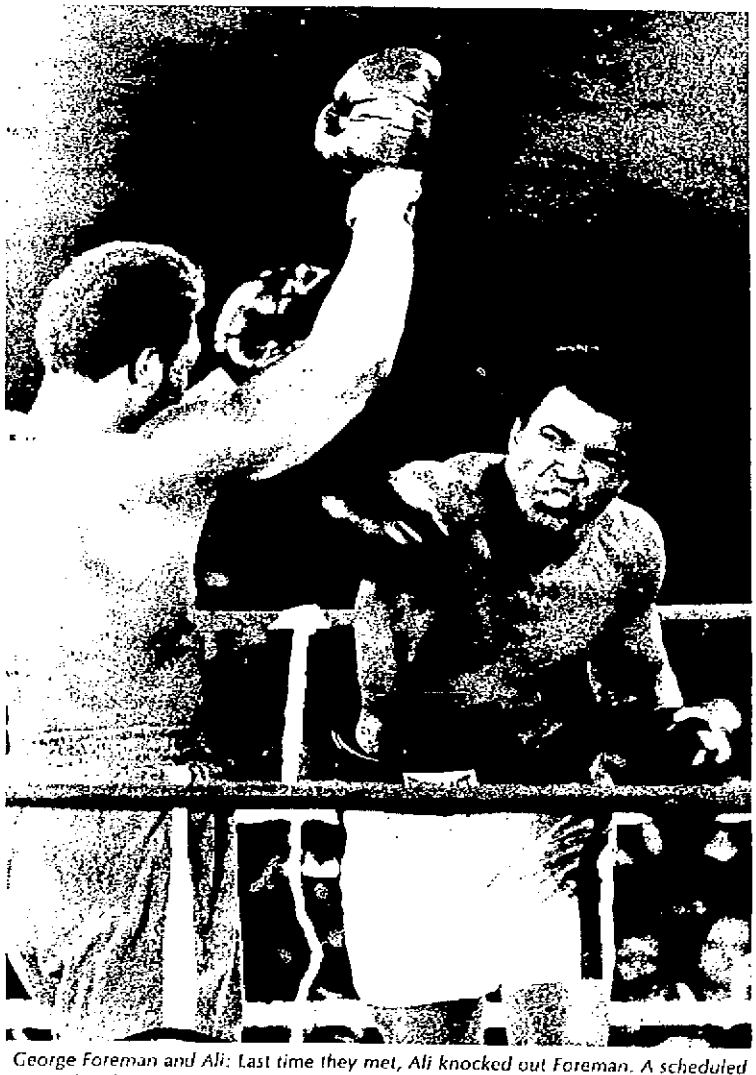

"I'm a much better fighter than I was 10 years ago. I have a different style now. I don't dance around as much as I used to, but I hit harder. In 1966 Ali used to dance around and throw a lot of fast punches and block a lot of punches, and then I'd tag the guy in about seven rounds.

"That's how I beat Frazier and Foreman, blocking their punches until they were tired.

"I'm sure history will prove me the best heavyweight of all time. All you gotta do is to study the old films of Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney and even Joe Louis. Lots of times they fought like a bunch of wild women.

"You can take all of those champs and add up what they made, and I've earned more than the whole bunch put together. I've got class—class and speed and reflexes. I'm tellin' you, I'm the greatest."

Ali's autobiography, which he's been promoting in Europe, is called The Greatest. He plans to star in the film version next year for $2.5 million, thinks the billing should read: "The Greatest in The Greatest." After that he intends to lecture at various colleges and universities, convinced that he will develop into the greatest university lecturer in the world.

George Foreman and Ali: Last time they met, Ali knocked out Foreman. A scheduled rematch will help rake in the $32 million Ali's been guaranteed for fights this year.

Ali and Antonio Inoki, a Japanese wrestler: Ali and Inoki meet in June in Tokyo and Ali gets over $6 million for this gimmick.

THE JACKSON TWINS

OFF THE RECORD

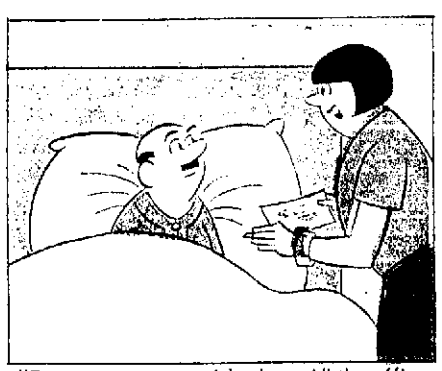

by ED REED

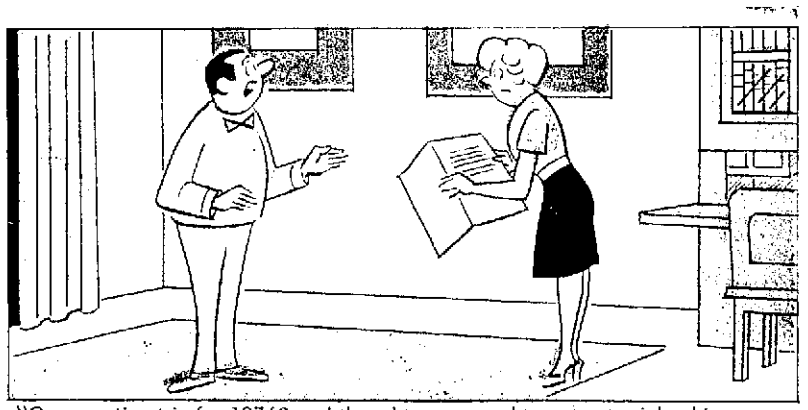

"Don't shop in that aisle, Evelyn — it would be hazardous to our wealth."

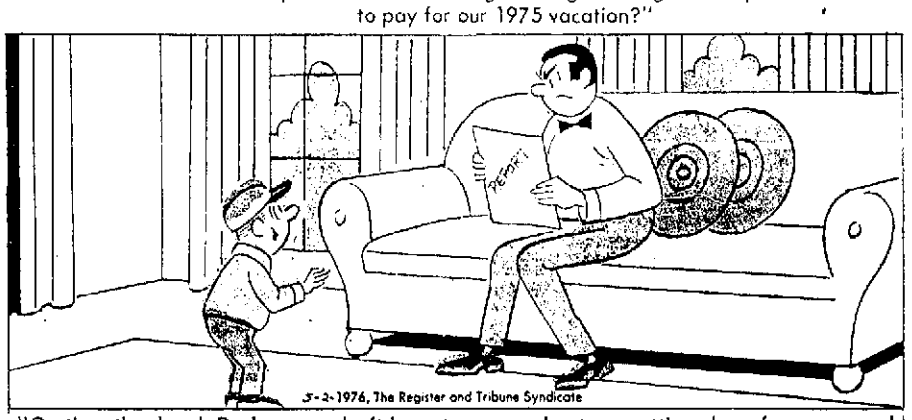

"Dear, what would you change if you had my whole life to live over?"

"Try not to get too sick, dear. All the office collection got for you was ten dollars."

"Our vacation trip for 1976? — I thought we agreed to get extra jobs this summer to pay for our 1975 vacation?"

"On the other hand, Dad — you don't have to worry about me getting ulcers from overwork at school."

my favorite jokes

by STEVE ALLEN

EDITOR'S NOTE: That evening on his radio show when Steve Allen started ad-libbing with members of his studio audience was, of course, prophetic: the beginning of a show business dimension that would turn into TV's "The Tonight Show."

As Allen recalls it: "Until that evening I would write my material before each show. But the show had been doubled in length with no increase in salary, so I thought, heck, I'm not going to work that hard for no money, so I'll interview people, famous actors, singers.

"That night I had Doris Day scheduled for an interview and she never showed up. I'd already played her record and read the jokes I'd written, so, literally in desperation, I picked up a heavy floor microphone and trundled it around the studio. All I did on the air was talk as I do at home."

Not just talk—the Allen gift for the comedy of language itself made people tune into his wit. Instances abound. Once when he was doing a night-club act and taking questions from the audience, a man yelled out: "I've got a quarter that says you don't know how to play 'The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise.'" Allen's answer: "What do you know about that—a guy with a talking quarter!"

Says Allen: "The brain is surprised when it thinks it's going to get one thing and it gets something else; and the sudden surprise leads to laughter."

Aside from his radio and TV career (the latter spanning the original "Tonight Show," "The Steve Allen Show," and "I've Got a Secret"), Allen is also an actor ("The Benny Goodman Story"), lyricist and composer, and a writer of novels, short stories, poetry and books of humor including the recently published "Schmock-Schmock!" (Doubleday).

Here are some of Allen's recollections, stories, and comments:

At the heart of one form of my humor is to literalize something that is not meant to be literal. I'm thinking of a time when my mother came to visit and wanted to see my 3-year-old son. He had already been put to bed, and I said: "I don't know if Billy's awake, Mother, but why don't you tiptoe in and see?" She hadn't seen him for four months and wasn't even sure he'd remember her. So she walked in and saw his eyes opened. She said: "Hello, sweetheart, how are you? Do you know who I am?" And he said: "Why? Don't you know who you are?" That's my kind of humor.

This is one of my favorite stories. Over the years, when I've been doing a show and Christmas approaches, I send around a memo saying, "I just want you to know it's against the rules here to buy the boss a gift. Thank you for those of you who might have thought of it, but you all have better things to do with your money. No Christmas presents for me!" Well, one year, a week after I'd sent that memo around, my secretary walked in with a handsomely bound package wrapped in gold paper. It was from two of my writers, Stan Burns and Herb Sargent. I said: "Didn't they read my note? I mean it's sweet of them but they shouldn't have." So of course I opened the package, and it was a framed copy of my memo.

At a dinner honoring Pearl Bailey, Allen remarked: "I must mention the hallmark of Pearl Bailey's style of performing. She takes it easy. In fact, she's gotten more casual through the years to the point that in the middle of her act on my show one night she was arrested for loitering."

Steve Allen as his character the Question Man:
Answer: Igloo.
Question: What do you use to keep an ig from falling apart?

Answer: The Los Angeles Dodgers.
Question: How would you describe pedestrians in Southern California?

Question from his audience:
Question: Where were you and what were you doing when you thought of that great song, "Gravy Waltz"?
Answer: I was sitting at my piano writing a song, as I recall.

Question: How can I win at blackjack?
Answer: Use a real blackjack.

On his records: "Well, first of all they are round. One thing I do admit, they have a hole in the middle—but this can easily be plugged up."

Interviewing a psychologist on his show: The psychologist states, "The only two really instinctive fears in man are the fear of loud noises and the fear of falling." "I have a great fear," replies Steve, "of making a loud noise while falling."

To a live audience: "It's in a way gratifying for a television entertainer to stand up in front of so many people who can't turn him off."

And then there was the Allen zaniness on "The Tonight Show" (part of it performed live outside the studio). Once, dressed as a policeman, he hailed a passing cab, opened the door, tossed in a huge salami, slammed the door and said to the driver: "Take this to Grand Central Station!" He watched the cab speed away.

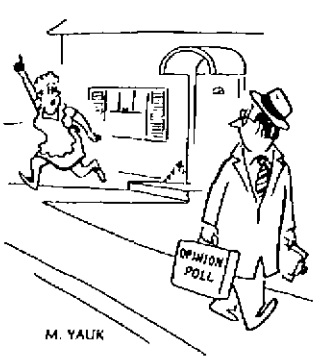

---

it's to laugh

"What do you mean where am I going? I've been to Mother's for two weeks and just got back!"

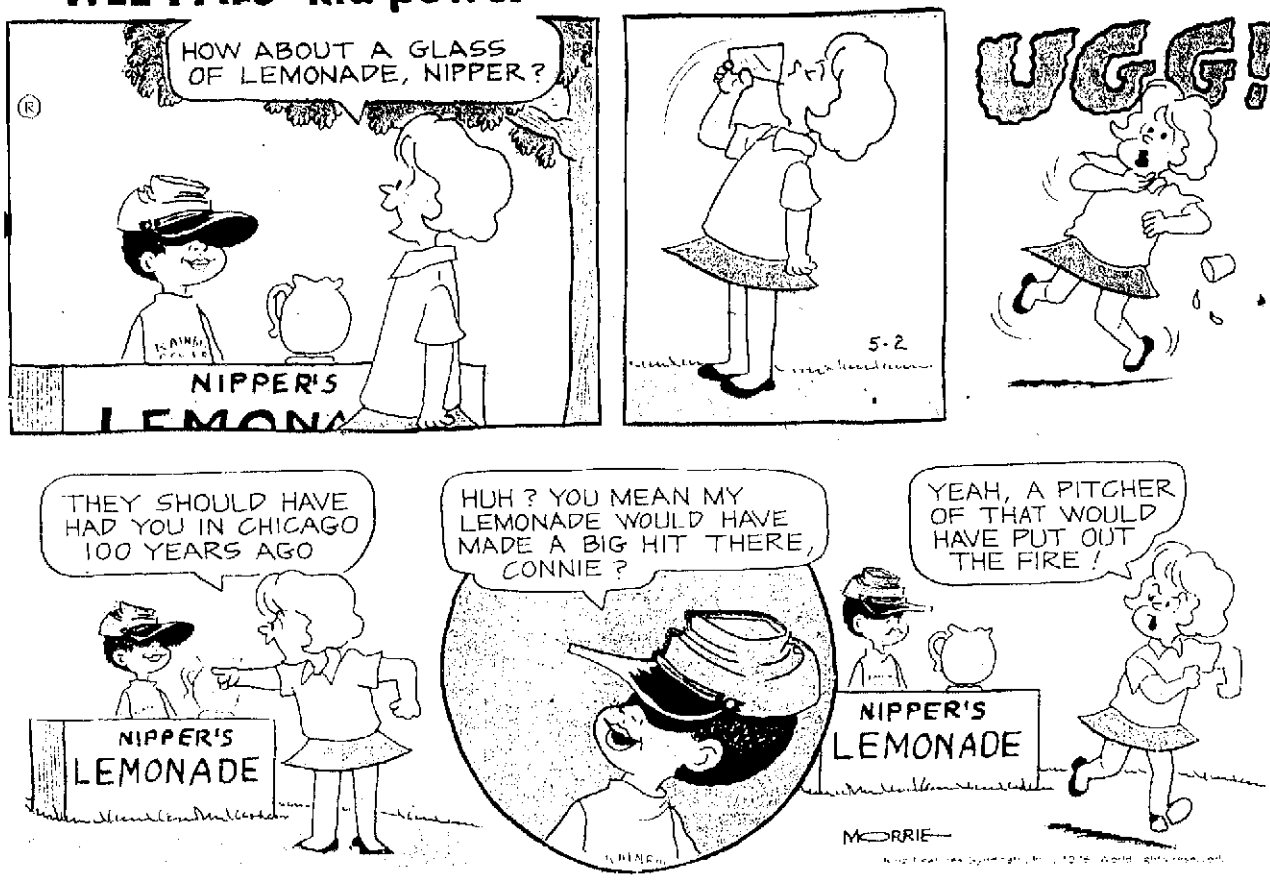

"Yoo-hoo! I've changed my mind!"

"What would you suggest for a woman who returns everything?"

The Realistic® STA-77 is one of the greatest hi-fi bargains we've offered in our 53 years! Its amplifier delivers full power across the audio spectrum, and distortion is so low you simply cannot hear it. And there's a switch for listening to main speakers, remote speakers, or both. The tuner is first rate. It has both 300 and 75-ohm inputs for using any type of antenna system, a signal-strength meter, and a "gliding light" dial pointer that changes from a soft glow to bright red to indicate stereocasts. When you record with a 3-head deck, a tape monitor button lets you instantly compare the recording to the original source. Other features: center-detent balance control, loudness and mono pushbuttons, blackout dial, custom walnut veneer case. All this plus Quatravox — just add a 2nd speaker pair for spacious 4-channel effects from stereo! U.L. listed.

• Powerful 10" Woofer! • Two 3" Midrange/Treble Speakers!
• Switch for Adjusting Speaker Balance! • Genuine Walnut Veneer!

Our popular Realistic Nova®-76 adds superb sound to any audio system: 20-20,000 Hz across the audio spectrum. A unique L-C crossover arrangement permits the two 3" speakers to reproduce both treble and midrange frequencies. The heavy 10" woofer gives you plenty of bass. A rear panel switch lets you adjust for acoustically normal, "live" or "dead" rooms, and both phono jack and screw terminal connections assure easy hookup. Genuine walnut veneer enclosure, stylish lattice grille. 8 ohms. 22⅛x12⅛x11¼".

ATTENTION CB BUYERS

Radio Shack introduced its famous low-cost Realistic CB line in 1960 and has been a world leader in Citizens Band for 16 years. While some of Realistic's 16 radios may be in short supply at times, it'll be worth your while to WAIT FOR REALISTIC (if you have to) and avoid the hassle and problems of dealing with Store X and Brand X. We also make our own Archer line of CB antennas, crystals, coax cables, and accessories. These are in fairly good supply today. Realistic CB is sold and serviced ONLY by Radio Shack in our over 4000 shops in the USA and Canada. Buy from a really qualified specialist—your friendly neighborhood Radio Shack!

"New Formula" Premium Power Cells

Exclusive! The Only Official Bicentennial Two-Record Album

Limited Edition! Sure to Become A Collector's Item!

For Only 7.95 Per Set

50-1776

- Authorized by Congress – Sold Only by Radio Shack!
- Inspiring Patriotic Music by ALL 4 USA Military Bands!

Never before and never after 1976 can you get this spectacular collection of uniquely American band music — and at such a bargain price for the TWO-RECORD set! A tribute to our great country as only Americans could perform it — by the U.S. Army Band & Chorus, Navy Band & Sea Chanters, Marine Band and Air Force Band & Singing Sergeants. With world-renowned precision, the bands perform the marches, chanteys, anthems and fife and drum cadences that are truly America. Thrill to the Star Spangled Banner, National Emblem March, Marines Hymn, Stars and Stripes Forever and 28 other time-honored songs that have stirred the spirit of Americans from the Revolutionary Era to this birthday celebration 200 years later.

About the Bicentennial Album:

The production of an official Bicentennial stereo recording of the Armed Forces Bands was authorized by an act of the U.S. Congress. Broad Stripes, Bright Stars, the result of that Congressional act, is available exclusively at Radio Shack! Only 100,000 copies of the double-album were made — and will never again be pressed — so get yours today!

Ore Ida

AMERICA'S FAVORITE BRAND OF FROZEN POTATOES because they taste good.

IT'S TIME!

(The fleeting moment of perfect flavor.)

Funny thing about sweet peas. One minute they're as sweet and tender as can be. Ready to pick. Wait too long and the magic's gone. That's why the Green Giant always picks his sweet peas at that fleeting moment of perfect flavor. And packs them while they're full of natural sweetness. Green Giant Brand sweet peas.

The Realistic® STA-77 is one of the greatest hi-fi bargains we've offered in our 53 years! Its amplifier delivers full power across the audio spectrum, and distortion is so low you simply cannot hear it. And there's a switch for listening to main speakers, remote speakers, or both. The tuner is first rate. It has both 300 and 75-ohm inputs for using any type of antenna system, a signal-strength meter, and a "gliding light" dial pointer that changes from a soft glow to bright red to indicate stereocasts. When you record with a 3-head deck, a tape monitor button lets you instantly compare the recording to the original source. Other features: center-detent balance control, loudness and mono pushbuttons, blackout dial, custom walnut veneer case. All this plus Quatravox — just add a 2nd speaker pair for spacious 4-channel effects from stereo! U.L. listed.

ATTENTION CB BUYERS

Radio Shack introduced its famous low-cost Realistic CB line in 1960 and has been a world leader in Citizens Band for 16 years. While some of Realistic's 16 radios may be in short supply at times, it'll be worth your while to WAIT FOR REALISTIC (if you have to) and avoid the hassle and problems of dealing with Store X and Brand X. We also make our own Archer line of CB antennas, crystals, coax cables, and accessories. These are in fairly good supply today. Realistic CB is sold and serviced ONLY by Radio Shack in our over 4000 shops in the USA and Canada. Buy from a really qualified specialist—your friendly neighborhood Radio Shack!

50-1776

- Authorized by Congress – Sold Only by Radio Shack!
- Inspiring Patriotic Music by ALL 4 USA Military Bands!

Never before and never after 1976 can you get this spectacular collection of uniquely American band music — and at such a bargain price for the TWO-RECORD set! A tribute to our great country as only Americans could perform it — by the U.S. Army Band & Chorus, Navy Band & Sea Chanters, Marine Band and Air Force Band & Singing Sergeants. With world-renowned precision, the bands perform the marches, chanteys, anthems and fife and drum cadences that are truly America. Thrill to the Star Spangled Banner, National Emblem March, Marines Hymn, Stars and Stripes Forever and 28 other time-honored songs that have stirred the spirit of Americans from the Revolutionary Era to this birthday celebration 200 years later.

About the Bicentennial Album:

The production of an official Bicentennial stereo recording of the Armed Forces Bands was authorized by an act of the U.S. Congress. Broad Stripes, Bright Stars, the result of that Congressional act, is available exclusively at Radio Shack! Only 100,000 copies of the double-album were made — and will never again be pressed — so get yours today!

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

KELLY LANGE . . . weathers television's storms

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

"Well, there's good news and there's bad news," reported TV news girl Kelly Lange immediately after shaking hands and taking a seat in a booth at the Smoke House restaurant in Burbank.

"The bad news is that 'Take My Advice' is going to be canceled by NBC, and the good news is that it looks as though it will be picked up as a nationally syndicated show and will continue to appear on KNBC."

Kelly's words were, indeed, news to the NBC publicist having lunch with us. The interview had been arranged by the publicist primarily to discuss the daytime talk show series, which Miss Lange hosts each weekday from 11:30 to noon on Channel 4.

"Take My Advice," Kelly's first network series, premiered last Jan. 5, and she's convinced it's a good one.

"We've been leading the competition in the Los Angeles area — perhaps because I'm well known here," she said. "But in most parts of the country we're up against two of the most popular soap operas on the air, and haven't been doing as well. Daytime viewers have to have their soap operas and prizes, it seems."

THE SERIES, which she says will stay on NBC until June, is television's version of the "Dear Abby" and "Ann Landers" columns which are so popular in newspapers across the nation. Viewers send in letters asking advice on marital and other problems, and four celebrity guests each day discuss the problems and offer suggestions. Of course, the celebrities don't always agree.

In fact, Miss Lange pointed out, Lorraine Gary hurled a glass of water (yes, the glass, too) at George Hamilton one time in a heated discussion of whether a man should keep a gun in his home.

Panel members often draw on their own experiences and reveal facets of their lives rarely exposed to the public.

"You can't tell what kind of man Carroll O'Connor is by watching him on 'All in the Family,' but you can find out much about him by seeing him on our show," said Kelly.

REGARDLESS of what becomes of "Take My Advice," Kelly Lange is not likely to disappear from the tube — so, men, quit worrying.

Her two-year contract with NBC extends to Nov. 15, and will be renewed unless the network bigwigs are dumber than I think. And, in addition to doing the five "Take My Advice" shows a week, the breezy and attractive blonde still appears weekdays on all three evening KNBC news programs — the only person to do so.

She presents a "people in the news" segment on Jess Marlow's 5 o'clock news, as I is the weather girl on Paul Moyer's 6 o'clock news and John Schubeck's 11 o'clock news.

In addition, KNBC declined to accept her proferred resignation as "Sunday" show hostess when she got the network series, and she does it with cohost Ralph Story when she can work it in.

She reports to work at KNBC at 2 p.m. daily and doesn't get away until the middle of the night. And, on some Friday nights, she stays up all night working on her scripts for the "Take My Advice" shows that are taped on the weekend at NBC.

"SO HOW'S your love life?" I inquired of the single, mid-thirtyish career girl.

"Terrible!," she quickly replied, with a laugh. "I don't have time for it." Then, after a pause: "Oh, I have a guy."

Kelly was married "ages ago" and has a 14-year-old daughter who lives with her in Nichols Canyon in the Hollywood area.

She is a warm, friendly, talkative person who is both bright and a go-getter. With her persistence and charm, she helped to break the barriers to women in television in Los Angeles.

Now, with nearly 10 years of experience in L.A. radio and television, she is being mentioned in the press, along with such women as Bess Myerson, Candice Bergen and Betty Furness, as the possible replacement for Barbara Walters on NBC's "Today" show.

Would she like the job?

"Would I like it! Why, I'd even kill for it!," said Miss Lange . . . with exaggeration, of course.

"I consider Barbara's job on the 'Today' show the No. 1 job in the field I'm in (the field of television interviews), so of course I'd give anything to have it," she said.

Added Kelly: "I don't know how the reports got started, but Time magazine, Associated Press and others have phoned to get my reaction. I just hope that NBC will consider me for the position."

WHAT DOES she think about Miss Walters' reported five-year, $1-million-a-year contract with ABC as coanchorperson with Harry Reasoner on the "ABC Evening News"?

"I think it's wonderful!," replied Miss Lange, who delights in the advances being made by women in television.

Does the hiring of Miss Walters smack of show business?

"Of course," conceded Kelly. "That's a part of it. The networks all have the same news, the same minicams. They're like the airlines, whose planes fly to the same place. They have to do something to attract the people."

Is it fair for Miss Walters to make so much money — to be paid more than veteran newscasters like Reasoner, Walter Cronkite and John Chancellor?

"Life isn't fair," replied Kelly. "Maybe, to be fair, everyone at birth should be given the same amount of money. Barbara happened to be in a position to command that much, and if she raises ABC's ratings even by three points she'll bring the network more than $3 million extra in advertising revenue."

THERE WAS a time when Miss Lange would have been willing to work for almost nothing to get on television. But not quite — she turned down a job for no pay on Channel 9 several years ago, she said.

She came to Los Angeles in 1968 with her daughter, also named Kelly, possessing a degree from Merrimack College in North Andover, Mass. (she grew up in Massachusetts), and the credentials to be a high school teacher of English and Latin. She had been a stewardess for United Air Lines and a substitute teacher in a Salt Lake City high school and had modeled and taught modeling in San Francisco.

In Los Angeles, she was on her way home from a modeling assignment one day when she spotted a line of women standing near a trailer owned by radio station KABC at a shopping mall. She stopped and discovered that the station was looking for a "Lady Bird" — an airborne traffic-watcher. She auditioned

Unhappy times for John Amos

By GARY DEEB
Chicago Tribune

John Amos and I have one thing in common: We're both fed up with the heavy emphasis on Jimmie Walker's teen-age J. J. character in the popular CBS comedy series "Good Times."

Amos, however, has one giant advantage over me. All I can do is express my disgust in print. But John can dramatize his anger by quitting the show. Which is precisely what he just did.

When "Good Times" begins its fourth season in September, Amos' character, James Evans, won't be around. The scriptwriters will have him working on the Alaskan pipeline, and after a month or so he'll probably die in a job-related accident.

"JOHN HAS been spouting his mouth off in a lot of places," says one source close to the program. "He said he didn't want to come back in the fall. So we said OK. Therefore, you will not see him any more.

"For the first four episodes, he'll be talked about by the other members of the family. After the fourth episode, the writers probably will do something drastic, like kill him off — which will give us a widow as the head of the family."

According to other insiders, Amos is bailing out because he's angered by the increasingly fat part that has been developed for the J. J. character. He feels — as do many other observers — that "Good Times" is glorifying an essentially obnoxious and immature character.

J. J., of course, as played by the 27-year-old Walker, is famous for mugging, winking, strutting, leering, dropping his jaw, rolling his eyes, snapping his fingers, and exclaiming "Dyn-o-mite!" about 12 times per program.

The producers say he's a realistic ghetto youngster — streetwise, impetuous, and eager.

But many viewers, including some black social-action organizations, say J. J. is the perfect attraction for racists — a grotesque jughead who reinforces a lot of bigoted concepts of what ghetto youngsters are all about.

WORSE YET, Walker is an utterly hopeless actor. He delivers every line as if he's performing in a slapstick vaudeville skit. He doesn't know the meaning of the term "laying back." And he hasn't improved one iota in three seasons.

On the other hand, Amos is one of television's truly underrated actors. He handles his role with dignity, compassion, and, most importantly, believability.

Unfortunately, both he and Esther Rolle, who plays the mother of the family, gradually have been reduced to the level of providing straight lines for J.J.'s strident gaglines.

WHAT STARTED out as a promising comedy series about a struggling black family in a Chicago slum has degenerated into a slap-happy showcase of belly-laughs starring a 1976 adolescent version of Stepin Fetchit.

And rather than continue to collect a handsome paycheck for his part in such silliness, John Amos is getting out. He's to be saluted.

A 13-POUND, solid, 24-karat gold tennis ball, belonging to Arthur Ashe, was displayed recently on NBC's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson." The ball was given to Ashe as the world's top tennis player in 1975.

'Police Woman' actor honored

Ed Bernard, who plays the stern, tough Detective Joe Styles in NBC-TV's "Police Woman," has been honored with a Humanitarian Award for his "contribution to the positive image of the community."

Sponsored by the Metropolitan Baptist Church of Altadena, the awards honor artists who live in the Altadena area.

Bernard was singled out for having made "humanitarian strides in communications" by portraying a dedicated police officer and family man.

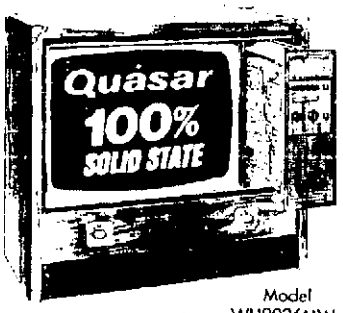

2 press awards go to KNX Newsradio

KNX Newsradio (1070 AM) was named first place winner both in the "Best Radio Newscast" and "Best Radio Editorial" categories by the Greater Los Angeles Press Club.

The awards were accepted by KNX general manager George Nicholaw and KNX newsman Harry Birrell at the 19th Annual Greater Los Angeles Press Club's Journalism Awards Banquet at the Century Plaza Hotel.

Spanish TV award to 'Little House'

"Little House on the Prairie," NBC-TV series currently telecast in 65 foreign markets, has been honored with Spain's "AVI" as the best foreign television series.

The "AVI," sponsored by the National TeleRadio Magazine of Spain in conjunction with Television Espanola, is Spain's equivalent to the American Emmy Award.

Are doctors guilty of child abuse?

Dr. Leboyer, who keeps his delivery rooms dark and warm and quiet, would probably say yes.

So would most babies.

What do you think? Would the world be a better place if we all came into it smiling instead of crying?

Starting tonight, Eyewitness News Reporter Diana Lewis will be looking into all the ways to be born.

Natural childbirth. Caesarians. Leboyer. Lamaze.

Sophisticated medical techniques versus the return to midwives.

Watch Channel 7, Eyewitness Closeup, all week on the 6 o'clock news and find out everything you always wanted to know about childbirth. Without the labor.

Childbirth.
An Eyewitness Closeup.

New stages being built

Construction has begun on two new studio stages, to be equipped for video tape production at the ABC Television Center at 4151 Prospect Ave., Los Angeles, it was announced by Julius Barnathan, vice president in charge of broadcast operations and engineering for ABC.

"There is no question that video tape will continue to play an increasingly important role in television production," Barnathan said, "and this expansion plus the six stages currently in operation in Los Angeles will enable us to meet future production requirements."

Armando Cerna Ch. 34 news director

Daniel D. Villanueva, general manager of Spanish-language TV station KMEX, Channel 34, has appointed Armando Cerna to the position of news director. Cerna's responsibilities include the station's nightly news broadcasts as well as all public affairs programming.

JESSICA WALTER will be a guest star on "The Rich Little Show," at 8 p.m. Tuesday on Ch. 4.

KELLY

and got the job, and on Valentine's Day 1967 made her first helicopter flight to report on traffic and weather conditions.

For the first two years of the five years she was with KABC radio, the station had her use the name Dawn O'Day; then it let her use her real name.

Kelly made many efforts to land a TV job, "but the stations had their one token woman. Channel 4 had Gail Christian, Channel 7 had Rona Barrett and Channel 2 had Ruth Ashton Taylor." Finally, she came up with the idea for a weather girl, and she was permitted to audition for such a role on KNBC, along with scores of "gorgeous actresses." Her radio reporting experience paid off, and Kelly got the job as weekend weather reporter on Channel 4 in March 1971. She continued to work for KABC-radio station, too, to make financial ends meet.

MISS LANGE'S sunny disposition and breezy manner on TV brought her the label of "Little Miss Sunshine" in some quarters, and her wholesome good looks quickly made her the sweetheart of countless male viewers in Southern California. After her job on Channel 4 expanded, she gave up her radio work.

Kelly is perhaps most closely linked in the minds of most viewers with Tom Snyder, the former anchorman on KNBC's 6 p.m. news. Their lighthearted banter preceding the weather reports helped to enliven many a newscast, and they also cohosted the "Sunday" interview-talk show before he left for New York City to work for the NBC station there and to host the network's late-night "Tomorrow" show.

Does she ever hear from Tom?

"Oh, yes, I hear from him often — he writes me notes in the middle of the night," she said.

She added that she usually watches the "Tomorrow" show while unwinding from her own evening reporting chores.

What does she think of Snyder?

"He's stark-raving bananas . . . he's one of a kind . . . he's marvelous," replied Kel.

Many TV viewers think Kelly Lange is marvelous, too. Take my advice, NBC, and give her strong consideration for Barbara Walters' old job.

FREE!

with the purchase of 15 or more sq. yds. of Armstrong Solarian between April 19 and June 12, 1976.

The handcrafted look of Designer Solarian is one of the features of the American Craftsman family room. Its unique "Inlaid Color" construction produces a floor of unmatched color depth and realism. And like all Solarian floors, it shines. . .without waxing or buffing. . . far longer than an ordinary vinyl floor.

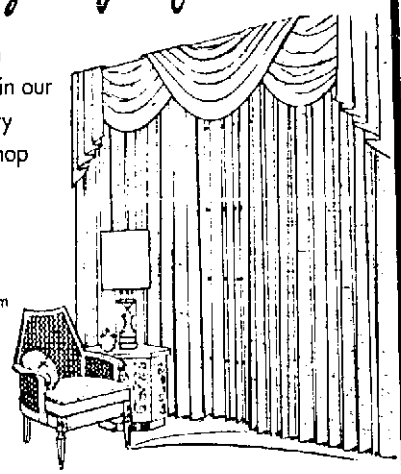

OFFICIAL SWEEPSTAKES RULES 1. To enter the Armstrong Solarian American Craftsman Room Sweepstakes, visit your participating retailer, and pick up the official entry blank. Mail to Armstrong Solarian American Craftsman Room Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 10, New York, N.Y. 10046. 2. Winners will be selected in a random drawing conducted by Marden-Kane, Inc., an independent judging organization whose decisions are final. Only one prize per family. Liability for taxes will be the sole responsibility of the winner. Entries must be postmarked by June 12, 1976. 3. This sweepstakes is open to all residents of the continental U.S.A. 18 years or older except employees of the Armstrong Cork Co., their immediate families, its subsidiaries, its advertising agencies, Marden-Kane, Inc., distributors of the Armstrong line, and participating retailers. Void in Idaho and Missouri and wherever prohibited by law. Subject to all federal, state, and local laws and regulations. *4. Wisconsin and Maryland residents need only send their name, address, city, state and zip code on a 3" x 5" piece of paper. Mail to Armstrong Solarian American Craftsman Room Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 10, New York, N.Y. 10046. Only one entry per envelope. All prizes will be awarded. 5. Grand Prize does not include kitchen cabinetry, sink, window, family room panelling, ceiling beams, or plate rail.

'Gibbsville' execs set

John Furia has been named producer and Larry Brody has been named executive story consultant for "Gibbsville," the new dramatic series that will be presented Wednesday nights on the NBC Television Network beginning in the fall.

Academy Award winner Gig Young and John Savage star in the series, which is based on characters from the short stories of John O'Hara.

Executive producer of the TV series is David Gerber.

"Gibbsville" is set in a small Pennsylvania town. Savage portrays Jim Malloy, cub reporter for the town's daily newspaper who learns about life from Ray Whitehwad (played by Young), a once-worldly newsman whose recent life has been plagued by a series of personal failures.

The BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

MIRACLES HAVE CEASED NO. 2

As we noted last week, a miracle is that which either transcends natural law or suspends it in order to achieve an effect designed by God. And, in all of the examples that we have in the Bible, the one thing that you will note is prevalent in every case is the fact that there is no doubt in anyone's mind that it was, in fact, a miracle.

During the lifetime of Jesus and in the beginning of the church that was established on the first pentecost after the resurrection of Christ, a number of miracles were performed. There are approximately thirty miracles recorded in Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. We could very easily list them in four different categories: miracles over nature, miracles over death, miracles over demons, and miracles over disease.

In the performing of these miracles we wish to notice one or two under each heading and observe that there could be no doubt as to there being a miracle performed. Nature—turning the water into wine (John 2), stilling of the tempest (Matt. 8: 23-27). The miracles that were performed were immediate and complete, with no faith required on anyone's part except the one who was performing the miracle. Death—No faith was required of the ones upon whom the miracle was performed. And, the miracles were immediate and complete as in the cases of the Nobleman's son in John 4, Jairus' daughter in Matt. 9:23-26, and the raising of Lazarus in John 11. Demons—The demons had a devil's faith, but such was not required to perform the miracle. All miracles in connection with demons (Demonico at Capernaum, Mark 1:23-27; Lunatic child, Matt. 17:14-21) were immediate and complete. Disease—There are fifteen miracles recorded that were performed by Jesus over disease. Faith is mentioned in ten of these miracles. No faith is mentioned in five of these. Only one was required to have faith. All of these miracles were immediate and complete. (Blind man, Matt. 9; cleansing of the leper Matt. 8; et.al.)

One has only to glance briefly at the miracles of Christ to see the difference between His works and the works of the so-called modern "miracle worker." Who can deny it?

CH. 2 special wins award

KNXT's "A Gift Of Life" has won a San Francisco State University 1976 Preceptor Award.

The community action special on kidney transplants was broadcast in early December of 1975.

The half-hour show examined the lives of four patients who had had kidney transplants. It explored the dangers inherent in the operation and the promises offered by it. It emphasized the great need for donated organs.

"A Gift of Life" was produced by KNXT and Dave Bell Associates Inc., in cooperation with the Los Angeles County Medical Association.

The award-winning program will be rebroadcast on Channel 2 on Tuesday, May 18, at 10:30 p.m.

Jules Bergman wins award

WALTER SCOTT'S
Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Is it a fact that before Bob Hope married his wife Dolores he made her in their wedding ceremony promise "to love, honor and applaud" instead of promise "to love, honor, and obey"?—Bruce Armstrong, Greensboro, N.C.
A. Hope, like all entertainers, is a "ham" who loves applause—but he never made that dictum a part of his wedding ceremony.

DOLORES AND BOB HOPE

Q. Is Gerald Ford a conservative, a moderate, or a liberal? Is Jimmy Carter a conservative, moderate, or liberal?—T. Brock, Memphis, Tenn.
A. Gerald Ford is and always has been a conservative. Jimmy Carter is a Democrat of undetermined political philosophy.

Q. The Enforcement Bureau of the Civil Aeronautics Board recommended that the top corporate officers of Braniff Airways be dismissed or the airline be grounded on charges of making illegal political contributions and kickbacks to travel agents. To date has Harding Lawrence, head of Braniff, or any other Braniff executive been fired?—R. M., Dallas, Tex.
A. The CAB did not follow up on the recommendation of its Enforcement Bureau. It merely made Braniff Airways pay a civil penalty of $300,000. Harding Lawrence and other Braniff officials continue to lead charmed lives.

Q. Isn't Leon Jaworski, the Watergate prosecutor, working on still another Watergate book?—Owen Murphy, San Antonio, Tex.
A. Jaworski's Watergate book will be published by the Reader's Digest this fall.

Q. Has Marlene Dietrich ever recovered from the leg she broke in Australia? Will she perform again?—Leon Schneider, Reading, Pa.
A. Marlene, who broke her leg in Sydney last Sept. 29, has recovered, is at this writing in New York. At age 75 it is problematical whether she will ever perform again, but she is a woman of spirit and determination, and if doctors say she can, she will.

Q. Who was the American heart specialist who traveled with Mr. and Mrs. Nixon on their recent journey to China—and who paid for his services?—L. T., San Diego, Cal.
A. No American heart specialist accompanied the Nixons on their Chinese trip. The doctor assigned to them was a Chinese specialist in heart and lung resuscitation, Dr. Shang Tee-ting. A medical corpsman, Robert Dunn, who administers anti-coagulants to Nixon, was also on the trip, and most of Nixon's motorcades in South China were followed by a Red Cross ambulance.

Q. Jane Fonda has finished a movie called "Dick and Jane." Can you tell me if it is a political movie?—Harriet Burger, Oak Park, Ill.
A. "Dick and Jane" is a comedy starring Jane Fonda and George Segal. It concerns a young, affluent couple who turn to robbery after the husband loses his well-paying job as an aerospace engineer.

GEORGE SEGAL AND JANE FONDA

Q. How much money will Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward get for the movie "All the President's Men"?—R.R.M., Bakersfield, Cal.
A. $350,000 plus $100,000 deferred against 10 percent of the gross.

FRED MALEK

Q. One of the most ruthless hatchet men of the Nixon Administration was Fred Malek, whose job it was to fire and punish so-called "enemies." What has happened to this sweet fellow?—B. Maxwell, Columbia, S.C.
A. Malek is a vice president with the Marriott Corp., one of Nixon's leading supporters. Malek also teaches a course at Harvard's Kennedy Institute of Politics on "The Art and Politics of Public Management."

Q. In basic military capacity, how does the United States rank compared to the Soviet Union? Ronald Reagan says we are number two. What does the U.S. Government say?—Lorna Rothschild, New York City.
A. According to Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, "Over the past 10 to 15 years, the U.S. has moved from a military position of superiority to one of rough equivalency. If the trend continues we could move out of rough equivalency."

Q. Hasn't actress Cybill Shepherd dropped director Peter Bogdanovich for singer Elvis Presley?—Barbara Jane Lomax, Atlanta, Ga.
A. Shepherd and Bogdanovich are not the twosome they used to be, but Presley hasn't supplanted Bogdanovich.

CYBILL SHEPHERD

Q. The best-selling book in France thus far this year is "The Totalitarian Temptation." I understand it is all about sex. Can you outline the plot?—Eleanor Harrison, Kinston, N.C.
A. "The Totalitarian Temptation," by Jean-François Revel, is a political tract. Revel is a socialist, and in his book he points out that the enemy of socialism is communism, not capitalism, a thesis which the French find alarming.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

GERALD FORD WITH CARLA HILLS: SHE'S QUALIFIED

WANTED: FORD'S RUNNING MATE

If Gerald Ford wins the Republican Presidential candidacy this August--and at this writing the chances are excellent that he will — what sort of running mate will he choose?

Will it be a Boston Brahmin like Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson who always wears his political track suit, ready to run for anything? Will it be Ford's old pal from the Midwest, Donald "Rummy" Rumsfeld, his ex-chief of staff and his current Defense Secretary? Or will Ford seek a geographical advantage by edging towards a Southern U.S. Senator like Howard Baker or William Brock, both tried and tested conservatives from Tennessee?

Or how about a governor like Christopher Bond of Missouri, Bob Ray of Iowa or Dan Evans of Washington? All are possibilities.

Then, too, Ford has big John Connally of Texas, black Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, 65-year-old Ronald Reagan of California, and Vice President Nelson Rockefeller as additional possibilities.

Gerald Ford is not a particularly colorful or charismatic character. He is a wily, veteran politician far more complex than he appears. He is not going to choose a running mate until he carefully studies the Democratic party slate. And then he may offer the nation a surprise, possibly in the form of a woman Vice Presidential candidate, Carla Hills, his Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

The President's wife, Betty, would like that very much, and so, too, would millions of women voters throughout the country. Carla Hills is as brilliant, competent and qualified as any man Ford could choose to run with. She would add some luster to a campaign which seems to be heading for Dullsville.

FATAL DRIVER PROFILE

What sort of driver is most likely to cause a fatal highway accident because he's been drinking too much?

The U.S. Department of Transportation has compiled a "fatal driver profile" drawn from special in-depth investigations of alcohol-related accidents in Boston, Baltimore, Albuquerque, and Oklahoma City.

The "fatal driver" is usually a male, 25 to 35 years old, a heavy or problem drinker who often prefers beer to liquor. He probably has a high school education, drives an older car, is single, separated, or divorced.

He displays overly aggressive drinking habits and is the greatest threat to highway safety during the early morning hours of the weekend.

CONTRACEPTIVE STAMP

In China, instead of taking the pill 21 days a month, women who want to prevent pregnancy take "the stamp," which is made from an edible paper and performs the same function.

Now "the stamp" is about to be tested in England by Schering Chemicals, the German pharmaceutical house that developed the first European anti-birth stamp.

"What we've done," explains Dr. Alan Pitchford, medical director of Schering Chemicals, "is to produce a special edible paper, impregnating each tiny square with the right amount of hormone."

Before Schering can market the stamp in England, it will have to be tested for a minimum of one year on 1000 women and then evaluated.

OLDER MEANS SMARTER

Senior citizens with a reasonable educational background "do not lose their marbles" with age. Just the opposite--claims Gisela Lavouvie-Vief, professor of educational psychology at the University of Wisconsin.

So long as a senior citizen retains good health, his or her verbal ability will remain constant or improve with age. A study by the National Institutes of Health holds that if as a college graduate you knew 20,000 words, you will know 65,000 by age 65.

CHAIRMAN KHADAFY'S THOUGHTS

Colonel Moammar Khadafy, Chairman of Libya, who is regarded in many intelligence circles as nuttier than a fruitcake and therefore extremely dangerous, has written and released the first chapter of his "Green Book."

Khadafy's book, similar in form to Chairman Mao's quotations and admonitions, contains such wisdom as, "Green is the color of sensibility. Even for tired eyes, doctors recommend looking at green. Green is the symbol of life and fertility and paradise.

"It's also the color of new contestation, after the passing of red, black, and white contestations, the color of spiritual contestation."

Khadafy in his book advocates the replacement of political parties by "popular conferences and committees" in which the people represent themselves.

Khadafy is opposed to any accommodation with Israel and has sought to merge his country with Egypt and Tunisia, both of which turned him down. He is now attempting a third merger, this one with Algeria.

Observations™

Erratic pulse. We've got a lot of faith in the American people, once they know the facts. But on energy matters, the facts must get lost somewhere between the television screen and the sports page. The Roper pollsters asked a cross section of Americans why they thought the 1974 gasoline shortage ended when it did. Most of those interviewed said it was "because oil companies had gotten gasoline prices up to where they wanted them." Hardly anyone chose the real reasons: the Arabs lifted their boycott on oil shipments to the United States (and restored their production cutbacks).

Wrong guesses. We wish we knew how facts get garbled, because myths give us all sorts of headaches. When Roper's interviewers asked how much gasoline prices would come down if the oil companies passed all their profits to the consumer through lower prices, the average answer was 13½ cents a gallon. Actually, on all petroleum sales, worldwide, Mobil averages less than a penny and a half a gallon in after-tax profit. Opinion Research Corporation put it another way: How much profit on each dollar of sales do you think the average oil company makes after taxes? The answer: 61 cents. The true answer for Mobil in 1975: less than 4 cents.

o

It can be done. One of every four aluminum cans used last year was recycled, the Aluminum Association estimates. There was also an energy saving: 95 percent of the energy that would be needed to convert the metal from ore is saved by recycling all-aluminum cans. Use of recycled paper, textiles, metals, and other materials, which fell drastically in 1975, is now showing signs of an upturn, reports a recycling industry executive. A recovery in recovery, you might say.

ADVISORY COMMITTEES

When in doubt, form a committee. Washington bureaucrats have obeyed that rule for more than a quarter of a century. Accordingly, hundreds of advisory committees have been established by the federal government so that individuals from the private sector can theoretically assist the federal bureaucracy in formulating public policy.

One of the newest committees is the 10-member task force created by President Ford to develop "clear, enforceable standards to prevent questionable activities" and bribes by U.S. corporations operating in foreign countries.

Most of these committees are a waste of time, manpower, and money. Perhaps this new one headed by Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson will prove an exception, but we doubt it.

For example, in describing the Richardson task force to reporters, Ford explained that it "is not a group that will undertake enforcement, but it will...study the very broad ramifications...in this very delicate field" and make recommendations by the end of the year. Gobbledygook!

On the subject of federal advisory committees, it is interesting to note that, for the most part, a relatively small group of the same people from business, labor and government serve.

An examination of the 1412-page index to the membership of federal advisory committees shows that 196 persons serve on anywhere from four to 15 committees. Specifically, 107 persons serve on four advisory committees, 47 persons serve on five advisory committees, 21 persons serve on six advisory committees, and 21 others serve on seven or more.

Some of the more popular advisory committee members are: Charles M. Baer of the Communications Satellite Corp., 15 committees; Edward E. Benham, ITT Corp., 10; Joseph Gatti, Federal Aviation Administration, 10; Robert S. Stone, National Institutes of Health, 12; Raymond B. Crowell, Federal Communications Commission, nine.

The index also shows that 29 large companies have from 21 to 95 representatives on advisory committees, universities and institutes have 23 to 35 representatives, and the AFL-CIO has 92.

The growth of these quasi-governmental bodies is apparently endless.

PRINCESS MARGARET

HER ROYAL HIPPYNESS

Princess Margaret of Great Britain is now referred to in her own country as "her royal hippyness."

It's not only because the Queen's younger sister is growing progressively broader in the beam, it's because she's been seen frequently in the company of Roddy Llewellyn, 28, youngest son of Henry Llewellyn, who owns the Whitehead Breweries in Wales.

Roddy and his friends have established a hippy-type commune in a farmhouse near Bath where they've been visited by the 45-year-old princess, who is separated from her husband, Antony Armstrong-Jones.

VICTOR HUGO

ISABELLE ADJANI

VICTOR HUGO WOMANIZER?

Victor Hugo, the French poet, playwright and novelist who gave the world "Les Misérables" and one of literature's most memorable characters in the hunchback of Notre Dame, was a scrupulous, respectable moralist--until one day he became an indiscriminate woman-chaser, bedding down with every female he could lay his hands on.

In two years, his mistress Juliette Drouet estimated, he engaged in affairs with at least 200 women. He was insatiable.

"It was not unusual for him to see an attractive prostitute on the street in the morning and bed her before lunch, then go to a rendezvous with an actress, leave her in time for a very private meeting with a courtesan, and hurry to Juliette's apartment for dinner and a night of love-making."

So reports Samuel Edwards in his biography "Victor Hugo."

What changed Hugo (1802-85) from a cautious, industrious husband and father of four children into a sex-ridden womanizer?

He discovered that his wife was carrying on with the noted critic, Sainte-Beuve, and that all Paris knew about it. He then took as his mistress courtesan Julienne Gauvain, also known as Juliette Drouet. He confined her to a little flat which he insisted that he alone could visit. Of all the women in Hugo's life, only Juliette remained faithful to the end. She died in 1883. Her liaison with Hugo lasted 50 years. At age 76 Hugo promised to give up all his "cheap little romances" for Juliette and did.

Victor Hugo was undoubtedly one of the greatest, most colorful figures in French literature. The sad history of his daughter, who ran off with an English officer, has been made into a current film, "The Story of Adele H," starring Isabelle Adjani, possibly the best and prettiest young actress in France today.

Her film and Samuel Edwards' biography should stimulate a Victor Hugo revival.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey: The Long-Distance Runner Looks Back

by Robert Walters

Humphrey and Johnson in rapport at a press conference during '64 election campaign; but forthcoming book by Humphrey says his term as Vice President was bittersweet.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Serving as Lyndon Johnson's Vice President wasn't easy.

Five weeks before the 1968 Presidential election, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, the fatigued and despondent Democratic candidate, sat in a Salt Lake City television studio preparing for one of the most important speeches of his political career.

That nationwide address represented Humphrey's first major public disagreement with President Lyndon B. Johnson concerning the Vietnam war. Fifteen minutes before broadcast time, a nervous Humphrey called his boss.

"I told him what I intended to say," Humphrey recalls, "and he said curtly, 'I gather you're not asking my advice.'"

After a brief additional discussion in which Humphrey described his plan to halt the bombing of North Vietnam, the President abruptly ended the conversation: "Well, you're going to give that speech anyway. Thanks for calling, Hubert."

That anecdote is only one of the dozens of previously unreported incidents contained in a candid new autobiography on which Humphrey has worked for more than six years. The book, to be published next month by Doubleday, is titled The Education of a Public Man: My Life and Politics.

The book's revelations

Among the other episodes Humphrey discusses for the first time are his accounts of Richard M. Nixon's 1968 offer to him of the United Nations Ambassadorship, of efforts to put together a Humphrey-Rockefeller ticket earlier that year, and a startling analysis of the man who headed the South Vietnamese government during the last 7½ years of the war.

The book marks a major turning point for Humphrey, whose irrepressible enthusiasm throughout more than three decades in public life has led to criticism that he has been an uncritical supporter of almost everyone and everything around him.

The "Happy Warrior" and the "Politics of Joy" have not been banished from the book, but it is mainly a philosophical, thoughtful effort by Humphrey to look back upon himself, his times and his country as honestly as possible on the eve of his 65th birthday.

As a result, the revealing book includes unflinching criticism of the people who angered or disappointed Humphrey and high praise for those he truly admires—but little of the flamboyant rhetoric which has been his trademark in past election campaigns for such diverse offices as Mayor of Minneapolis, U.S. Senator, Vice President and President.

"He had no motive except to tell his nine grandchildren what his life and times were all about," says Norman Sherman, a former Humphrey aide and editor of the book. "It's an honest effort on the part of a man who has been in politics since he was 34 to look back over his life."

Conflict at the convention

Some of the anecdotes are both personal and political in nature. For example, Humphrey recalls that prior to the 1960 Democratic National Convention he was approached by several fellow liberals who urged that he agree to run as Vice President on a ticket headed by John F. Kennedy.

Having waged a grueling but unsuccessful battle against Kennedy in a series of primary elections, "I was not in a particularly conciliatory mood," Humphrey says in the book.

"I, not Kennedy, had been their liberal colleague for a dozen years. We had stood together on the issues, and Kennedy had been to the right of us all. Yet when the crunch came, they moved, shamelessly I thought, to Kennedy."

Humphrey says he was cool toward the idea but did not firmly reject it until he discussed the possibility with his wife, Muriel. When he arrived in Los Angeles for the convention, he had made up his mind and told his friends that "Muriel is against it and that swings the vote."

'Get me a plane'

Eight years later Humphrey had another, far more sorrowful encounter with the Kennedy family. On the night of the California primary in 1968, he was in Colorado Springs, Colo., preparing to deliver the commencement address the next day at the Air Force Academy.

After learning of the shooting of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, an opponent in that year's race for the Democratic Presidential nomination, Humphrey telephoned Kennedy's staff in Los Angeles to offer any assistance they might need.

Kennedy aide Pierre Salinger asked Humphrey to get a military plane to fly

a neurosurgeon from Massachusetts to California, and Humphrey called the operations officer at the academy to request the aircraft.

But the airman balked, insisting upon knowing what authority Humphrey had to order the plane. "I shouted into the phone, 'I am the Vice-Commander-in-Chief,' making up a position that did not exist. My intensity overcame his reluctance, and the doctor was flown to Los Angeles."

Humphrey's political reminiscences will undoubtedly be widely read because the autobiography is loaded with the names of virtually all the politicians who have occupied the international stage for the past quarter-century.

There is, for example, this humorous anecdote from a meeting Humphrey had almost 20 years ago with Soviet Prime Minister Nikita S. Khrushchev:

"Once he literally jumped from his chair, walked over to a map case, pulled down the map of North America and said to me, 'Senator, where is your home?'

"I said, 'Minneapolis, Minn.' He beckoned me to show him on the map.

"I did so, and then he looked at me and said, 'I promise you, we shall never bomb it.' "

He offered a job

The book also contains the first published account of a Miami meeting between Humphrey and Nixon, following Nixon's narrow victory in the 1968 Presidential race:

"It was a hot day, but he [Nixon] was perspiring more than one would expect and his hand shook perceptibly as he greeted me. I was struck by how ill at ease he seemed.

"He asked me to be Ambassador to the United Nations and, to sweeten the offer, proposed to grant me control over any Democratic appointments he was required to make. I had a special feeling about the United Nations . . . but I was not eager to go from Lyndon Johnson's Vice President to Richard Nixon's Ambassador."

Humphrey, who turns 65 this month, and wife Muriel have four children. He says he listens to his wife's advice.

Humphrey and Nixon: Humphrey says he rejected Nixon offer of Ambassadorship to UN, adds there was no job he would have taken in Nixon Administration.

When Nixon said he had not decided whom to nominate as Secretary of State, "I told him it was impossible for me to consider the job." Looking back, Humphrey concludes:

"I am not sure why either one of us went through the charade. There were really no conditions under which I would have accepted a post in the Nixon Administration. I can't imagine that Nixon really wanted me except perhaps as a token of unity, a unity that did not exist."

Humphrey's book includes a similar recollection about an effort to put together a "unity" slate of himself and Nelson A. Rockefeller as the Democratic Presidential and Vice Presidential ticket prior to the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

Humphrey says he always liked Rockefeller personally and found the idea "intriguing" when it was first proposed to him, even though Rockefeller was a Republican "and it would have been difficult to sell him to the Democratic Convention."

Twice is enough

After the first contact was made through intermediaries, "the report came back that Rockefeller, despite his hostility toward Richard Nixon and his respect and affection for me, felt he had to remain a Republican." A second approach also was rebuffed, and the idea was abandoned.

Humphrey characterizes his own tenure as Vice President under Johnson as a bittersweet experience, especially during the 1968 campaign when the office "was both an asset and a liability—an asset in terms of pre-convention political power and a liability when it came to freewheeling, self-assertive politics."

There were times, Humphrey remembers, when he was "frozen out" by Johnson's White House aides: "The staff took their cues from the boss. It meant sitting outside Joe Califano's office while he, an arrogant and pretentious young aide, went about his work inside at his own pace. Or Marvin Watson canceling the use of a boat on the Potomac just before my guests were to arrive."

Humphrey has fond memories of Johnson as a forceful and effective national leader, but he also recalls trips to the Texas ranch where "you did things his way." On one occasion, Johnson was said to have noticed three or four Secret Service agents sitting around and watching the President.

Johnson's query

"Why aren't you busy? Why aren't you doing something?" Johnson demanded.

"Well, Mr. President, there isn't much to do. There is no press out here, no trouble, and you have been in the house," explained the agent in charge.

"Well, for God sakes, kill flies or something, but don't sit there," retorted Johnson.

Overshadowing all else during the Johnson-Humphrey Administration was the bitter national debate over the war in Vietnam. Anti-war demonstrations peaked during the 1968 convention, where Humphrey was nominated, as thousands of protesters and Chicago police clashed in the streets.

Humphrey believes that although "thousands of young people came to Chicago with no intention of violence . . . there were maniac revolutionaries and anarchists among them, not many, but a few, enough who were capable and determined to play with aroused emotions, to escalate their own war and manipulate a situation in which a sharp confrontation with the police was inevitable."

The streets of Chicago

Humphrey captured the Democratic Presidential nomination that year, but many believe he lost the election in the streets of Chicago. And, although he left the national scene for several years, the war in Vietnam remained.

After stepping down from the Vice Presidency, Humphrey remembers watching television one evening in 1970 while Nixon was explaining his decision to move troops into Cambodia:

"I thought I had recognized the charts I had seen in Nixon's television presentation. I recalled the day when the Joint Chiefs had presented to Johnson a plan to bomb Cambodia—charts, rationale, the whole bit.

"Johnson had leaned warily forward, elbows spread on the table, and said in his broad Texas drawl, 'General, ah got me one — — — — — war, ah don't need unnother one.' "

One of Humphrey's most startling revelations about the war involves a classified United States intelligence report on Nguyen Van Thieu, who became South Vietnam's President in late 1967 and remained in that post—with full American support—throughout the remainder of the war.

Assessment in 1964

The report, written in 1964 when Thieu was a military commander with the rank of brigadier general, said he was "considered to be loyal to only one ideal—his own personal aggrandizement" and would "stoop to anything, stop at nothing in his drive for self-advancement."

Thieu "has no basic loyalty" to the South Vietnamese government, and his ambition, the report said, "is so overriding that he is believed capable of joining the Communist-backed People's Army of Vietnam if he were assured of the top position in that army."

Finally, the report said, "Not only is Thieu extremely ambitious and unscrupulous, but he is also highly egotistical. When in the presence of American military officers, Thieu talks of only one subject—coup d'état. He considers himself and refers to himself as a coup expert."

Another revealing war incident involves an episode in the mid-1960's, when Humphrey was flying to South Vietnam for a firsthand view of United States military efforts there. The participants at one policy meeting aboard the plane included South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and Ambassador-at-Large W. Averell Harriman.

'Terror and outrage'

"Ky's fascination with his pistols" will never be forgotten by Humphrey. "He played with those damn things like a sheriff in a Grade B Western. At one time while he and others were talking with Harriman, Ky began to twirl the pistols.

"Harriman's face became a study in terror and outrage, fearful that the guns would go off, furious that this man in whom we had invested so much would attend so casually to the conversation."

The timing of the book may be crucial because it is being published shortly before the Democratic Convention, which might turn to Humphrey if no other Presidential candidate emerges from the primaries with a commanding lead.

Don't stop now, join the Army.

Congratulations. Graduating from high school is a real achievement. You've got a lot going for you now. And that's the best reason for moving ahead right away. Whether that means starting college, looking for a job—or joining the Army.

A good start. The best thing the Army will do for you is put all that fresh talent, education, and energy to work. There are plenty of good job-training courses in the Army. And Army pay is better than ever. $361.20 a month to start, with a raise in just four months to $402.60.

Soldier in Europe. Maybe what you want to do now is travel. With the Army's European Option, you can sign up for Europe when you enlist. You'll work hard, but you'll be learning a lot. Changing a lot, too.

Continue your education. You don't have to wait to start college or vocational-technical school. The Army has several educational programs, offered through accredited colleges and universities. Most of the classes are held right on post. And the Army pays up to 75% of your tuition. With one of the programs, Project Ahead (Army Help for Education And Development), you can enlist in the Army and start working on your college degree at the same time.

Join now, go later. One thing the Army offers a new graduate is a chance to recover from a head-bending senior year. With the Army's Delayed Entry Program, you can sign up in June, then take up to nine months to report.

But the main thing you want right now is to keep growing. The Army offers plenty of opportunity to do that. For more information, send the postcard. Or call 800-523-5000 toll free. In Pennsylvania, call 800-362-5696.

Marlin Perkins, host of television's "Wild Kingdom" show, is a man who knows how to make friends with a jaguar. He's fighting to save many endangered animal species

"I've Never Seen an Ugly Animal"

by Herbert Kupferberg

NEW YORK CITY.

Marlin Perkins says he's never met an animal he didn't like. And he's met a lot of them—first as a zoo-keeper in St. Louis, Buffalo and Chicago, then as creator of the pioneer Zoo Parade television program, and now as host of the weekly Wild Kingdom, one of TV's longest running and most popular shows.

Perkins' newest feature, billed as a Bicentennial Special and called America's Wildlife Heritage, is an eloquent appeal for the preservation of rapidly dwindling animal species, some of which are at the point of disappearing.

Bears in Florida

In the program, which is being shown at various times this spring throughout the country, the slender, trim, 71-year-old Perkins harks back fondly to the days when there were black bears and cougars in Florida; wolves in Virginia; moose, elks and bearcats in Massachusetts, and passenger pigeons everywhere.

During a recent New York stopover between photographic safaris, Perkins spoke mournfully of our diminishing wildlife. "The passenger pigeon, once the most abundant bird in North America, became extinct in 1914," he said. "The bison, the sea otter and the whooping crane—which once was down to only 14 birds—were saved only at the last minute."

Perkins is especially partial to wolves, animals which he says have undeservedly been saddled with a bad name. He and his wife Carol, who often shares his far-reaching journeys to film wildlife, are active in maintaining a wolf sanctuary called the Wild Canid Survival and Research Center in Tyson Park, St. Louis.

"The wolf is virtually gone in the United States," he says, "and that disturbs the natural balance. Unlike man, who kills off the biggest and best animals, the wolf kills off the sick, the aged and the weak. It's an advantage to the herd to lose such animals; it assists a natural process. The social behavior of wolves is remarkable. We have found that they have a variety of ways of speaking to each other—eyes, body language, attitude.

Learn from the wolf

"Man could take his cue from them in some things. Wolves normally mate for life and remain loyal to each other. They act for the safety of the group and have a strong family life. The female conceals her puppies in burrows for protection and the male brings them food. Even aunts and uncles help take care of the young."

However, Perkins, whose latest project is an extended journey to Lapland for TV programs, declines to single out any one animal as his favorite.

"I've never seen an ugly animal in my life; to me, they're all beautiful," he says. "When I was a zoo director, I'd pass through the chimpanzee house and one would reach out its hand to me, and I'd think that there was no more wonderful animal. Then I'd go by an elephant and he'd extend his trunk, that wonderful organ with 64,000 muscles that can pick up a straw or uproot a tree, and I'd think, 'What a creature!' Or then there would be a giraffe, or even the weaverbird of Africa, who builds a nest for his mate and shows it to her. If she likes it, she moves in; if she doesn't, he builds a second, or a third. Eventually she has to accept; if she didn't, there wouldn't be any weaverbirds, would there? Every creature has some specialty, some adaptation, some characteristic that delights me."

Perkins, who began his interest in animals as a boy, is shown handling a hawk. He warns that mankind's future is dependent on conservation.

Perkins, who was born in Carthage, Mo., and reared in Pittsburg, Kan., began his romance with the animal world as a boy, catching snakes, frogs, toads and turtles, and even walking around with field mice in his pocket. In 1926, just out of the University of Missouri, he started work at the St. Louis Zoo as a member of the "bull gang"—the laborer crew—at $3.75 a day. A short time later he was appointed curator of reptiles, thus beginning his advance through the zoological world.

Asked for his advice to youngsters of today who wish to develop their interest in the animal kingdom, Perkins says: "Get to know something well. Start with the local animals in your neighborhood. Find out where they live, learn something about their habits. Birds, toads, frogs, insects—they all can be fascinating. You can learn some basic principles of nature by watching them. You'll have a much fuller life. And you'll find that wherever you go, you'll meet old friends."

Danger signs

Perkins would like to see young people showing concern for animal life if for no other reason than the likelihood that so much of it is doomed to extinction unless there is a change in public attitudes.

"I'm pessimistic about the future," he says. "There are many indications of a lessening of wildlife. Man's population is growing so fast that it's destroying natural habitats. This is what has happened in India, and it's going to happen in Africa, where they're busy cutting down the trees and the local people are poaching on their own lands, killing off animals for their skins, horns and tusks.

"Most people have become so urbanized that they can't understand nature. There's an interweaving of plants and animals necessary to maintain life. Let's remember that man, who is also an animal, is still evolving. I'm afraid he hasn't yet reached the moral level to realize that he shouldn't be destroying nature, polluting water and fouling the air. He hasn't yet realized that if nature is destroyed, man can't live—he's going to go, too."

At 231 pounds, I thought I'd be fat for life. Then I lost 111 pounds.

By Barbara Koehn—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

The one thing in my life I'd always wanted to do was to become a nurse. But I did three other things first. I got married, had children, and ate myself up to 231 pounds.

Putting on that weight was quite easy for me. Each morning, I simply opened my mouth when I opened my eyes and didn't stop eating until I went to bed. Bread, pizzas, spaghetti, submarine sandwiches, pop, candy — I ate everything in sight.

By the time my first son was born, I'd gone from 140 to 194 pounds, which made it a hard birth. I was in labor for a day and a half.

When I went home from the hospital, I immediately made up my mind to stop gorging myself and lose weight. And so I began endless efforts with crash diets, reducing pills, weekly diet sessions and just plain willpower to take off all those extra pounds.

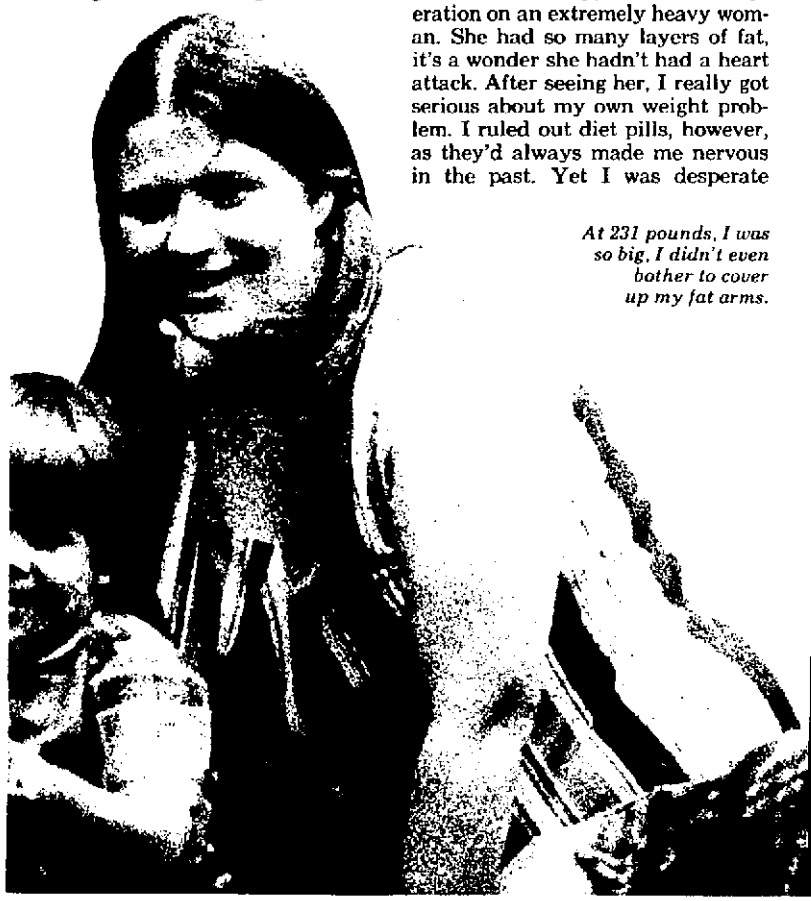

The result? After two more children, I was heavier than ever. In fact, when I finally went into training, I wore the biggest uniform on the floor—24½. No wonder my supervisor in obstetrics wouldn't let me teach nutrition to new mothers. After all, how could I teach others what I hadn't learned myself.

Of course, as a nurse, I should have known better than to let my appetite run wild. But I was human and had my weaknesses. Like when I prepared meals for my children and husband, I ate extra things and always what I knew I shouldn't.

Then one day, I watched an operation on an extremely heavy woman. She had so many layers of fat, it's a wonder she hadn't had a heart attack. After seeing her, I really got serious about my own weight problem. I ruled out diet pills, however, as they'd always made me nervous in the past. Yet I was desperate enough to consider an intestinal bypass. But I gave up that and settled on the Ayds plan. It just seemed like such a sensible way to lose weight—without drugs. Besides, I'd read that Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy contains vitamins and minerals, so I bought a box at our local store in Huntington Woods, MI.

I took one or two Ayds 15 minutes before meals with a hot drink and they really helped satisfy my appetite. I found myself eating less without any strain. Naturally, I took in fewer calories, so I lost weight.

Thanks to the Ayds plan, I actually lost 111 pounds and all my bad eating habits. I just couldn't have been happier, especially since I knew I wouldn't have to be fat for the rest of my life.

At 231 pounds, I was so big, I didn't even bother to cover up my fat arms.

Now, at 120 pounds, I can wear just about anything and still look slim.

FULLY DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT. Amazoy lawns take cookouts, parties, lawn furniture. You could even play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Rarely (if ever!) needs watering.

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

By Mike Senkiw

Years ago I was like nearly everyone else with a lawn. I worried about it more than any other thing around the house.

Then things changed. My company obtained a new grass just released by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture. In honor of the explorer, Frank Meyer, it was named Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

We received only a small amount of this Grass — enough to plant test plots in our Nursery Farm.

From that small beginning, these few precious clumps of Zoysia Grass spread until they built a lawn so thick and beautiful that visitors stopped to admire it.

We Tell People, "Walk On It"

Instead of saying "Keep Off The Grass," we invited visitors to walk on it. It was an unforgetable experience for them — like walking on a thick pile carpet.

After walking on it, visitors learned that Amazoy Zoysia turf was crabgrass-proof, and the next question never failed: "How can I get some?"

Other Lawns Burn Out

Now, grass is my company's business; but it was a long time before an order of Amazoy Zoysia Grass was accepted. First we wanted to see how good this grass was. We really found out!

One summer the heat was so great you could fry eggs on the highway. Daily the sun blazed from cloudless skies; the drought worsened; whole ponds dried up. Meanwhile crabgrass flourished and took over lawns by the thousands.

IT RESISTS DROUGHT, STAYS GREEN THRU HEAT WAVES

Through it all, our deep-rooted Amazoy Zoysia stood out like a green island in a brown wasteland.

Thrives In Poor Soils

When I planted it in sandy, clay soils and sub-soil, it took hold and thrived. Other grass in the same soils struggled and died.

I compared it to other grasses in the winter, too. Ordinary grasses may die or turn sparse and scraggly due to frost and winter, but in such weather my Amazoy Zoysia merely went off its green color . . . it stayed so thick you could walk on it and not get your feet muddy.

Through zero-cold winters and blistering summer droughts . . . through onslaughts by weeds and diseases . . . our Meyer Zoysia had proved it could "take it." It had earned the right to be called AMAZOY, our Trade Mark published coast to coast and border to border.

HOW AMAZOY CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS AND WEEDS ALL SUMMER LONG!

If costly chemicals fail to control crabgrass for good, how does Amazoy Zoysia do it? Your deep-rooted, fully established Amazoy lawn grows so thick and luxurious that crabgrass seeds just do not germinate!

Your lawn chokes out not only crabgrass, but other weeds all summer long — year after year.

You will never need to spend a cent on crabgrass and weed killers again. So if you have wanted to get away from costly and dangerous lawn herbicides, Amazoy is your answer.

Your Own Supply Of Plug Transplants

Your established Amazoy lawn provides you with plugs for other areas as you may desire.

HERE'S WHY AMAZOY PLUGS ASSURE SUCCESS WHERE OTHER GRASSES FAIL

Due to Amazoy's national reputation, other grasses may be offered that sound like it. But Amazoy's pre-cut plugs look different, ARE different. They are deep-rooted, winter-hardy plugs produced exclusive for transplanting.

Each large sturdy plug contains 3 square inches or more of living vigorous Zoysia turf, complete with vigorous root system in its original enriched soil.

NEVER NEEDS REPLACEMENT

AMAZOY Saves Money, Cut Work. Never a seed to sow again with Amazoy! Year after year your lawn grows thicker, like a deep pile carpet. Defies enemies that kill other lawns.

PEOPLE WRITE TO ME

As Mrs. Harry Winslowe writes to me from the heart of wintry New England:

". . . How pleased we are with our Zoysia lawn! We had a lawn that was a disgrace. My husband used weed killers for every known weed, but next season new weeds sprang up. We dug the lawn up twice and reseeded before we learned about Amazoy. It does everything you say."

"Mowed It 2 Times," Writes Woman

Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays green as-ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

Wonderful? Yes, Amazoy Zoysia IS wonderful! Plant it now and you'll cut mowing by ⅔ . . . never have another weed problem all summer, for the rest of your life!

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into hole in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas, plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds.

Easy planting instructions with order.

AMAZOY CUTS WATERING, CUTS MOWING BY ⅔

Your drought-resistant Amazoy lawn not only cuts your water bills, it cuts your work in other ways: it cuts pushing a noisy mower under a broiling summer sun by ⅔. It resists blight, disease and most insects. It will NOT WINTER-KILL TO TEMPS. 30° BELOW ZERO. After killing frost, it merely goes off its green color, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial that ends re-seeding forever!

THERE IS NO SEED

Reports U.S. Dept. of Agric., referring to Meyer Z-52 Zoysia. Experts advise planting only live grass to be sure of getting the famous winter-hardy grass perf. by U.S. Govt., Meyer Z-52.

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Or correct problem areas such as slopes where Amazoy halts erosion, in hard-to-cover spots, around swim pools, in play areas, etc.

NO SOD

Sod of ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed — such as weeds, disease, frequent mowing, burning out, etc. Amazoy is sold ONLY in pre-cut plugs . . . never a slab of field grown sod YOU must cut up in order to plant.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS . . . . FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

MORE THAN A HALF-BILLION PLUGS SOLD, OUTSELLS OTHERS 10 TO 1!

The controlled transplant quality of Amazoy has made it another word for Meyer Z-52 Zoysia . . . the world's best known Zoysia Grass. If you don't want to take another chance with lawn disappointment, switch to the grass that assures your success: Amazoy. We guarantee every plug will grow, no matter your soil or why other grasses have failed you.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

fish is fine fare

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

In true Bicentennial spirit, here is a dish reminiscent of Revolutionary days in New England when coastal waters teemed with myriad varieties of fish and shellfish. Vessels out of Gloucester and other ports did a thriving business then, while amateur fishermen feasted at night on their own catches. This delectable recipe is a sophisticated way to serve fish that recently swam in these waters. Inexpensive and nutritious, fish is fine fare.

fish roll-ups with almond sauce

8 fillets (fresh or frozen) pollack, cod, flounder or haddock
1 package (6 oz.) top-stove stuffing mix
1 can (8 oz.) minced clams, drained
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup whole blanched almonds
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup half-and-half
1 tablespoon cut chives, fresh or freeze-dried
1 bunch fresh asparagus, cooked
Lemon juice, salt, pepper, melted butter or margarine

Thaw fish fillets if frozen. Prepare stuffing mix as directed on package, using clam liquid as part of liquid called for in directions; add minced clams; mix well. Spread stuffing mixture on fish fillets; roll up; fasten with wooden picks. Place in baking dish. Pour about ¼ cup water into bottom of baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-40 minutes.

Meanwhile melt two tablespoons butter; add almonds; stir over low heat until almonds are golden brown. Blend in flour; add half-and-half; stir constantly until thickened. Stir in chives. Cook asparagus; season to taste with lemon juice, salt, pepper and melted butter. Arrange asparagus on serving platter; place fish on asparagus; top with a ribbon of sauce. Makes eight servings.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

STANDING LONG JUMP, PART OF A NATIONWIDE FITNESS TEST FOR GIRLS AND BOYS

Not Much Improvement

In the past decade the physical fitness of the nation's boys and girls has changed little.

What it comes down to is that more girls than boys have shown improvement, particularly in endurance tests.

In a study conducted by the University of Michigan under contract to the Office of Education, 7800 boys and girls 10 to 17 were selected as a national sample.

The six-part test consisted of chinning for boys and flexed-arm hang for girls to measure arm and shoulder muscle strength; sit-ups for boys and girls to measure abdominal strength; standing long jump for boys and girls to measure leg power; a 50-yard dash for boys and girls to measure speed; a 30-foot shuttle run to measure agility, and a 600-yard run-walk for boys and girls to test endurance.

These were basically the same tests used in 1965 and 1958. Although significant gains were measured in almost all categories between 1958 and 1965, it didn't hold for differences between 1965 and 1975.

In 39 of 40 scores, the 1975 fitness performance of boys and girls remained unchanged.

Voting Bloc

More than 150 million Americans will be old enough to vote in the 1976 Presidential election. The Census Bureau estimates that this is almost 10 million more than in 1972, when the voting age in all 50 states was lowered to 18.

Young people between 18 and 25 comprise approximately 14.5 percent of the U.S. population, but relatively few of them vote.

New Campus Fad

The latest lunchtime fad on campus is watching TV soap operas.

Just why this development has occurred, no one seems to know. A feature writer for the Daily Tar Heel, the University of North Carolina student paper, concludes: "The one sector of the population that gleans more of its information from reading books than from watching TV has turned back to the tube for trivial entertainment."

Employment and Training Programs for Youth

Is it job-hunting time for you? Whether the job you're looking for is just for the summer or a permanent position, the Department of Labor has programs to help you.

The four major programs that provide services for young people are:

COMPREHENSIVE EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING ACT (CETA)—State and local government units operate projects or contract with other groups to provide on-the-job and classroom training, basic education, work experience, and supportive services.

APPRENTICESHIP TRAINING—This is a centuries-old system in which a young person learns a skilled trade, such as carpentry, bricklaying or cosmetology, on the job under an experienced craft worker and in related classroom instruction. In many areas, the principal crafts have joint labor-management committees for conducting and supervising their craft's apprenticeship programs. Apprentices are paid at progressive rates from about half the journeyman's rate up to 90 percent of full pay near the end of training. Training periods run from one to six years; most require four years. A major objective is to give minorities a chance to become skilled craft workers. The U.S. Department of Labor Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training and state apprenticeship agencies work with employers and unions to develop apprenticeship programs.

STATE EMPLOYMENT SERVICE YOUTH PROGRAMS—The employment problems of youth entering the labor market have been the concern of the federal-state employment service system since the passage of the Wagner-Peyser Act of 1933. U.S. employment service and state employment service agencies provide young people the kind of assistance needed in choosing fields of work in keeping with their interests, abilities, and aspirations. There are three major components in the youth program: the year-round services, the cooperative employment service-schools program, and the summer youth program. In the first nine months of fiscal year 1975, people under age 22 filed 3.3 million new or renewed applications for work at local employment offices. This represented about one-third of all new applications and renewals. More than 900,000 youths were placed in jobs (about 38 percent of all individuals placed), some 238,000 received employment counseling and 222,000 were tested to determine aptitudes, interests, and achievement levels.

JOB CORPS—Established by the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, Job Corps is now included as Title IV of CETA. Job Corps has 60 centers across the country and in Puerto Rico and Hawaii providing youth with skill training, on-the-job work experience, remedial education, social direction and health services. Nearly two-thirds of the enrollees are high school dropouts who, as corps members, are offered programs geared to their individual needs and learning pace, from basic education through high school equivalency. As a result, the outlook for youth completing Job Corps training is bright: 93 percent of those available for placement in the first six months of 1975 got jobs, entered the Armed Forces, or went back to school.

WHO ARE SERVED? — Unemployed, underemployed and economically disadvantaged youth. Apprenticeship applicants must be physically able to do the work and must pass an entrance examination. Job Corps enrollees must be between 16 and 21 years of age.

AUTHORIZATION — Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973, as amended; National Apprenticeship Act of 1937, as amended; Wagner-Peyser Act of 1933, as amended.

HOW TO APPLY—For CETA projects, get in touch with the agency designated to run the CETA program in your area—it may be a unit in the mayor's office or the local human resources agency. To find out about apprentice openings, call or visit the local office of the U.S. Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training (there are 150 of them) or the office of the State Apprenticeship Council. Or stop in at one of the apprenticeship information centers located in many state employment service offices. To enroll in Job Corps, apply for a job, see job listings, or find out about training and services, go to the nearest office of the state employment service.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION—Employment and Training Administration (specify CETA, apprenticeship, employment service or Job Corps), U.S. Department of Labor, 601 D Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20213, or any of the regional offices.

Teen-age gang members: A new federal study says heavily armed youth gangs have become a major problem in city streets and public schools.

Street Gangs Are Back With Guns

by Daniel Rapoport

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Youth gangs in America today are more lethal than ever before. They are terrorizing greater numbers of people, employing deadlier weapons and proving harder to combat than gangs of the 1950's and '60's, according to a report recently handed the federal government. Most worrisome to local officials is that gang members have discovered the gun and have shifted a major part of their operations from the street to the school.

Efforts by cities to cope with the gangs, says the author of the report, have been failures.

"Many urban communities are gripped with hopelessness that anything can be done to curb the unremitting menace of the gangs," declares Walter B. Miller of Harvard's Center for Criminal Justice.

Miller, an anthropologist whose interest in and contact with gangs dates back to 1954, spent a year studying present-day gangs in the six cities that he concluded faced the worst gang problems—New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Detroit and San Francisco. His investigation was financed by the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) and constitutes what is believed to be the first national study of its kind. Among Miller's conclusions:

- Gang violence today is more lethal than during any previous period. The reason appears to lie in the "extraordinary increase in the availability and use" of guns by gang members.
- From 1972 through 1974 five of the six cities recorded 525 gang-related murders—about 25 percent of all juvenile homicides for those cities.
- Gangs can be found terrorizing elementary, junior and senior high schools. Says a Philadelphia junior high principal: "There is no point in trying to exaggerate the situation. The truth by itself is devastating."
- The six cities report from 760 gangs with 28,500 members to 2700 gangs with 81,500 members.
- Despite claims that American females are increasingly criminal and violent, urban youth gangs continue to be "a predominantly male enterprise." Gangs take an old-fashioned, traditional attitude toward sex roles. Girls carry weapons for boys, serve in female auxiliaries and frequently offer their impugned honor as the reason for a rumble between rival gangs.

Substantiating Miller's findings, Capt. Francis J. Daly, who commands the Youth Aid Division of the New York Police Department, says: "Ten years ago we had nothing in New York City. About 1971 it started up again in the Bronx." Although it has leveled off since then, Daly feels gang activity today is four times more violent than it was in the 1950's. "Weapons are much more available," says Daly. "Another difference between now and the old days is that innocent people are more often the victims of gang criminality. In the old days they spent much more time on rumbles against each other. Now there are more robberies, burglaries and shakedowns against non-gang members."

No cheap guns

As for weapons, Miller's report finds that gangs are no longer satisfied with the homemade zip guns of 20 years ago or even "Saturday night specials." Instead, they want top-quality weaponry, such as the Smith and Wesson .38 used by many police departments.

Los Angeles Police Capt. William J. Riddle, commanding officer of the Juvenile Division, sees guns as a major contributor to the violence. "They're not that difficult to get," he says. "Every time a million more guns are sold to the public, more of them reach gangs and other criminals through such means as burglaries."

One of Miller's most alarming findings is that gangs have turned the public schools into battlegrounds, attacking not only members of rival gangs, but also students who are nonmembers. He says that the shooting and killing of teachers by gang members has been reported in Chicago and Philadelphia.

Miller says this violence has led to "territorialization" of schools, meaning that gangs actually claim "ownership" of such areas as a cafeteria or a gym. "As 'owners' of school facilities," he reports, "gang members have assumed the right to collect 'fees' from other students for a variety of 'privileges' which can be defined as passing through the hallways, using the gym, not being assaulted and of simply going to school."

Intimidating the system

In some cases, he adds, school administrators seem helpless. A New York City source told him that some of the semi-autonomous school districts had "sold out," granting gangs the right to recruit among the student body in exchange for a promise of non-violence.

Comments a Los Angeles youth worker: "The problem is out of hand. We've had three years of violence and killing in the schools with no real action by the authorities. All the schools in the inner city have large gang populations."

For the most part, Miller says, gang activity is confined to the slum areas of big cities. Gang members range in age from 12 to 21 and usually associate by ethnic background. Black and Hispanic gangs are more numerous than gangs of white youths from working-class families.

The newest and most surprising change that Miller discovered was the increase in the number of Asian-Americans involved:

"Accepted doctrine for many years has been that Oriental youths pose negligible problems in juvenile delinquency or gang activity. This accepted tenet has been seriously undermined by events of the 1970's—not only by the violent activities of the newly immigrated 'Hong Kong Chinese,' but by the development in several cities of gangs of Filipinos, Japanese and other Asian groups. The estimated number of Asian gangs is now almost equal to that of white gangs and may exceed their number in the near future."

What the future holds

Miller is not overly optimistic about the future. LEAA has awarded him a grant to conduct a follow-up study to explore the causes of gang behavior and to try to come up with suggestions for coping with gang violence.

But barring some dramatic—and unlikely—move such as a massive program of federal help, Miller sees no immediate relief. His conclusion: "The likelihood that gang problems will continue to beset major cities during the next few years appears high."

Enjoy the Comfort* of life!

Actually tastes good . . . right out of the bottle. Simply delicious over crushed ice!

Save these drink recipes as mixed at famous places:

COMFORT*ON-THE-ROCKS

Served at the Red Lion in Vail, Colo.

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort

Pour over cracked ice in short glass, add twist of lemon peel. Delicious!

COMFORT* MANHATTAN

Served at Paul Young's Restaurant, in Washington, D.C.

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
½ oz. dry vermouth
Dash Angostura bitters (optional)

Stir with cracked ice, strain into glass. Add a cherry. It's fabulously smooth!

COMFORT*OLD-FASHIONED

As served at the Gaslight Club, Chicago

½ oz. sparkling water
Dash Angostura bitters
½ tspn. sugar (optional)
1½ oz. Southern Comfort

Stir bitters, sugar, water in glass, add ice cubes and S.C., stir. Add twist of lemon peel, orange slice, cherry.

COMFORT*COLLINS

Served in Miami Beach at Hotel Fontainebleau

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
Juice of ¾ lime • 7UP

Mix Southern Comfort, lime juice in tall glass, add ice cubes, fill with 7UP. The best—and the easiest to mix—Collins of all!

COMFORT*'N TONIC

Served at Anthony's Pier 4, Boston

Juice, rind ¼ lime
1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
Schweppes Quinine Water (tonic)

Squeeze lime over ice cubes in tall glass; add rind, S.C. Fill with tonic and stir.

SCARLETT O'HARA

Served at Antoine's in New Orleans

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
1 jigger Ocean Spray Cranberry juice cocktail
Juice ¼ fresh lime

Shake with cracked ice; strain into glass. As intriguing as its namesake!

That's why it makes mixed drinks taste so much better!

Make this simple taste test and you'll know why so many people have been switching to Southern Comfort. It will also show you how to make better-tasting mixed drinks. First, fill two short glasses with cracked ice. Pour a jigger of Bourbon or Scotch into one. Sip it. Then do the same with Southern Comfort. Sip it, and you've found a completely different kind of basic liquor . . . one that actually tastes good with nothing added. It's delicious right out of the bottle! That's why so many experts use it, instead of ordinary whiskey, when mixing drinks. They know this "switch" improves most drinks tremendously. Get a bottle; prove it to yourself. Make both recipes for the Sour below. One sip will convince you.

ordinary SOUR

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Bourbon or rye
½ jigger fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon sugar

Shake with cracked ice; strain into glass. Add orange slice on rim of glass and a cherry. Now use recipe at right. See how a simple switch in basic liquor makes a far better-tasting drink.

improved SOUR

1 jigger (1½ oz.) Southern Comfort
½ jigger fresh lemon juice
½ teaspoon sugar

Mix like ordinary recipe. But you'll enjoy it far more. It has a flavor no other Sour can match!

Comfort* Sour, as served at the Top of the Mark, Hotel Mark Hopkins, San Francisco

*Southern Comfort®

WHAT IS SOUTHERN COMFORT? It's a special kind of basic liquor. Long ago in old New Orleans, a talented gentleman was disturbed by the taste of even the finest whiskeys of his day. So he combined rare and delicious ingredients to create this unusually smooth, superb liquor, known today as Southern Comfort. Its formula is still a family secret . . . its delicious taste still unmatched by any other liquor. Try a bottle; see how good it tastes straight, on-the-rocks, or in mixed drinks.

To the 56,000,000 people who smoke cigarettes.

A lot of people have been telling you not to smoke, especially cigarettes with high 'tar' and nicotine. But smoking provides you with a pleasure you don't want to give up.

Naturally, we're prejudiced. We're in the business of selling cigarettes.

But there is one overriding fact that transcends whether you should or shouldn't smoke and that fact is that you do smoke.

And what are they going to do about that?

They can continue to exhort you not to smoke. Or they might look reality in the face and recommend that, if you smoke and want low 'tar' and nicotine in a cigarette, you smoke a cigarette like Vantage.

And we'll go along with that, because there is no other cigarette like Vantage.

Except Vantage.

Vantage has a unique filter that allows rich flavor to come through it and yet substantially cuts down on 'tar' and nicotine.

Not that Vantage is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette. (But you probably wouldn't like the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette anyway.)

The plain truth is that smoke has to come through a filter if taste is to come through a filter. And where there is taste there has to be some 'tar.'

But Vantage is the only cigarette that gives you so much flavor with so little 'tar' and nicotine.

So much flavor that you'll never miss your high 'tar' cigarette.

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

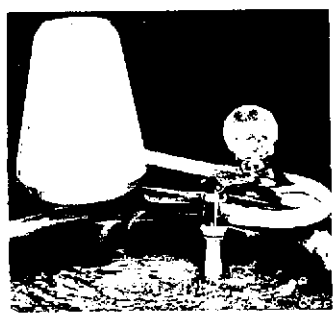

SPORTSMAN'S PAD: Useful when you carry any type of equipment with a shoulder strap, this new pad reduces the pressure of the strap and also conforms to the shape of the shoulder to help reduce slippage. It's made of cowhide permanently bonded to a Neoprene rubber cushion. Pads are available to fit rifle slings, golf bags, photo gadget bags and back packs—and in a waterproof version for scuba diving gear. $6.55 ppd. Cathey Enterprises, Dept. PP, 1165 Walnut Ave., Chula Vista, Cal. 92011. (above left)

SKILLET STRETCHER: Fitting snugly on a 10-inch frying pan, this new aluminum ring nearly doubles the pan's capacity. You can use it to keep cooked foods such as bacon, eggs, pancakes, potatoes, fish and meat—hot until serving, storing them out of the grease and allowing any grease they contain to drain back into the pan. It makes possible preparing as many as three chickens or 15 hamburgers, according to the maker. $3.99 ppd. Innoventions, Dept. PP, Box 16083, St. Louis, Mo. 63105. (above right)

BEVERAGE WARMER: Consisting of a heat-resistant glass carafe, serving cover, and separate base, this new electric warmer can keep up to 50 ounces of prepared beverages or soups at proper serving temperature for hours without boiling or scorching. The carafe is immersible, dishwasher safe. About $14 in stores. West Bend Co., Dept. PP, Box 278, West Bend, Wis. 53095. (above left)

PORTABLE SOFTENER: A new solution to the hard-water problem—which may cause rough skin, dull hair, film and spots on glassware and silverware—is provided by the reportedly first portable water softener to become available. The unit can be installed in a few minutes at any sink; fits on shelf, wall or counter; diverts water into its ion exchanger where calcium, magnesium and other hardness materials are removed. The non-electric softener can be recharged periodically with ordinary table salt, keeping average yearly operating costs below $2, claims the maker. About $50 in stores. Bissell Inc., Dept. PP, Grand Rapids, Mich. 49501. (above right)

A NEW PLASTIC BOAT: This boat of high-impact plastic reinforced with fiberglass is eight feet long, weighs only 24 pounds, and is said to be suitable for backpacking or transport by car-top carrier, in a station wagon, or even in an automobile trunk. It has built-in foam flotation, a ribbed flat bottom and low cockpit design for stability, and is virtually indestructible and maintenance-free, claims the maker. Blue bottom, white top with red arrow. About $150 in stores. Details: J-K Manufacturing Co., Dept. PP, Box 5, Sheridan, Wyo. 82801.

Do you need roughage?

Roughage is important because it retains essential water to form the bulk that moves waste material through your system.

But, unfortunately, roughage is processed out of so much of the food we eat, many of us don't get enough of it.

Without sufficient roughage in your diet, you may suffer from constipation.

Here's where Serutan can help you.

Serutan is the natural ingredient laxative that contains a rich source of roughage. It has the capacity to absorb over 20 times its weight in water. But, unlike certain foods containing harsh roughage, Serutan forms gentle bulk. Your intestinal wastes remain soft and moist and they pass through your system more rapidly.

Try Serutan. You'll be very comfortable with it.

The way it was: Here are four brothers waiting for tonsillectomies back in 1945. The operation was once a regular part of growing up, but today doctors are more skeptical of its usefulness. Still, it is the nation's most common surgical procedure.

All Those Tonsil Operations: Useless? Dangerous?

by Lawrence Galton

In a hospital almost anywhere in the U. S. today, a 5-year-old boy is having his tonsils out because of a succession of colds and sore throat, a few earaches.

Will the operation really help?

Years ago, "having the tonsils out" was virtually a ritual of childhood. Hospitals even had regular "tonsil days" set aside for en masse tonsil and adenoid removals. The theory was that the tissues served no useful purpose, that they became foci of infection.

The operation is still the most common surgical procedure in the U. S. and one of the most controversial. One million tonsillectomies are performed annually even though many authorities are not at all certain that tonsils are useless. They seriously question the need in some, even most, cases. Also, the operation is not free of risk, and more than 300 children die each year from bleeding and other complications.

A matter of rates

The tonsillectomy rate varies widely. In one Massachusetts community, 65 percent of the children lose their tonsils; in an adjoining one, the figure is 18 percent. One study found a rate of 17 operations per 10,000 children in Uppsala, Sweden; 258 per 10,000 among Blue Cross subscribers in Kansas, and 70 per 10,000 for the U. S. as a whole.

Just a few months ago, the director of pediatrics at a major New York medical center reported that a large percentage of T&A's (tonsillectomies and adenoidectomies) are done unnecessarily "and do not usually correct the condition about which the mother complains."

The tonsils are oval lumps of lymphatic tissue, one on either side of the throat behind the tongue. The adenoids, of similar tissue, lie in the throat behind the soft palate.

The tonsils have been blamed, mistakenly, for more troubles than any other single part of the body. Fifty years ago, their removal was thought by some to be a cure for goiter, diabetes and epilepsy; as recently as 20 years ago, there was some belief that tonsillectomy was good for nightmares, night sweats, snoring and foul breath.

Most commonly and persistently, they have been blamed for respiratory troubles, and it's not hard to see why.

Normally prominent during infancy and early childhood, the tonsils begin to diminish in size by the end of the first decade. Large tonsils in a small throat look inappropriate. Moreover, they are largest just when children have their greatest incidence of colds and other respiratory infections.

For a long time, it seemed there must be a connection: large tonsils, much trouble; later, small tonsils, less trouble. Why not, then, operate and stop trouble?

It remained for a skeptic, Dr. Albert D. Kaiser of Rochester, N. Y., to put tonsillectomy under scientific scrutiny. For 10 years, he kept complete records on the illnesses of 5000 children in two groups—those who had had tonsils removed and those who had not.

Just the same

Kaiser's investigation, reported almost 20 years ago, showed no significant difference between the two groups in the number of colds, sore throats and other upper respiratory infections.

Subsequent studies in New York City, Cleveland, and England confirmed Kaiser's findings. And years ago, the Medical Research Council of Britain felt it necessary to observe somewhat caustically: "One cannot avoid the conclusion that there is a tendency for the operation to be performed as a routine prophylactic ritual for no particular reason and with no particular result."

Unquestionably, there are children who urgently require tonsillectomy or adenoidectomy: children who face the threat of heart failure from impaired breathing caused by very large tonsils or adenoids; those with greatly enlarged tonsils that obstruct swallowing; or those with enlarged adenoids that produce breathing discomfort and speech distortion or that produce chronic or recurrent middle ear infections associated with hearing loss or chronic mastoiditis.

Such children, however, are few.

Risk psychological harm

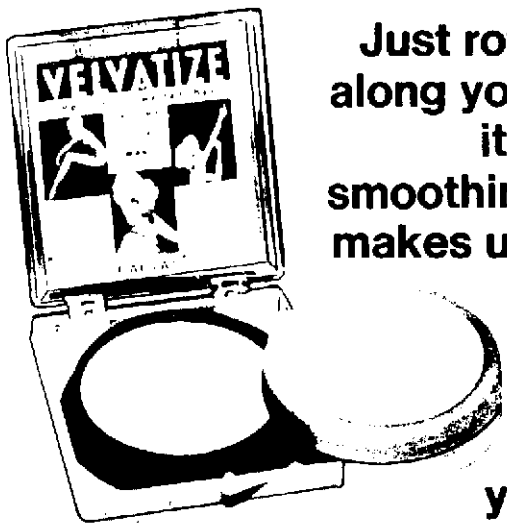

Medical concern about confusing criteria for surgery and the huge number of operations has been mounting. For one thing, there is growing appreciation that there are psychological risks for a child undergoing a T&A even under the best-managed circumstances; and when preparation of the child is inadequate or hospital management is insensitive, the risks may be major.

Moreover, it now appears that it may be wise to preserve the tonsils if possible, because they are one source of agents involved in the body's immune defense system, and their removal may weaken resistance to infections and other disease. At least one study by investigators of the New York State Department of Cancer Control suggests

More cigarette vs. your cigarette.

1. Is your cigarette as long and as lean as our cigarette for more pleasure, more style?
2. Does your cigarette draw as easy as our cigarette for more tobacco enjoyment?
3. Does your cigarette smoke slower than a 100 mm cigarette for more smoking time?
4. Does your cigarette come in a burnished brown wrap so it looks as good as it smokes?
5. Does your cigarette sit neat in your hand like it was made for it and fit your face like it found a home?
6. Does your cigarette give you all this yet cost no more than a 100 mm cigarette (which means more for your money)?

If the answer to all these questions is yes, your cigarette is probably More. Because there's only one cigarette that's so much more. More.

The first 120mm cigarette.

that people who have had tonsillectomies are nearly three times as likely to develop Hodgkin's disease, a form of cancer that attacks lymphoid tissue.

It was to eliminate confusion and provide rational guidelines for T&A's that a rigorous study was set up in 1971 at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh by Drs. Jack L. Paradise, a pediatrician, and Charles D. Bluestone, a surgeon.

It's the only such study ever undertaken in the U. S. Paradise wanted it because, as a consultant reviewing proposed T&A's for the United Mine Workers Welfare and Retirement Fund, he found that most of the children did not need the surgery. Bluestone joined in because he had been finding it necessary to resist T&A pressures from parents and referring physicians.

Criteria set up

The patients in the study are non-urgent cases. (Children who urgently need surgery get it immediately.) For the remaining children, the two investigators have set up strict criteria. (See listing at end.)

Children who satisfy the criteria are then, subject to consent of parents, assigned randomly in two groups — one to receive surgery, another to receive medical treatment. And all of the children are being followed for many years.

Already the results of the Pittsburgh study are striking.

Drs. Paradise and Bluestone have found great variation in the reliability of children's medical histories as given by parents:

"A mother who is tired of nursing her child through respiratory illnesses is apt to magnify their frequency and severity," they write in the journal Hospital Practice. "Her memory may simply be inaccurate or she may consciously or unconsciously wish to influence the decision in favor of surgery. When we hear that a patient has had 12 sore throats in the last year, or five per year for the past five years, we routinely seek corroboration by attempting to obtain copies of the medical records. If the described illnesses were not completely documented—and they rarely are—we tell the parents that we would like to follow the child ourselves and observe a few episodes before we reach a conclusion. In some children the history is confirmed, but in most it is not, and an appreciable number have no attacks during long periods of subsequent observation."

Every child is screened for allergy. Nasal obstruction from enlarged adenoids may coexist with allergic rhinitis. If a marked allergic response is found, the child is referred for allergy treatment and surgery is out for at least six months.

It turns out that 60 percent of the children do not meet the criteria for either tonsillectomy or adenoidectomy, and that more children meet the criteria for adenoidectomy alone than for tonsillectomy alone or for combined T&A.

Before the study began T&A's at Children's Hospital made up 9 percent of all surgical operations. Now they account for only 5 percent. At the nearby Eye and Ear Hospital, tonsils and adenoids still account for 10 percent of all operations.

When the study is finished a few years hence and long-term comparisons are made between the two groups of children with comparable problems—one group operated on and the other not—it's expected to provide answers to many important questions: Do children with non-urgent cases really benefit from surgery? If so, exactly how and under what conditions? And does surgery involve a serious penalty in impairment of the body's immune or defense system?

Meanwhile, however, the study indicates what many authorities have suspected: Many T&A's are performed needlessly. And the criteria for the study may well help physicians — and parents — distinguish between conditions for which surgery may be of possible benefit and those for which it is not justified.

THE PITTSBURGH STUDY CRITERIA

TONSILLECTOMY is considered of possible benefit for a child with any one or more of five findings:

- Recurrent tonsillitis, with at least seven attacks in the preceding year, or five in each of the last two years, or three in each of the last three years;
- Confirmed abscess;
- Chronic tonsillitis persisting at least six months despite intensive antibiotic treatment;
- Chronic neck lymph node inflammation persisting at least six months despite intensive antibiotic treatment;
- Tonsil enlargement causing significantly muffled voice ("as if the mouth contained a hot potato") in children over 6 years of age.

ADENOIDECTOMY is considered of possible benefit for a child with any one or more of three findings:

- Persistent nasal obstruction associated with adenoid enlargement not due to allergy and resulting in mouth-breathing most or all of the time and hyponasal speech (with little air going through the nose);
- Recurrent middle ear infection, without allergy, and treated at least once with incision of the eardrum and drainage;
- Chronic sinusitis or chronic throat inflammation with adenoid enlargement unresponsive to medical treatment and not due to allergy.

DO YOU NEED A TONIC?

Doctors report iron-poor blood definitely improves with Geritol.

As you can see from the chart and photomicrographs below, medical records show that iron-poor blood definitely improves after you use Geritol. Thin, pale, badly shaped iron-poor red blood cells become round, rich and red.

		Before Geritol	After Geritol	Improvement
Here's what GERITOL can do! (Actual Laboratory Blood Tests)	Blood Count Patient A	3,200,000 red blood cells	3,900,000 red blood cells	700,000 more red blood cells
	Blood Count Patient B	3,800,000 red blood cells	4,900,000 red blood cells	over 1,000,000 more red blood cells

With the help of Geritol iron in your bloodstream, millions more healthy red blood cells are built to circulate all around your body 1500 times a day!

And the Geritol formula also gives you vitamins important for nutrition.

Geritol is the tonic that's protecting so many Americans today. If you need a tonic, try Geritol, tablets or liquid, starting today.

The Women in Ali's Life

Sonji Roi and Ali: Married in '64, they split 10 months later, reportedly over his religion.

Veronica Porche and Ali: She was his escort in Manila last fall for his fight with Joe Frazier

Muhammad Ali Cleans Up

by Charles Peterson

George Foreman and Ali: Last time they met, Ali knocked out Foreman. A scheduled rematch will help rake in the $32 million Ali's been guaranteed for fights this year.

Muhammad Ali, if you can believe him, plans to retire from the boxing world this year with a take of $32 million.

I'm 34 years old," Ali says, "and I'm starting to feel it. This year I'm set up for fights with Richard Dunn, Jimmy Young, Ken Norton, George Foreman and Japanese wrestler Antonio Inoki. They're supposed to bring in $32 million. That's enough for me, and there's no more reason for me to keep fighting.

"I am still the greatest and there's no heavyweight who can beat me—not Dunn, Foreman, Young or anyone. It's just how much trouble they will give me, how long they last," Ali says.

"I'm a much better fighter than I was 10 years ago. I have a different style now. I don't dance around as much as I used to, but I hit harder. In 1966 Ali used to dance around and throw a lot of fast punches and block a lot of punches, and then I'd tag the guy in about seven rounds.

"That's how I beat Frazier and Foreman, blocking their punches until they were tired.

"I'm sure history will prove me the best heavyweight of all time. All you gotta do is to study the old films of Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney and even Joe Louis. Lots of times they fought like a bunch of wild women.

"You can take all of those champs and add up what they made, and I've earned more than the whole bunch put together. I've got class—class and speed and reflexes. I'm tellin' you, I'm the greatest."

Ali's autobiography, which he's been promoting in Europe, is called The Greatest. He plans to star in the film version next year for $2.5 million, thinks the billing should read: "The Greatest in The Greatest." After that he intends to lecture at various colleges and universities, convinced that he will develop into the greatest university lecturer in the world.

Ali and Antonio Inoki, a Japanese wrestler: Ali and Inoki meet in June in Tokyo and Ali gets over $6 million for this gimmick.

my favorite jokes

by STEVE ALLEN

EDITOR'S NOTE: That evening on his radio show when Steve Allen started ad-libbing with members of his studio audience was, of course, prophetic: the beginning of a show business dimension that would turn into TV's "The Tonight Show."

As Allen recalls it, "Until that evening I would write my material before each show. But the show had been doubled in length with no increase in salary, so I thought, heck, I'm not going to work that hard for no money, so I'll interview people, famous actors, singers.

"That night I had Doris Day scheduled for an interview and she never showed up. I'd already played her record and read the jokes I'd written, so, literally in desperation, I picked up a heavy floor microphone and trundled it around the studio. All I did on the air was talk as I do at home."

Not just talk—the Allen gift for the comedy of language itself made people tune into his wit. Instances abound. Once when he was doing a nightclub act and taking questions from the audience, a man yelled out: "I've got a quarter that says you don't know how to play 'The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise.'" Allen's answer: "What do you know about that—a guy with a talking quarter!"

Says Allen: "The brain is surprised when it thinks it's going to get one thing and it gets something else; and the sudden surprise leads to laughter."

Aside from his radio and TV career (the latter spanning the original "Tonight Show," "The Steve Allen Show," and "I've Got a Secret"), Allen is also an actor ("The Benny Goodman Story"), lyricist and composer, and a writer of novels, short stories, poetry and books of humor including the recently published "Schmock-Schmock!" (Doubleday).

Here are some of Allen's recollections, stories, and comments:

At the heart of one form of my humor is to literalize something that is not meant to be literal. I'm thinking of a time when my mother came to visit and wanted to see my 3-year-old son. He had already been put to bed, and I said: "I don't know if Billy's awake, Mother, but why don't you tiptoe in and see?" She hadn't seen him for four months and wasn't even sure he'd remember her. So she walked in and saw his eyes opened. She said: "Hello, sweetheart, how are you? Do you know who I am?" And he said: "Why? Don't you know who you are?" That's my kind of humor.

This is one of my favorite stories. Over the years, when I've been doing a show and Christmas approaches, I send around a memo saying, "I just want you to know it's against the rules here to buy the boss a gift. Thank you for those of you who might have thought of it, but you all have better things to do with your money. No Christmas presents for me!" Well, one year, a week after I'd sent that memo around, my secretary walked in with a handsomely bound package wrapped in gold paper. It was from two of my writers, Stan Burns and Herb Sargent. I said: "Didn't they read my note? I mean it's sweet of them but they shouldn't have." So of course I opened the package, and it was a framed copy of my memo.

At a dinner honoring Pearl Bailey, Allen remarked: "I must mention the hallmark of Pearl Bailey's style of performing. She takes it easy. In fact, she's gotten more casual through the years to the point that in the middle of her act on my show one night she was arrested for loitering."

Steve Allen as his character the Question Man:
Answer: Igloo.
Question: What do you use to keep an ig from falling apart?

Answer: The Los Angeles Dodgers.
Question: How would you describe pedestrians in Southern California?

Question from his audience:
Question: Where were you and what were you doing when you thought of that great song, "Gravy Waltz"?
Answer: I was sitting at my piano writing a song, as I recall.

Question: How can I win at blackjack?
Answer: Use a real blackjack.

On his records: "Well, first of all they are round. One thing I do admit, they have a hole in the middle—but this can easily be plugged up."

Interviewing a psychologist on his show: The psychologist states, "The only two really instinctive fears in man are the fear of loud noises and the fear of falling." "I have a great fear," replies Steve, "of making a loud noise while falling."

To a live audience: "It's in a way gratifying for a television entertainer to stand up in front of so many people who can't turn him off."

And then there was the Allen zaniness on "The Tonight Show" (part of it performed live outside the studio). Once, dressed as a policeman, he hailed a passing cab, opened the door, tossed in a huge salami, slammed the door and said to the driver: "Take this to Grand Central Station!" He watched the cab speed away.

it's to laugh

"What do you mean where am I going? I've been to Mother's for two weeks and just got back!"

"Yoo-hoo! I've changed my mind!"

"What would you suggest for a woman who returns everything?"
